Every small investor should realize that a dollar saved while money is the cheapest commodity being offered will purchase twice as much of most any other commodity within four or five years, so that, in addition to the interest that War Savings or other government securities yield, the investor really has earned 100 per cent in the purchasing power of the dollar saved.

Small sums certainly are worth saving. Amounts that seem insignificant soon pile up into figures that are impressive.

A great French banker was once asked the secret of French thrift, and he replied, "Compound interest." Just as constant waste, even in little things, may change one's life from success to failure, so the steady saving of money will eventually bring independence, if not actual wealth.

There are very few persons who cannot, without any inconvenience whatever, lay aside 10 cents a day. Within ten years one's daily savings of this insignificant sum will amount to $365, in addition to $80.36 compound interest, making a total of $445.36 to show for one's saving just 10 cents a day for ten years.

By saving 15 cents a day for ten years, with interest compounded at 4 per cent, one will have the comfortable sum of $668.18; 20 cents a day will net $890.90. Save 50 cents a day for ten years and there is $2,227.75. A dollar a day will make a total of $4,455.74 for the ten-year period.

All these figures are based on the savings being put out at 4 per cent compound interest. War Savings stamps yield a trifle more than 4 per cent.

NO WASTE IN THIS FAMILY.

How the Money Grows.

The one who can save $5 a week and invest at 4 per cent can count up $1,432 as his very own in five years, and will have 50 cents over to celebrate on. In 20 years your $5 weekly will make $7,877. This will give you a yearly income of $318.—Bolton Hall.

Sane Spending Is Saving.

The industrious man works hard and saves hard; the miser skimps and hoards; but the man of thrift earns largely, plans carefully, manages economically, saves consistently and invests wisely.—Bolton Hall.

THE AMERICAN PLEDGE.

Liberty is a blessing—hence I will avoid the slavery of careless living.

Being in debt is slavery, unless the debt carries with it the means of repayment.

All wastes of money, food, materials, time and strength are un-American because they destroy liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

All saving insures independence and self-respect, as the reward of present self-denial.

Courage in saving, self-control in spending, foresight, patience and industry: These are the best safeguards of liberty and tranquility.

My Duty to My Neighbor.

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good—myself; but my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy, if I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

The Finding of Jasper Holt

BY

CHAPTER IX.

Eleanor Harrington came presently to the door and tapped.

"You're not asleep yet, are you Jean?" she called. "James just wanted me to ask if there was any possibility that some of those papers were lost on the way? Did they fall or did anything happen where one might have slipped out? He thinks that two most important ones are missing."

"Not while they were in my possession, Eleanor," said Jean positively, feeling a return of her annoyance at her brother's manner. She opened the door and stood framed in the doorway, looking adorable in her little pale blue kimono, with her hair tumbling about her shoulders. The elder sister fell on her neck and kissed her affectionately.

"You poor little girl, how tired you look. Get to bed quickly. It was a shame to trouble you any more about those horrid papers. There, good night, dear! This is positively my last appearance," and she closed the door and went downstairs.

Five minutes later Jean turned to put out the light and saw, lying on the floor on the farther side of the little bed stand, a slip of paper folded once across, and about the size of the wallet which she had given her brotherinlaw. She pounced upon it and took it nearer the light. It looked more like an old letter that might have slipped from her trunk tray than a business paper.

As she opened the paper the name of Jasper Holt caught her eye, and her interest was at once enlisted. How came a paper bearing that name in the guest chamber of her brother's house? It could not possibly have come through her. Nothing of his could have caught in her garments, there was no place for anything to catch and no way that his possessions could get into her bag. It could not, of course, be the missing paper from the wallet, since it bore his hated name. Yet, her brother had spoken of disagreeable business relations. Would this paper, perhaps, by any chance, explain to her the animosity that had sprung up between the two men? She felt she had the right to know. She glanced quickly down the page.

It was a simple contract, the grant of certain water rights to Jasper Holt in consideration of payment received, and to the veriest child who could read at all it would be patent that the paper must be the private property of Jasper Holt himself. How came it here in the house of his enemy?

She read the few lines over many times, until she knew them thoroughly and slowly there grew in her heart a conviction that something was wrong somewhere. Her first impulse to call her sister and consult her, she could not bring herself to follow. It seemed, somehow, that here was something she must think out for herself.

However and whatever her brother and sister felt, she owed a loyalty to Jasper Holt. She might do a wrong, even inadvertently, to him who saved her life and cared for her so tenderly. If he were here she would unquestioningly have put the paper into his hands and asked him what to do about it. She had promised to trust him, and she felt such great confidence in him, from what she already knew about him, that she was convinced he would send the paper back to Harrington if it belonged to the latter.

But Holt was not here, and the problem of the future was still shrouded in difficulty. Would she ever see him to consult? Was this, perhaps, one of the missing papers James wanted, and why did she not trust James to give it back to Holt as quickly as she would have trusted Holt to give it to James? The question brought a look of trouble to her brow and a flush to her cheek. Did she mistrust her brotherinlaw just a little bit? Had she always done so without knowing it? Or was it just a prejudice because he seemed not quite so fine in his nature as her beloved sister? Besides, James was prejudiced against Holt. It might be hard for him to be generous and true under those circumstances. Yet her heart rebuked her for the thought.

She stood uncertainly holding the bit of paper for a long time, and finally put out the light and went and sat by the open window, trying to clear her mental vision and understand what she ought to do.

Out on the lawn the shadows were dark under the great tree where she and Jasper Holt had said goodby. She thrilled again as she remembered.

The stars were clear and friendly as though they, too, remembered. The long stream of light still marked the divide between the shadows and the path to the house, for the lamps were burning brightly downstairs, though all seemed quiet. Jean had heard Harrington come upstairs again, and tiptoe softly by her door as if fearing to wake her. She felt almost guilty, sitting there in the dark awake.

The pillows were set in the great willow cushioned chair she occupied, and the air was sweet that came in from the plains and sifted through the lacy shadow work of leaves. The day had been long and full of excitement, and the kindly night wrapped softly about the young sweet thing sitting with an angel's problem to decide. With the paper still held tightly in her hand, her head dropped back against the chair and she was asleep.

It might have been an hour later that she awoke, the gruff voice of a man startling her into consciousness once more:

"That you, Jim? What's the matter? It's fierce when one's having the time of his life to have to turn and run at a moment's call. What's up? Something pretty stiff or you never would have sent that message. If I find it's any nonsense and squeamishness I'll——"

"Sh——"

The voice suddenly changed into a gruff whisper. Jean was sufficiently awake to realize that the man Harrington had sent for was come. Then she addressed herself to her problem again, and the voices in low mumble, gradually rising to distinguishable sentences now and then, continued under her window.

She was not conscious of hearing them until suddenly she was startled into sharp attention by a name.

"I tell you if Jasper Holt gets onto this in time it will mean state's prison at least for us. It looks bad." It was Harrington's voice that spoke.

"I don't see it that way," said the stranger. "Holt hasn't got onto it, and Holt won't get onto it. You say the girl said he handed her back the wallet and never said a word. Don't you know Holt would never have let his own valuable private papers out of his hand if he had suspected in the least that he held them? You know Holt better than that. Ten to one he was so taken with the girl that he never noticed the wallet; and why would he think she had his wallet, anyway? I think it was pretty rare of old man Scathlin to think of giving the papers to her. It threw Holt entirely off the track for good. Now, what we want to do is to get hold of Blount. He's the whole show up there in New York, anyway. I'll just wire him to come on at once and talk it over, and we'll get to work and cut off the water supply while little Jasper's training his roses and wondering what has become of his perfectly good deeds to his perfectly good silver mine."

"But one of the missing papers is the grant of water rights. If that were here we might talk——"

Jean sat up suddenly with bated breath, and her arm hit against the hairbrush which, in her excitement of preparing for bed, she had laid down upon the window sill. The hairbrush fell with a sharp noise on the polished floor just over the edge of the rug, and the two men in the vine draped porch below started fiercely and looked up, the stranger with an oath.

"What's that?"

"Oh, nothing, I guess," said Harrington, his own voice a trifle strained. "Probably my wife has gone into tuck up the baby and dropped something—. Oh, you needn't worry, my sisterinlaw is fast asleep hours ago. Her light went out just after I came out here to watch for you, and there hasn't been a sound overhead since. She was worn to a frazzle."

"Where is her room? This window up here?"

"No, just next, but she's asleep, I'm sure."

Harrington rose and, stepping off the porch, walked out on the lawn in the edge of shadow next the path and looked up. Jean, huddled back against her great window chair, her face white with excitement, could see his attitude as he surveyed the windows, and then, reassured, came back to the porch.

"It's all right," he said in a low tone, "but maybe we had better go to the other end of the porch. I was afraid of waking the baby over there, and the rascal is a difficult problem when he wakes in the night."

"Well, talk lower, anyway," said the stranger. "What did you say the other missing paper was? You have the list of them all, haven't you?"

"Yes, copies. I wish we'd sent the copies instead of the originals, only Scathlin's story about finding them wouldn't have worked then. The other lost paper is the claim, with location of the ore—most important. Strange that those two, the ones on which the others all hinge, are gone! I can't understand. Do you suppose Scathlin has something up his sleeve? Maybe he kept only those two and means to get these later—but what object could he have had?"

There was silence for a moment while the two men thought.

At last Garrett spoke:

"What do you suppose Holt was doing on that train—the same train with Scathlin? Holt didn't leave home till Scathlin had been on his way nearly two days. When was the last we heard from Scathlin?"

"Pittsburgh. A telegram. He'd just arrived," answered Harrington glumly.

"What day was that? Could Holt have reached Pittsburgh before Scathlin got away? He's sharp, you know. Have you got the telegram?"

"It's inside," said Harrington. "Just step in." And the two men went into the house. Jean could hear their low, troubled voices, rambling on, but she could not hear any more words, and she sat shivering over what she had heard.

Scathlin! Scathlin! Why was that word so familiar? Scathlin? Ah! She had heard it from the lips of Holt himself, before she went into the sleeper. It was what he had called the old man.

Was this wrong, this involuntary eavesdropping? She had not meant to listen, had never thought there might be anything said that she would understand, or that they would care if she did hear, until the whole revelation was in her possession; and then she was too much frightened to stir or think what she ought to do. Was it not right, perhaps, that she should have heard; and, yet, what could she do? It was all too evident that Jasper Holt was about to be cheated in some way. That remark about his private papers was unmistakable. And the little paper in her hand that had to do with water rights was his also. Water rights were sacred things in the west, and most important. The losing of them had often been the cause of the sweeping away of whole fortunes, she knew; and the little bit of paper that proved his right was in her trembling hand to bestow where she would! It was plain that if she should go down now and give it to those two men she would be most welcome; but she was sure that it would not be right for them to have it. They had admitted enough to make her feel that there was some plot against Holt; and suddenly all her latent dislike of her brotherinlaw, which had been lying dormant through the years because there was nothing to rouse it, sprang into being. Her decision was made. She must somehow get that paper to Jasper Holt, and that just as soon as possible. She must not let her brother know that she had it. If she were mistaken about this, Jasper Holt would be true and tell her so and return the paper. She felt as sure of him as if she had known him all her life. But there could be no mistake. It must be his. The men had practically owned it!

It made her shiver with cold to think how dreadful all this was. Brought up to strictest integrity, it seemed terrible that one in their own family should swerve from it; there must be some other explanation to the talk she had heard. Things in the business world were queer, and a lot of shady things were done under the name of right eousness. She had heard her father talk about "graft;" maybe it was something like that. Maybe James thought he was doing good service to cut Jasper Holt out of his water right somehow; and maybe, in some strange unexplainable way, he was justified. And yet—what did they mean about the location of the silver mine? Oh, it was too much for her! If she had never known and loved Jasper Holt, and trusted him, she would have gone down and put the whole thing in James' hands and gone to bed thinking nothing further about it. But now her whole soul was roused to do the right thing toward her lover, who, she saw, was under the ban, and who seemed to her to be in the right in this case at least.

It occurred to her how easily she might wash her hands of the whole matter by dropping that bit of paper out of her window and letting it be found or not, as the case might be. How easy to live sometimes if one had no conscience to reckon with—and no heart!

It seemed a long time that she sat trembling by the open window, afraid to stir lest the men downstairs should hear her move; unable to think connectedly and decide what she ought to do. But at last the two men came out on the plazza again, the guest apparently about to take his leave. His voice had lost its easy assurance.

"It looks bad!" he said, "very bad! It looks as if Scathlin had bungled things. If Holt suspects we have anything to do with it, why, our fish is dished. I guess there's nothing else to do but send him back those papers, saying that a stranger put them into your sister's hands to bring to you, and you know nothing about them, but seeing his name among them you suppose they must be his. You could add a word about being grateful for his care of the girl or something of the sort to make it look natural."

"But that throws all the responsibility on me," said Harrington angrily. "And it looks mighty funny to have those two important papers gone. These are no use to anybody without those——"

"Of course, but you're not supposed to know that, and he can't do anything but bluster. Anyhow, as far as I see, it's your only chance, and you'll have to do it mighty quick or that won't do any good. I wouldn't keep them a day——"

"I shall do nothing of the kind," snarled Harrington. "I would rather destroy them than play into his hand that way. I'm not in a position to throw suspicion on myself in that style."

"Do as you please," said the guest scornfully. "That's my advice. I wash my hands of it. If you want to hang on to a lost cause for the sake of pride you'll have to do it without me. I know when to quit."

"But suppose Scathlin returns in a few days with Blount."

"Scathlin won't return with Blount. You can take my word for that. Either Scathlin's dead or he's sold those other two papers to Holt and given away our secrets into the bargain. You may depend on it, if Scathlin was all right he'd have telegraphed at intervals as he was ordered. There's some reason why he quit telegraphing at Pittsburgh."

Garrett departed noisily, and after a few minutes pacing up and down the plazza Harrington went in, put out the lights and went upstairs.

Jean crept softly into bed, still grasping the paper close to her breast; and weary, troubled, bewildered, she soon fell asleep.

Later, when the moon had died and only the luminous mist in the east proclaimed the dawn at hand, a rider came quietly down the road, his horse stepping as if with padded feet, and stopped before the house.

The rider dismounted silently in the darkness and with noiseless tread came and laid something down in the dewy silence at the door. Then mounted and slipped away into the darkness again.

CHAPTER X.

Down the long silent road beyond the sleeping town the rider passed, out to the plains. His horse knew the trail well, was rested and glad to be used. He stepped away into the gray dawning carrying his beloved master with willing feet. There was no need to hurry him. He seemed to know as if by instinct just how fast to travel to arrive at the junction in time for the early morning train. It was not the first time he had journeyed thus at that hour.

The rider sat his horse as one who had entered upon a long quest which may not end this side the other world. There was weariness in his attitude, and profound thoughtfulness, with steady determination to pursue his way to the end.

Now and then he bent his head and laid his lips on the cool fragrance of a great, dim bud stuck carelessly into his buttonhole, its branch and thorns and leaves still attached as if it might have been plucked from the vine by hasty impulse. Later, when the day came up and houses were in sight, before it from its stem and wrapped it quickly in his handkerchief to hide away in his pocket.

The stars were paling when he started. They slipped one by one silently into the oblivion of a background of light as he rode, but before they left him they spoke many things to his sad, determined soul. Sometimes it almost seemed to him that a girl rode at his side and understood his thoughts.

His thoughts were as one would go with lighted lamp and eyes suddenly awake to see, through the long unvisited chambers of his soul, and find with startled senses the dirt and cobwebs and musty dusty corners, cluttered with moth eaten garments of a dead past; and, searching closer in dark crannies, find the bones of dead things that should have lived but for the unwatchful keeper of that house.

The young face lost its boyishness and grew grave and haggard with suffering. Then he laid his lips on the cool flower petals and heard again the voice of the girl like music in his soul "I will trust you always, no matter what anybody says!" and it thrilled him and gave him courage, so that when morning burst upon the plain and he came in sight of the straggling houses surrounding the junction, he lifted up his face to the golden morning sky and breathed aloud solemnly the words:

"Oh God! Help me to keep my vow to her, always, even to the end of life! Help me to be what she believes me to be! Help me to be worthy of her trust!"

With these words upon his lips and the memory of her kiss upon his brow he went forward into the new day and the new life that was before him. This duty that was his today was by no means a pleasant one, and it might be long and hard, but he must do it in a different way from that which he would have done it three days before, for today he was a different creature. He had seen himself as he was before God, and henceforth all things were become new.

He was in time to make all his arrangements to leave the horse before the train arrived. He had chosen to travel across country to the junction rather than to take the train at his home station, partly to avoid publicity, and partly to save time, for there was no train from Hawk Valley early enough to connect with this eastern express which stopped at the junction. Passengers from Hawk Valley wishing to catch this train would be forced to leave the evening before and put up at the junction tavern, a most unpleasant experience for any traveler. Jasper Holt preferred traveling on horseback at all times to riding on the railroad, and besides, every minute counted now in the errand he was on his way to perform.

From Everybody's Magazine.

Duncan was driving home from market in Perthshire, where the roads are perilous by reason of the many headlong brooks or "burnies" that run across them. Hee was sitting on the front seat of the gig with his wife behind him, her back to his.

Presently he met Donald, who hailed him.

"How are ye, Duncan?"

"A'm fine. How's yeresel'?"

"Brawly. And the wife?"

"The wife's well. She's there behind me."

Donald eyed him curiously. "Na, na, man," he said at length, "she's no behind ye."

Duncan turned and meditated at the empty seat. "Aye, aye," he said deliberately, "that would be the splash."

Close to 1,000,000 American doughboys landed in Great Britain during the war.

THE ANXIOUS PARENT.

Leo Wilson Dodd in Yale Review.

We must not seek to run our children's minds as if they were molten metal, into predestined moulds; for, in the first place, if we succeed (which is impossible) we shall leave them rigid and inert dead things that were meant to be qualitative, agents, and in the second, if we do not, we shall rightly lose their confidence, their respect, their love. No: having brought them, winningly, naturally, into the presence of their friends—their true friends and elders of all who would live in the spirit—we must bid them Godspeed, and be willing to stand aside. Too anxious a shepherding will but weary out these lambs, till they sicken of our superfluous care. This pasture or that—what does it matter? This hill or that valley? If only we have persuaded them to enter (and that merely by showing them its beauty) a green, wide country where there are neither deserts wolves!

Heavy Burden.

From the Philadelphia Record.

Ex-President Taft puts it mildly when he says that "if opposition to the League on partisan grounds defeats it and postpones the coming of peace by throwing the whole peace treaty back to a conference, responsibility for such a result will be an unnecessary burden for the republican party to carry in the next campaign. The burden will be such that it will hardly be worth while for the G. O. P. to hold a national convention. They will be repeating the 1864 record of the democrats, who pronounced the civil war a failure and thus doomed themselves to defeat for a dozen years.

Airplanes Saved Garrison.

From the New York Post.

First hand information of an uprising of 5,000 Egyptian tribesmen at Assuit, Egypt, which continued from March 20 to 23, and was finally subdued by the British, was brought to America recently by Prof. Roy Allgood, of Birmingham, Ala.

Through the stirring episode, he was one of the occupants of the besieguered fortress and told of how a handful of American, French and British officers and civil residents, and 100 native troops serving under the British colors, held out until airplanes from Alexandria arrived and dropped ammunition into the fort, enabling the garrison to fight until the arrival of gunboats sent up the Nile from Alexandria and Cairo with troops on board.

Why Hurry?

From the Topeka Capital.

It doesn't do any good to hurry unless you have something to do when you get there.

Couldn't Stump Him.

From Life.

The scientist has given a very scientific lecture and at the end he said, beaming down at his audience condescendingly:

"Now, if there is any scientific question that any of my friends would like to ask, I beg them not to hesitate. I shall be only too happy to answer any inquiry in my power."

An old lady in spectacles that gave her a severe, stern look arose and asked:

"Why do wet tea leaves kill cockroaches?"

The scientist did not know that wet tea leaves did anything of the kind, much less the cause of the phenomenon; but, never at a loss, he replied:

"Because, madam, when a cockroach comes across a wet tea leaf, he says: 'Hello, here's a blanket,' and wraps himself up in it, catches cold and dies."

Demands Not Wild.

From the New York Post.

The convention of the American Federation of Labor, just ended, has been called conservative in all the news dispatches but that is only because some few expected it to change its entire structure and policy. In its own tradition it certainly has not lacked daring, as the closing day emphasized. To call for a universal 44-hour week is not to conciliate all the employers who have been congratulating themselves that the president of the federation is so stout an anti-bolshevist as Samuel Gompers. To begin a campaign for the six-hour day is to imitate a British movement which is anything but reactionary. The addition of over 400,000 members from the railroad brotherhoods is but a logical sequence to the convention's approval of their project for nationalization—a project only less radical than that of the British miners. And while the federation declined to establish a political party, it did adopt an uncompromising attitude towards the power of the courts, and went so far as to demand the removal of a cabinet member. If the official American labor movement is conservative it is so not so much in its objects as in its means of attaining them.

Lords Bishops Tottering.

Rev. Dwight Hillis.

Within the past few weeks an English duke was mobbed upon his estate, and a little later a bishop of the English church fled from an angry multitude in the park, who feared at his palace and his salary. Another English bishop, who recently visited this country, has just resigned, foreseeing the breaking of the storm. Still others have announced that they are using the large income, received by public taxation, for social service work. Plainly the handwriting is upon the wall—the bishops must go. In this country a bishop's influence is intellectual and moral, for he has no relation with the government. In England a bishop is a member of the house of lords, lives in a palace owned by the state, is paid by public taxation, and is a political figure. There are 21 bishops, whose salaries range between $15,000 and $75,000 a year. The heads of the bishops are two archbishops, of Canterbury and of York. Foreseeing the abolition of the lords spiritual, Bishop Core, of Oxford, has resigned to give himself to literature, and it is evident that the other 23 may follow his worthy example.

No Race or Color.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

This is the story told by Mrs. Mary Bolling, one of the survivors of the steamer Virginia which burned the other day:

When we came to the main stairs I stumbled and fell down them and the pain in my leg kept me from rising. The flames swept over me and I thought I was lost. Just then a negro appeared on the balcony above me and seeing me called to some one else. He came down through the flames, picked me up and carried me to the upper deck. The flames were getting close to us when he jumped overboard with me and we clung to a raft for a while—I don't know how long—and then another negro helped put me on one of the lifeboats.

When the Titanic sank one of the things that gave us pride in our brief was the courage and self-sacrifice the great occasion brought out. For here the fear of death itself had been so strong as the ruling thought of "women and children first." In it we recognized the triumph of man over the brute. Here is another reminder, one that we may have needed, that chivalry is the possession of a race.

SMOKING CARS AND

During the influenza epidemic in October, [illegible] Robertson stopped smoking on elevated and street cars. On the four elevated lines smoking had been permitted on the front platform. Theoretically at least, no car passenger entered through the platform and left the cars there.

A few weeks ago an ordinance introduced in the council restricting smoking privileges to the front platform of the surface cars and to those who paid the ordinary fare, continuing the privilege of service in [illegible] had saved [illegible] Accepting this question as settled, policy now [illegible] the epidemic [illegible] of influenza [illegible] come about [illegible] birth of Christ [illegible] years.

The epidemic of 1890 began in January, 1890. Having lasted that spring, it reappeared in March, 1891. It was much less March and April, 1891, than it was in January, 1890. It appeared in winter and spring of 1892 and 1893. Charts showing [illegible] 1895 prove that [illegible] can deny, nor [illegible] any man can deny, the truth of this statement.

The present epidemic began about March, 1918. It had previously been recognized in Spain and Italy. The wave was very severe. In July [illegible] a second and a severe wave. In October there was a [illegible] wave, which was much more severe than its predecessor. In March of this year a fourth appeared. In many sections of the country there have already been three waves, and others are anticipated this winter.

Says J. J. Walsh, an accepted authority on medical history: Influenza is likely to be with us for several years, but will gradually grow less virulent and less frequent, but the bacteria which caused influenza will probably maintain special virulence for several or 10 years, at least.

A study of the Chicago death rates in 1918 and 1919 shows that we are not yet under the influence of the disease now in this period of intermittence. The death rate was high in the autumn of 1918, but that in the first six months of 1919 has been higher still. The number of deaths each month has been greater than in the corresponding month in 1918, with the exception of April.

If we admit that the [illegible] ing on the cars was a good policy, we must admit that it was also unwise to permit it during the coming winter. A study of the death rate of Chicago for the last 50 years shows that conditions have improved steadily. The general death rate is lower, as are those from typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, and infantile diarrhoea. The death rate from all bacterial diseases have fallen enormously except from pneumonia, tuberculosis, and influenza. The death rate from this group of diseases is higher than it was 50 years ago.

We have given our health department ordinances with which to control scarlet fever, diphtheria, smallpox, baby sickness, and they have produced results for which we are grateful. But are we going to do about pneumonia, bronchitis, and influenza? If we are to these diseases we must meet them with our health department with the necessary ordinances. We must give the power over smoking in cars, the lack of which all admit is one of the other powers they convince us of the advisability of them.

Five-sixths as many persons died of these diseases in October, 1918, in Chicago as died in the entire United States army in France from all diseases in one year. One-third as many died from these diseases in a normal year as died in the army from all diseases in one year, pneumonia, bronchitis and influenza, speaking in general terms, the same in all parts of the United States.

For all his duties General Pershing isn't above telling a good story once in a while. This is one of them.

"I was standing near headquarters when I noticed that a certain captain was standing near by, had fallen into the habit, every time a private saluted him, of answering the salute with military precision but following it up with the question 'the same to you.'

"Finally I called him over and asked 'Captain, why do you say "the same to you," every time you return the salute of a private?'

"The captain grinned. 'It's this way, general, I was a private once myself, and I know what they say under their breath every time they salute an officer.'

The Undesirables.

From the Los Angeles Times.

One of the uninhabited islands of the Philippines ought to be set aside as a spot for the deportation of undesirable men who have explosives in their possession and men who use poisoned gas to incite anarchy. The prisons of the land are too good for those who are opposed to orderly government. Those who want revolution and would destroy our institutions should be compelled to live together on some distant isle where they could have opportunity to try out their incendiary theories on one another. It would be a reasonable and practical way to make the punishment fit the crime, and the revolutionists themselves could have no valid ground for complaint. Sending them back to their own country merely does that country a favor by transferring the scene of activity.

Senatorial Courtesy.

From the Detroit News.

While there are numerous records of tempestuous senatorial conflicts, both verbal and physical, the rule generally is for debates in one of extremely courteous and punctilious courtesy. A senatorial contradiction is polite and indirect. Where in the man in the street would, in the heat of a claim in same heat, "You're a liar," a senator would say, "The senator is mistaken." Senator Lenroot would remark, "The senator is unaware of the fact," and Senator Lewis would say, "I am fully aware of the fact, but, nevertheless, my studiousness and vast learning of the senator's intent and esteemed friend, and the fact that I am loath to question his reading of the facts bearing upon this issue, I am nevertheless I am constrained to differ with him and follow him to the fullest extent of the implications."

Save the Babies

MORTALITY is appalling frightful. We can hardly realize that the children born in civilized countries, twenty-two per cent., or one-quarter, die before they reach one year; thirty-seven per cent., more than one-third, before they are five, and one-half before they are ten!

We hesitate to say that a timely use of Castoria would save precious lives. Neither do we hesitate to say that many needless deaths are occasioned by the use of narcotic preparations. Paregoric and soothing syrups sold for children's complaints contain opium or morphine. They are, in considerable quantities, fatal. In any quantity, they stupefy, retard circulation and lead to stupor, sickness, death. There can be no danger in the use of Castoria. It bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. It contains no opiates or narcotics of any kind.

Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

DATES FROM COLONIAL DAYS

George Washington Hotel, in Princess Anne, Maryland, a Relic of Country's Earliest Days

Princess Anne, Md., as its name suggests, is a town with a history that goes back to the time when Maryland was a royal colony ruled by Lord Baltimore from his great estate, Dower House.

Naturally, you expect Princess Anne to be very "colonial" in atmosphere. The railroad station is your first disappointment, being a surprisingly large and substantial brick affair. But then, railroads are great destroyers of atmosphere anyway. The George Washington hotel, which is said to derive its name from the fact that the father of his country once spent the night there, is all that you could ask in the way of an antique, as is the bus which takes you there.

The most interesting thing about the George Washington hotel is its great staircase, which was built 150 years ago, and has not been substantially altered since. There is one stairway for women and one for men. These differ in that the women's staircase has only one railing, while that for men has two—which seems to imply that colonial men may have needed a little extra support when they went to bed after the festivities in the great hall below.

"WHAT ABOUT THE HOSSES?"

We had sought the sweet seclusion of an old estaminet,
And the wine cup circulated in the old familiar way.
We had fed our hearts on memories, and talked as soldiers will
Of the comrades "pushing daisies" on a barren shell-marked hill.
But one western boy was silent—never lifted up his head
Till resentment seemed to stir him, and he raised his eyes and said:

"But what about the hosses
In the roll call of the dead?
Are they mentioned in the losses—
Has a single word been said?
Is there any simple token of their agony unspoken—
Have they any wooden crosses
In the valley where they bide?"

Our thoughts flew back like lightning, and across the brimming cup
We saw the beasts of burden bringing ammunition up—
The endless line of transport winding all across the hill,
And the starving and the dying on the fields at Ypreville—
The misery, the fortitude of those that had been gassed,
And eyes of silent sorrow, pleading patience as they passed.

Aye, "What about the horses?"
On the blasoned scroll of Fame—
The pulling, hauling horses,
And the broken, blind and lame,
Giving every ounce of power to the gasping, dying hour—
Where's the martyr in the forces
Played a better, braver game?

William V. V. Stephens, 11th Engineers, U. S. A., in the New York Times.

Six Illegal States.

From the New York Post.

A terrible discovery has been made. Six of the states have been violating the constitution without anybody knowing it. The Constitution says, and has always said, that members of the legislatures as well as congressmen, "shall be bound by oath or affirmation to support this Constitution." Yet in Arizona, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Texas, Vermont and Washington no such oath or affirmation is required. The implications of this omission are staggering. Were the legislatures of these six states competent to ratify the prohibition amendment? Expert anti-prohibition sentiment is said to be united in the negative. Were they competent to do anything? Have they ever been competent to do anything? Can the citizens of the six states collect the taxes they have paid all their lives, upon the ground that such taxes were levied by an illegal body? What of laws passed by the votes of United States senators of these six states? Any one with a little immagination can see the country in an awful fix. "It is said in Washington that no less a legal luminary for an opinion." And yet people go right on marrying and dying and saving daylight with the utmost nonchalance.

American importers should not figure on transporting freight overland through Serbia at this time. Railroads probably will not be regularly running until early in 1920. Belgrade is best reached via Trieste and Fiume rather than from Saloniki, says a dispatch from the latter city.

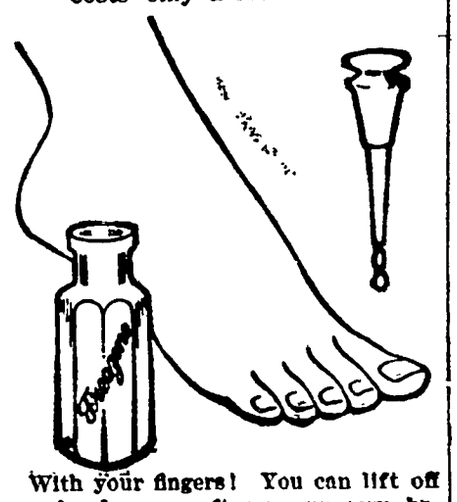
A Catfish Story.

An old colored man at Jefferson City caught a two-pound catfish and was so well satisfied with his skill as a fisherman that he lay down and took a nap, with the fish beside him. Another moke came along soon after, picked up the fish and left a half-pound one in its place. When the colored man woke up the first thing his eyes sought was the fish, and it took him several seconds to realize what had happened. Then, turning the fish over and scrutinizing it very closely, he exclaimed: "Golly, how dat fish am shwunked!"—Sedalia Bazoo.

Lift off Corns!

Doesn't hurt a bit and Freezone costs only a few cents.



With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

And a Gentleman.

The kind and fond father, a weary man though, asked his small son, watching the night parade, if he was ready to go home.

"Wait for six more hands, dad," was the compromise offered and accepted.

And daddy, stepping back, said to two women, "You can move up; I can see over you."

"A gentleman as well as a kind daddy," they murmured.—Indianapolis News.

Roosevelt as a Writer.

In an article on Theodore Roosevelt in the Yale Review, Henry A. Beers says of him as a writer:

"Mr. Roosevelt produced much excellent literature, but no masterpieces like Lincoln's Gettysburg address and second inaugural. Probably his sketches of ranch life and of hunting trips in three continents will be read longest and will keep their freshness after the public questions which he discussed have lost interest and his historical works have been in part rewritten. In these outdoor papers, besides the thrilling adventure which they—very modestly—record, there are even passages of descriptive beauty and chapters of graphic narrative, like the tale of the pursuit and capture of the three robbers who stole the boats on the Missouri river which belonged to the Roosevelt ranch."

That Depends.

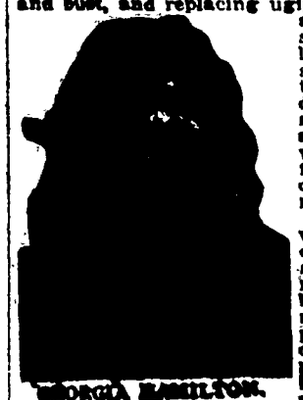
"Is the place within walking distance of the car?"

"I dunno," answered the landlord. "How far kin you walk?"—London Answers.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.



MISS GEORGIA HAMILTON.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate should produce a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, and eyes ought to brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health. Miss Georgia Hamilton, who was once thin and frail, reporting her own experience, writes: "Bitro-Phosphate has brought about a magic transformation with me. I gained 15 pounds and never before felt so well."

CAUTION:—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its tendency to increase weight, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

Normality the Essential.

The normal man is the one who succeeds in life. He must have imagination and courage, endurance and industry, the power to concentrate as well as intelligence. But first of all he must be normal, moderate in his habits, careful of his health, careful of his digestion and of his nerves.

There Will Be A PUBLIC MEETING

At 8:30 For the purpose of discussing The Hard Surfaced Road Question

The above question comes to a vote in this county August 4 and in order that the people may fully understand the law in regard to the matter thoroughly competent men will be here to answer all questions. This meeting is open to everybody.

New Post Office To Be Built In Klemme

KLEMME WILL HAVE NEW POST OFFICE BUILDING IN NEAR FUTURE

Klemme will have a fine new up-to-date Post Office building as soon as Postmaster John Waterman can get workmen on the job. Mr. Waterman will put up a fine 24x50 foot brick building on the lot west of the present postoffice location, or in other words is the old pool room building will be torn down to give place for the new structure.

Since selling his store, Mr. Waterman will still have the post office to look after, but John decided that he wants only the best and so decided a new post office building would be just the thing and he could sell stamps a lot better in a nice place.

Mr Waterman is a booster for Klemme and believes in helping to build up the town. The old pool room building has been an eye-sore to Klemme and with a new building on the site will greatly add to the beauty of the city.

CHRIS GRAM HAS A LITTLE EXCITEMENT WHEN HIS CAR RUNS AWAY

Sunday Chris Gram was going out to John Miller's farm in his car and was going along at a pretty good clip when something went wrong with his car. Chris thought for a second that the road had about a thousand curves in it, but he soon discovered that his steering wheel had come loose and that he couldn't keep the car in the road. Before he could put on the brakes the car hit the side bank of the road and proceeded to bury itself in the soft sod. Chris made an aeroplane flight over the windshield and lit on the other side of the fence without even a scratch. The car had to be pulled out of the dirt witht a truck and hauled to town. The front was caved in some, but the engine was not hurt and will be easily repaired. At present the car is recuperating in Nick Ell's auto hospital.

OATS CROP GOOD HERE

The farmers are about half thru cutting their oats in this section and the yield is very good. The corn crop is doing fine also.

Past Week Marks Biggest Change In Business In History Of Klemme

J. W. WATERMAN & SON SELLS GENERAL STORE TO KLUCKHOHN BROTHERS

Deal Closed Monday Whereby Frank and Clarence Kluckhohn Become Owners Of Waterman's Store

It all happened so suddenly that John Waterman is not quite sure why it all happened. It was this way, Frank and Clarence Kluckhohn made Mr. Waterman an offer for his store building and entire stock of Dry Goods, Groceries and Hardware, the price looked alright to John and he said, "Yes." The deal was closed and John is still scratching his head thinking how quick it all happened. That is the long and the short of the transaction.

Mr. Waterman has been in business in Klemme for something like seventeen years. He was in the place now occupied by John Day for eleven years at which time he sold building and stock to Mr. Day. Then for two years Mr. Waterman dabbled in garage business, electric lights and a little carpenter work, but was not entirely satisfied and had a hankering to get back into the general store business. With this new idea he put into effect by erecting the fine double front brick building which he now occupies. The building was erected in 1914 and in March 1915, he moved into it and has been there until this day. Besides doing a large general merchandise business in his new store Mr. Waterman has been postmaster here about four years.

Mr. Waterman has had too much on his hands with the store and the post office to look after, so he decided he would rather run the post office altogether or the store and when the offer to buy was made to him, the riddle was solved—the post office for him.

Mr. Waterman has made hosts of friends while in business here and has always given all a square deal and it is wits regret that they bid him farewell from the merchandising business but however, we are glad that he still remains in our business circle as post master.

The members of the new firm are also well known and hghly thought of here as they are purely a Klemme product. The Kluckhohn boys have been connected with the business here for some time and have both had lots of experience in gneral merchandise lines so they are not stepping into a new harness altogether, but are only advancing to a position of being the sole owners themselves. We wish the new firm the best of good luck adn assure them our hearty support.

GRUETZMACHER BROS. DISPOSE OF THEIR HARDWARE BUSINESS TO CHRIS JACOBS & SON OF GARNER

Deal Was Closed Monday. The New Firm To Take Possession August 15th.

Gruetzmacher Bros. closed a deal with Chris Jacobs and son, Edward, of Garner, Monday evening, whereby the latter became the owners of the present Gruetzmacher Bros. Hardware and Grocery Store.

The deal included the purchase by the Jacobs of the store building and two lots and the entire Hardware and Grocery stock and the tin and repair shop in connection. The Gruetzmacher Bros. will still continue to handle their stock of farm implements and the feed line. The latter line will be turned over to the new firm the first of January.

John and George Gruetzmacher have been in the hardware and grocery business for about twenty-four or five years, in fact they are among the pioneer business men of Klemme. During that time they have made many good friends and customers who regret their departure from the business, but are glad that they will still be in the implement business here.

Mr. Chris Jacobs and his son, Edward, are quite well known here and have a lot of friends here which was shown by the strong campaign Mr. Jacobs made when he ran for County Auditor and which position he now holds. We have not had a talk with the new firm as yet, but we suppose Mr. Ed. Jacobs will be put in charge as he has had several years' experience in the Hardware business and under his management the business should be a growing proposition. We welcome them to our business circle and wish them a prosperous business.

CITY DRAY LINE CHANGES HANDS

H. J. Jahnke Sells To Sam Harvey

Last Thursday a deal was closed whereby Sam Harvey became the owner of the City Dray Line formerly owned by Henry J. Jahnke. Henry has owned the line but a short time having purchased the business from his cousin, H. P. Jahnke a short time ago when the latter moved to his farm in Minnesota. Both of the new and the old owners are well known here. We wish Sam success in his new business and to Mr. Jahnke we also extend wishes for a prosperous future in whatever he may undertake to do.

FORGER WILLOUGHBY OUT ON BONDS

Sheriff Ross returned Monday from Vancouver, B. C., with his prisoner, E. Willoughby, who forged the notes on Mr. Weigman, a wealthy citizen of Garner, and sold them at the Farmers National Bank at Garner and at one of the banks at Klemme. The process of extraditing this offender of the lw proved to be slow, but Sheriff Ross stayed on the job with eyes alert until the last paper was signed and then brought the man back to Iowa. Willoughby had a hearing as soon as he reached the county seat and was bound over to the grand jury and released on bond.—Britt News-Tribune.

KLEMME BARBERS RAISE PRICES

Hereafter it will cost you 20 cents to get your crop of whiskers mowed off by our local barbers, also the same price to get some nice tonic shook over your dome. All the other towns around here are charging 20 cents for shaves. Our barbers have kept down the price as long as possible but other commodities and living expenses are high and therefore they are only getting a fair price for their work.

MESERVEY PAPER CHANGES HANDS

Last week Frank Carter sold his interests in the Meservey Register. Mr. Carter has run the paper for several years. In his brief write-up of the change he did not mention his successor's name. Well, the Editor of this paper had lots of fun kidding Mr. Carter and many friendly jibs were handed back and forth, each paper handing packages to the other town and with Carter out of the business we will have to look to new fields ofr our editorial sport. We wish the new man all kinds of success and that he will be able to wake up that town more than Carter did. Also we wish Carter success in whatever he undertakes.

Reason for Placing Wedding Ring.

The third finger is the only one where two principal nerves belong to two distinct trunks; the thumb is supplied with its principal nerves from the radial nerve, as are also the forefinger, the middle finger, and the thumb side of the ring finger, while the ulnar nerve furnishes the little finger, and the other side of the ring finger, at the point of extremity of which a real union takes place; hence the ancient reason for placing the wedding ring on this finger.

FISH IN CHIMNEY; PURSE IS HOOKED

Detectives Outdo Ike Walton—Get a $50 Bite and Solve a Theft.

Chicago.—There could be no question about it. The men on top of the Ranier building were fishing. Yessir, they were fishing in the chimney.

"See how quiet and intent they are," said a spectator; "probably afraid to disturb the smoked salmon or whatever it is they are fishing for."

A closer view would show the spectator that the fishermen were none other than Detectives Finn and Lally and that they were using three pounds of fishing tackle.

"What are we fishing for?" Finn asked, repeating a question. "We're fishing for a pair of specs—and the soot has put many of them on our faces."

They Were Fishing in the Chimney.

Tuesday afternoon the Logan Square lodge of the Eastern Star held a meeting in the Ranier building, and Mrs. Benjamin W. Scholton reported that her purse had been stolen. The janitor, Alex Raety, was suspected.

"Why should I steal?" he asked. "My wife and I get $150 for doing the janitor work. We have no rent to pay, no fuel or light bills."

The detectives took his word for it. They went to the meeting room, and saw a trap door, through which one gained the roof. They asked the janitor if he had ever seen any boys on the roof. He had seen George Crotzman there.

The police arrested him. They found a "talcum powder chamois" and $9.58 in his pockets, and after a time he admitted he had stolen the purse. He had thrown the pocketbook down the chimney.

"I had a pair of eyeglasses in that purse," said Mrs. Scholton, "and they cost me $50."

Which explains the fishing expedition. It took the detectives half an hour to hook the pocketbook. And the glasses hadn't been broken.

"Yep," says Lally, "we hooked a speckled purse."

KANSAS MAN LIVES ON CORN

It Was Ten Years Ago and the Court Pronounced Him Feeble-Minded.

Burlington, Kan.—Several weeks ago a complaint was filed in the probate court alleging that E. A. Whitley was feeble-minded and asking that a guardian be appointed. This was done. The guardian held a public sale to dispose of the personal property of the estate which consisted largely of several hundred bushels of corn which had been cribbed from eight to eleven years. It was fine grain when it was cribbed, but the rats and weevil had worked on it. It was sold at a big discount.

This corn had been Whitley's principal article of diet for a number of years; he lived alone and would grind the corn in an old coffee mill and make mush of it. He said there was no food with as much nourishment. He insisted that the "planets" predicted there would be no more crops for years. He wanted to keep this grain.

Distrusted Education.

Education was considered a disqualification in a servant a century ago. Even Hannah More, who did much to promote the Sunday-school movement, confined her curriculum to teaching the children to read the Bible, the catechism "and such coarse works as may fit them for servants." "I allow of no writing for the poor," she stated emphatically.

THE KLEMME TIMES

RAY A. JORGENSON, PUB.

KLEMME, IOWA

The magnitude of Italy's protest against the H. C. L. is revealed in five of today's cables: Florence—All available supplies from shops have fallen into the hands of the crowds or of the organizations. Viterbo—Crowds attacked and ransacked shops, and attempted to storm the residence of the mayor whom they charged with failure to take measures to reduce the cost of living. Palermo—Thirty-one of the principal fish merchants of Palermo, have been arrested here as "starvers of the people." Bologna—Standard meals at fixed prices have been imposed on restaurants in Bologna as a result of the food riots. The prices set vary from 55 cents to $1 for a meal according to the class of the restaurant. Ancona—The entire stock of foods and other necessaries in the city of Ancona are now in the control of the chamber of labor. These stocks have been labelled with inscriptions reading "Goods requisitioned and at the disposal of the people."

Kong Siang-Koo, direct descendant in the 75th generation from Confucius, and president of the provincial council of Shantung province is among the well known Chinese who have recently arrived in Paris to urge a reconsideration of the conference decision to turn Shantung province over to the Japanese. Mr Kong speaks English and like all the other members and attaches of the Chinese delegation wears modern clothes. China's sacred mountain Tai-shan, and the home of Confucius make this province more sacred to Chinese than any other portion of the republic.

The governor of Connecticut declines to call a special session of the legislature to vote on the suffrage amendment. He says: I cannot conclude that the desire of a few women—be they more or less in number—to have a vote upon said proposed amendment taken prior to the next stated session of the general assembly creates a special emergency. I therefore decline to call a special session of the general assembly for the purpose of voting upon said proposed suffrage amendment.

Decision by the Omsk government at Siberia, to withdraw from circulation the paper money issued by the Kerensky regime has created consternation among the Japanese of Vladivostok and Harbin who are large holders of the Kerensky notes. The newspaper, Dawn, declares that the Kerensky paper has been issued by the bolshevist soviets far beyond the limits of discretion.

In commenting on the adoption of the red, black and gold for the new German flag, a Berlin correspondent says: The conservatives naturally want to retain the old colors. The independents demand the red flag. The democrats and majority socialists want black, red and gold since 1848 the symbol of the big Germany idea which expresses the longing for the union of all Germans and also of German-Austrians.

A patrolman who had been a member of the New York police force for 17 years, committed suicide last week because of worry over a charge of using improper language to a superior officer that had been brought against him. It was the first complaint ever lodged against the patrolman.

The district including St. Paul, Minn. has just elected a progressive republican to congress. The district went democratic in the last three elections. The progressive republican in 100 out of 140 precincts, was 1,300 ahead of the "regular" republican candidates, with the democrat 2,000 behind the "regular."

Agitation by the industrial workers of the world has been renewed in Mexico, according to official reports received in Washington. With the forcible deportation of a number of leaders who caused the strikes in Mexico City, Mexican authorities believed that they had completely suppressed the I. W. W. agitation.

A London man writes to the London Times: Sir—Now that air raids are over and London is light again at night, is there any need for young women to powder their noses? This was useful then just as it was useful to paint the lamp-posts white, but as it is no longer necessary, it is now a senseless disfigurement.

An Australian dispatch, dated Sydney, says: The maritime strike, aided by profiteering, is forcing up foodstuffs to such famine prices as have hitherto been unknown. Unless some means can be found to arrest the rise of prices industrial unrest will become more serious.

A salute of 48 guns one for each state in the union from the ancient walls of the fortress of Ehrenbreitstein, echoed up and down the Rhine Friday, in tribute to the birthday of the United States. It was the first time that American artillery has barked from the famous fortress.

"I'm a 'wet' peer coming to a 'dry' land: that's a deuced bad combination and I won't stay long," exclaimed Rt. Honorable Earl of Lindsay as he stepped ashore Saturday. "While you were 'wet'," he said, "America was one of Scotland's best customers. We'll miss you."

There are said to be on sale in Shanghai, China, more than 100 different brands of soap. A recent three-day investigation disclosed 67 separate brands. Of this number 35 were of Chinese manufacture, 20 of British, five of American, four of Japanese, two of French and one of German.

The Rand School of Social Science, New York, commonly called the "Anarchist school" which was raided recently, paid Scott Nearing $610 for lectures in a single month, according to papers seized in the raid. Louis Lockner, of the Ford peace ship, was paid only $10 for lectures.

Having granted the coal miners increased wages, Mr Watt, acting Australian prime minister, has arranged a new system of conference between owners and men, which is designed to banish strikes.

In view of the continued high cost of living, the executive commission of the Associated Press have authorized an increase in the compensation for each operator in the service. This followed a wage increase by the United Press.

BOY IS DROWNED IN LITTLE SIOUX

Excited Companions Failed to Give Assistance When Little Fellow Got Beyond His Depth.

Sioux Rapids, Ia., July 13.—Clarence Christianson, 13, only child of Mrs. Martin Christianson, was drowned in the Little Sioux river at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. The body was not recovered until about 5:30 Friday morning.

The accident occurred just below the dam at this place. He with a number of other boys had gone into the river to bathe. Though he could not swim he made his way to a sandbar in the river and later started to wade down stream. He was soon in water over his head and though a number of other boys were present who could swim, they became frightened and ran for assistance while the little fellow sank to his death.

A large number of grown persons were soon on the scene and a systematic search for the body was commenced and kept up all night, but the body was not found until Friday morning.

The mother is doubly bereaved as her husband died but a few months ago.

FIELD AGENT TO BOOST IOWA DAIRY PRODUCTS

Des Moines, Ia., July 13.—Iowa probably will have a field agent to boost the states dairy interests according to W. B. Barney, dairy and food commissioner. Barney just returned from a meeting of the Holstein-Friesian Association at Brattlesboro, Vt., said the executive board of the association had decided to send field agents into the middle west. Iowa probably will get one of these agents by fall.

MRS. EMERSON FEARED SHE WOULD BE KILLED

Mount Ayr, Ia., July 14.—Mrs. Kate Emerson, for whose death her son, Roy, is on trial here, feared death and said so several days before her crushed body was found at the bottom of an elevator shaft in the Emerson undertaking building at Creston.

"Doggie, in a few days I may be laying out there in the cemetery with daddy," Mrs. Emerson said to a little dog in her office at Creston, according to Walter Matlock, state's witness, and an employe in the Emerson establishment.

Matlock said the conversation took place when Mrs. Emerson returned from a trip to the burial grounds of her husband. This fact developed through the cross examination of Matlock by the defense.

Frances Devoe, assistant to Dr. J. W. Coakley, whose office adjoins the Emerson undertaking parlors in Creston, testified that when she entered the basement with the doctor, Roy Emerson said:

"Mother's head must be beaten to a pulp," and within a few minutes he said "We don't want an inquest."

POLICE INDICTED FOR SELLING SEIZED BOOZE

Des Moines, Ia., July 14.—A shakeup in the Des Moines police force is expected, following the indictment and arrest of Police Sergeant Charles Hall for alleged owning and selling of intoxicants.

The indictment and arrest came on the heels of an investigation by federal operatives and agents from Governor Harding's office.

The indictment was returned by the county grand jury. Hall, who denies the charges, was released on bond.

Investigators hinted that other sensational evidence against the police department would be made public soon.

Pat Sherwood, federal investigator here, said "higher ups" would not be spared if there was evidence against them.

AUTO AND TRAIN CRASH TOGETHER

Five Persons Seriously Injured When Driver of Car Steers Straight Into Locomotive.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 12.—Four residents of Shelby, Ia., and one citizen of Council Bluffs were injured last night a in grade crossing accident in the center of Council Bluffs, three of the Shelby people being injured so badly they may die. The auto in which they were riding, driven by Everett Mowrey, of Shelby, met an engine head on at Eighteenth street and Broadway, the driver having apparently become confused or was looking in another direction.

The injured: Mrs. Oscar Mowrey, Shelby, fractured thigh; collar bone, leg and shoulder and serious cut on the head.

Mrs. James Robertson, Shelby, probable internal injuries.

Mrs. Nissa King, Shelby, probable internal injuries and cut head.

H. J. Lund, Council Bluffs, injured left shoulder, right knee, cut on head. He was riding on the engine pilot.

May Robertson, Shelby, badly wrenched back.

Everett Mowrey, Shelby, badly shaken, probable internal injuries.

PLANE NOT PERMITTED TO LAND IN HIS FIELD

Waterloo, Ia., July 12.—Aviation in the rural districts of Iowa are not without the tragic and comic aspects. Since their invasion of small towns on their flying exhibitions, Lieut. Milo Miller and Lieut. Earl Campbell, pilots of Miller-Scales airplanes, have had several interesting experiences.

Lieutenant Campbell was scheduled to fly at Belle Plaine on July 4. When he arrived he found the landing place that had previously been selected was inadequate, and so he picked another for himself.

Unknowingly, he selected a nice green field owned by a farmer said to be the wealthiest in that vicinity. When Lieutenant Campbell landed he was greeted by the farmer, who carried a gun in his hand and made business like gestures.

"You can't land here," yelled the farmer.

"Why?" asked the aviator.

"Because some other fellow landed here a spell back and tore down my fences when he flew away, dern him."

"How long do you want to stay?"

"All day."

"Well, by cracky, you won't, ou ll git right now," and the gun came into evidence again.

Lieutenant Campbell looked totward the gate leading into the field, a short distance away, and saw Mrs. Farmer with another gun with which she was keeping out the spectators.

Campbell came to the conclusion there was too much artillery in sight and flew to another field a half mile from Belle Plaine.

FINDS BUNDLE OF LETTERS IN HIS FIELD

Parker, S. D., July 11.—While Richard Tieck, a farmer living some miles from town, was mowing in one of his fields, he found a bundle of letters taken from a mail pouch which was stolen from the Parker depot on the morning of June 11, 1919. The thief evidently had gone to the field as a safe place in which to examine his loot. Every letter had been opened by the thief.

THREE BOYS INJURED BY DYNAMITE CAP EXPLOSION

Fremont, Neb., July 11.—Bernhard Emmanuel, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Emanuel, of Maple township, was badly injured when a dynamite cap he found whileb erry picking exploded. His right hand was badly mangled and a knife he was holding was driven into his chest. Amputation of three fingers is expected to be necessary. Two of his brothers who were with him were also badly injured.

PLYMOUTH COUNTY OPENS ITS ARMS

Monster Home Coming Celebration Is Being Staged at LeMars—Several Hundred Service Men Present.

LeMars, Ia., July 11.—Approximately 10,000 people are in this city today attending the Plymouth county homecoming celebration. It is estimated that between 500 and 600 soldiers, sailors and marines are here in uniform.

The program started at 9.30 this morning with a half hour's concert by the local band. At the Southside park at 10 o'clock the entertainment features were started. The entertainments were furnished mostly by the Chautauqua program. Both the local band and the White Hussar girls band furnished the music. This was followed by a musical novelty act by the White Hussars, followed by an address by Governor Carlson, of Colorado.

Following this program, a picnic lunch was served in the park. The Red Cross served hot coffee and lemonade. At 1.30, Lieut. Milo Miller, an American ace, gave an exhibition of military stunt flying. The afternoon program at Cleveland park consisted of the concert by the Banda Roma, and an address, "The Romance of Flying," by another ace, Maj. R. C. Bridgman.

All men in uniform were admitted free to the Chautauqua attractions. After this program there was a program of stunt sports down town.

This evening there will be another program by the Banda Roma in Cleveland park and a pavement dance at 9.

The streets are beautifully decorated and nearly every store decorated its own front for the occasion.

There were nearly 1,000 men in the service from Plymouth county and the delegations here today represented nearly every community in the county.

DES MOINES BANDIT SECURES VALUABLES

Des Moines, Ia., July 11.—A lone, masked bandit, perhaps one of the highwaymen who shot and critically wounded Frederick Erisman, discharged overseas soldier, held up two auto parties early today and secured $15 and a diamond ring. PROCEED TO COLLECT AUTOMOBILE TAX

Des Moines, Ia., July 11.—County attorneys and state officers will within a short time wage a vigorous campaign throughout the state to collect delinquent automobile license fees from some 15,000 auto owners.

Notwithstanding the fact that State Treasurer E. H. Hoyt has worked hard to settle up all of these outstanding accounts there are yet some 15,000 persons who have failed to renew their automobile licenses for this year. Lists are now being made up for each county which will be forwarded to the county attorney within a short time. Every effort will then be made to collect the money.

BODY FOUND IN RIVER IS HARD TO IDENTIFY

Cedar Rapids, Ia., July 11.—The police have obtained information that leads them to believe that the body of the unidentified man pulled from the Cedar river near Tipton Monday is that of James E. Smith, a wealthy retired farmer of this community who has been listed as missing for several months.

The first information received convinced the police and coroner the body was that of a man who was killed in the starch works disaster and the body blown into the river. However the description of the teeth and of some of the clothing almost convinced the police that the body is that of Smith.

IOWANS ON AUTO TRIP ARRIVE IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., July 11.—Three automobiles loaded with Iowans arrived here on a tour of the east. They included X. H. McNeil of Sanborn, George Raw, of Paullina, and Geo. W. Harris, of Paullina, and their families. Mr. McNeill and his family will tour through eastern Canada. All made a call on representative bodies.

DES MOINES—Vouchers, mutilated and missing, are the center of interest in the Pierce-Clum hearing today. Wilma Smith, stenographer for Clum, said she had discovered vouchers which the experts who went over the Clum report were unable to find, while they had found some that she couldn't locate. The vouchers were in the hands of the executive council, she said and she blamed these state officials for their sad condition. Difficulties of obtaining an accurate check of amounts spent at San Francisco, were greatly increased at today's hearing.

IOWA CITY—More than 1,100 students are enrolled in the University of Iowa summer session, the largest summer enrollment in the history of the institution. This is an 11 per cent increase over the previous summer session. Five hundred and twelve of these students are registered in the college of liberal arts. The graduate college ranks next in number of students. Summer work at the university is divided into terms, the first of six weeks, the last of five. Graduating exercises will be held at the conclusion of both terms.

IOWA CITY—A new national social fraternity, the Phi Gamma Delta, has recently established a chapter at the University of Iowa. This brings the number of national, social and professional fraternities at the state university up to 27. Phi Gamma Delta has 60 chapters at colleges and universities throughout the country.

IOWA CITY—The body of John Broadway, aged 10, missed by a dozen playmates after a Sunday afternoon swim in the Iowa river, was found today a mile south of the point near River Junction, where the boys had been swimming.

The Strength of Giants.

From the Dearborn Independent.

Fascinating to our drama loving eyes were all those massive ments of the great powers. A big four or a big five stand upo little globe and divide it like an orange, and all forests and and mountain ranges to one another, or to lesser powers. A pene drawn across a map in Versailles, and 1,000,000 souls in tawny enter upon a new destiny. The point of the pencil breaks, and of that 1,000,000 remain as they were.

But while these great powers were thus guiding the world like of old, there were many tiny powers that moved among them apparently these little states were quite as assured in their move as the mightiest of the victors. Finland plans her foreign policy she were fortified forever behind her snows. Esthonia, yest merely a name in geography, makes bargains with Britain l nation. Liechtenstein, that almost invisible principality in a ne the Alps, sent an envoy to express the opinion of sovereign Lie stein of the League of Nations.

In fact, the geographers are learning of some states existence was previously unknown. Little kings from the shadowed Caucasus, little republics wedged between two hills Pyrenees, tribes whose domain lies in their fluttering and shifting just off the caravan routes of Arabia, presented their claims as n They asked all that Finland asks, or Esthonia, or Poland, or C Slovakia, and these ask all that is demanded by Great Britain United States.

In all the grandeur of the great powers there is nothing so as this: that the tiniest states feel safe in the same world with n of 1,000 ships and armies which lately numbered millions. D our temporary despairs and cynicisms, we are passing away fro age in which a powerful nation was necessarily an oppressor of states, in which a weak state was necesarily the oppressed vict some greater power. Shakespeare said: "It is excellent to h giant's strength, but it is tyrannous to use it like a giant." civilization stands forth in a strength gigantic and barbaric, b heart of it is still the heart of democracy.

France Will Clean House.

From the Seattle Times.

It is none of America's business, but the fact remains nevertheless that France is destined to go through a period of housecleaning, probably in the very near future. Powerful French agencies are striving to continue and perpetuate the drastic regulations on industry which war rendered necessary, because they have found these regulations profit their personal interests. Sugar is furnished candy factories and canning concerns in unlimited amount, but is doled out to the people. One who will pay exorbitant prices can obtain all the candy he desires—but he must get along with a scanty provision of sweetening for domestic use. American business men, desiring to do business with European concerns, find they must negotiate with mysterious trade organizations, which say what they may sell and to whom, what the Frenchman may buy and from whom.

The Mixup Over the Army.

From the Springfield Republican.

The republican Senate fixes upon 400,000 men as the right size of the army in the year beginning July 1. The republican House voted that 300,000 was large enough. Our "pacifist" secretary of war, as he used to be called, recommended 500,000 as the irreducible minimum. In this topsy-turvy world, the queerest reversals are possible and we may yet see the National Security League demanding absolute disarmament and Henry Ford preaching preparedness. Meanwhile, the real solution of the Washington mystery is probably this: The republicans are trying desperately to cut down expenses so as to cut down taxes—a praiseworthy effort—and that means cutting down the most expensive army in the world below even the figure deemed safe for this particular period of a "pacifist" secretary.

Czechs Avoid Revolution.

From the Literary Digest.

No parallel in modern history, it is said, can be found for the Czecho-Slovak land reform bill, which was passed unanimously by all parties in the national assembly on April 16. The bill was welcomed by all Czech papers and all sections of the population, we are told, a typical comment in the Prague Narodni Listy running thus:

The expropriation is proceeding in a legal way, and is taking place on account of social reasons. We want to abolish the large estates, having thousands of acres, while there are hundreds of thousands of people wishing to work on their own land, but who do not possess any land at all. We want to make an experiment in agricultural cooperation, in which all willing to work may take part. Our republic is making an attempt at a peaceful and orderly bringing over of the social differences.

Do It Now.

If there's work that should be done, do it now; if you wish to borrow mon, do it now; putting off from day to day is a foolish, slipshod way, and such methods never pay—do it now. If you'd ply a deathless pen, do it now; if you ought to set a hen, do it now; if you're billed to trim the lawn, do not wait the morrow's dawn; you may then be dead and gone—do it now. If you'd build yourself a home, do it now; if you'd write an epic pome, do it now; oh, so many fellows cry, "We have plans for by and by!" If you'd climb to places high, do it now. If you'd renovate your life, do it now; if you'd cheer your weary wife, do it now; it is vain to sit and wait till you get your mood on straight; if you ought to pull your freight; pull it now. If you'd buy next winter's coal, buy it now; if you wish to save a roll, save it now; for no man can rise and say what may happen when today is worn out and laid away; do things now. If you'd demonstrate your grit, do it now; if you hope to make a hit, do it now; for the idler cuts no ice, and the dreamer lacks the price; if you'd get there once or twice, do it now.

His Job.

From the Detroit News.

"What do you do up in Montreal, Mr. Warman?"

"I work for the Grand Trunk," said Warman.

"What kind of a job have you got—do you sell tickets or handle baggage?"

"Oh, I got a better job than either of those," said Cy. "You know the man who goes alongside of the train and taps the wheels with a hammer to see that everything's all right? Well, I help him listen."

The Mary O'Briens.

From the "Comeback."

Mary is a grand old name to John J. O'Brien. At least this is what research workers among the files of the insurance division bureau of war risk insurance believe. In a communication to the bureau inquiring about his policy, a John J. O'Brien stated he could be identified in lieu of his serial and certificate numbers, by the fact that the beneficiary named was his wife, Mary A. The research workers were amazed to find the names of 175 John J. O'Briens and to add to the completeness of their surprise, 50 John Js had wives whose names are Mary A.

ashington, July 12.—President Wilson today blocked the of the daylight saving law by vetoing the agricultural ap- ation bill, carrying a rider for that purpose, and at the same vetoed the sundry civil appropriation bill because it would the application of money for the rehabilitation and training bled soldiers. Both important supply bills, carrying many millions ars urgently needed in government activities and already held up by failure in the last congress, now must be reported in form over his veto by two-thirds vote in both houses, which eemed unlikely.

to the sundry civil bill the another communication to said:

the vocational rehabilitation becomes law June 27, 1918, has sought to fulfill the ns of the country that the ailor or marine disabled in war should be given an op- y to secure at the expense of the fostering care of the government such training as he overcome the handicap of his and to resume his place as a able to earn a living upon like equal footing with whom he was associated made his great sacrifice for and defense of the country. ork of rehabilitation under ble law is now at its height and was to have been [illegible] speed and certainty by the amendment to section two of the vocational habilitation bill which I have today signed and which places the whole responsibility for vocational training in a single agency virtually transferring from the war risk insurance bureau to the federal board for vocational education $6,000,000 with which to support disabled men in training at the enormous figure of $80 a month for each man and $100 a month for each man and his wife.

"It is a matter of vital importance, therefore, that at the very moment when these disabled men are coming in constantly increasing numbers the government to avail themselves of the general plan there should be no sundry civil appropriation that will now return, limiting, crippling, which will do much more than serve to delay and retard the beneficial work of restoring these men to useful and profitable employment. [illegible] ably [illegible] if not impossible, would null[illegible] whole act and render it inadministrable on practically impossible terms.

Appropriation Too Small.

The section of the bill which limits the return which governs the appropriation for this work provides the sum of $6,000,000 for all the expenses of the habilitation including [illegible] of the disabled men in training and this sum is stated to be in lieu of the appropriation contained in the [illegible] proved July, 1919 amending [illegible] proved June [illegible] of the act approved June [illegible]

"Inasmuch as there are [illegible] 4,000 disabled soldiers, sailors and marines in training and [illegible] another 4,000 will be put in training now that the amendment to section 2 has become law, it is clear that even at the rate of $80 a month a sum approximating $8,000,000 will be required for the mere support of these men, and that under the present appropriation nothing would be available for tuition or travel or placing them where they can earn a living and it would and it will be impossible to meet the needs of the new thousands who are every week seeking the benefits of the rehabilitation act.

"In the offices of the board in the District of Columbia and in 14 great centers of the United States immediate help is being given to men in need of these services and these offices are used for the essential purpose of keeping accurate records of providing proper medical survey of the men of caring for them in their illness and of various administrative costs [illegible] able from difficult work of this kind, which must, in the present circumstances reach to every corner of the United States.

Objects to Salary Cuts.

"Furthermore, the same section of the sundry civil bill places such limitations upon the salaries which the federal board for vocational education is permitted to pay that it will inevitably result in the loss by the vocational board of a very large number of men who have made themselves especially valuable and indispensable in this new work by reason of their native ability, their proven general knowledge and special training, and to whose advice the disabled men must look as well as for superintendence in the matter of training and employment. Among these are the vocational advisers whose special duty is to study the men in the hospitals, confer with them and lay out their vocational plans. The hospital cases must, if these men are to be dismissed or allowed to resign, get along entirely without such advice and supervision until they have been able after the discharge to make their way on their own initiative to the distant office of the federal board.

"The serious limitation of the amount of money available and the uses to which it is put, involve therefore an actual disruption of a carefully built up service at the very moment when the disabled soldiers, sailors and marines now in the country, or returning to it are most immediately in need of help."

Allies Will Not Attempt to Maintain Blockade—Germany Informed of Altered Trade Relations.

By United Press.

Paris, July 14.—The council of five began issuing instructions today on cessation of the blockade against Germany.

The big five forwarded a note to the Germans informing them that their ratification of the treaty had been accepted and that the individual allied governments would take steps to lift the blockade.

The council also started consideration of lifting the blockade against Russia, its maintenance being rendered most difficult by the official decree abolishing the barriers around Germany. American delegates also held it was not legal.

The decision to raise the German blockade was taken yesterday, after experts had advised the council that they considered ratification of the peace treaty by the German national assembly was sufficient, without awaiting action by the Prussian and Bavarian parliaments. The council concurred in the opinion.

NEEDS RAW MATERIALS.

Washington, July 14.—Germany will need immediately from the United States large quantities of cotton, copper, kerosene oil and increased amounts of food stuffs and wearing apparel, department of commerce officials stated today following announcement that trade relations were to be resumed at once.

Trade with Germany has been at a standstill virtually since August, 1914. Germany's total imports from the United States in 1913 amounted to $467,246,000. Cotton, copper, raw fur skins and kerosene oil were the principal commodities, together with the food stuffs wheat being the largest of the latter. In that year Germany imported $169,896,000 worth of cotton, $69,981,000 of copper, $15,827,000 of skins, $12,612,000 of kerosene oil, and $39,243,000 of wheat. American imports from Germany consisted principally of toys, potash, dyestuffs, chemicals and drugs, and delicate precision instruments, also pottery and porcelains and granite ware.

Cut off from German supplies American firms began the manufacture of many commodities previously imported from Germany and legislation to protect these industries from "dumping" from German firms is now pending in congress.

PRICES TOPPLING.

By Associated Press.

Berlin, July 14.—In view of the impending raising of the blockade, the government's recent action in reducing the price of food staples is forcing food traffickers to get rid of hidden supplies. As a result a sharp decline in prices is reported from all sections of Germany, the most marked decreases being in the Rhenish zone of occupation, where they have fallen from 3 0to 60 per cent.

As stocks in occupied territory apparently exceed the demand, large quantities are being shipped to Berlin, where good prices still prevail. Berlin probably will be the last city to enjoy appreciable price reductions, as much of its supplies must be shipped long distances.

It is reported from Weimar that the government will exercise control of incoming war material and also exports.

SWIFT CLAIMS THAT REPORTS ARE BIASED

Head of Packing Company Denies Collusion and Assails Trade Commission.

Chicago, July 14.—Louis F. Swift, president of Swift & Co., today declares that the latest report of the federal trade commission contained no new facts and was an evident effort to influence at this time proposed radical legislation. Mr. Swift said: "This latest report of the federal trade commission is merely an attack upon large and successful business organizations and should be resented by all Americans who are proud of the industrial progress of the nation. It contains nothing new, and is an outgrowth of the former discredited Heney exparte investigation. This report, so far as I am informed, contains absolutely no evidence of collusion among the five largest packers, and I say for Swift & Co., as I have said many times, that we have no agreement of any kind with any other packer to effect the prices of live stock or meats. We are living up to both the spirit and the letter of the law and want to cooperate with the government in every helpful and constructive way, but we must protect against the methods used by this important branch of the government. I say that the large packers and their individual businesses are a public benefit and a decided factor in keeping down the spread between live stock and meat prices. This report is put out now as a part of the propaganda in which the trade commission, with others, is engaged seeking to subject the packing industry and other lines of business to the arbitrary control of subordinate government officials through a license system.

"No one disputes that out of the total receipts of the packers derived from the products of animals, about 85 per cent is paid out for the live animals themselves; about 13 per cent is paid out for wages, transportation and other such expenses; about 2 per cent of this turnover is earned by the packer as net profit; and no one disputes that this amount is but a small fraction of a cent per pound; and that it is so negligible as not in any event to effect the price which the consumer pays for meats. The report just issued by the trade commission and its discussion of the number of subsidiary companies and its calculation of percentages of the classes of business handled by the packers, is not only erroneous, but is entirely immaterial to the real question in which the public is interested, namely, why are prices high. I do not believe that the findings of such a prejudiced and unfair report should be used to influence public opinion, or as a basis for the radical legislation that has been introduced at Washington.

MAY ATTEMPT TO HOLD PRESIDENT

League Opponents Discuss the Methods For Keeping Wilson From Making Swing Through Nation.

By United Press.

Washington, July 14.—An attempt to prevent President Wilson making his cross country tour in behalf of the League of Nations, by keeping him in daily attendance with meetings of the Senate foreign relations committee was being discussed today by league opponents in congress.

Senator Moses, New Hampshire, a new republican member of the committee said today he plans to offer a resolution in the committee Monday inviting President Wilson to attend the sessions of that body, beginning at 10 a. m., each day while the peace treaty is being discussed.

"I think the president could more effectively serve his country in this way than by making stump speeches throughout the nation," said Moses.

Favor Having Wilson.

President Wilson has already expressed a willingness to give all information possible to the committee.

Other republican members said today they favored having Wilson meet the committee to inform it fully of treaty provisions about which there is controversy or doubt. Borah said he would vote for a resolution inviting Wilson to appear.

Many democrats also would like to see the president's offer of his services, made in his speech to the Senate, accepted at once. The view generally taken was that the committee cannot refuse to invite the president to appear, in view of his clearly expressed desire to do so. However, Wilson's friends want him to attend only a few sessions.

Secretary Tumulty today issued a statement declaring reports of a disagreement between President Wilson and Senator Hitchcock, who had been one of his most ardent supporters, are untrue.

View On Shantung.

Japan gets Shantung on the same principle a man would be rewarded for ousting a burglar from another man's property.

This is to be the administration's explanation of the Shantung settlement, Senator Swanson, Virginia, said today, following a talk with President Wilson.

"Japan ousted the German burglar from China," said Swanson. "As a reward Japan is entitled to collect at least as much as it spend in doing so. This Japan can do through temporary possession of Shantung."

URGE LEGALIZING RE-SALE PRICES

Federal Trade Commission Claims Legislation Would Help Both Manufacturers and Public.

Washington, July 14.—In a special report to congress, the federal trade commission today urged passage of legislation permitting manufacturers to fix and maintain re-sale prices.

Such legislation, the commission stated, would promote the efficiency of manufacturing and commercial institutions and serve the interests of the consuming public.

Under the legislation recommended by the committee, manufacturers desiring to fix and maintain re-sale prices, would file with an agency, to be designated by congress, description of articles, contracts of sale and the price schedules to be maintained. This agency would be charged with the duty upon complaint of any dealer or consumer or other party at interest, to review the terms of contracts and prices, and revise the prices if found necessary.

ARMY AIRPLANES CRASH; 2 KILLED

Pilot and Passenger of One Plane Meet Death—Occupants of Second Craft Land Safely.

By Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., July 14.—Lieut. T. J. Lenihan, of San Francisco, Cal., and Chaplain R. H. O'Dowd, of Brooklyn, N. Y., assistant camp [illegible] officer at Camp Pike, were instantly killed today when a plane piloted by Lieutenant Lenihan was struck by another machine from Ebert's field. The second machine also fell, but its occupants were not injured.

English Movie Fans Unable to Grasp Yank Slang Terms

London.—The English people like American photoplays but they do not like the sub-titles when slang is used. As well known London critic has praised a new American film produced here, but is rather severe on the captions. He could not understand what a "bonehead" meant; a "boob" was completely beyond him and "bring back the bacon" he considered impossible from any viewpoint.

Aside from the word "some" which has been taken up as an adjective by Londoners, Americans in England still have a monopoly on their slang.

"TYPIST" TYPES SELF INTO POLICE CELL

Gives Weird Demonstration When Police Demand Proof of Proficiency.

Chicago.—A man with a typewriter under his arm was seen to enter a State street saloon by Detectives Fitzpatrick and Lynch of the South Clark street station. They suspected he had stolen the machine and followed him.

The man offered it to the bartender for a pint of whisky. He was arrested and taken to the station, where he gave the name of William McDermott.

Lynch Dictated.

"Now tell us where you stole that typewriter?" Fitzpatrick demanded.

"I didn't steal no typewriter," protested the man. "I brought it with me from Pittsburgh."

"Do you take dictation?" asked the detective.

"I take anything."

"I think you took the machine," interjected Fitzpatrick.

"Is that so?" said the suspect. "You got another think coming." He spat on his hands and remarked: "You may fire when ready, Gridley."

Lynch dictated: "Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party."

After ten minutes of pounding at the keys, with perspiration rolling down his face, he produced this:

CITY'S PRIDE WELL FOUNDED

Alexandria, Va., Has Right to Boast of Her Present as Well as Her Past Glories.

Alexandria, Va., is a thriving little southern city with a historic background. The city can never decide of which it should be proudest—its prosperous present or historic past. As a rule it divides its pride equally between them. Several times it has been given an opportunity to become part of the District of Columbia and proudly refused.

Alexandrians will show you with equal pride their busy shipyards and harbor and then escort you to one of their ancient landmarks, such as Christ church or the Carlyle house. Christ church is sacred to the memory of the south's two greatest heroes, Washington and Lee. The Washington and Lee pews in the church are side by side, their names marked by silver plates. Twin mural tablets on the church's wall are inscribed to their memory. The chancel rail is the one before which they knelt, the tablets of the Lord's prayer and Apostle's Creed were there in Washington's time. In the vestry room relics of the heroes are preserved—the record of their purchase of their pews, the Bible and the long handled purse used in Washington's time for the offerings.

The congress of Alexandria met in the old Carlyle house, over twenty years before the battle of Lexington was fought. It was the first protest against "taxation without representation" held in Virginia. It was in this same old mansion that the Braddock expedition was decided upon. Washington was a frequent visitor to the house. His diary has often the words: "Lodg'd at Col. Carlyle's."

OLD LAW ON STATUTE BOOKS

If British Judges Were Guided by It There Would Be Some Confusion in the "Island Empire."

Many curious acts of parliament still remain on the statute book, remarks the London Daily Mail. Every little while these appear in the courts, but as the British judges decide cases more by the public interest than by the law they cause very little trouble.

Three acts have been quoted this week. One referred to an act of George II., which allowed the landlord to charge a tenant he wished to leave his premises double rent. The plaintiff claimed, but lost his case.

Another was a claim by the admiralty for freight on bullion carried from South Africa on a warship. This claim was decided in favor of the bankers, who got their freight free owing to an act that was passed in 1819 for the purpose of stopping the abuse of the privilege of conveying bullion in king's ships by the commercial community.

An act that is still enforced is one of James I., dated 1424, a Scottish statute. It reads:

"If any mine of gold or silver be found in any lord's lands of the realm and it may be proved that three halfpennies of silver may be fined out of the pound of lead, the lords of parliament consent that such mine may be the king's, as is usual of other realms."

Steals Man's Home; Rebuilt While Away

One year ago Almon Eaton bought a house near Toledo, O., and figured if he bought keys for the doors it would be perfectly safe. Eaton went to his cottage a few days ago, after an absence of a year, only to discover nothing but an empty lot. Thieves had taken everything from the woodshed to the brick chimney.

The police state Eaton located his house rebuilt a mile from its original resting place.

Sailors on Tropic Seas Appreciate Incident Which Varies the Monotony of the Voyage.

Whoever has sailed a tropic sea will appreciate Mr. William Beebe's description in the American Museum Journal of a school of playful dolphins that appeared suddenly from the depths and adopted for their playfellow the ship upon which he was sailing.

It was a lazy, tropical morning, writes Mr. Beebe, and the engines seemed to throb in a half-somnolent manner. I folded up in a desk chair and idly watched the beautiful profile of the island astern.

Suddenly the sea became alive with virile beings—curving steel-gray bodies that shot forth like torpedoes from some mighty battery. I thrilled in every fiber, and the sloth of the tropics fell from me as by a galvanic shock. The dolphins had come! Usually they appear in their haunts between Dominica and Martinque, but here they were in dozens, leaping for breath with the regularity of machinery. Now and then, in a spirit of play, one of them vaulted high in the air, ten feet above the surface, twisted and fell broadside with a slap that could be heard half a mile away. A school came close alongside, slackened speed to that of the vessel, and now and then dived beneath and appeared off the opposite quarter. Another trick was for one or two to station themselves just ahead of the bow and to remain there motionless, urged on by the pressure of the water from behind. It was unexpected and splendid to have this battalion of magnificent cetaceans, bursting with vital energy and fullness of life, injected without warning into the calm quiet of this tropic sea.

FARMER SUPREME IN CHINA

Tiller of the Soil Lives Circumscribed Life, and Is Satisfied With a Bare Existence.

In recognition of the importance of Chinese agriculture the emperor himself, in the days of the empire, followed the wise custom of turning a furrow of ground once a year in the sacred precincts of the Temple of Heaven at Peking. It is the farmer still who is the truest representative of Chinese society and the farmer's baby who carries on the tradition in its soundest aspects. His life as he grows up may be narrowly circumscribed by the mud walls of his humble thatched home, which he shares indiscriminately with the pigs and live stock; the rise and fall of dynasties or republics trouble him not at all. If the year passes with no devastating floods, wrecking the results of many months' labor, food will be sufficient; no more can be asked. Now and then strolling actors come through the village and set up their grass-mat theaters; a story-teller makes his appearance at the temple festival, recounting the strangely living deeds of miraculous beings in centuries long since harvested; itinerant traders, their wares on their backs, pass down the deep-sunken road, bringing the gossip of the outer world. If life is lived according to the irreducible denominator it is not wholly barren. There is the vast accumulated thought of the past, the immeasurable world of the countless dead, toward which the present reaches out like a ring ever widening toward eternity.—Asia Magazine.

Slightly Bewildering.

"Dad, what is a roost?" asked Charlie. "A roost, my son, is a pole upon which chickens sit at night," replied his father. "And what's a perch, dad?" "A perch is what chickens perch on." "Then I suppose, dad, a chicken could roost on a perch?" came the further inquiry. "Of course!" was the smiling reply. "And they could perch on a roost?" "Why, y-yes!" answered dad. "But if chickens perched on a roost that would make the roost a perch, wouldn't it? But if just after some chickens had perched on a roost and made it a perch some more chickens came along and roosted on the perch and made it a roost, then the roost would be a perch and the perch would be a roost, and some of the chickens would be perchers and the others would be roosters, and—well, there!"

Stevenson and Lang.

Robert Louis Stevenson was "ordered South," and, as we know, he left it on record that he never had been quite happy anywhere except at Hyeres. But that accomplished man of letters, Andrew Lang, was of another mind. He went to the Riviera, and was bored by it. He particularly detested being introduced to strangers and having afternoon tea in hotels, so when the time came for his departure to his last holiday he chose Banchory, on Deeside. "After all," said he, "there is nothing better than Scotland." So he died in the land he loved.

Servant Problem an Old One.

Parson Cole, who lived in the middle of the 18th century, judging from one of his manuscripts, was quite familiar with the servant difficulty, which apparently was just as acute as in these later days. The reverend gentleman's entry is as follows:

"Paid Mary her wages, and would not let her stay, as she refused to stop with me till Michaelmas. I don't know where to provide myself of one in her room, but 'Wilkes and Liberty' have brought things to that pass that ere long we shall get no one to serve us."

WEEDS USEFUL IN MEDICINE

Grandmother Used to Concoct Some Wonderful Cureails From All Sorts of Growing Things.

With the exception of some of the daintier spring blossoms, our wild flowers are passed by without comment. Violets, hepaticas, bluebells, trilliums are still sought after and picked, the fall asters are gathered by some and the goldenrod is admired, but passing into disrepute on account of its hay-fever aggravations. There was a time, however, when grandmother was young, when most of our common field and wayside flowers were of prime importance in the household, in the shape of family bitters, physics and cureails.

Yarrow, a pest to the farmer, and of doubtful beauty even to the wild flower lover, was at one time a most useful herb, from which a tea was made that cured all sorts of ailments, from toothache to typhoid fever. From the boneset plant, so common along our streams now, a tea was also made which was a prime favorite in curing that common malady, "breakbone fever"—do not laugh—probably what we know today as grippe. Comobile, we call it dog fennel, was brewed into a tea as well, and was used as a tonic and blood purifier.

Jimson weed, a corruption of Jamestown weed, was valued by the settlers of that early village as a narcotic, and is still so used, for that matter. Self-heal the little, close-growing purple-flowered pest of our lawns, was used to relieve sufferers with quinsy and other throat afflictions. This plant belongs to the mint family, and most of the mints were of use medicinally. Pennyroyal, spearmint, Oswego tea, bergamot, catnip and motherwort were all of value to the simpler folk of a century or more ago.

FIRST EMBLEM OF BABYLONIA

Writer Points Out How Eagle Became National Symbol Many Thousands of Years Ago.

The useful schoolboy, whose knowledge is casually referred to whenever it is desired to imply general historical information, doubtless knows about the eagles of Rome, and more or less connects them with the heraldic eagle of the United States, but Prof. James H. Breasted of Chicago carried the lineage of the symbol much farther back when he recently pointed out that the American eagle reasonably enough originated some 5,000 years ago in Babylonia. Then first appeared the eagle with outstretched wingssymbolizingthestate. Romecame later, and the succession of European nations that have adopted the eagle: Russia, Austria, Prussia, France and others. But this first eagle was a bird of autocracy, and nothing could have been more opposite to the governmental idea of ancient Babylon than the American Declaration of Independence. Free and powerful, the eagle stands logically for liberty and strength, but when it first became a national symbol, liberty, as the word is now understood, did not exist.

Fun in Trees for Children.

What a delight an old apple, cherry or plum tree is to children, boys or girls. Particularly a tree that has been trained to a low, open head, that the youngsters can scramble up in without much effort.

My heart stands still sometimes when I see the children swinging in the plum tree, like the simians some scientists tell us we have descended from, and it is the only resemblance of an ape I have observed in mankind. Surely there must be some relation or there would be broken limbs and broken heads among the flocks of children that swarm in that glorious old tree.

Frequent cautioning and pleadings excite no fear, but if there are no accidents the old plum is fulfilling a splendid mission, though there are no other plum trees sufficiently near for the bees and insects to fertilize the flowers, resulting in the tree producing only one kind of fruit, pleasure for the children.

Chance Discoveries.

Some of the finest friendships have grown out of the chance circumstances that have thrown men together for the moment. Some of the greatest discoveries have been due to the fortunate disclosures of life's incidentals. Much of self-discovery is the direct product of the unlooked for. Science has been made rich by the fortunate combinations of accidentals whose meanings have been caught by observant men. And the great fact remains that most of them have been paraded before men through the ages, to be discovered only now. And the ages to come will wonder at the lost opportunities of the present age when they have harnessed the powers we see not—the mysteries we wonder at.

Equality of Opportunity.

It is the pride of every American that many cherished names, at whose mention our hearts bound, were worn by the sons of poverty who conquered obscurity and became fixed stars in our firmament. There is no horisontal stratification in this country like the rocks of the earth, that holds one class below forevermore, and lets another come to the surface to stay there forever. Our stratification is like the ocean, where every individual drop is free to move, and where from the sternest depths of the deep any drop may come up to glitter on the highest wave that rolls.—Garfield.

Mangroves Destroying Island.

The island of Aldabra, near Madagascar, is being wiped off the map by the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliff. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way.

Chinese Skillful Farmers.

For intensive farming the Chinese can teach almost any other nationality on earth. Their methods would be impractical here, but for sheer ability to obtain from the small space of ground the greatest yield they have no peers.

All morning while the train glided over the level plain he was going over his recent experience; going back to the moment when the girl entered upon his vision and looked at him with that clear, direct gaze that trusted him, thinking over every detail of his finding her in the darkness and peril, the miracle that he and not some other should have found and saved her; recalling every incident of the beautiful wearisome way by which they had gone home together, and the wonder of the girl's faith in him, her love for him—his love for her

Any one watching the absorbed silent man sitting alone, his head dropped back against the seat, his hat drawn down over his eyes, the lines of gravity deep upon brow and lip and chin, would have judged him for a much older man than he was, so maturing had life thus far been to him.

And now, the task that was before him was to find Scathlin—if, indeed, he were still in the land of the living—or some evidence that he was dead; and to know beyond a question of doubt what had become of those paper, and just how far Harrington had been responsible for the theft.

He loathed his task, yet felt compelled by some inner urging to finish it. Almost his soul revolted to the extent of giving up the case and letting his enemies triumph over him What to him now was his silver mine, since he had found her- and lost her forever " Why not let his property go and leave Hawk Valley forever, where his reputation had undone him in his greatest opportunity? Why not go to some new land where he was unknown and begin all over again?

But his soul was too strong and true for that He must face his mistakes in the place where he had made them and undo, if might be, some of the harm he had done. He had to do this whether he would or no It was right that he should find his papers and make good his claim It was a part of the true living he had set himself from this time forth He had promised to let people see that he was trustworthy and this was the first step If Harrington and his men go their way he would be branded as a thief and a liar again and the old reputation only fixed the firmer

It was toward evening when they passed the scene of the late disaster and the long rays of the sun rested over the river and valley where peril and death had brooded A temporary way had been made for the tracks, all signs of death and disaster swept hastily out of sight by the wrecking train and the tide of travel was already rolling calmly on again. A swarm of workmen, like ants carrying grains of sand over a wall, were at work on the broken bridge, and the passing traveller looked cheerfully across and got no hint of fire and fear and sudden death Even the trainmen had had their orders and answered gruffly in brief sentences, when questioned about the wreck, turning it off lightly as a small thing, until they heard that here was one of the almost victims of the accident Then they looked sharply a second time and stole back to talk in low tones with guarded sentences about where the blame should lie. But no one know much about the details after all. The conductor reluctantly admitted that the victims, those who had been saved, had been taken to the nearest city and distributed among the hospitals That was all He implied that there were many victims who had not even that comfort

So on to the nearest city went Jasper Holt, arriving shortly after sundown and began his search among the hospitals at once, having visited the railroad office and got all the information they could give him

Three days and two night Jasper Holt searched, in hospitals and morgues and even private homes. Wherever he could learn of a person who had been through the accident he went to see if they knew any clue to the man he sought, but not a hint did he find

It was entirely reasonable to suppose that Scathlin had lost his life in the fire or the river, and to feel that further search was unnecessary. But Jasper Holt, standing at the window of his hotel room and looking out on the busy streets of that western city toward evening of the third day, could not feel it so. More and more it became necessary to find that man, or be sure of his death The three days of visiting hospitals and viewing suffering and death had graven the sad lines even deeper in his fine, strong face. It began to seem now to him that he might even have a duty toward that loathsome creature Scathlin, though heaven knows why any such thought should have entered his head, seeing he was the injured, not the injuring. But the more he thought about it the more he felt that he must search further.

To look any longer in the city was absurd. He had already covered every clue that he had found, and the railroad authorities were beginning to grow weary of this assiduous young man with the firm jaw and the blue gray eyes of steel who steadily demanded the missing man. They offered to send him back to the scene of the accident with a man to help him, and authority to get assistance from their workmen to search the river and vicinity. This offer Jasper finally accepted and the next morning was on his way back.

The last time Holt had seen Scathlin he had not really seen him at all, he had merely sensed his presence in the darkness.

They had both been sleeping—Scathlin with the relaxation of one who no longer needs to be on the alert, Holt with half his senses on guard—when the crash came. Splintering glass and a rush of cold air brought Holt clearly to himself. The car had been turned on end and was sinking, sinking down with creak and groan; and the two men were thrown together for a monet into the aisle, clinging to the arms of the seats. Holt had heard the terrible oaths with which Scathlin was wont to embroider his speech even on calmer occasions They sounded now like a challenge to the Almighty. The younger man had reached out a hand in the darkness to strike the other, and had uttera single sentence "Cut that out!" but the profanity continued, and Scathlin had struck him a blow blindly across his eyes which bewildered him for a second and made the confusion more black and terrible. Then he had been aware that Scathlin was scrambling up over the arm of the seat to the window, and was about climbing out. The red glow from outside flared up and showed Scathlin's bulk against the night, his head and shoulders already out of the window, the stream of oaths not so distanct now because they were flung to the outdoor world.

It was then that he realized that Scathlin was escaping from him and he must not let him get away Even in such a situation he remembered his long quest, and pulling himself up by main force, caught Scathlin by the foot Suddenly he remembered the curious actions of Scathlin the day before, and his fumbling with his shoe strings afterwards. The shoe Holt held in his firm grip was laced and tied in a hard knot, but Holt's knife was ready and he cut the string in several places. Scathlin did not stay for shoes. He left his footgear readily in his pursuer's hands and made good his escape but Molt, forgetful of his peril for the moment, searched in the shoe and found a folded paper

It was too dark to tell if the paper were one of those he sought. He put it safely in his pocketbook for further investigation, felt in the shoe carefully once more to make sure there was not another, and then climbed out of the window after Scathlin. But when he dropped into the melee belowe he could not see Scathlin anywhere. There were some rocks far belof, and down there he had thought he saw a white face as he first looked from the window before he leaped, when the fire broke out with a flare. But after he had dropped and found himself in the water he could not quite locate the rocks again, and while he was searching he saw another victim drop and sink and rise again, and he went to her rescue. So had Scathlin had his wish and escaped from the train before they reached the region of Hawk Valley.

Holt and his assistant searched the scene of the wreck until the young man was convinced that further search there was useless, and sent the man back to the city. Then he dropped down the river bank and talked with one or two men on the wrecking crew while they were waiting for the construction train to come and bear them back to their camp, and here for the first time he got a clue. They had found a man down on the rocks with a broken leg a whole day after the others had been taken to the city hospital Some bushes had hid him and no one had noticed him till they heard him groaning and cursing. A man who said he had a shack "up a piece" had taken him in his wagon. He had promised to get a doctor and fix the man up. The man himself had begged them to shoot him. He was almost out of his head with suffering. Their vague description tallied with Scathlin's rought appearance, and Holt became convinced he had found his man

Making the best he could out of their indefinite directions, for they really had not much idea of the locality of that shack themselves, Holt started off in search.

He found Scathlin before nightfall that same day, lying alone and moaning with pain and fever in the deserted shack. The householder had gone away at dawn on business, promising a speedy return, but had not come back, and Scathlin, his broken bone set rudely by an unskilled hand, lay suffering torments. When Holt pushed the door open and looked in he started up with a yell, his eyes protruding in fear. He thought that Holt was dead in the fire of the wreck, and this was his spirit come to demand account.

It was only when Holt laid his cool hand on the dirty, crusted brow and spoke in his quiet voice of command, that Scathlin settled back, the terror still in his eyes, and consented to be still. He began gradually to realize that Holt was there in the flesh, and that not for retribution either. He had not succeeded in escaping his captor. He never could do that. But his captor would not be a tormentor. That was plain. He had heard that Holt was "square" with his men, but had never believed it. Now he had opportunity to judge for himself. And so cunning and contemptible was the creature that when he was once assured of the fact that Holt would not strike him when he was down, he at once set about to take advantage of it. It was as if he had found a spot of honor wherein Holt was vulnerable, and there upon his bed of pain, in his loathsome helplessness, with no one to relieve him but Holt, he attacked that one pregnable spot of Holt's fortress. Day and night he moaned and fretted. Hour after hour he demanded this and that, whining like a baby and cursing like a demon by turns.

The householder did not return. It is possible that something ill befell him in that lonely plain over which he journeyed skirting the desert; it is probable that he had had enough of Scathlin's complaints and was glad to escape from his unwelcome guest. However it was, Holt was there alone with him for many days, nursing him as tenderly as a woman might have done; bearing with his varying moods; washing him, feeding him, cooling his hot forehead. Only once did Scothlin lapse from his role of pampered patient and beg with terror and abject humility in his eyes and voice, and that was the day when Holt declared his intentio nof going after a doctor. Scathlin was sure that Holt meant to desert him, and he cried like a baby, swore like a mad man, and then pleaded and promised contritely. But it was all of no avail and Holt left him for a few hours, with a supply at hand for every need, and went for a doctor Scothlin's cries and curses followed him as far as he could hear, and something like pity came into his heart for the poor, wicked old criminal, so that he hastened his steps with all his might.

When he returned four hours later with a gruff but kindly doctor, the cunning look came back into the little beedy eyes and the bristly old jaw grew stubborn and seufish again. He saw that Holt's honor still held and he meant to get the worth of his money out of him.

The doctor came every few days after that and Scathlin improved rapidly, growing more arrogant every day.

Holt went about silently for the most part; nursing the patient, cooking his meals—there were a few plies in the shack and Holt bought more when he went for doctor; besides there was game to hadfor the shooting. There was something about his set, stern face even his gentleness that sometimes shamed Scathlin and silenced him for a while. It was as if his mind was far away on higher things, and Scathlin's petty torments did not reach up into the rarefied air where he really lived

Once when he was getting better and sitting up Scathlin attempted a story, so vile and low that the devil himself must have originated it. He laughed immoderately as he told it, hoping to break the stern sadness of Holt face, which fairly made him frantic to look at, but Holt looked at him with a kind of pity for a second, and then the sternness grew terrible

"Scathlin, cut that out, you beast!" he said, and left the cabin for the open air. It was that day that Holt had a struggle with himself to stock to his job.

There was no longer the necessity that brought him. The papers, the rest of them, wherever they were, were surely not here. Holt had gone over every inch of Scathlin's clothes and possessions, and there was no place where he could possibly have hid them about the shack that Holt had not looked He had watched Scathlin by night and by day when he did not know he was being watched, and he was convinced that Scathlin was no longer protecting any papers of his. The one which he had taken from the toe of Scathlin's shoe had proved to be his own and most important. What Scathlin had done with the rest he was not sure, but it was probable that he had given some of them to Jean with the wallet which he had, of course, recognized, when he picked it up and handed it to her. It was also possible that the man who owned the shack had, by some means, been wheedled into ta[illegible] the papers back to Harrington. Every [illegible]nstance made his speedy return to Hawk Valley advisable, and yet here he was chained to this helpless, peevish old man, who when he was done with him, would, if he could, stab him in the back for all he had done for him.

Ifanything of all this passed through Holt's mind as he paced up and down alone outside the cabin, he kept it to himself, and it made no mark upon his face. Just as patiently and just as kindly he waited on that ungrateful old creature, all the time seeming to live himself on a higher plane and breath a higher air! and the old man hated him for it.

And so as the days at last came when the patient could walk about a little, the beady old eyes took on new cunning, the grizzly jaw grew more set, the whining complaints became more pitiful; and when Holt urged that now the time had come when they might go home without harm to the mending limb, Scathlin's e[illegible] filled with fear, and he whined at [illegible]ged for just a little longer. For o[illegible]re the vision of the stark tree against the sky, the swinging body, the retreating backs of Holt's men, haunted Scathlin's memory; and his terror returned with each day of his recovery.

One day when Holt had gone at last to a settlement to procure a wagon and some other necessities for the journey, he returned to find the cunning old ingrate gone!

At first it seemed only a relief from a disagreeable task, and he would have let him go, only again there seemed that innes sense fighting a task which made him go out and search. For he knew the weak leg coul not carry the man far, and he felt too that he mus keep hold of Scathlin and take him back to face what he should find awaiting him in HawkValley of good or ill. He might need the old man for a witness.

And so he drew him from his crouching shelter, spoke to him firmly, and made a compact with him. for he recognized his fear. That night saw the two again on their way to Hawk Valley. Scathlin was to have shelter and food, and work when he was able, but in return he must abide by certain rules Scathlin, relieved and cunning still, promised eagerly, with many mental reservations; ad so the pilgrimage at last was ended, and Holt was going back back where the girl he loved was staying — the girl he loved. but might not see!

CHAPTER XI.

There had been no fuss made over Jasper Holt when he was born. They handed him an honored name from some firce old warrior of a forebear, relegated him to a fourth story back nursery with a trained nurse, and left him to himself.

His mother paused long enough before returning to her interrupted social career to look him over, declare that he had nice eyes and she believed his hair was going to curl, then she was swallowed up in the world from which she had reluctantly steped aside She had little use for a son excep to dress him in velvets and Lord Fauntleroy collars and make of him a toy to amuse her guests. Until he reached that stage she saw very little of him

Of his stern father he saw less He was immersed in business He was rich, but what of that? He had to make more riches to keep the social whirl fed

The baby had a face and form worth noticing even in his first days The great blue eyes that had attracted his mother's flitting attention, could be gray sometimes, and had in them depths of light and wisdom that fairly startled his practical nurse He had thebrow of a philosopher and gold hair rippled around the fine little head like a halo The old warrior namesake must have bestowed upon him that firm chin beneath the cupid's bow of the lips and surely an angel had lent him that smile!

But as he grew older there came to his eyes a wistfulness that was almost pathetic at times. He was an affectionate child, quite embarrassing his cold, reserved nurse with his demonstrations, but winning the utmost devotion lways from all who had to serve him

He was not a good boy in the conventional acceptation of the word He sweetly serenely had his own way in everything from the time he could walk and talk. He would neither eat what he did not like, nor wear what he did not fancy He did not take kindly to his mother's velvets and curls and lace collars He always disappeared hopelessly when made ready for a dress parade He would fight any bully on the back streets who undertook to cheat the little lame news boy, and he was always trying to take the part of some weak dog or child He could run down the street with the swiftness of a swallow, his pockets full of sharp stones, and hit every electric light in the block as he ran, and he was forever taking the blame frankly of all the broken windows and looted garden plots in the neighborhood In these days his acquaintance with his father was limited to severe interviews in which stern threts and scathing reprimnds mingled with a galling srcasm were delth abundantly It was as his clear eyes looked steadily, unfraidly, into the angry steel ones of the man that his young face hardened, his warrior chin took a firm set, and the light in his face was deadened by a stab of pain He was growing wise and losing his faith in the love he had taken for granted in both father and mother It was at that time that he lived mostly upon the street, and companioned with boys of the rougher class. No one but his nurse knew it, and she but seldom She was only too glad to have the time off duty.

It was when they discovered a childish plot in the neighborhood to mob the president of a defaulting bank in which the hard working parents of some of his playmates had lost their all, that Jasper was taken hold of by the law as leader and financier of the whole enterprise Bravely, proudly, he took the whole blame, exonerating the other boys, and delring himself instigtor ofe the affair.

His father paid a heavy fine to hush up and took his son in charge. A merciless whipping was the beginning of that interview between them, which the son received like a gentleman. But when it was over he lifted reproachful eyes, steadied his quicering warrior chin and said determinedly: "But all the same, father, I think I was right! That man had been stealing those poor people's money!"

About Knox's Resolution.

When the Senate has had time to study the resolution, with its inconsistencies, its dangerous proposals, its insults for our friends and its consolation for our foes, w eare convinced it will vote it down.

Indianapolis News, Rep.

Senator Knox clearly sees that neither France nor Great Britain would ratify a treaty without a league of some sort, or a full equivalent therefor. The equivalent that he offers is the declaration of a new policy that would commit this country to co-operation with "our chief cobelligerents for the defense of civilization," and to war in association with them if war should be necessary.

Springfield Republican, Ind.

The present Knox resolution, if adopted, would involve an attempt by the Senate at usurpation by seeking to interfere with and control the treaty making power in a stage which does not officially concern it. It would be an overweening performance by a body of men democratically unrepresentative of the American people trying to assume the full direction of our foreign relations. Mr. Wilson, confronted by such an arrogant declaration, would be bound to safeguard the constitutional prerogatives of his high office by throwing himself in opposition to it with all his constitutional resources. The Knox resolution might well have distinguished more clearly between that which is abstractly desirable and that which is actually attainable. As the proposed declaration is drawn the two things are intermingled.

Philadelphia Record, Dem.

The German propaganda has annexed the republican side of the Senate, with the support of a few democrats who would sacrifice anything to annoy, harass and embarrass the president, who as a member of the peace conference is under the obligations of honor not to make the treaty public till the peace conference so orders.

Louisville Post, Dem.

The whole thing gives certain senators who hope to get the republican nomination for president a chance to make speeches in furtherance of the candidacies. It also gave the handful of recalcitrant democrats, with Reed and Chamberlain in the lead, an opportunity to vent their temper against the national administration.

Chicago Daily News, Ind.

The Knox resolution should be thoroughly debated. A dispassionate discussion of the alternative it purports to offer should bring about its decisive defeat.

New York Times, Ind.

This resolution which Mr. Knox has had the hardihood to propose for the adoption of the Senate is dangerous not alone to the peace of the world, and to our good relations with the powers engaged with us in negotiating the treaty; it is, we feel well assured dangerous to the republican party There is abundant evidence that the people of the United States desire a prompt peace as ardently as the people of the European countries, and there is evidence that no very great part of them hold that view of the League of Nations covenant to which Mr Knox gives such unseemly expression. We are confident that they would deeply resent the adoption, or even the serious consideration by the Senate, of the resolutions which the senator from Pennsylvania has most unwisely been moved to introduce.

New York World, Dem.

Unless the Senate has gone crazy the Knox resoution will never again see the light of day, but its introduction was a mischievous and miserable proceeding.

A Poets Ears.

For hours went wailing by
The summer wind last night—
I could not win my ear
From following its flight,
From seeking to make clear
The burden of its cry.

So dread, for June's rose days,
That voice which swept the dark!
It seemed the child of haze
In autumn, late and stark,
When all the leaves are shed
And roses long time dead.

For hours I heard it moan,
That wild nocturne of June,
Now wandering away,
As if it would attune
Its chant elsewhere; then stray
Hither with restless tone.

Now sharp it broke, now low,
In sudden tenderness;
As ripples coyly flow
Where beach waves cease to press—
Then, like a mist-drowned sail,
I lost its wayward trail.

Vacation.

And now the city dweller dreams of speckled trout in mountain streams and rufous deer that roam the glens. When summer comes with brassy skies who does not long for things like these, for outings where the mountains rise or in the shade of lordly trees? And surely men, who toil and spin for wearthy months, and give their best when rattled by the city's din, should have one month of helpful rest. One month of loafing in the dells, where nature does her smoothest work, and man could come back wearing bells; to do stunt as shipping clerk. One of camping in the wild, the office chairs all left behind, and man would then be reconciled to his demnition, beastly grind. One month of trapping grizzly bears, of catching cod fish in the sea, of chasing bobcats to their lairs and man would do the work of three. Though earnestly we workers try to plan out fine vacation schemes, the cost of living is so high we have to take it out in dreams. The grocer and the butcher still insist on having all we earn, so we pass up the wind swept hill, the woodland and the brae and burn. The iceman and the plumber come to tell how much they think we owe; in vain the scented breezes hum, we can't enjoy them as they blow.

Increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, should soon disappear, dull eyes ought to brighten, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health. Miss Georgia Hamilton, who was once thin and frail, reporting her own experience, writes: "Bitro-Phosphate brought about a magic transformation with me. The young man had asked him for the hand of his daughter and a pang wrung the fatherly heart of Mr. Jones as he looked at the youth, and thought of the bitterness of parting with his well-beloved child.

"I suppose, Oliver," he said at last, "it is only natural and right that when the young birds have become old enough to fly, they should leave their parental nest and go with their chosen mates to build nests of their own and yet it pains me when I think of one of my fledglings getting ready to fly away."

"This seems to be a good sized nest," suggested the young man, anxious to soften the blow, "perhaps you'd rather have me and Gertie stay here."

HOW DEMPSEY TRAINS.

I do not know so much about Dempsey's method of training as I do about that of Willard. The day I saw him exercise he began by pulling weights. This developed especially the muscles of his shoulders, girdle the upper part of his back and his arms. He worked for speed quite as much as for strength. He next spent several minutes at punching a heavy punching bag. It was said that this bag was shaped somewhat like the human body and weighed 75 pounds. This was followed by an exhibition of skill in punching an ordinary light punching bag. With a novice this exercise trains the eye, the sense of location, speed and direction especially. With an experienced bag puncher fancy punching does not call for much footwork.

Then followed two very swift rounds of boxing with a heavy opponent. Under ordinary circumstances one becomes six rounds two with each of three opponents. This is followed by a bath and rubbing down.

There were numerous other exercises of all kinds of exercises, of course. How much of this rumor is true I do not know. It is a fact that Dempsey takes long walks daily. A part of the distance covered is done at a run.

Road work takes off weight and increases wind and endurance. It likewise develops the muscles of the legs. It is said that no one is going to win a wrestling match. Wrestling calls for much better [illegible] as well as much more endurance than [illegible]. Pushups are all the [illegible] considering the [illegible] by weight. Weights are put on the legs.

Wrestling especially develops the muscles of the [illegible]. I have never met a fighter who impressed me as [illegible] physique as Dempsey does as he [illegible].

Dempsey will spend some time each day [illegible] with trunks. At exercise the skin of his body is turned to a [illegible] brown about as deep as that of an Indian. Skin of this color heads back the heat rays of the sun.

Dempsey does nothing to keep his back straight. As a result he has considerable [illegible] of his ribs. Much of the [illegible] which he spends so much of [illegible] in boxing [illegible].

Certainly, He Knew

From the Kansas City Journal.

Shortly after 6 o'clock in the morning a [illegible] of the [illegible] road station [illegible] to weigh himself. The scale was graduated by stones, a stone [illegible] equal to 14 pounds. He seemed to have some difficulty in getting it out and finally a [illegible] gentleman stepped up and said: "Can't you get your weight back?"

"Sure," replied the [illegible]. "It's about 11 stones with a couple of boards."

Coy Mary

[illegible]

"Let's have a few [illegible] to-night," said [illegible] to Mary.

"Then it's all off to-night," said Mary, and he [illegible] "What's [illegible] if you come a day after to-morrow?"

To which Mary [illegible] replied: "Then you'll have to wait."

Tax Slackers.

[illegible] New York [illegible] [illegible] members of a firm of [illegible] lawyers have been found guilty of [illegible] and fined the senior partner $10,000 each and [illegible] costs. The other [illegible] were fined $5,000 each and costs. [illegible] appeal to pay the government $5,000,000. In such a case as this the courts are best serving [illegible] by [illegible] as a moral fine could [illegible] be [illegible] to exact. [illegible] There has been [illegible] of late years in the income tax [illegible] a war measure and [illegible] rally speaking, [illegible] be [illegible] Tax dodgers are [illegible] for the sake of those who have done their duty [illegible] to see who can escape the [illegible] by the foulest methods [illegible] made to pay the penalty.

WOMAN LECTURES WOMAN.

Women are beginning to resent the idea of being sex-handicapped against suffrage is only an expression of this deep resentment to be recognized as [illegible] equal with men. When Stanley Hall wrote a generation ago he made some statements relative to the physical and mental peculiarities of women which many women resented as implying that she was constitutionally inferior. Since that time several physiologists have made hundred scientific and whenever they do women hit back.

The rank and file are beginning to take up the cudgels of their sex not only against men but against those of their own sex who by their lives furnish basis for the resented opinions. The willingness of women to undertake any and all kinds of labor as well as every kind of sedentary employment is in part due to the fact that women feel that their capacity has been challenged.

Those who feel that they are engaged in demonstrating the capacity of women resent the conduct of the flabby women who do little for 26 days a month and then spend three days in bed nursing ills peculiar to their sex. They resent the working girl who periodically absents herself from work. They also begin to resent the woman who keeps at work but who during the three days or thereabouts does up on gin or whisky or some or two of these in combination. They say that [illegible] ground for the contention of those [illegible] say that women are [illegible] to get [illegible] and [illegible] are [illegible] and [illegible] I am afraid.

SIMPLY GOOD BUSINESS.

From the Los Angeles Times.

"I wonder if it pays to be decent?" queried a $25-a-week clerk, speaking to the writer of this paragraph. "I've been a respectable, law abiding man for 20 years and all I have to show for it is only a few hundred dollars in the bank, no automobile, no comforts or luxuries to speak of, not even a diamond ring for my wife. Why, I know soap box anarchists that make more money than I do."

Yet in spite of his verbal explosion the speaker really didn't "wonder if it pays to be decent"—not a bit of it. He has his health, a living wage, his happy home and his well earned good name, and in his heart he knows very well that it has paid him to be decent. If it did not pay to be "on the square" the percentage of thieves and scoundrels compared to honest men, would be 10 to one—and who does not know that the opposite ratio is nearer the truth?

Let any person who disposes to differ read a booklet by Dr. C. D. Mosher, of Leland Stanford university. The booklet is really a lecture given to a Y. W. C. A. convention and an amplification of her talk to girls at Leland Stanford.

She says that no woman who is organically sound need suffer from any of the periodic troubles peculiar to women. By the persistent daily use of one exercise most women can cure themselves of these troubles. I quote her instructions:

All tight clothing having been removed the woman lies down on a level surface. The knees are flexed and to secure perfect relaxation the arms are placed at the side. One hand rests on the abdomen without making any pressure. It is merely to serve as an indicator of the amount of movement. She is directed to see how high she can raise her hand by lifting the abdominal wall and then to see how far the hand will be lowered by the complete contraction of the abdominal walls—drawing in of the abdomen.

The exercise is repeated 10 times. It is recommended twice a day preferably before dressing in the morning and after undressing in the evening. It is to be taken daily but especially is not to be neglected during menstruation.

Lost Trade Secrets.

From the Boston Globe.

Not [illegible] are the trade secrets handed down [illegible] generation by generation from father to son and vast is the capital made out of some of them in the commercial world of today. Many, alas, are the priceless trade secrets buried far down below the moldering dust of the misty past and lost to the world, perchance never again to be recovered. What would a Royal Academician of the present day give to be possessed of the secret held by the old masters for mixing their colors so as to render them unperishable and impervious to the ravages of time? The red colors especially of these artists of a bygone epoch are every whit as bright now as they were three long centuries ago. On the contrary the colors of pictures painted only 100 years ago have lost their lustre and are faded and decayed to a deplorable extent. Again, in the world of music the manufacturers of violins treasured a recipe for varnish that sank into the wood of their incomparable instruments and mellowed it as well as preserved it. With such extreme, relentless jealousy however, did they guard their great secret that it, too, is lost, to all appearances irretrievably. Rather more than 100 years ago there lived in a quaint old world village in Wales a working blacksmith who had managed, by some means or other, to bring the welding of steel to such a pitch of perfection that the joint was absolutely invisible and the temper of the steel as fine as on the day it left the tester's hands. He was offered large and tempting sums to divulge his secret but he kept it obstinately to himself and when his span of life had run its course he took it with him to another world.

The man who could disinter the buried recipe for Roman mortar would be bowed down to and worshiped by the builders of the present day. How they made it is a profound secret and bids fair to remain so. The mortar is as firm now as it was 2,000 years ago it has calmly scoffed at the ravages of time and weather.

Now First We Stand and Understand.

Now first we stand and understand
And sunder false from true,
And handle boldly with the hand
And see and shape and do.

Dash back that ocean with a pier,
Show yonder mountain flat,
A railway there a tunnel here,
Mix we this zone with that.

Ring me my horse—my horse" my wings
That I may soar the sky
For thought into the outward springs
I find her with the eye.

For as the Future vaults her skies,
From this my vantage ground
To those still, working energies
I spy nor term nor bound.

As we surpass our fathers' skill,
Our sons will shame our own
A thousand things are hidden still
And not a hundred known.

And had some prophet spoken true
Of all we shall achieve
The wonders were so wildly new,
That no man would believe.

Meanwhile my brothers work, and wield
The forces of today,
And plow the Present like a field,
And garner all you may!
You, what the cultured surface grows,
Dispense with careful hands,
Deep under deep forever goes,
Heaven over heaven expands.

—Tennyson.

Teachers Mill Hands.

From Fiber and Fabric.

The high wages and improved working conditions in our textile mills are attracting many workers from other occupations, and while thousands of alien workers are gathering up their loot and preparing to leave the country more thousands of desirable people are going into the mills, so that the gain more than offsets the loss and mill work begins to regain its high standing. Report comes from New Bedford that 25 school teachers have applied for work in the mills of that city for the summer vacation. Superintendents and overseers should find places for these workers, as, given two months' work in the mills, they will never teach school again, and it is the intelligent class of workers that will finally replace the alien pirates and make mill work popular.

The Proper Treatment.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

A few days ago a man in New York was sent to prison for three years and six months for killing a pedestrian with his speeding auto. Nine years before the same man was indicted for killing another pedestrian in the same manner, but the indictment was dismissed. Speed mania is a disease, and those afflicted with it should no be permitted to drive a machine the disease is detected.

BIG POTATO YIELD

Western Canada Man Raised 600 Bushels on Two Acres.

He Thinks He Did Pretty Well but There Were Even Larger Crops in the Neighborhood—Live Stock Men Prosper.

As a by-product the yield of potatoes on the farm of Ben Pawson of Coaldale, Alberta, was somewhat of a paying proposition. Coaldale is in the Medicine Hat district of Alberta. Medicine Hat is a place, pictured in the mind of many Americans, where the weather man holds high carnival, and when he wants to put a little life or spirit into the people just moves the mercury down a few notches. The rascal has thus given Medicine Hat a rather unenviable place on the map. But it isn't half as bad as it is pictured. Anyway, Ben Pawson likes it. Last year he grew six hundred bushels of potatoes on two acres of land that had no special preparation, and only the usual precipitation, or rain, as the less cultured would call it. When he couldn't work at his hay or grain, because of the damp mornings, he gave them some attention. And then evenings between supper and chores and bedtime he gave them some work. Anyway his yield was six hundred bushels, and he sold the whole lot for $285. Ben is satisfied. Still there were larger yields than this in the neighborhood.

If one might speak of hogs in the same breath in which you speak of potatoes, there is nothing in the ethics of literature that would create a debarment. Taking advantage of this license it will not be out of place to state that large potato yields are not the only feature of interest in this new and interesting country. Amongst others hogs are having a good deal of attention. Not long ago, hogs reached the $23.00 mark on the Calgary market. It doesn't cost much to raise a hog and very little to bring him to a weight of 200 pounds. Don't cost much! Certainly not. But what about the man who recently paid $350 for a Duroc Jersey Boar? That was all right. That man knew what he was doing. He was doing what a great many other farmers in Western Canada are doing today. He is acting on the old "saw," that "it costs no more to raise a good critter than a poor one." That is the reason that Western Canada is looming large in the live stock world. The best is none too good. The same may be said of horses, cattle, yes, and sheep, too. The very best sires and dams of the best breeds are purchased. And while big prices are paid, it is felt that the demand for pure-bred stock at home and abroad will bring returns which will warrant any reasonable price that may be asked.—Advertisement.

"The pain in my back grew worse until I had to go to bed. I did nothing but toss about. The stinging pains shot through my body and my head ached and throbbed. My eyes felt as though they would bulge out of my head. The blinding dizzy spells made me think I was going to lose my mind. Everything would turn dark.

"The kidney secretions burned, were the color of coffee and passed every few minutes in very small amounts. I felt all a-flutter with nervousness. MILLIONS Suffer from Acid-Stomach

Millions of people suffer year after year from ailments affecting practically every part of the body, never dreaming that their ill health can be traced directly to acid-stomach. Here is the reason: poor digestion means poor nourishment of the different organs and tissues of the body. The blood is impoverished—becomes weak, thin, sluggish. Ailments of many kinds spring from such conditions. Biliousness, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, general weakness, loss of power and energy, headache, insomnia, nervousness, mental depression—even more serious ailments such as catarrh and cancer of the stomach, intestinal ulcers, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble—all of these can often be traced directly to acid-stomach.

Keep a sharp lookout for the first symptoms of acid-stomach—indigestion, heartburn, belching, food repeating, that awful painful bloat after eating, and sour, gassy stomach. EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy for acid-stomach, is guaranteed to bring quick relief from these stomach miseries. Thousands say they never dreamed that anything could bring such speedy relief—and make them feel so much better in every way. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise. Make your life worth living—no aches or pains—no blues or melancholy—no more of that tired, blue feeling. Be well and strong. Get back your physical and mental punch; your vim, vigor and vitality. You will always be weak and ailing as long as you have acid-stomach. So get rid of it now. Take EATONIC Tablets—they taste good—you eat them like a bit of candy. Your druggist has EATONIC—50 cents for a big box. Get a box from him today and if you are not satisfied he will refund your money.

Western Canada's "Horn of Plenty" Offers You Health & Wealth

Western Canada for years has helped to feed the world—the same responsibility of production still rests upon her. While high prices for Grains, Cattle and Sheep are sure to remain, price of land is much below its value. Land capable of yielding 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre can be had on easy terms at from $15 to $30 per acre—good grazing land at much less. Many farms paid for from a single year's crop. Raising cattle, sheep and hogs brings equal success. The Government encourages farming and stock raising. Railway and Land Companies offer unusual inducements to Home Seekers. Farms may be stocked by loans at moderate interest. Western Canada offers low taxation, good markets and shipping; free schools, churches and healthful climate. Tragic Death

MORRIS HANSON ACCIDENTALLY KILLED TUESDAY

Young Man Is Almost Instantly Killed When Thrown From Horse

The news of the sudden death of Morris Hanson comes as a sad shock to his many friends when the news became known shortly after noon on Tuesday

Morris has been working for John Bitker since this spring. As we gather the story they were out in the field cutting grain when, at about 11:00 o'clock, they noticed that a number of the cattle were out of the pasture along the road Morris ran up to the house, bridled up a horse and started after the cattle. In some manner the horse threw him off near the road, either the horse stumbled or Morris turned the corner too fast with the horse, but whichever it was, he was thrown on the hard road. Mr. Bitker rushed to him but he was unconscious The doctor was immediately called to the scene but medical aid could do nothing as the fall had fractured his skull. He lived about an hour and a half after the accident, but was unconscious all that time. Mrs. Hanson, the young man's mother, reached him before he died, but his father, E. P. Hanson, of Garner, could not be located as he was out of town on business.

Morris was about eighteen years old and is the oldest son of Mr and Mrs. E P Hanson, of Garner He has been around here quite a bit and is well known and well liked by all.

The family have the sympathy of the entire community in their sorrow.

DROWNED UNDER LOAD OF HAY

Boy Falls Under Load And Is Dead When Body Is Removed

Clarion Monitor: One of the saddest deaths recorded in Wright county for many months was that of the ltitle son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Zander, which occurred on July 3rd. The child who was no yet nine years old was in the habit of going with his father almost constantly wherever and whenever he was away from the home. On Thursday of last week he went with his father and the hired man to a neighboring farm after a load of hay and while on the way home the wagon tipped over, throwingt he child into a slough by the roadside. He fell face downward in them ud and water with the hay on top of him. The weight of the hay was sufficient to hold his face buried in the mud and water until when he was dug out by the frantic father the child was limp in death. It is said the hired man was also thrown into the water with the hay on top of him, but he had sufficient strength to raise himself to safety.

A Threshing Rig Must Not Fail

With a Case rig you are assured of the satisfactory performance. A Case Kerosene tractor and a Case Separ Thresher form an outfit that cannot be equaled. Both are famous the world over.

Pictured above is a Case 10-20 Kerosene Tractor driving a Case 28x36 Thresher, fully equipped. Power is furnished constantly, a necessity in good threshing. With such an outfit you can thresh when ready. You don't lose out by bad weather. You can also take on a few neighborhood jobs.

This 10-20 Tractor is practical for a variety of field work. It can pull three 14-inch plows and plow about an acre per hour. You will find it economical for disking—and other work.

Investigate the Case line before you decide.

HANCOCK COUNTY WILL VOTE ON THE ROAD QUESTION AUGUST 4TH

Monday, August 4th, the voters of Hancock County will vote on the hard surfaced road question in this county.

We feel that it is un-necessary at this time to go into details on the quesiona s by this time most of the voers will have had the law fully explained to them as meetings for this purpose are being held all over the county.

The question is one of importance to everybody in the county. If the hard surfaced roads proposition is turned down it will mean that Fedcral Aid will be lost for Two Years at least, and perhaps longer, it means that the Secondary Road System will lose a large amount of funds that would be expended on them, it means that ift he voterst urn it down that Hancock Couny will travel in MUD just Two Years longer. Hard Surfaced Roads WILL COME, if "Eventually, why not NOW?"

ABOUT THE ROAD QUESTION

The Congres of the United States and the State Legislature have been very liberal in providing funds for highwayc onstruction. The amount available from federal and state sources to be spent in Hancock county in 1920 will be $146,901.03. In addition to this it is estimated that the annual allotment to this county will be at least $73,000.00 per year beginning in 1921. This money constitutes the primary road fund and the law provides that it must be spent on he primary road system. The primary system of this county at present consists of the North Iowa Pike and the Wilson Highway, but the law provides for the addition of other roads to the primary system as soon as these roads are fully improved.

In order that Hancock County may use the funds which the federal and state governments are offering, the Board of Supervisors have adopted the following building program. They propose to grade, drain, and hard surface the following roads in the order named: North Iowa Pike, Wilson Highway, and the road from Kanawha to Britt. As it would require approximately twenty years to hard surface these roads with the money that becomes available from year to year, it is proposed to issue bonds in an amount of not to exceed $1,000,000.-00, said bonds to be retired with the money received from the primary fund. This will enable the county to complete the construction of the roads named above in a 5 year period and the people will have the roads to use while hte bonds are being retired.

An election is called for August 4, 1919, at which the people will decide whether they want hard surface roads or not. If the hard surfacing proposition is lost we lose the use of the federal aid money for at least two years and may lose it altogether. If the Bnd issue proposition is lost we can hard surface but three miles of road per year. In either case Hancock County will be left behind the more progressive counties of the State.

KLEMME HAS NEW COP

Seems as if there must be a change in every business in Klemme and people are continually changing about, even the job of "cop" has changed hands the last few days. Wm. Lau is now the bearer of the silver star and has the honor of being Chief Police of Klemme. We believe "Bill" will make a good man for the office and a man who will see that the law is followed out to the letter.

The Finding of Jasper Holt

BY

Grace Livingston Hill Lutz

Author of "Marcia Schuyler", "Phoebe Deane", "The Obsession of Victoria Gracen", etc.

The father looked at the little son with the unbroken will and swore! He took away the cheap little firearms that the boy had purchased with his allowance for himself and the other boys, and he declared the allowance should cease until such time as the boy would own to his fault and come to his senses. One isn't just quite sure, but, perhaps after all, the removal of his allowance was the very best thing that father ever did for his little, lonely son who had begun so early to reform the world with a high hand.

Jasper went up to his room and thought. Then he went out and consulted with a newsboy friend of his, and presently he was established on a paper route of his own. For several weeks he sold papers till he had enough money to replace his lost revolver. Then he was satisfied and retired from business for the time, but this was not his first business venture, and his father began to discover that the threat of taking away the allowance had no effect whatever on his determined young son.

Yet in spite of his bravery and strength, in spite of his high purposes and unrealistic tendencies, there was in the boy's nature a great wealth of love and a desire to be loved. He was, in his younger days, forever throwing his arms about his beautiful mother's neck and kissing her to her great disgust and the severe detriment of her complexion; until finally he became shy about showing his affection, and the lines of loneliness and yearning grew deeper about the young mouth.

It was the time he ran away that made him sure that no one cared for him.

Jasper had been up before the parental tribunal for some trivial offense, and his word had not been taken in explanation against the word of his younger brother—who had arrived on the scene some three years later than himself, and through some strange fantasy of selfishness was the beloved darling of his mother.

Perry Holt had sharp little effeminate features like his mother's, and had been petted and spoiled from the moment his whimsical mother first saw him. If there was any trouble Perry was usually at the bottom of it and Jasper was blamed for it, because Jasper was "so queer" and "so wild" and "always getting into trouble and doing what he ought not to do." That was the way his mother put it. And so she had ordered Jasper to his father's den for a reprimand for something Perry really had done, and Jasper's word was doubted!

He took his punishment silently and went to his room and his bed, where he lay motionless staring into the darkness. If he had been a girl he might have sobbed, so hurt was his soul; but being Jasper he held back the stinging tears that burned his eyes and shoved hard into the dark. At midnight, when the servants were asleep, he arose and stole softly from the house before his mother and father had returned from some social function they were attending.

He stayed away three days, companioning with waifs who had no homes, and then his homesick heart brought him back again with longing to see his mother. He reached the house at early dusk and found his mother and Perry getting into the car to ride to the station where they were to meet his father and take a pleasure trip to Washington for a few days! They had not even missed him and were going off without knowing where he was! His mother looked at him with disgust and told him to go into the house and wash his face, that he "looked a perfect fright," and then the car whirled off and left him gazing after, his dream of what a mother ought to be.

After that Jasper never expected anything more from his mother or his family. He began to see that life was meant to be a lonely job and it "was up to him" how it turned out. He seemed to grow up and be wise beyond his years a that few seconds that he stood gazing after the vanishing in the dark.

When it was discovered that he was spending most of his time on the street in the company of newsboys and working men's sons, he was fitted out expensively and set away to boarding school, where he began a lively career. Those who understood adored him, but they were few and were mostly confined to small boys and the working class. The little boys in the school followed him like flies after molasses and obeyed him abjectly. The teachers dreaded and feared and hated him almost to a man, with the exception of now and then a woman who had an unusual amount of fine intuition and saw the yearning for love in his eyes.

From school to school he went, out of one scrape into another, yet no one stopped to enquire what it was all about or to discover that almost every trouble he got into was for the sake of someone else, or some real principle. That his efforts at reform were against the rules of the school, and could therefore but fail, made no difference to him. He went right on setting things right as far as he could and then taking the consequences. He saw the futility of his efforts and sometimes clenched his sturdy fists and thought of the future when he should be able to "lick" those unfair teachers who couldn't see that they were letting some fellows go scot free who were more to blame than the ones who were punished. Some day he would be bigger than they, and then he would back up his protests with a strength that could not be gainsaid. And so he went on fighting bullies who were bigger than himself and who did not hesitate to put the whole story in a good light for themselves, and taking the consequences in such a way that when he left a school the principal had beneath his open relief a troubled undertone of smallness, and of feeling that, after all, the boy had got the better of him, for there had been the look of a conqueror in Jasper's eyes as he parted from him at the station.

Somehow he got himself through with his preparatory studies and was allowed to pass on. It surely was not from any great scholastic attainments, for he never bothered himself to learn lessons that he did not care for, nor to recite them after he had learned them, and examinations meant nothing at all to him. If he chose to take one he did so, and then spoiled the whole paper by some erratic tirade of his own on some special question; or else took the whole thing as a joke. If he did not choose to take an examination he calmly sat through the allotted time intent upon his own thoughts and htanded in no paper at the close. His teachers raved and ranted. They punished and they threatened. But Jasper went calmly on and did as he pleased; and strange to say in all that checkered career there were but two teachers who understood the soul with whom they had to deal, and could lead him like a lamb by amere smile or word to do the hardest tasks. For those two he slaved, not because he saw any reason in their demands always, but because he desired to please them, for they had proved themselves what he called "square."

Nevertheless he had acquired through it all a most marvellous and varied amount of knowledge. Nothing escaped him. He never forgot anything he heard, and the classes through which he had sat, perpetrating many of his jokes upon the teachers, had all left their mpress upon him. What he had heard the other students recite, that he knew. If you began to quote a line of poetry which had been studied in English class he would promptly finish it and, when he chose, tel you much about the author. His teachers would have been amazed if they could have heard him. And often when another fellow took a high rank n the class in mathematics it had been Jasper who had showed him how to work his problems—problems that he had not taken the trouble to work out for himself.

"Why should I?" he once answered a troublesome principal who was admonishing him about preparing his lessons. "I get what I need out of them, and that's all that's necessary, isn't it? It's my education, isn't it?? My teacher isn't getting any good out of my writing out all that junk, is he? It isn't doing him any good, why should I take the trouble?"

And this was his hopeless attitude whenever he had to deal with teachers whom he dd not reverence.

In college he was much the same, only that it did not matter there so much. There were more men and he was less under authority. It was expected that he should have some independence. Yet even he was mixed up in a great many of the troubles. Finally, in in his third year, his college career came to a sudden and final ending in the midst of a disgrace that was not his own, but which he took upon his own sturdy shoulders to save another youth who had a widowed mother dependent upon him, and must get through college before he could support her. Whether or not his action was justified by the following chapters of that weak and careless youth's life is not a part of this story to tell. It may be that Jasper himself learned some lessons by the disgrace he took upon himself and the lightness with which the real criminal accepted his sacrifice. However that may be, Jasper's mother, by that time an attractive widow, was so thoroughly outraged by her son's behavior—she never knew, of course, that he himself had not been at fault—that she drove him from his home in scorn and contempt.

Hurt to the heart the boy obeyed; too proud to explain; knowing she would be but the angrier if she knew the truth; knowing there was no mother heart in her for him, nor ever had been.

He went straight to the great wide, free west, and roamed for a year from one place to another restlessly, still expecting some day to return when his mother should feel differently. Then he saw in the papers the notice of her marriage to a man he never had liked, and so he settled down on the claim he had already taken, and built up around his young, lonely life a something which he called home.

Gradually the outcasts of society had been drawn to him for help or comfort in dire need and peril from the law; and always he had plenty of sympathy any who were without the pale of the respectable world, even though in no other way could he feel anything congenial about them. His home came to be the refuge for sinners, and because their crimes were many and his hearth was wide, their sins were fastened to him in name if not in deed; as when a child he bore the blame for others and himself grew strong.

He built them rude dwellings on his land, and some he chose to be his trusted one. One by one he tested them and found them true to him and to his few simple principles of life. Sternly he ruled them, and greatly did they love and reverence their boy leader, and were proud to follow him. If one of the mtransgressed again he was dealt with justly; and one a body swayed and hung stark against the sky in justice for a deed of shame. It was this memory that Scathlin held and feared, although it had happened long before he came to take refuge from some petty deed of his. Scathlin had never entered the closer brotherhood of men who guarded Holt's own private quarters. His place had been upon the outer edge of things. He was not trusted—never had been—and knew he was not trustworthy. So it was that he dreaded going back to those relentless men, who, if they once found out that he had robbed their leader of valuable property and betrayed him into the hands of an enemy who had long looked with hungry eyes at the rich silver min and abundant water supply that were his, would stop at nothing till justice had been done upon his contemptible head. But by that same honor that made men love and serve him, old Scathlin knew that Holt had not yet told his men about his loss of the wallet, nor whom he suspected.

This was Jaspeh Holt, and this his story up to the time that he met Jean and lad his roses at her threshold.

CHAPTER XII.

It was late when Jean awoke. The household had been quiet on her account, and breakfast was delayed. Jean came down white with her vigil but sweet and smiling notwithstanding.

The morning had brought clear vision and she was sure now that the paper in her possession must be given to Holt and no other. She had settled so much and would await her opportunity. This decided, her mind was at peace and she entered the dining room with a smile of greeting for everyone.

Late as it was, the master of the house had not yet appeared and the family stood about waiting for him. But as Jean entered the servant came in from an opposite dore with his arms full of roses and stood before her.

Such roses! Jean had never seen such a wealth of beauty, such luxuriance of coloring. They all exclaimed in wonder over them. Clear golden yellow with a deep, rosy tint at heart like liquid rubies spilled into them. Great heavy headed buds and full blown roses in abundance, many of them still on the trailing vines, as if they had been plucked with ruthless hand to offer a queen, their fragrance filled the room like a burst of incense from some oriental shrine. The servant laid them in her arms as though he were offering her a crown and sceptre.

"How wonderful!" murmured the girl, receiving them and laying her face reverently down to their exquisite beauty. "Where did they come from? Are they mine? Do they grow here?"

"I found them at the door Miss," said the man respectfully. "There's only a card with your name."

"Why how strange!" said Mrs. Harrington, stepping forward to inspect the card. "Who could have sent them? I have told a number of the young men about your coming and they are all eager to see you, but it's strange that whoever sent these beautiful roses shouldn't have given his name. They are wonderfully rare. Somebody must have squandered his month's earnings on them. They couldn't have been bought around here. I suppose they came from some florist a long way off."

The discreet servant narrowed his eyes and turned away suddenly as he saw his master enter.

"Just look here, James what beautiful roses someone has sent Jean! Wasn't that lovely of him whoever he is? They were at the door when Jean opened it this morning and no name on them! Who do suppose could have sent them. Stockton . . or Gartney Fowler, or even Captain Wetherill, perhaps?"

But the master of the house glanced sharply at the roses and a frown came between his brows.

"There's only one place around here where roses like that grow" he announced ominously.

His wife looked at him with a frightened expression.

"You don't mean——?"

"Yes," said Harrington. "They've Holt's Folden Sunset."

There was an ominous silence as the husband and wife looked at each other. Then Mrs. Harrington turned to her sister, who stood behind her roses with an exquisite flush on her cheeks and a soft, burning light of bridle in her eyes.

"Jean, did you know where they came from?" her sister asked, almost haughtily.

But Jean's lovely face showed no sign of intimidation as she ra . it gravely sweet, from the roses n she held as she might have held a child.

"I thought perhaps Mr. Holt sent them," she said simply. "He told me about his roses. But excuse me just a minute till I put them in water. I won't keep you waiting."

When Jean returned after laying her roses tenderly in th wash-bowl in her room and bending to touch her lips to their petals, there was no look on her face as if anything unusual had passed except a kind of glorified light in her eyes. She began at once to give her sister a message from their mother, tactfully ignoring the flowers and their donor. But Harrington's set look did not relax during the entire meal.

After breakfast there was the whole place to be seen, the garden, the horses, the rabbits, and the new lawn tennis court, the only one in town, where the young officers from the fort came down to play sometimes.

The children came out of their shyness and adopted their new relative ecstatically, monopolizingly. They drew her down on the garden seat and piled her with questions, and they chattered away happily, feeling her hair, touching her cheek softly now and then, playing with the ribbons at her throat.

"Papa's awfully angry that Jasper Holt brought you home" confided Betty. "I heard him tell mamma he'd rather have lost $50,000 than had it happen."

The color stole into Jean's cheeks and a flash came in her eyes, but she tried to control herself. She did not want to discuss this matter with the children and yet she felt that she must be true to the man who had saved her life.

"Mr. Holt was very kind to me, Betty" she said quietly. "I'm sorry he is not a friend of your papa's. If he hadn't taken care of me I would probably have drowned and I'm sure I never would have got safely here. He was wonderful."

"Jasper Holt's a bad wicked man," said Jamie, looking at her with round eyes and a frown that was a very good imitation of his father's. "He-he-he hanged a man once' on a tree. Yes, he did. Tied a string around his neck and hung him up hard till he died. He's awful bad man. Nick Deens told me that. My mamma don't know he told me. Nicky said not to tell. But Nicky Deens saw the tree once yhen he went with his papa out to the desert riding and he heard the men tell all about it. They didn't know he heard, but he did."

"I don't think much of a little boy that tells you not to tell your mother things," said Jean in a choking voice. "I don't believe I shall like Nicky Deens."

"Oh you will," said Jamie in distress for his friend. "He's a nawful nice boy. He can ride a horse just like his papa——" and Jamie launched into a description of the prowess of Nicky Deens, but Jean although she tried to listen, was not listening. Her heart was in a tumult and her eyes were full of pain and indignation. Jasper had told her about that man who hung on the tree. She knew the whole story with all its circumstances and she knew that Nicky Deens had heard a false account of the affair. Suddenly she turned on her astonished young nephew and spoke.

"Jamie" she said looking earnestly into his big, blue eyes, "Jamie, I want to tell you something. That story you heard about Mr. Holt is not true. He is not a bad man. People don't know. He is good and kind, and he has been Auntie Jean's friend. It isn't right nor fair for you to listen to stories about him. Little boys like Nicky Deens don't know about things always, and maybe they don't mean to tell what isn't true, but if you love Auntie Jean and believe she tells you what is true you will not let anybody say bad things any more about Mr. Holt. It isn't necessary for you to talk about it at all if your papa doesn't like Mr. Holt, but you don't need to listen to unpleasant things about him. People have not understood Mr. Holt or they would not have talked that way."

Horse Understood English.

From the New York Evening Sun.

Long after the outlines of the last boat filled with Yanks drops below the horizon the peaceful valleys of France will yield musical echoes in the old American tongue says Stars and Stripes. Willingly the butchers and bakers and cognac makers of sunny France will continue to talk United States.

It's all on account of the members of the A. E. F. who are destined to stay behind. Almost every province of France has a mule from Missouri or a horse from Idaho which severed its connection with the A. E. F. in one of the many sales conducted by the remount service. Out at Vouvray, which, besides being as good a wine as they make in France, is also a suburb of Tours, there is one madame who is fast getting acquainted with her new cheval.

But it looked bad at first. A buck from a Tours barracks came upon the spectacle of a patient but motionless horse hitched to a car and a much worried old madame circling circling cart and horse in a vain effort to get a little action.

"How goes it, madame?"

"Ah, monsieur' He is a bon cheval But he understands not the French. How is it you say Allez", monsieur?"

"Viola, mada.e."

The buck took the reins and assumed a position of vantage. A single "Giddap!" and the horse got into action. Madame was amazed and delighted.

"Ah, merci, monsieur! Ah, merci!"

And if madame, 10 years from now, remembers no more than a "Giddap!"—well, that's something.

TAKE OATH ON SACRED BOOKS

Practice In Vogue Today Has Come Down Through Centuries With Very Few Changes.

The Christian oath on a copy of the Gospel seems derived from the late Jewish oath taken holding in the hand the scrool of the law (or the phylacteries), a ceremony itself possibly adapted from the Roman custom. The usual mode was to lay the hand on the Gospel, and it was kept up to a modern date in the oath of the University of Oxford. The practice of kissing the book, which became so well established in England, appears in the Middle Ages. The book was often laid on the altar, or, (after the manner of ancient Rome) the swearer laid his hand on the altar itself or looked toward it, above all, it became customary to touch the relics of saints on the altar. Other objects, as the cross, the bishop's crozier, etc., were sworn by. An oath ratified by contact or inspection of a sacred object was called a corporal or bodily oath, as distinguished from a merely spoken or written oath. The English word signifying the "sacred object" on which the oath is taken is "halidome." The "halidome" on which oaths are sworn in England is a copy of the New Testament. Jews are sworn on the Old Testament, the sacred books of other religions are used in like manner, a Mohammedan swearing on the Koran, a Hindu on the Vedas.

PEER DESERVED HIS VIC

Quick Wit Enabled Him to Win Success When Others Would Have Given Up Hope.

Gypsy Smith, the noted evangelist said on his recent voyage from Liverpool:

"There are some men who make a success even in failure. I know there was a certain peer once who rose to make his maiden speech granting to all accused persons the right to counsel—and when he put his hand in his pocket for his notes they weren't there. His notes were lost.

"The peer gulped. He looked wildly. He gulped again, and then he said:

"'If I, my lords, who now rise to give my opinion on this bill am so confounded that I am unable to express what I had in mind, what must be the condition of the man who, without any assistance, has to plead for his life?'

"Then the peer sat down amid cheers of a converted chamber, and his bill passed almost unanimously."

One Was Happy Either Way.

A minister, meeting a parishioner who had been quite recently married, and about whose domestic happiness terrible stories were rife, asked him and said:

"Well, John, and how is all going on?"

"Oh, happy enough," returned John. "I'm glad to hear it. You know there were rumors of rows or—"

"Rows," said John. "Oh, yes, there are plenty of rows; whenever I annoy me she catches the first thing at hand, a dish or anything, and fires it at me. If she hits me, she's happy! If she doesn't, I am. Oh, we're getting on fine!"—Tit-Bits.

PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

...Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to ...on Firm, Healthy Flesh and ...Increase Strength, Vigor ...and Nerve Force.

...from the countless preparations ...ments which are continually be... ...for the purpose of making ...Scrawny, developing arms, neck ...and replacing ugly hollows and ...angles by the soft, curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are often due to starved nerves. Our tired nerves need Bitro-Phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is this deficiency of organic phosphate known as Bitro-Phosphate, which is active and is sold by most druggists under a guarantee of satisfactory gain or money back. By feeding the nerves and by supplying the body with necessary phosphoric food Bitro-Phosphate should produce rich blood, create new tissue and increase in weight frequently from 5 to 15 pounds in a few weeks.

The increase in weight also carries with it a marked improvement in the health. Sleeplessness and lack of energy always accompany thinness and should disappear. Women should aim to brighten and gain the charm of perfect health. Mrs. Hamilton, who was pale and frail, reporting, her friend writes: "Bitro-Phosphate has worked a magic transformation in me. I gained 15 pounds and never felt so well."

Although bitro-phosphate is famous for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it is also noted for its tendency to increase weight, and any one who desires to put on flesh should be benefited by the use of a few bottles.

ECONOMY, ECONOMY ECONOMY

From Mechanics and Metals Bank

It is essential hereafter that the income of the people be spent less in satisfying immediate desires than in producing goods that will enrich the future. The principle will have its direct reaction on banking as well as industry. For if evil came during the war from spending freely and placing an unprecedented tension on credit it stands to reason that profit will follow during peace if economy and thrift and something like the old-fashioned order is restored. Only by a policy, in conjunction with agricultural activity, can a check be put upon ever-rising prices and the closing of the gap between the cost of living and the wages that follow in its train.

Economy is the watchword and file of the war period. Economy and thrift are the solution to the world's present economic problem.

Animals Doctor Themselves.

From the Christian Herald

Animals have a way of doctoring themselves that is remarkable. Animals suffering from fever eat nothing, keep quiet, seek darkness and airy places, drink much water and sometimes plunge into the water from time to time. When a dog has lost its appetite eats that species of grass known as "dog's grass." Cats also eat grass, catnip, etc., when sick. Sheep and cows in the same circumstances seek out certain wild plants.

If an ant's foot is cut, other ants will cover the wounded part with a transparent fluid from their mouths. If a chimpanzee is wounded it stops the flow of blood by placing its hand on the wound or dressing it with leaves and grass.

A terrier had an injured eye. It remained lying under a counter, avoiding heat and light, although it had been its habit to keep close to the fire. It adopted the general treatment, rest and abstinence from food. The local treatment consisted in licking the upper surface of its paw, which it then applied to the wounded eye again licking the paw when it became dry. Cats, when hurt, also treat themselves by this simple method.

The methods adopted by most of the wild animals for doctoring themselves are unknown to man, but there is no doubt that every animal has the ability to heal fully doctor itself.

Americans Are Mooners.

"The Lancer," in the Los Angeles Times.

If you want to know why more than 90 per cent of Americans fail in business you have only to take a little ride in an automobile and dodges the pedestrians. Nine-tenths of them, having nothing to think about, are absorbed in thought. They go mooning across the frenzied river of traffic as though they were alone in an illimitable desert. The slightest, silliest, childish incident brings them to a wondering pause in the middle of the street, forgetful of all the dangers.

And that is exactly the way they do business. They are always just "stepping out a minute" and leaving their customers to go somewhere else.

The other day I stopped at a little fish stall in Balboa to buy bait. The proprietor had just stepped out. Out of curiosity I stopped there four times during the afternoon. Every time he had "just stepped out." It began to take the element of a scientific examination. So I kept on going until I finally found him on the job. His alibi staggered me.

"Well," he said, "you must remember that I am a very busy man."

I dare say that he was engaged in some important conference with the legal or accounting department of his establishment which, by actual measurement, is 6x4 feet.

The truth is American business men spend most of their time "kidding" themselves. The resources of this country are so vast and so undeveloped that half the big fortunes are the result of luck. A very large proportion of our captains of industry would starve to death in the intense competition of Europe.

Every day in these changeful times the news comes of new men succeeding to old acres, and coincidentally the stream of old art treasures flows into the market. The mandates of taxation are incalculable. Shortly the Earl of Home's collections of old silver, furniture and object d'art, including Queen Elizabeth's mother-o'-pearl ring (with enamelled portrait of herself and her mother, Anne Boleyn, in the bezel of it), will be sold at Christie's, the Scottish castles of Bothwell and Douglas, and of the Hirsel at Coldstream having been stripped of these noble heirlooms. The Home family first received their grant of lands from William the Lion before 1214.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

FIVE HUNDRED PER ACRE

J. R. Baggs Sells His Fifty-seven Acre Farm At North Edge Of Garner For $500 Per Acre

Real Estate changes at from $225 to $300 per acre have become so common in this section, that they pass unnoticed, but when a man bobs up and grabs off $500 per acre, people begin to sit up and take notice. A. M. Roesdahl of Clear Lake, a son-in-law of John Anderson of this place, was casting about for a location. He came across Superintendent Baggs and upon learning that $500 per acre would buy his fifty-seven acre farm at the north edge of town, purchased it, and we believe at that figure his purchase is a good one. The Baggs property is the most desirable that wet hink of at this time. The improvements are enirely new and modern—Mr. Baggs having put up the buildings only a couple of years ago. The location is ideal. Possession will be given March 1st. It is up to Superintendent Baggs to find himself a new place of abode between now and settlement day.—Garner Democrat.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

I as one was appointed to go out to Idaho and investigate the holdings of the Western States Lumbre Co. timber holdings there, and I find that they way under estimated their report of value. I find that they have by far more and better timber than they claim in their report. I find that their timber is cutting from one to wo million feet of lumber more to the eighty acres than what they claimed it would cut, and they have all the equipment that is needed in a logging camp. They have three and one-half miles of railroad and a good logging engine and several logging cars, and as many good horses as they claim, and are running their saw mill full blast. They had at the time I was out there in April, 1919, in the neighborhood of two hundred men at work cutting and hauling and sawing lumber. They had at that time between three and four million feet of lumber sawed and in piles. The second day that I was there they sawed and flumed one hundred and fifty thousand feet of lumber in eight hours. They have between seven and nine miles of flume in good shape. They have post, pole and tie timber more than they have estimated. They have poles that run up as long as ninety feet in length and as straight as a die, and the land after it is cleared is just as pretty and good a farming land as any man would want, and as I talked with farmers that ajoin the holdings of the Western States Lumber Co, they informed me that they were raising on the average of thirty to thirty-five bushels of wheat to the acre, and good alfalfa and clover and timothy And the Western States Lumber Co owns between seven and eight thousand acres of such land. And to speak of rocks, there is but very few that I saw on their holdings All that I could see was large trees and long poles and pile after pile of logs, poles and posts that they had cut I believe if every stockholder of the Western States Lumber Co. could go out there and see the property of the Western States Lumber Co, they all would feel as I do and I feel as though I have made a good investment by buying into this company. And as to the board of directors, I never met a nicer bunch of men, and they have got their shoulders to the wheel and are pushing for the Western States Lumber Co., and they are going to make a go of it, too. All they need is a little boost from each one of us stock holders.

CRYSTAL CAFE CHANGES HANDS

Elder & Fuller have disposed of their restaurant. At this writing we are unable to give full particulars of the transaction as we udnerstand that another deal is on with the present owners which they do not want made public now. At the present time Clarence Kluckhohn is the man behind the counter and is all dolled up with a white apron and a towel over his arm. Occasionally he tries to pass for a Greek "soda-slinger" when he gets behind the ice cream fountain, but otherwise he is a regular restaurant man. Next week wh hope to be able to give the full particulars of the deal. The old proprietors, Ralph Elder and Elmer Fuller, are yet undecided what they will take up, but we sincerely hope they plan to remain in the Klemme business circle. Should they decide to leave Klemme we extend our best wishes for a prosperous futur in whatever line of business they may go into.

GARNER'S LOSS IS KLEMME'S GAIN Future Klemme Business Men Complimented

Jacobs & Jacobs—Auditor Chris and his son Edwin, have bought out the hardware business of Geo. Gruetzmacher of Klemme, and will assume charge of it about August 1st. Edwin will be in active charge of the business. He is a thorough-going young man, has an abundance of energy, and will make good. He is stepping into a well-established business, and with this infusion of young life, the place wll take on a new aspect we are sure.

Frank Kluckhohn has resigned his position with the Farmers Elevator Company, and with his brother, Clarence, has purchased the general merchandise business of Waterman & Son, of Klmme. This means that Frank will leave Garner, and again take up a residence in Klemme. Both the Kluckhohn boys are experienced in the merchandising business and they will make a strong firm. They are both popular, aggressive and up-to-date. The Waterman establishment is one of the oldest and most substantial business enterprises in Klemme and the boys are stepping into a proposition that holds out wonderful opportunity for them Sorry to lose you from the oldt own, Frank, but wish you all kinds of success. They will take possession of the place about August 1st —Garner Democrat.

Martin Nelson of Miller was the victim of a very painful accident, Monday. While engaed in doing some flooring at the Babcock home, the chimney fell in, pinning Mr. Nelson beneath the heavy bricks and mortar. Had it not been for other workmen who were working about the place, and who removed the debris as quickly as they could, his accident might have been fatal. As it was he suffered three broken ribs, and severe bruises about theh ead and face He was rmoved to the Wm. McCormick home, and is recovering slowly from his injuries. His wife and three children are with him at the McCormick home and will remain here until he is ablet o be moved to his home in Miller -Garner Democrat.

A number of Klemme men journeyed over to Britt last Wednesday evening and stilla much larger representation on Thursday evening to attend the Hard Surfaced Roads meeting. The object of the meeting was to organize the county by townships and then to hold meetings to discuss the road question which comes to a vote in this county August 4th. At the meeting men who had studied the law were there and gave an outline of the same and plans were formulated whereby meetings would be held to fully explain the situation so that the voters, when they go to the polls on Augus 4th, will fully understand why they vote, and the result their vote will have if voted "yes" and aslo the effect it will have if voted in the negative.

Harvey was formerly a resident of this burg and he has strong hunches of breaking his moorings at Garner and coming to a good town to live again.

According to the Garner Signal, "Barney" Miner arrived in Garner last Wednesday morning, having been discharged fromo ver-seas service. We are glad to hear that "Barney" is back again and hope to see his smiling face in Klemme soon.

Chinese Woman Encoffined Alive.

An unusual case of filial ingratitude is reported from Huchow, China, in the Tokyo (Japan) Advertiser. A very aged woman lived with her son's family, who were so poor that they did not have necessary food. To reduce expenses, the son, forgetting his country's traditions regarding filial piety, conceived of disposing of his aged mother. He secured a coffin, placed his mother therein, without protest on her part, nailed on the cover and deposited the coffin in a vacant lot. Neighbors informed the police, and the coffin was taken to the station house, where it was opened. The woman was still breathing, and when removed asked: "Why did you disturb me? I am a burden to my son and do not want to live. Please put me back in the box and let me die." The request was refused, and officials are detaining both mother and son in the yamen awaiting a judicial disposition of the case.

Algerian Grain Production.

Methods of grain production used in Algeria are very similar to those used in Utah, Idaho and eastern Washington. Owing to the light rainfall much of the land is cropped only alternate years, a clean fallow being maintained during the summer preceding the sowing of the crop. In more favorable situations it is often customary to produce two or three grain crops in successive years, allowing the land to lie fallow one year in four or one year in five.

Speaking generally, the soils of the grain-growing regions are rather heavy and are very productive when the rainfall is adequate. Some of the lands are underlain by calcareous hardpan, which it is sometimes necessary to break up by an occasional deep plowing in order to secure maximum production.

Making Arrangements.

A stray but friendly cat wandered to the front door of a home where lived Charles, an only child. The little fellow was pleased with his new visitor, and was endeavoring to welcome him by bringing him into the house, when the mother appeared on the scene. She told the child that the cat was not allowed in the house. Immediately after the cautioning and while the cat was on the front porch Charles went to the door and said: "Say, kitty, you come ground to the back door and I'll meet you there."

Deep Sea Creatures.

An interesting little creature of the deep is the lencelet. It ranks about halfway between a fish and an invertebrate. Among its many peculiarities is the absence of a distinct head. The mouth is in the middle of the body. and is surrounded by tentacles. At great depths shrimps have been found that have luminous bodies. When put into the aquarium, they lose their light-giving properties. Scientists believe the Creator made these creatures luminous to give them light in the dark depths of the sea.

OBSERVE STARS IN DAYTIME

If One Is Sufficiently Interested They Can Be Seen From Bottom of Well.

Not only have the astronomers devised a means whereby they may observe the stars in the daytime, but anyone may, if he choose, see them at such time if he will go to the trouble to do so. At the bottom of a deep well an observer on looking up will see the stars if the sky is clear and the sun does not happen to be shining directly into the well

Why cannot the stars be seen from the surface of the ground in the daytime? They certainly give forth their usual amount of light, and it will be remembered that the moon is frequently seen during the day.

The question resolves itself into the capacity of the human eye. During the day the sun shines on particles suspended in the atmosphere itself, and its rays are reflected in every direction from the different particles. We thus have diffused light by means of which one can see objects not directly in the sunlight.

If it were not for this diffusion of light, or irregular refraction, as it is called we could not possibly see anything not in the direct sunlight. Now, these rays irregularly reflected enter the eye in enormous numbers, so the intensity is comparatively great with starlight.

But to a person in a deep well or mine shaft only the perpendicularly reflected rays enter the eye, and from only those particles directly over the mouth of the shaft. Thus comparatively little light enters the eye, and any starlight that comes down at that time is easily perceived and the presence of the star is recognized.

DON'T LIFT RABBITS BY EARS

Expert Condemns Practice Which Has Always Been More or Less in General Use.

Some people seem to think that because rabbits' ears are so long it is a good reason to use them as handles. They have told me that "the mother rabbit carries her young around by the ears!"

I have had a pretty good opportunity to observe such a feat, but I have never seen such a performance. It is all right to hold them by the ears, but I always put my hand or arm under their hind legs to lift them up, and then I know I am not hurting them.

One peculiarity I have always noticed about rabbits is their apparent lack of clear vision. If you will notice their eyes you will see that they scarcely, if ever, move the eyeball to look up or down or at either side, as a cat does. You can't tell when they are looking directly at you, as you can with a cat.

If you throw a carrot to them they will not sight it and go directly to it, but will smell about with nose to the ground till they find it, and they may go six inches past it a few times before they strike it.

Put a rabbit on a chair, table or box, and he will go carefully to the edge, leaning his head over and seemingly wondering how far he is from the ground, whereas a cat would think nothing of springing down from such a height.—Boys' Life.

Towns and Their Trades.

Some towns are famous for the industries they carry on, either because they are favorably situated for their work, or else because some leader of the industry has started a model factory which has grown larger with the lapse of time Perth with its climate especially suited for dyeing, and Belfast, with its linen manufacture, are examples of the former, while Port Sunlight, famous the world over for soap, and Saltaire, with its manufacture of mohair and alpaca, owe their prosperity in each case to one man. Keighley makes a specialty of textile machinery and Brighouse is said to spin more silk waists than any town in England, while the Rossendale valley provided half the world with felt slippers. Stapleford, in Cambridge, makes a specialty of parchment; Daventry whips were once considered better than any, while Wymondham, in Norfolk, was noted for its wooden tops.

Animal Faces.

The likeness of certain human types to familiar animals is a matter of common observation. Caricaturists from the days of the Greeks and Romans down have made use of its suggestions. In our daily speech we naturally describe men as rat-faced, hoggish or foxy in appearance, or say of a noble looking old man that he possesses a leonine head.

Still other persons we pronounce simian, and although few of us would care to merit a personal application of that adjective, it need not be wholly uncomplimentary, as one would imagine. The dignified and venerable Charles Darwin accepted it as applied to himself with no resentment.

Many Films in Preparation.

Films are also being prepared as part of the campaign which the forest service is making in co-operation with the fuel administration for increased wood fuel production and the substitution of cordwood for coal in regions where coal will be scarce during the winter.

Many features of the department's work which received little or no emphasis during the war, such as game preservation and the development of recreation on national forests, will also be featured in new films to be released during the winter months.

WENT COLONEL ONE BETTER

Occasion When Talkative Old Bore Met More Than His Match at the Club.

Several and various were the uncomplimentary exclamations heard when the talkative Col. Cholmondeley Fitz-Fulke strolled into the Back-to-Nature club one evening just in time to hear a discussion going on about the crows in the cornfields and their part in the winning of the war.

"Haw!" laughed the colonel reminiscently. "Speaking of crows reminds me of the time my father made a scarecrow out of me, egad!"

"Was it your father that did it, colonel?" asked Charlie Smithers, smilingly, followed by a snicker among the members.

"Er—ah—yes. You see, the crows in our cornfield became so used to our regular scarecrow that they grew quite fond of him. And they used to bring him grains of corn and deposit them in his pockets and corncob pipe. It was quite a beautiful and heart-melting sight, gentlemen," and the colonel flicked a sentimental tear from his eyeglass.

"Well, I conceived the idea of making a scarecrow that would smite the crows and chase them away, donche-know. So father decided to dress me up in some old tattered rags and have me smite them. And, bah Jove, I frightened them so bally bad that they didn't return for a year, and then it was after they had seen me go abroad!" concluded the colonel, picking up Charlie Smithers' glass and emptying its contents.

"Huh! That's nothing," said Charlie. "My father made a scarecrow so fierce looking that seven of our crows that had stolen ten bushels of corn came back the next day and put every one back!"

It was several minutes before the colonel could control himself sufficiently to walk out amid the roar that arose.

CORTEZ' HOUR OF TRIUMPH

Impressive Scene When the Spanish Adventurer Met Emperor Montezuma of Mexico.

On the morning of November 8, 1519, the Spaniards were on the causeway which was one of the three to connect Tenochtitlan with the mainland, and so wide that eight of the Spanish cavalry could ride abreast on it. On all sides, in the road and in canoes on the lake, a crowd of Aztecs gazed at the descendants of the god who had at last, as they believed, carried out his promise. At the entrance to the city they were greeted by 1,000 principal citizens with salutations and kissing of hands to the bare earth; and then, after crossing a drawbridge, they saw approaching in a gorgeous litter none other than the great Montezuma, escorted by 200 of his courtiers.

Never has there been a more impressive scene in the history of the American continent than this meeting between the emperor of all Mexico and the Spanish adventurer. The picturesque surroundings, the silver-towered city rising from the gleaming lake, the countless hosts of gayly dressed subjects watching in awed silence, the magnificence of Montezuma and his train, the bronze, war-worn yet fiery appearance of the Spaniards—all these seem like a page from the "Arabian Nights" rather than sober history. The Spaniards, we may be sure, realized they were living a romance of the first order, and their hearts beat high with triumph, as with swords clanking and horses prancing they advanced into this city of legend.—From "Mexico," by Louise S. Hasbrouck.

Helpful Home Library.

"I like to pass my books on," said the friendly woman. "When I get a new book I begin a 'roster' of readers on the flyleaf. If the book proves to be a good and helpful one, it is a delight to multiply its usefulness by passing it on. The penalty assessed is that the reader sign the roster. I have one book that has been loaned to 23 different readers, and another that almost as many have read. The flyleaf bears a request that the book be returned.

"In time the books get broken backs, of course, but you learn to love books, as you love people, that get crippled in a good cause. The plan enables me to encourage my friends to read good books, and the list of readers is interesting to others to whom the book is offered."

A Little Tree.

I never see a little tree peeping confidingly up among the withered leaves without wondering what trials and triumphs it will have. I hope it will live with rapture in the flower opening days of spring; that it will be a home for birds; and that it will find life worth living and live long to better and to beautify the earth. If it is cut down may it become the ridge log of a cabin where love will abide, or if it must be burned, I hope it will blaze on the hearthstone of a home where children play in the firelight on the floor.—Enos A. Mills.

Plenty of Pine.

Deliveries of southern pine to the government from July 1, 1917, to May 28, 1918, were 2,600,000,000 feet, which, it is estimated, would require a solid train of cars extending from the gulf of Mexico to the Canadian border, and would make a board walk three feet wide extending six times around the world, or build a solid board fence 50 feet high that would circle the geographical borders of the United States.

Harry O Weagel, of LeMars, Ia., who served overseas with the Rainbow division, and Miss Alice Holland, of Kingsley, Ia., were married Thursday afternoon, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs Henry Holland. Rev. Joseph Steele jr., pastor of the Mayflower Congregational church of Sioux City, officiated

Miss Holland has spent all of her life in Kingsley, graduating from the high school there, and teaching school for several terms in the vicinity. Mr Weagel has spent the greater part of his life in LeMars He enlisted in the United States army in June, 1915, and served with the boys on the Mexican border He was sent overseas with the Rainbow division and participated in many of the famous battles of the world war He was uninjured during the entire time of his service. Shortly before the close of the war, he was sent back to the United States to train soldiers for the service

Mr and Mrs Weagel will make their home on a ranch near Watertown, S. D.

FORT DODGE POLICEMEN HEAR FROM THE MAYOR

Fort Dodge, Ia July 21.—Charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty were made by Mayor Scott against the police department when a committee of patrolmen appeared before the mayor asking for an increase in pay

The mayor told the committee he would oppose the granting of any more money until better results were shown from the department

Mayor Scott said

"Disreputable women are continually plying their trade in the city You know them, know their haunts and you are doing nothing. You allow drunken men to lie around in the public park without any fear of being molested. The loafer and the law violator are apparently instructed that a word whispered to the right party will fix things for him

"You have been doing excellent work in the 'red zone', where the crowd applauds but by your neglect in other channels make it necessary for poor defenseless women to appeal to me almost daily to do something to stop the despicable bootlegger that is ruining their husbands and sons You know their hangouts You know that the whisky traffic is getting worse every day and you appear to take no interest in it

You swore when you took the oath that you would obey the laws of the state and aid in law enforcement and still you are violating the law yourselves"

In answer to charges of inefficiency and neglect of duty in the police department made by Mayor Scott Chief of Police Flattery in an open letter charges the mayor with being responsible for the release of immoral women from the city jail The letter is addressed to the mayor

"The police says Chief Flattery, "made an arrest of three women charged with disorderly conduct consisting of prostitution, and you personally sent a note to the sergeant in charge asking for the release of one of these women after she had been sentenced to 30 days in the city jail for her conduct You finally procured her release upon grounds that seemed proper to you Why blame the policemen and why charge them with allowing immoral women to remain in Fort Dodge?"

Chief Flattery demanded a showdown on the mayor's hint that policemen were violating the law

"If any policeman is bootlegging or protecting bootleggers, says the chief, "it is not only your privilege but your duty to file charges before the civil service commission, and also before a proper magistrate, and no amount of grandstanding will relieve you from your responsibilities as a law abiding citizen and as mayor to file such charges."

Mayor Scott took office in April. He opposed the selection of Chief Flattery, but was overruled by other members of the council.

WIFE TESTIFIES IN MURDER TRIAL

Mrs. Roy Emerson Called to Explain Away Some of Evidence Introduced By the State.

Mt. Ayr, Ia., July 18.—Self possessed and without a sign of nervousness Mrs. Roy Emerson, 22 years of age, was placed on the witness stand by the defense in the trial of her husband, whom the state charges with murdering his mother, Mrs. Kate Emerson, at Creston, Ia., last May. Mrs. Emerson was called to testify for the announced purpose of clearing certain points in the state's evidence considered unfavorable to her husband.

Throughout a gruelling cross examination she maintained her composure. She declared that Mrs. Kate Emerson had several times told her "life wasn't worth living," and told of the conversation between her husband and Coroner McKee the night of the tragedy when, the state contends, Emerson asked McKee to get men on the coroner's jury who were "all right." She declared that Emerson had said "Get good men, McKee."

The night of the tragedy, she said, several friends called at her home and one of them told her husband he was suspected of murder and that a bloody rag had been found near the elevator shaft in which Mrs. Kate Emerson's body was discovered Her husband said at that time, according to his wife's testimony, that he had gotten blood on his shoes handling his mother's body and had wiped them off with a rag.

SOME NEW PROVISIONS OF THE VEHICLE LAWS

Des Moines, Ia., July 16.—Persons driving automobiles will do well to inform themselves regarding the provisions of the new automobile law governing the operation of motor vehicles. There are many features governing the operation of automobiles in this law which are entirely new Some of them drastic and the man who is operating his car in accordance with the law will have all the best of the argument in case of collision.

The law provides that every motor vehicle shall be equipped with suitable brakes and horn or signalling device The horn must be sounded, (motorist should note this provision) on approaching curves, tops of hills and intersections where the driver's view is obstructed.

Light on cars shall be kept burning from a half hour after sunset to half an hour before sunrise The lights include two on front and a red light on the rear

Headlights of greater than 32-candle power are barred without exception, no matter how they are shaded or the light diffused. A headlight of more than four candle power must have the light so shaded or diffused that that beams 75 feet ahead of the car do not rise higher than 42 inches from the road If a spot light is used, the law makes it unlawful to turn it into a driver's face or even to the left of the center of the road being traveled

The operation of a car with the cut out open is absolutely barred on any highway in the state.

Upon approaching a person walking in the road, or animal being led driven or ridden, or on approaching an intersection, bridge, sharp curve or steep ascent, the driver of a car shall have the care under control and shall drive at a safe and reasonable speed

Cars must be brought to a stop and remain at a standstill when approaching a street car going in the same direction from which passengers are alighting or boarding

Before stopping, turning or changing the course of his car the driver must first see that there is sufficient space to make such movement in safety and must signal cars following of his intention to make such movements by raising and extending the hand and indicating with it the direction in which he wishes to turn

The old law regarding turning corners is incorporated in the new law In turning to the right, the law says, keep as close to the curb as possible and in turning to the left, drive past the center of the intersection before turning

In cities and towns it is unlawful to overtake and pass another car at street intersections in the business district It is made unlawful to operate a car emitting an undue amount of smoke or steam from the exhaust

The law fixes the right of way for one vehicle over another at intersections This new feature of the law is arbitrary and upsets many of the precedents established by custom for travel in this city.

This important clause of the law says:

"Where two vehicles are approaching on any public streets or highway so that their paths will intersect and there is danger of collision, the vehicle approaching the other from the right shall have the right of way"

Worked out this means that

All north bound traffic has the right of way over east bound traffic

All west bound traffic has the right of way over north bound traffic.

All south bound traffic has the right of way over west bound traffic

All east bound traffic has the right of way over south bound traffic

In other words, the driver should remember that after December 1, when approaching an intersection, that the car approaching the intersection from the driver's right has the right of way.

HALF DOLLAR STUCK IN THIS BOY'S THROAT

LeMars, Ia., July 18.—Anton Kowalski, a Merrill boy, swallowed a half dollar while playing with another boy. The coin stuck about half way down the oesophagus. The boy was brought to the LeMars clinic where the coin was located by an X-ray. Forceps were guided down the boy's throat by the fluoroscope and the coin removed and the boy was sent home how the worse for the experience

IOWA APPLE CROP TO BE GOOD ONE

Southwest Counties Will Produce Four Times as Many This Year as Last Year.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 17.—Frank S. Pinney, field agent for the bureau of crop estimates at Council Bluffs, states that the special commercial apple crop report for July 1, forecasts a production of 267,000 barrels, compared with 101,000 barrels last year.

In the counties of Fremont, Mills, Pottawattamie and Harrison, in southwestern Iowa, or better known to apple growers as the Missouri region counties, it is probable that a production of 125,000 barrels will be the gift of nature, compared with only 32,000 barrels last year. Most sprayed orchards are in excellent condition in the vicinity of Hamburg and Council Bluffs.

Indications are that only 15 to 40 per cent of a crop will be harvested in the apple producing sections in southeastern Iowa, i the counties of Lee, Van Buren, Wapello, Mahaska and Scott. Likely a late breeze and scab have combined to reduce the production in southeastern Iowa. Canker worms in unsprayed orchards in the southern portion of the state have practically defoliated trees

HIGHWAY MAY AVOID DIRT ROAD COUNTIES

Des Moines, Ia., July 16.—With several counties along the Lincoln highway in Iowa turning down hard surfaced roads an effort is now underway to change the route of this transcontinental road from Marshalltown to the south and west, using the river to river road west from that city This would bring the Lincoln highway through Des Moines.

Story county, adjoining Marshall on the west, was one of the first to turn down paved highways. Story joins Polk county on the north Polk county, with Des Moines the county seat, voted for paved highways by a 4 to 1 vote One of the first roads to be paved through the county will be the river to river road.

An effort is now being made by the Des Moines Chamber of Commerce to have the transcontinental touring party now enroute from Washington to San Francisco, come through Des Moines In the party are 42 army trucks and five cars and they are due to pass through this region July 26 and 27

IOWA WOMAN HOLDS VALUABLE COPPER STOCK

Waterloo, Ia., July 17.—A Waterloo woman has cleaned up a nice "stake" on copper shares. She is a plain, every day sort of working woman. Her 'office' is the dining room of Hotel Hummel, where she directs service, and her limousine is, most likely, the street car.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sharp is the name of this owner of copper stock. Twenty-one years ago she bought 5,500 shares of Anaconda copper stock, known as Amalgamated Copper when she purchased it She paid 23 cents a share and held it until it rose to the present value, 75 cents a share

"When the quotation reaches 74 I'm going to sell," she had told a friend

Last week that point was reached, and she disposed of 2,000 shares She reserves the balance in her safety deposit box until she may secure a more favorable price, for Mrs Sharp is a good investor as her patience in waiting for a rise in the market shows

BRIDE OF FEW HOURS DIES OF HEART TROUBLE

Des Moines Ia. July 17.—Within 12 hours after the wedding ceremony, death claimed the bride of Harry Shropshire, of the state board of control early Sunday morning Mr Shropshire and Gertrude Alice Knight were married Saturday evening at Adel They left in the evening in an automobile for Council Bluffs. When they were near Monleith, a heavy storm was approaching and they were compelled to stay all night in a farm house The young woman, who for some time has been a sufferer from heart trouble, was stricken about 6 o'clock in the morning and died before medical aid could reach her

DEMOCRAT LEADERS CONFER WITH WOMEN

Des Moines, Ia., July 17.—Not a few of the woman suffrage workers of Des Moines, together with several of the leaders among the sterner sex, met with W D Jamieson, former congressman from the Eighth district at the home of C. L. Herring Sunday. Jamieson was here on his return trip to Washington, D. C., having been on a tour over the country with National Committeeman Homer S. Cummings.

The Herring dinner is another of the many conferences the democratic leaders are having with the women who are active in politics.

EMMETSBURG—John McCormick, 94 years old, the first superintendent of Palo Alto county, who also served as coroner and sheriff at later times died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Jess Crook at Rodman on July 4. He was born in Tyrone, Ulster, Ireland. His people came here in 1856 to 1858.

LOSES LEG AND ARM TRYING TO AID FRIENDS

Falls City, Neb., July 17.—Floyd Brown, a young man 23 years of age, of Ferris, Ill., had his right leg cut off at the knee and his left arm cut off above the elbow by a Missouri Pacific train. Brown, with four companions, attempted to catch a ride on the train. He was first on the train and reached out to help some of the others on when he fell off and was thrown under the cars

William M. Ingersoll, in the National Civic Review.

Granting that costs are too high and that particularly it is much to distribute our goods, we then proceeded to examine and efforts of those who would accomplish a reduction the elimination of the middleman.

We studied the operations of those great retail institutions department store and the chain store, which aim and claim to the wholesale. We found that instead of eliminating him, tuted a new one. The department store requires the establish wholesale warerooms by the manufacturer as well as a contin the regular wholesaler, while the chain stores set up their own wholesale establishment where goods are received from the and subdivided and distributed among their stores precisely manner followed by the customary wholesale house to its re tomers, involving all the labor of receiving goods in bulk, subdividing, repacking, forwarding and accounting with resu advantage and expense rather than gain.

In each chain store we found a substitute proprietor in the of a hired manager, requiring additional safeguards and against dishonesty, indifference and inefficiency

Similarly, when the manufacturer essayed to establish retail stores and eliminate the retailer and wholesaler, we fo the retail stores still existed and that he had to have the inter warerooms of his own to replace the wholesaler involving functions, operations and labor of the ordinary distributing

Again, when we examined the great cooperative societies Britain, we found the same distributing elements and we were to the conclusion that in the nature of the consumer's needs geographical distribution over wide areas, the machinery of tion require three indispensable elements—namely the produ wholesaler, and the retailer, and that no effort to eliminate these units had succeeded in reducing the amount of labor performed, or in doing more than to change the name of the f ary performing it.

The mail order system was found to be a retail institution with wholesale warerooms, and in some instances factories, save no labor, but rather to violate an elementary principle of tation in that it involves the carrying of retail packages distances instead of carrying goods in bulk to the community they are to be consumed and there opening the factory cases dividing and delivering through a retail establishment to the individuals.

It was left to us to inquire, therefore, in view of the elimination of the middlemen could not be achieved, whether these methods of distribution succeeded in performing the labors at a lower expense or in relieving the consumer of payi tant or unearned profits, and whether in the event that the failed there was any other direction in which we might look from the high costs which are admitted to be greater than they sh

In our preceding article it was set forth that three and possible ways of saving on distributing costs lay before us— eliminating useless labor; (b) eliminating unreasonable or profit; (c) increasing the efficiency of our distributors

There is no opportunity for saving in the motions, pro labor of the producer-wholesaler-retailer system without sub more expensive methods.

Nebraska Farmers' Union.

From the Nebraska State Journal.

The Farmers' Union State Exchange, authorized to issue $3,000,000 worth of stock, was incorporated the other day at a meeting of several hundred farmers, members of the Farmers' Educational and Cooperative State Union, controlled by members of the new organization. The union represents about 4,000 farmers and stock breeders of Nebraska and was organized five years ago as a cooperative exchange. The change of organization was made to widen the scope of the business. In place of paying dues as under the old form of organization, stock guaranteed to pay 8 per cent dividends annually has been issued About $450,000 worth of stock was bought by the delegates to the meeting

The headquarters of the union will be in Omaha. Its purpose is stated to be "to buy, sell and trade in seeds, groceries, shoes and implements, of all kinds." By a special motion the proposed bylaws were amended so as not to include grain and livestock. Stock in the new company will be limited to members of the former union, with a restriction of 40 shares to a member.

Joffre on the Grill.

From the Boston Transcript.

The modern general has a harder problem to face and solve than ever a general of the past had. He must face and beat the enemy if he can; but he must face a committee of congress or parliament afterward, whether he be victor or vanquished Even in France, where the investigating committee is rather a new thing Marshal Joffre has had to appear before a committee of the chamber of deputies and tell why he did not defend the Briey iron mining district, and why he did not provide against an attack through Belgium And the marshal could only respond to the inquiries that the defense of Briey was beyond his power, and that at Charleroi he was simply beaten, and his heart broken, because the power of the enemy was vastly greater and its tactics better than his own. The ultimate answer to both the questions addressed to him was that an unprepared nation was matched against one which was thoroughly prepared.

Disciplining an Adventurer.

From the Seattle Times.

The disciplining of Bela Kun by the civilized nations of the old world has begun and if wisdom sways their future actions, will be continued until he has been eliminated as a factor in European political affairs. His wife recently attempted to get into Switzerland. Perhaps she was sent as a propagandist. More likely she was fleeing with part of her husband's loot, as Mrs. Trotsky fled to Sweden with millions of treasure some months ago. In any event, she appeared on the border with a retinue of servants and trunks filled with costly gowns—the typical spouse of a typical middle class European worker, engaged in squandering the newly acquired riches of her husband while aping the ways of the very class the latter so hotly denounces. She was not permitted to enter Switzerland. Similarly, Bela Kun was not permitted to obtain the recognition from the allies which he craves, because he realizes this recognition is necessary to those firm establishment of the plunderbund of which he is the official head.

The Drift to Hotels.

The apparently unlimited willingness of capitalists to invest millions upon millions of dollars in the erection of magnificent hotels makes natural the speculation as to whether we are on the way to becoming a country of hotel dwellers. As fast as each new hotel, with its thousands of rooms and ingenious refinements of comfort and service, is completed it is instantly filled, starts a waiting list, and only regrets that it has not a few hundred more rooms to be let at a minimum of $5 a day.

Americans who can afford such luxuries —and there are more in this class than ever before—are flocking into hotels, because living conditions, particularly in the greater cities, are abnormal. If the abnormal conditions become permanent and therefore normal the hotel dwellers will increase and the American home will become a new sort of thing entirely

PLEADS GUILTY TO BLACKMAIL CHARGE

Winside, Neb., Man Secured $1,000 From Fellow Towns... ...n at Gun's Point

Wa... b. July 21. James Mil... ler, of ... side, 10 miles southwest of here, w... arraigned before the county judge ... this morning charged with blackmail on Louis Needham, of Winside. He waived preliminary hearing and indicated a desire to be taken into district court this afternoon ... he might enter a plea of guilt.

It is charged that a few days ago in Winside, Miller with a gun in hand approached Needham, who was cutting weeds in a feed yard on the edge of town, and demanded $1,000 under pain of death, giving as his reason alleged misconduct of Needham toward Mrs. Cora Miller, Miller's sister-in-law.

Needham signed a check for the money, and Miller is said to have made his way back into the city to the bank, where he deposited $500 to his credit and took $500 in cash. The action in court here today resulted.

The Mrs. Miller whose name was connected with the case has given a statement in which she denies any misconduct on the part of Mr. Needham.

OVERLAND ABANDONS SHARING OF PROFITS

Cuts Off Employes as Result of Strike—Announces Loss But Declares Dividend.

Toledo, Ohio, July 21. The Willys Overland Company has abandoned its profit sharing plan with its employes for the quarter ending June 30 according to a statement by officials of the company.

The reason for suspension of the plan reads:

"Owing to the unjust strike in our plant instead of making a profit for the quarter ending June 30 we sustained a loss."

The company declared its regular dividend at a recent meeting of the board of directors.

BURLESON DEMANDS SWAY OVER STRIKES

Good Roads For Hancock County

HANCOCK COUNTY VOTES FOR PAVING

Bond Issue Also Receives A Strong Majority

Ia Iowa has had her eyes on Hancock County for the past few weeks since it was announced that the question of hard surfacing the primary roads was to be submitted to the decision of the voters of the county on Monday, August 4th. The voters gave a very strong affirmative vote both for the hard surfacing and for the bond issue to carry on the work

Cerro Gordo County on the east and Kossuth County on the west both voted for hard surfaced roads. It was therefore up to Hancock county to furnish the missing link in the chain of paved roads across the north of the state and we are proud to say that Hancock county voted better than three to one in favor of paving as you will notice by the tabulated bulletin showing how each township voted All townships gave the question a good support with the exception of Liberty Township, Twin Lakes Township and Ellington Township, these townships also voted down the bond issue. Hancock County now supplied the link between the counties that voted for good roads and it will not be long before we can travel clear across the state on paved roads.

There was a lot of excitement over the election and everybody was out boosting for the proposition or knocking it, as the case might be and for a full week the curb stone politicians in every town in the county were surrounded with a crowd of men arguing pro and con and the day of the special election every voter was out, the largest vote ever cast in the county that w know of.

According to the paving program the first stretch of paving will be laid on the North Iowa Pike between Garner and Britt. We have not learned how soon the project will be started as we presume that will be decided by the board of supervisors. The Wilson Highway btween Klemme and Garner will undoubtedly be the next stretch of road to be paved

KLEMME MEN WITNESS CHICAGO RACE RIOTS

Shot Through Car Window Barely Misses August Lau

Joe Johnson and August Lau, our local stock buyers happened to be in Chicago when the race riots broke out between the whites and negroes. They had taken some stock into the city just before the fighting began. Mr. Lau was awakened from his sleep by the noise in the street and thought it only a fire near by, but when he got up in the morning to go to the stock yards the street cars were not running, due to the strike and he had to take a cab thru the fighting district, but was not disturbed. However late in the afternoon he said the streets were jammed and evrey once in a while a fight would start. He thought it was high time to get out of the city and so did Joe, as every minute the crowds were getting thicker and the fight breaking out in new quarters. They witnessed several scenes and it was enough for them so they went to th depot as fast as they could and boarded a train. It was while waiting to pull out of the yards that August Lau had his narrow escape. Four young negro men occupied the seats just back of Mr. Lau in the smoking car. All at once several shots rang out, breaking the glass in the window between Lau and the negroes. Everybody ducked and a few more shots wnt through the windows but no one was hit. The train was started out and did not stop in any of the suburbs for fear the shooting would begin again at some other point. Both men said they were perfectly willing to get back to Klemme as Chicago was too dangerous for them.

AEROPLANE FLIES OVER KLEMME

Last wee kThursday about everybody in Klemme and surrounding country wore craning their necks skyward shortly after noon. We thought perhaps a new kind of disease had broken out and everybody had a stiff neck, but being curious, we also looked toward the moon and saw a flying machine soaring above the city. It is the first to fly over Klemme. The machine was from Chicago and was touring the country advertising some brand of clothing made in Chicago. It sure pays to advertise. The last time the aviator flew over Klemme he made a low dip just abov the State Savings Bank and headed for Main Street. Some guy yelled, "Get out of the way, he's going to land," but the birdman was just having a little fun and soon went higher again until he was lost in the clouds.

FATAL AUTO ACCIDENT

Burt Monitor:—A sad accident occurred Sunday evening, when Mrs. Ollam, mother of Jim Ollam, was thrown from the car in which they were riding and fatally injured. Mr. Ollam and family and his son Ora Ollam and family had spent the day at the Lakes and were returning to their homes when the accident occurred. The car driven by Jim Ollam, in which his mother was riding, was in the lead. There had been a small shower, and the road was a trifle slippery. The car had reached a point within sixty rods of the home when the rear wheels skidded sharply and brought up against some obstruction, throwing out the occupants of the back seat. The car did not tip over, and had come to a full stop when the two women and two children who were in the back fell out. Mrs. Ollam struck on her head, fracturing her skull. She was dead before she could be carried into the house.

COWS ARE TUBERCULAR

Under the recently enacted ordnance making it compulsory for milk venders in the town of Kanawha to test their cows, seventeen head were tested by Veterinary Stewart and three head owned by Albert Vander-Ploeg and Herman Finndorf were found to be infected.

These cows will be shipped to a packing house, under state inspection killed, and if the meat will pass inspection the owners will be paid for it, if not they will receive pay for the hides only.

Another test will be made of the remaining town cows as most cow owners are anxious to have the tests made for their own protection.

Some people were of the opinion that this ordinance was a farce, but thy ar taking a different view since learning that some of the cows were tubercular.—Kanawha Reporter.

LESTER COLUMB AGAIN IN JAIL

Lester Columb, who confessed to auto stealing, and who was in jail at Clarion, was brought before Judge Wright who gave him a ten year intermediate sentence and then paroled him.

The prisoner was soon under the law again, charged with stealing the George Gross car early in the spring, and he is again in jail. He will no doubt have his trial at the September term of court.

The Gross car has been returned. It was found in Des Moines where there is evidently an organized "fence" for receiving stolen cars.—Dows Advocate.

GOODELL GLOBE AGAIN PUBLISHED

Last week a copy of the Goodell Globe reached us after a suspension of about a year while the publisher, Finis Leach, wsa away fighting the Hun. Mr. Leach has made several improvements in the plant and expects to give the people of Goodell a bigger and better paper than ever before

'TWAS THERE

A minister down in Missouri found his people too poor to purchase hymn books, and being offered the same book free by a patent medicine house provided they be allowed to insert their advertisement, ordered three dozen for the congregation. He was elated on receiving them to find no advertisement in them. The next Sunday he distributed the books, telling th brethren his good fortune, and requesting that they sing one hundred and twenty. His chagrin may be imagined when they sang the hymn as follows: "Hark, the heavenly angels sing, Johnson's pills are just the thing; angelic voices meek and mild —two for man and one for child." —Exchange.

Donaldson Brothers, the aviators from Milford, Dickinson county, have set the pace for a new feature in litigation. They flew to Algona and alighted in a meadow adjoining the town. People got so excited over the winged monster of the air that they trampled all over a patch of corn belonging to a local gardener and he presented abill of $25 to the Donaldsons for damages to his field. They refused to pay the bill giving as a reason that they were permitted to alight in the meadow and that the damage to the corn was not of their making. A suit will doubtless result. Many Iowa towns are providing landing places for aircraft. More and more such things will be necessary. The state fair management sees the need of such a concession and has set aside several acres of newly purchased land for this purpose. The fair management expects scores of airplanes to visit the fair this year.—Garnr Democrat.

...ed McClure Drane, a discharged soldier, recently, in Spokane, Wash., testified in court that he had entered the army under a contract with the Rev. Father Peter Francis Hylebos, who, too old to serve personally with the colors, wished to have a representative in the war against Germany. His testimony, in support of a claim of $250 against the estate of the clergyman, a native of Belgium, was corroborated by one of the administrators who in an affidavit said Rev. Father Hylebos told him of the agreement.

Alaska's 47-mile government railroad is costing about $75,000 per mile, completed. Total cost of the railroad will be $50,436,971. It is estimated. When the road is completed it will open up a country rich in mineral and agricultural possibilities. Communication with the great interior valleys of Alaska will be made easier than ever before. At Fairbanks and Nenana, the interior railroad points, trains will connect with boats plying on the Tanana, a tributary of the Yukon. Cost of living, it is believed, will be lowered in the interior as the present high freight rates keep commodities at a high figure.

Liechtenstein, the little principality near Switzerland which sent an "ultimatum" to the peace conference the other day demanding a place in the League of Nations, is about the size of the District of Columbia and rivals the mythical Graustark in quaintness and romance, it is said. The little state, with an area of 60 square miles and a population of 11,000 has been in an unbroken state of war with Prussia ever since the Schleswig-Holstein conflict of 1864.

An undertaker with imagination has given the Handley-Page Airplane Company of England an order for an aerial hearse. He conceived the idea of a person dying in London having expressed a wish to be buried in Scotland. The trip could be made in so much less time by air than rail that the funeral would not be delayed in the slightest. Another rather grim proposition is that of an aerial service in India to carry sick and dying Hindus to the sacred waters of the Ganges.

A large British engineering company has announced its entry into the field of motor car production with a model which is openly regarded as an attempt to meet American competition by adopting American methods of mass production. The company hopes to put 20,000 cars on the market in the first year. This car, says the American chamber of commerce in London, is to be of 16 to 20 horse power to carry five passengers and sell at approximately $1,450. Thus far only one car has been built and this was for testing purposes.

The ban that was placed on the Misses Fanny Durack and Mina Wiley, Australian swimmers by the Amateur Athletic Union more than a year ago has been lifted, according to Samuel J. Dallas, president of that organization. The swimmers according to Mr. Dallas have agreed to drop their professional managers and tour the country under the direction of the national championship committee of the A. A. U.

Inns in existence since colonial days are among those closed by the wartime prohibition law. One of the most noted is the General Wayne Inn, on the Montgomery pike, outside of Philadelphia, which was opened in 1704 as the Wayside Inn by Quaker settlers. "Mad" Anthony Wayne used the inn as his headquarters during the revolutionary war and it has been a polling place for more than 200 years.

Operations in the silver mines of Cobalt, Ont., have suspended as a result of a strike by virtually all miners employed in the district. The walkout followed refusal of mine managers to consent to adjustment by a board of conciliation of the men's demands for increased wages, shorter hours and improved working conditions.

Permission to lower slightly flood gates of Lake Tahoe so as to make available a larger amount of water for use in the Newlands irrigation project in Nevada in order to relieve suffering resulting from the recent drought, was asked by Senators Pittman and Henderson of Nevada at a conference recently with Secretary Lane.

One of Alaska's big war sacrifices was the delay in the work on the government railroad. During the war men were said to be [illegible] they were needed in France. [illegible] wanted to carry troops. Over seas instead of railroad supplies to Alaska and railroad materials were sent from the states to the battle front instead of to the north.

The government has received a dispatch from Maj. Gen. William P. Graves, commander-in-chief on the Archangel front, stating that the Russian troops have mutinied and joined the bolsheviks handing over the town of Onega and the Onega front to the enemy. The latter also tried to take the railroad front but were repulsed.

The cost of living is likely to stay high for a long time to come in the opinion of the Philadelphia board of trade. This view is a result of a compilation of statistics from many lines of trade and industry. According to these figures the advance in prices in this country since 1911 has been about 96 per cent, in Canada 115 per cent, Great Britain 123 per cent and France 237 per cent.

The naval dry dock at Pearl Harbor, work on which has been in progress for 10 years, has been completed and will be given a test in the near future. The new dry dock is 1,029 feet long, over all, has an inside width of 135 feet and a depth of 35 feet. It will be filled and emptied by large electrical pumps.

The Mormon church since the mission was established in Hawaii in 1850 by President George Q. Cannon has acquired about 9,000 members in the islands and owns and operates a large sugar plantation in Laie, on the island, Oahu.

The Victoria tower of the houses of parliament at Westminster, took 20 years to build. From base to summit the tower contains 140 spacious rooms—each fireproof and packed with state papers, the records of centuries of English history.

Plans for the emigration of Jews to Palestine are advancing. Saturday the Chicago branch of the Zionist organization received questionnaires, printed in both English and Yiddish, for the use of those who want to return.

TO BATTLE WITH IOWA PROFITEERS

Governor Calls Conference of County Attorneys to Lay Plans For State Wide Campaign.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 4.—Iowa's drive against profiteers in life's necessities was to start today, Governorr W. L. Harding announced.

The governor said [illegible] will be sent out today calling a conference of prosecuting attorneys in counties containing the larger cities of the state. The letters, Governor Harding declared, will also ask the attorneys to submit suggestions from county officials.

SHORT FALL RESULTS IN DEATH IN LESS THAN HOUR

Storm Lake, Ia., Aug. 4.—Herman Junkermeir, an old settler in this community and for many years a resident of Storm Lake, died shortly after noon yesterday from the effects of an accident suffered just before noon. He was on a ladder fixing the roof of his garage when he fell and struck his head against a cement sidewalk, fracturing the skull. His wife and daughter are visiting in South Dakota. W. D. Foster, a neighbor, found Mr. Junkermeir lying unconscious at the foot of the ladder. Medical aid was summoned but he died in about 45 minutes.

INWOOD'S HOME COMING TO SOLDIERS A SUCCESS

Inwood, Ia., Aug. 4.—Inwood put on a big homecoming celebration for its returning soldiers. More than $3,000 was spent in making the affair a success.

Besides the money subscribed, women of Inwood donated eatables of all kinds. A welcome arch had been erected in Main street in honor of the occasion. Victory floats were a feature of a big parade. Dr. F. E. Mossman, president of Morningside college, Sioux City, was speaker of the day. A dinner was served in military style, to which everyone was invited.

Purses were awarded to the winners in athletic events. In the evening a concert was given by the Hull concert band. Vaudeville attraction engaged from outside also were provided.

SPENCER PLANS ENTERTAINING PARTY ON AUTO TRUCK TOUR

Spencer, Ia., Aug. 4.—Great plans are being made here to welcome the National Motor Truck Development tour, which will have a night control in Spencer, Monday, August 18. Several local truck men have been named as a committee to have charge of the local end of the affair and the courthouse lawn has been secured for the concert by the jackie band and the talks by the speakers who will accompany the tour.

SIOUX CITY GIRL IN GREAT SWIMMING FEAT

Lake Okoboji, Ia., Aug. 4.—The social events of the week were overshadowed by the disastrous fire on Dixon's point, which destroyed three cottages and part of another, among them the elegant cottage of T. H. Whitney, banker, of Atlantic, Ia., purchased by him a month ago.

Another feature of the week was the enormous transactions in real estate here; one of the most notable sales was the purchase of part of the old Huiskamp estate on Dixon's beach, he having one of the first houses on the beach, built over 30 years ago. The deal embraced four lots and two cottages for $18,500. The highest price ever paid for cottage property. J. H. Tuttle, of Des Moines, refused an offer of $10,000 for his property, "Oak Harbor."

A notable swimming and rowing achievement occurred last Saturday, when Miss Julia Sheridan, of Sioux City swam from Arnold's park to the "Inn" a distance of nearly three miles. A violent gale was blowing, the lake was one mass of tremendous waves, whitecaps and foam, and huge waves would submerge the swimmer, but her head would appear some distance off on the top of a crested wave. Mrs. Grace Murray, of Sioux City, accompanied her in a row boat to assist her if she became exhausted, and showed remarkable strength and skill in handling the boat in that wind and wave, and keeping close enough to the swimmer to be of assistance if needed.

GUN TOTER IS HELD TO DISTRICT COURT

LeMars, Ia., Aug. 4.—Erwin Schultz, giving Chicago as his home, was arraigned before Justice W. S. Freeman on Tuesday on a charge of carrying concealed weapons.

Schultz has been employed at the Albert Epling farm in Liberty township. It is said he is a good hand as far as work is concerned but was too free with his conversation in presence of the wife of his employer. Mr. Epling objected and on a recurrence of the annoyance ordered Schultz off the place. Schultz came back to the place some time later and, it is alleged, displayed a gun in the presence of Mrs. Epling, and a brother of Mr. Epling and made some remarks about being ready for "that guy," referring to his late employer.

When arraigned before Justice Freeman Schultz pleaded guilty to the charge of carrying a gun and was bound over to await the action of the grand jury at the next term of the district court. In default of bonds he is held in the county jail.

BOY PAINFULLY INJURED BY KICK OF A COW

LeMars, Ia., Aug. 2.—Gregory, the 12-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Anton Kowalski, near Merrill, was kicked by a cow Wednesday and seriously injured, his right thigh being broken. The boy was going to milk the cow and touched her before he spoke to her and the animal kicked at him and knocked him into the water tank, where he was nearly drowned before being rescued as with the broken thigh he was unable to help himself.

STREET RAILWAY EMPLOYES STRIKE

Davenport, Ia., and Rock Island, Ill., and Neighboring Towns Affected—Demand More Money.

Davenport, Ia., Aug. 2.—Employes of the Tri-City Railway Company early this morning voted unanimously to strike. The strike tied up street car transportation in Davenport, Ia.; Rock Island and Moline, Ill., and adjacent towns, and on the Muscatine, Ia., and the Davenport & Clinton and the Davenport & Muscatine interurban lines. The company offered the men 60 cents an hour maximum wage contingent upon its getting a 7-cent fare.

WOMAN [illegible] BRUTALLY ATTACKED BY AN UNKNOWN MAN

Council Bluffs, Ia., Aug. 2.—Miss Josephine Volmer, 37 years old was taken to St. Bernard's hospital in a hysterical condition as the result of a criminal attack made upon her by an unknown man as she slept in bed. The attack occurred in her bedroom on the second floor of the J. P. Hogan home, 709 Fourth street, where she had been living for the past two years. Miss Volmer is head chocolate dipper at Woodward's candy factory where she has been employed for the past 10 years. The fiend got into the house by climbing over the front porch and removing a screen from the window in Miss Volmer's room. It is believed he left the house by coming down the front stairs and going out the front door as the screen door was found unlocked.

Hysterical shrieks from Miss Volmer's room first attracted attention of neighbors and led to the discovery of the crime. The bed room was found to be in a turmoil and the woman was found to be in a serious condition of hysteria. The bed coverings were in great disorder and covered with dirt and grime, presumably from the fiend's clothing. Miss Volmer had been gagged with a piece of her kimona. It is believed she was choked to insensibility and that the attack possibly occurred some time before she was discovered. She probably began to scream hysterically when she recovered consciousness.

SEARCH FOR WILL OF DEAD SOLDIER BOY

Marshalltown, Ia., Aug. 2.—Search for a soldier's will, in which he said, in a dying statement, he had made an uncle, of this city, his sole beneficiary, is in progress in this city, with no evidences of success so far.

James Abdallah, aged 25, a Serbian rug maker of this city before the war entered the service from Boone in 1917. He died in a base hospital in France October 9, 1918, of disease. On the night before his death he told F. Prentice, a Red Cross chaplain, that he wanted his $10,000 insurance to divert to his estate and that he had made a will directing that his uncle, John Salem, of this city, be his sole heir. Chaplain Prentice has communicated this information to the home service branch of the Red Cross here, and an effort is being made to locate the will. On the other hand, Z. Abdallah, of Nashville, N. C., an only brother of the decedent, has written local banks asking that no money from his brother's estate be paid over to anyone.

Abdallah told the chaplain that his uncle had befriended him and given him a home when he needed one, therefore he wanted the uncle to have all his money.

PET ROOSTER IS PILOT ON LONG AUTO TRIP

Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 2.—When R. J. Nagle, his wife and son rolled into a garage last night the proprietor rubbed his eyes, then looked again, for there perched ever so nicely on the front door of the car was a wind bedraggled Rhode Island Red rooster.

No, Mr. Nagle hadn't stolen the bird intending it for a future fry as he and his family wended their way overland. It was a pet rooster, taken along with the family dog, to help out in relieving the monotony of the journey, and also to eke out the family purse. For the fowl is a trained bird.

No other place than the wind swept front door will do for his majesty, the rooster. The bird perches there, ever at a 40-mile gait, and seems to enjoy it, Mr. Nagle said. At night when the family seeks a hotel the bird and dog guard the property. The Nagles started at Los Angeles. They will proceed to Philadelphia and from there to Florida, and then back home to California.

EMINENT SPECIALIST FOR UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

Iowa City, Ia., Aug. 2.—Appointment of Dr. Samuel T. Orton, one of the five leading psychiatrists in the world, to the chief position in the state psychopathic hospital soon to be erected at the University of Iowa is announced from the office of Dean L. W. Dean of the university college of medicine. Dr. Orton will come to Iowa from the University of Pennsylvania hospital in Philadelphia.

Dr. Orton's specialty is in dealing with mental disorders and insanity, and it is in that field that he has distinguished himself. During the next year he will visit the university only periodically to make plans for the new hospital and supervise its construction, but with the completion of the building he will take up permanent residence in Iowa City and devote his full time to the university.

LEGION MEMBERS ARE INVITED TO STATE FAIR

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 2.—A. R. Corey, secretary of the State fair board, has issued an invitation to the Iowa branch of the American Legion to hold its first state wide reunion at the fair grounds during the State fair. Mr. Corey pointed out that many of the former soldiers will be here anyway; that reduced car fares to Des Moines will prevail, and that the legionnaires would be given an opportunity to hear the 168th band.

CHEWED COAL TAR, BOY IS MADE ILL

Rock Valley Lads Found Barrel of the "Gum" and One Fatality Came Near Resulting.

Rock Valley, Ia., Aug. 1.—A number of boys in their ramblings a few days ago found a barrel of coal tar, the kind that is used for roofing purposes. It looked like good chewing gum to them and they tried it. The result was that one of their number, swallowing a considerable quantity of the substance, was rendered violently ill and was thrown into convulsions, from which it was feared for a time he would not recover. The other boys were not seriously affected, it is believed because they did not swallow such large quantities of the juice.

CHURCH GIVES SANCTION TO MARRIAGE OF PAIR

Red Oak, Ia., Aug. 1.—Love won a decision at the hands of a special council of [illegible] members appointed by the Southwestern Association of Baptist Churches to hear evidence in the feud that has been having a serious effect upon the congregation of the Red Oak Baptist church here for several years. [illegible] was a member of the council of 17 [illegible] responsible for the feud [illegible] been going on since the marriage of Miss Bass to Thomas Scott Linn Pass to [illegible] which has [illegible] ago. Miss Bass was married [illegible] a prosperous farmer and elder of the church. The father strenuously opposed the match and caused the resignation of the minister who performed the ceremony. Bass is alleged to have based his objections on the ground that Sedam was a poor young man. Factions developed in the town as a result of the marriage and consequent parental objections.

Yesterday the church council which conducted a trial handed down its decision which is to the effect that the church hand of fellowship is refused to Judd Bass and to George Bass his son. The hearing was behind closed doors. The decision is a vindication for Mr. and Mrs. Sedam whose marriage was the culmination of a romance at Highland Park college, Des Moines.

HIS LEG BROKEN IN MOST PECULIAR MANNER

Boone, Ia., Aug. 1.—Ed Crozer, Northwestern brakeman is in the Eleanor Moore hospital suffering from a broken leg which he sustained in a peculiar manner.

He had complained for several days of a pain in his right leg. His engineer, B. H. Smith of this city told him it was rheumatism. The members of his family also thought the same thing. Yesterday he got down off his engine when it reached the roundhouse and the two men walked together to the office. They separated for a moment.

Just at that instant there seemed to be a report as if a pistol had been discharged and Crozer fell to the floor. The bone in his right leg had snapped.

ASSERTS WATER LEVEL SINKING MUCH LOWER

McGregor, Ia., Aug. 1.—Dr. S. W. Beyer of Ames college amazed the conservation congress here by his statement made during his address, that moisture in the upper valley states originally rose 12 feet nearer the roots of the crops than it does today.

He still more amazed the delegates by declaring that the level is lowering each year.

Lake drainage and other causes contribute to this state of affairs.

FUNERAL OF SWEETHEART INSTEAD OF WEDDING

Shenadoah, Ia., Aug. 1.—Irvin Van Kirk, returned soldier and Miss Loraine Onstott, were to have been wedded Tuesday.

Instead the fiancee attended the funeral service of her soldier lover at the First Presbyterian church, having accompanied the body here from Mt. Vernon, S. D., where Van Kirk was drowned in Fish lake with a soldier companion.

AN IOWA SEAMAN IS DROWNED IN NORTH SEA

Washington, Aug. 1.—Seaman Robert I. Simpson, Iowa Falls, Ia., was drowned when he and another sailor were knocked overboard by a mine which exploded close to the mine sweeper Curley in the North Sea, the navy department was advised today.

DES MOINES—The Iowa highway commission, it is reported, will go on record as favoring the present "50-50" plan of federal road aid distribution, at a meeting next Wednesday at Topeka, Kan., which will be attended by representatives of seven middle western states. The meeting was called by the governor of Kansas for the announced purpose of starting a campaign to induce congress to increase federal aid appropriations. The entire Iowa commission will attend.

DES MOINES—Two weeks of work by one state agent working out of the attorney general's office, netted the state $975 in fines at Charles City, according to reports received by Mr. Havner. The haul was of gamblers, bootleggers and punch board proprietors. Two men were fined $300 cash; two $100 each; two $50 each, and three punch board operators were assessed $25 each.

GREENE—The 4 year old daughter of W. F. Merfield fell into a cistern half full of water and was rescued with difficulty. The rotted cover went in with her and kept the child afloat in four feet of water until rescued.

IOWA CITY—President W. A. Jessup, of the University of Iowa, President M. J. Hoffman of Central College, Pella, and J. Van der Zee, political scientists at the state university, compose the committee for the selection of the two Iowa men who will be sent to Oxford University this autumn, according to word received here today from the American secretary to the Rhodes trustees.

YETTER—Last November G. F. Johnson bought a hog from H. A. Berger, paying $60 for her. This week he marketed her at Yetter, where she tipped the scales at 725 pounds and brought him the neat sum of $132.43.

What a Cent Would Do.

From the New York World.

An increase in railroad freight rates is so generally accepted by dealers as an excuse for increasing the price of commodities subject to the higher rates that some remarks on this text by Chairman Julius Kruttschnitt, of the Southern Pacific system, deserve attention. Pointing out in the annual report of the popular impression of this relation of higher rates to living costs is "greatly exaggerated," Mr. Kruttschnitt says:

> No coin is small enough to represent any of these increases in cost, but if the dealer should add one copper cent in each case to the 1918 prices to reimburse him for the increased cost of his commodity due to increased freight rates he would grossly overcharge the purchaser in every case. He would make him pay nearly double the proper amount in the case of a pair of shoes and over six times the proper amount in the case of a pound of ham or bacon."

The statement makes an interesting contribution to the education of consumers are nowadays receiving in the matter of profiteering. Certain railroad and other corporations have sins enough to answer for on this score. But when the account is finally balanced the plain everyday American will discover that he is the victim less of oppression higher up than of extortion lower down and on his own level.

The Joys of a Puddle.

From the London Times.

The world began with a puddle. People think it rude to say so. That is why schoolmasters talk about the "nebular hypothesis" and the "antediluvian epoch" and such things. They do it, too, because fathers and mothers like it. One of them said:

> Addidit et fontes et stagna immensa lacusque
> Fluminaque obliquis cinxit declivia ripis . . .

That means puddle. The world would have been a puddle since only for the devil, who must have been the first schoolmaster. It was he who put ideas into the heads of Adam and Eve (especially Eve) when they were just a little boy and a little girl paddling in a puddle with all their clothes off. The schoolmaster told them stories about knowledge, and Eve thought that knowledge must be nicer than a puddle, though a puddle was very nice indeed. He also told her that apples could be eaten, whereas mud pies could not. Adam advised her to keep the puddle that they were in. But she would not listen to the schoolmaster—who wore yellow hose cross gartered, because he called it nasty names, such as the nebular hypothesis, Malvolio—like. Therefore for thousands of years girls and boys have made a mistake about knowledge instead of playing in a puddle. They are made to muddle [illegible] when they play in puddles, and they are fretful. Now they are smacked [illegible] they fill their heads with lessons and are tormented by nightmares when [illegible] hard on poor children? But that is why their tummies with apples. Isn't [illegible] Great Curse. As if knowledge could [illegible] happy? A puddle can. Fathers are full of knowledge, and that is why they are always too tired to play at pick-a-back.

But God is sometimes kind to children. He knows that they were made for puddles and that they love puddles, and that they themselves are often little human puddles. When they have been good for a long time He sends rain to make puddles, or, if He can't spare any more rain, he sends the fat waterman with a big iron key to open a hole in the street, so that water spurts out—real water without soapsuds and blue in it.

MAKING FARM S HEALTHFUL.

The New York Medical Journal tells us that Varro, "the most learned of the Romans," wrote the following about 100 years before the birth of Christ: "The farm which is the healthiest is the most valuable, for there the profit is certain. On the other hand, on an unhealthy farm however fertile it may be, misfortune dogs the step of the farmer. For where the struggle is against death, there not only is the profit uncertain but one's very existence is constantly at risk, and so agriculture becomes a gamble in which the farmer hazards both his life and his fortune. If the farm is unhealthy by reason of the plight of the land itself or of the water supply or is exposed to the miasma which breeds in certain localities of it, the farm is too hot on account of the climate or is exposed to mischievous winds, these discomforts can be mitigated by one who knows what to do and is willing to spend some money."

Were Varro living today he could make the last statement stronger still. The three great sources of disability among farmers are typhoid fever, malaria, and hookworm. By typhoid vaccination, warming the milk and treating the water typhoid can be eliminated. Many farmers have succeeded in ending the malaria caused disability.

Hookworm is not difficult to control. The soldiers from the farms in the hookworm districts were found to be infested in a large proportion of cases. It was soon found that hookworm subjects were not good soldiers. They were not strong enough and they do not have enough pep. But take those same men after a few rounds of hookworm medicine and you have a different proposition. They can do as much work in a day as anybody and they were right up on their toes all the time.

Along came an epidemic of measles. The number of hookworm boys getting the measles was three times the expected rate. Of those who got the measles an undue percentage died or had serious complications. Looking over the sick reports it was found that the hookworm boys were laid up for [illegible] illnesses out of proportion to the rate among other boys. The government got busy and cured the boys of hookworm as promptly as possible because they found that they lost money on them otherwise.

If the government could not afford to let its workmen remain infected with hookworm neither can the farmers.

By the salt brine method of examination almost any physician or nurse can examine for hookworm. Every crossroads town now has one or my physicians capable of finding hookworm by using the salt brine method.

The treatment is simple enough. A purge of hunger, a dose of salts, and a few doses of chenopodium, followed by another dose of salts. This course of worm medicine to be replaced a few times as the trouble is over provided a little [illegible] can be taken to prevent a new infection from occurring.

The Bank of England.

In these days when the mere speaking of the term "money power" is reasonably sure to arouse antipathy in certain quarters, there is something significant in Herbert N. Casson's statement about the Bank of England, printed the other evening in the Boston News Bureau. "The Bank of England," said Mr. Casson, writing from London, "is a money power that has no enemies. It has never been attacked by agitators, either violently or verbally. Even the socialists are proud of it. It disarms criticism by regarding itself as a trustee of the public good. It refuses to be a profiteer. Recently, for instance, it announced that all its excess profits had been handed over to the government." Very likely a similar attitude on the part of other forms of money power than this bank would have a similar effect of eliminating its enemies, if not of making even the socialists proud of it.

Seasonable Song.

I like to talk of Christmas time, along in mid-July; I like to speak of cold and rime, snow falling from the sky; I like to tell of Santa Claus, the dearest fake that ever was, the most alluring guy. I seem to see the crowded stores, where eager shoppers swarm, and though outside a tempest roars, in there it's bright and warm; and I behold the weary clerks who curse old Santa and his works and clamor for reform. And I forget the summer heat, the weather that's a crime, while dreaming of the crowded street at merry Christmas time; I see the wreaths of evergreen, with holly berries strewn between, and hear the glad bells chime. The stormy clouds by winds are rolled across the wintry sky; and tingling shoppers curse the cold and wish it were July; "Ah, me," they sigh, "how fine 'twould be to sit beneath a steaming tree, and simmer, bake and fry!" I see the children with their sleds upon the gleaming snow; and soon, to divers little beds in ecstacy they'll go, to dream of Kringle and his pack, of reindeer on their shining track, fine presents to bestow. And dreaming thus of Christmas day, the anguish is me dieg; if dreams will drive one's grief away, I hold that dreams are wise; and I look blandly at the sun, and smile a few, and take a gun, and shoot a dozen flies.

Planes Can Land at Night.

From the Washington Star.

Though the inventive genius of Earl C. Hanson, Los Angeles, the navy department has worked out a [illegible] signal for aviators which will enable them to land with safety in a dense fog or in the dark. Eventually all the flying fields of the country will probably be equipped with this apparatus. Hanson is only [illegible] but he already has an established reputation among electrical engineers in this country and abroad. The system of [illegible] transmission which he has in large measure perfected has played a conspicuous part in the war, and is now being applied to the uses of peace. It will be of great advantage to navigators finding their way through fog into port, as well as to navigators in the air.

Labor College a Success.

From the Argonaut.

The college started in Boston by the central labor union opened its doors with more than 150 enrolled students. The purpose of the college is to provide higher education for the workers. The students include both sexes and all ages. In one instance a father and daughter sat together. Among the first lessons are How to Write English, Shop Committees and Collective Bargaining, Masterpieces of Literature and The Distribution of Wealth.

The Dryest State.

From the New York Sun.

Speaking of dryness, it is well to record here of some peculiar facts about the dryness of the state of Nevada. It has the smallest amount of available surface water of any state in the union. Almost every drop available for irrigation purposes has been pre-empted for that purpose, and the waters of her few streams, when diverted into irrigation ditches, do not "empty" anywhere; they just sink out of sight, as if tired out with running. It has the lowest precipitation of moisture of any state—not enough even for dry farming; every acre of her land known to be suitable for farming is already occupied for that purpose. Yet Nevada has [illegible] 600 acres in her valleys "that would be subject to cultivation if water could be obtained." So the Senate has passed a bill to give to any citizens of the United States 2,500 acres of these lands if he drills for and finds water to irrigate it. Oddly enough, what gave the most trouble in working the famous boomers of Nevada was—water.

A pair of tits have built their nest in the lower standard of a gas lamp in the main street at Ashford, England; and now have a brood of young. The [illegible] birds are apparently oblivious to the traffic and to visits of the man who lights and extinguishes the lamp every day.

Process of Milking.

I do not know that the process of milking has ever been described. The forefinger first closes the upper part of the teat, and then the middle, third and little fingers, in rapid succession, so as to drive the milk before them through the orifice. The knack is rather difficult to acquire, and at first very wearying to the hands, though this soon passes.—From "A Farmer's Note Book," by C. R. D. Phelps.

of my stocking," announced Mary through the interpreter.

"How do you know he took it?" asked Mr. Hogan, the assistant district attorney.

"Somebody told me that he said he did," declared Mary.

"Are you sure he took it?"

"Some fellows saw him count it," parried Mary.

"In what denominations was the money?"

"In two rolls; one had eight $1 bills and the other two $10s."

Witnesses were called. They testified that they had seen Feodor pick up the money from the floor. He then counted the $8 roll and showed it to the assemblage. This he returned to Mary later. Mary admitted it. She even admitted that she might have lost the money from the stocking.

Judge Simms became worried.

"But I can't see," he said, "how the money got out of the stocking. The mystery is too deep for me. However, there can be no charge of larceny from the person, since the defendant picked up the money from the floor."

Feodor then proved to the satisfaction of the court that he had not rifled Mary's stocking, but that whatever money he had he had found on the floor. And since there was no evidence concerning the missing $20, Feodor was allowed to go.

ALARM CLOCK SAVES SIX LIVES

Ringing Awakens Philadelphia Man, Who Opens Window in the Nick of Time.

Philadelphia.—Six were saved from asphyxiation here by the ringing of an alarm clock.

Fumes from a leaking gas pipe had almost filled the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Reese, 610 Broad street, Lansdale, while the family were asleep, when the alarm clock began ringing.

It awakened Howard and William, sons, employed at a near-by foundry. As they rose both fell to the floor, unconscious. Mr. Reese heard the fall, and though almost overcome, he crawled into their room and saved their lives by opening the windows.

Mrs. Reese, though ill, could move about. The daughters, Hattie and Margaret, were unconscious. They and the sons were later revived.

Virtually all members of the family are suffering from the effects of inhaling the gas.

Lock of Hair in Letter Brings Suit

London.—At Neath Elizabeth Thomas, Cecil street, Neath, applied for a variation of a maintenance order granted against her husband, Philip Thomas, collier, Ynyscedwyn House, Cadoxton, Neath. A. J. Jeffrey appeared for the woman and Windsor Williams for defendant. There was also a summons by the husband for the discharge of the separation order. In cross-examination complainant denied being friendly with any man. In reply to Mr. Jeffrey, she said she first commenced proceedings against her husband because she discovered in his pocket a love letter from a woman named Gertie. She inclosed a lock of hair and asked him to look lovingly at it night and morning. The bench dismissed both summonses.

Julia had just whirled out when the telephone rang again. Harley's sister Lou wanted Nell's new recipe for eggless cake, and after hearing it she contributed her share to the morning's budget

"Whose car were you out in last night at Pinetree Heights? After you had whizzed by, breaking every speed law ever made, I realized that one of the men was Harley. It was so near dark I couldn't recognize anyone else, but I suppose you were along. You certainly had a reckless person at the wheel."

"I—I'll tell you all about it later, Lou. I—I think there's something burning on the stove. Good-by."

She hung up the receiver. Out at Pinetree Heights last night, and he had told her it was a business engagement that had kept him until 7:30. He had been unusually high-spirited during the evening, and then alternately absorbed in thought.

What could it mean? Miserably she went about her work. She thought incessantly of that arch-charmer, Sue B——, and the mysterious note, and though she felt a wholesome distaste in doing so, still she kept wondering whether Sue B—— and the note did or did not belong together.

"No, I won't look at it," she assured herself. "I said I wouldn't, and I won't—I won't."

But before she had finished speaking her hand reached straight to the drawer, opened it and drew out the paper.

"All the rest of the day," she choked, "I've got to live with this awful note."

Springing up, she crumpled it in her hand.

"I know what I'll do. I'll burn up the horrid thing. Harley shan't have it—nobody shall have it, and if it's burned up I can't read it."

Lighting a match, she knelt before the grate. She had just thrown down the flaming scrap when the front door banged and her husband entered the room, going straight to the desk in the corner.

"Building a fire, Nell? Say, where's that paper I 'phoned about?" His voice was edged with excitement. "That's important."

"Yes, of course—very important—to you. Oh, I know all about it."

"What'd you look at it for? By George, you said you wouldn't. I like that!"

"I didn't look at it!" she flamed. "I had some degree of honor, but I've burned the horrible thing, and I didn't have to read it to find out a few things—joy riding way out to Pinetree Heights last night, for instance—and"

"What!" broke in Harley. "You burned that paper—you silly—and little you know what I was out to Pinetree Heights for. That peachy little bungalow out there, you know, Nell, that we are both crazy about. I've rented it, with a chance to buy it later, perhaps. We can have a garden and chickens and help out on our bit. I was out there again this afternoon, looking the place over, and have come back now to take you there. And, listen here. I've just bought another Liberty bond, my biggest yet, for you this time, and the 'horrible thing' you just saw fit to burn up was the receipt for the first payment. I was going to give you a pleasant little bunch of surprises, and that was why I told you not to look at it."

"Oh, Harley, how awful!" she wailed. "You can't ever forgive me." There was such distress in her face that Harley's annoyance vanished.

"There now, partner, don't you care," he soothed. "Nothing's really lost; the bank's got the record, but see here, Nell, don't ever go up in the air over shadows again. I shan't ever play any game without you for a partner."

Owners of the above described lands, comprising Joint Drainage District Nos. 70-147 of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa, and to all actual occupants, and to all persons having or claiming any right, title or interest in and to the above described lands:

You and each of you are hereby notified that the Commissioners appointed, by the Board of Supervisors of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa, to inspect and classify the lands benefitted by the location of Hancock and Wright Joint Drainage District Nos. 70-147 of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa, in tracts of forty acres or less, in a graduated scale of benefits, to be numbered according to the benefits to be received by the proposed improvement and to make an equitable apportionment of the costs, expenses, costs of construction, fees and damages assessed for the construction of said improvement, did on the 21 day of July, 1919, make their report to the Board of Supervisors of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa.

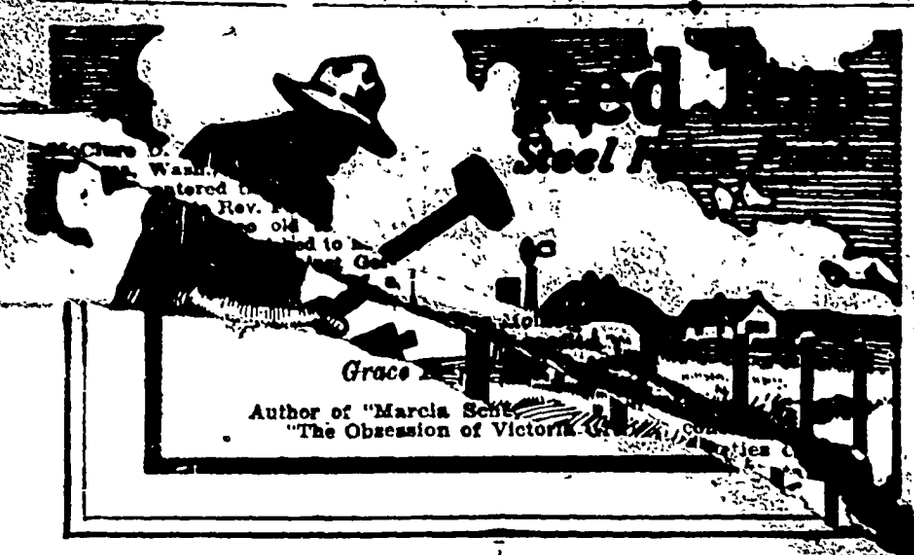
That the real estate owned or occupied by you, and situated within Joint Drainage District Nos. 70-147 of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa, a description of which is set opposite the name of the owner thereof in the foregoing schedule, has been classified by said commissioners as appears by the class number set opposite the description of the respective tracts of land in the foregoing schedule, that the amount of special assessment apportioned to you and each of you by said commissioners is hereby set opposite the description of each tract of land on which said assessment is made.

That said report will come up for hearing before the Board of Supervisors of Hancock and Wright Counties, Iowa, at Garner, Iowa, at 10 o'clock A. M. on the 2 day of Sept. 1919, at the Court House; that all obsctions to said report must be made in writing and filed with the County Auditors of Hancock and Wright Counties prior to the day of hearing. All objections not filed prior to the day of hearing should be filed before noon on the day of the hearing with the Boards of Supervisors at the place where the hearing is to be held.

Dated this 23 day of July A. D. 1919.

Chris Jacobs,
SEAL County Auditor of Hancock County, Ia.

D. H. Ryken,
SEAL County Auditor of Wright County, Ia.



On the morning that she mailed it Scathlin happened to be in the village

Holt had gone away very early in the morning, on a matter of business, leaving word that he might not return until the next day, and Scathlin felt like a prisoner let out of jail. It was his first opportunity to go about without Holt's eyes upon him. True, he was under oath to do and not to do certain things, with penalty of a judgment which he knew would not be light. Yet his natural cunning found many ways to carry on his schemes without violating the letter of his contract with Holt. He knew that Holt had brought him there as a witness against his enemies in the case of the stolen papers—he knew this, though Holt had said no word of it to him—and he knew that Holt would watch him closely—that he probably had him under espionage even during this brief absence; yet he longed to outwit his keeper nad get the better of him If it only had not been for the loss of that water contract his way would have been plain. He had already managed an interview with Harrington and learned the facts without revealing all the facts in his own possession. He professed to Harrington that all the original papers were in the wallet when he gave it to the girl, and that it had been his only hope of saving them from Holt. That Holt had managed to save the girl and bring her home only proved that he was as hard to get away from as the devil himself This explanation Scathlin devised while he listened to Harrington's story, secretly realizing, with bitterness, his own blunder in leaving the water contract in the wallet. His excuse was that he had no time to take out another paper and secrete it safely before Holt saw him.

Night and day Scathlin worried over that water contract, coming always back to the conclusion that Holt must have it or know where it was; and he had searched every available hiding place in Holt's house for it, but failed as yet to discover it. When they met Jean riding, the old man had noted carefully the expression on his companion's face as he touched his hat to her, and the lighting up of the girl's face His keen little eyes searched, and found an idea.

Therefore, that first morning of his freedom from Holt, when he sat on the curbstone withone of the men from the Divide, talking over the latest cattle stealing, his eye took in with keen interest the figure of Jean coming down the street accompanied by her little niece, a bundle of letters in her hand to be mailed. He watched her furtively as she passed him, though she did not se him, and as soon as she was inside the postoffice door he got up hurriedly and followed her, professing that he had an errand.

He watched her slipping her letters one by one into the post box, and kept his eye upon her as she turned and went out again.

He made a small purchase at the counter on the other side of the post office room, and went out, but an hour later when he returned that way, the postmaster leaned from his window and called him. "Hey, there, Scathlin, goin' up home? Here's a letter for Holt"

Scathlin, wary as an fox, concealed the start he almost gave, and turned with indifference.

"'Spose I might's well take it," he said, and receiving the letter, went on his way toward home.

The way was long and bright and hot and Scathlin was not feeling up to a hard walk yet after his weeks in bed, but he managed it in an incredibly short space of time, and as he walked he studied that letter.

It was dainty and white, the writing unmistakably feminine, and mailed in Hawk Valley. Scathlin's imagination stirred within him, and he was almost sure he needed to know what was in that letter. He held it up to the light but nothing was revealed. He tried to pry open a corner of the flap that was not closely sealed, and squinted in, but no a glimpse of writing was visible. He went home, laid it on the desk in Holt's office and sat down to watch it and think. Then just before the return for dinner of the other two men who were about the place he quietly put it in his pocket. He preferred to think about that letter awhile longer before any one else saw it. When they came in Scathlin had the fire going and a fine stew mascending from the tea-kettle, an unusual attention on his part toward other members of his group, unless he was pressed to service.

But Scathlin had exhausted his capacity for work with putting on the teakettle, for he sat dreamily meditating in a chair tilted back against the wall, his feet on the rounds, a straw in his mouth, and his eyes narrow and gleaming.

"Dear friend: I have something that I am sure belongs to you. Is it safe for me to send it to you through the mail? I think it must be valuable. Please let me know quickly for I am going home in a few days."

Those were the magic words the steam had revealed to Scathlin, and on which he meditated with his eyes half closed while his companions scornfully cooked the corn bread and bacon and cursed him for a lazy good for nothing. He continued his meditations unmoved until the men had eaten and were gone on their way. When they were out of sight he arose with alacrity and prepared a hasty meal, keeping his eye on the clock. He ate hurriedly, cleaned and loaded a pistol which he took from a hiding place behind a loose brick of the chimney, and went out the back door toward the woods.

About the same time Jean Grayson mounted the pony that had been set aside for her use while in Hawk Valley, and started out for her daily call on an old lady who had taken a great fancy to her, because of her likeness to a daughter long since dead. She was fond of the sweet old lady, and found her quiet little home a refuge from the round of society that sometimes became almost oppressive at her sister's house. She had discovered that she could avoid certain annoyingly. frequently callers by being thus absent a little while, and especially during the last two weeks she had made this pleasant pilgrimage almost every day. Perhaps a part of the pleasantness of the trip was in the fact that the road lay back of Holt's land, and his house, though almost a mile from where she had to pass, was plainly to be seen at one high point on the road, as it stood boldly against the sky, its wide verandas shrouded in rose vines.

Jean never ventured on the road that led past the house itself, for it was off the general highway; but she had often longed to see the spot where he lived at closer range.

As she rode along she mused about the letter she had written and whether that had been the right way and the only way to do about getting the paper into the hands of its owner.

She had once heard a great speaker say that there was never a situation where there was not a right thing to do next. She felt sure she had done the right thing so far as her light showed her; and yet she could not lay it aside and be at peace, but was in a tremor of excitement awaiting Holt's reply.

As she reached the high point in the road she looked as usual off toward the rose vined dwelling, half hoping to see a sign of the master of the house; but the vines lay shimmering in the sun of warm mid-day, and nothing seemed stirring about the place. She walked the pony slowly along until the house was out of sight, and the road entered the shady quiet where wooded land on either side hid the glare of the afternoon. Just beyond the woods a few rods away was the home of the old lady. It was early yet and Jean lingered, the pony nothing loath to follow her will.

They had gone perhaps fifty feet into the shadow of the wooded road when suddenly, out from behind a great tree with stocky, brushwood growth around it, slunk forth Scathlin, close to the pony, and laid hands upon his bridle.

"I beg pardon, Miss, but Mr. Holt sent me on a message," lied Scathlin, shifting his eyes hastily from the clear ones that looked in horror upon him.

Jean's heart was beating wildly, not reassured by his words.

"He said would you please give me the paper you had for him. It would be safer for me to get it, as no one would suspect."

A great doubt seized Jean's soul, Holt had not sent this bad old man. Holt could never trust such a man as this. But if he did trust him, she did not.

"Did Mr. Holt send me a letter?" Jean looked keenly into the old cunning face.

Mr. Holt had to go away in a hurry and so he sent me," said Scathlin glibly. "He didn't have no time to write letters. He sid you knowed me; that you'd seen me with him, an' you'd know 'twas all right."

"Tell Mr. Holt, please," said Jean, making up her mind hurriedly, "that there is nothing, and no message I can give to anyone. I wish to speak with him. If that is not possible we will have to let the matter pass."

She drew the rein and signed to her horse to go on, but Scathlin jerked the bridly sharply:

"Not much, you don't go on," he threatened, "not till I get that paper. I was sent here to get it and I mean to have it. You can't come any of your pretty little tricks on me. I want that paper and I mean to have it. If I can't get it one way I kin another!" His voice and eyes were ominous, and Jean was so frightened that her throat trembled and she could scarcely control her lips to speak.

"Of what paper are you speaking?"

"That there paper you wrote about in the letter. You know well enough what I mean. You've got it about you now. I know you dassent go off and leave it to home, where that fine brotherinlaw of yours could find it.

Raymond White, of Forest City, was a business caller in Klemme Monday and while here stepped into the editorial rooms for a short visit. Ray tells us that he has secured a position with the J. She felt she was sink[illegible] the world of knowledge into a blackness where she could not protect herself.

Then quickly, sharply, a voice brought her back to consciousness.

"Drop that pistol! Let go of that lady! Now, march!"

It was Holt's voice, low, merciless, commanding; and a revolver was in his hand.

Scathlin fell away like water, turning deadly white and cringing. The day of his judgment had come swiftly, and there was no escape. He knew that look in Holt's eye. He had sinned away his last probation. Holt would never trust him again. There was not even time to destroy the letter which he had want to keep and give to Harrington as evidence against the girl.

"March!" said Holt's voice again and the revolver came uncomfortably near to Scathlin's temple.

Scathlin marched.

"Go straight to the house and wait there till I come," commanded Holt as Scathlin backed weakly away. "If you attempt to escape I'll turn the bloodhounds loose after you."

Scathlin turned a shade paler He had no desire to meet the whole pack He hastened his footsteps.

Jean sat with wild eyes watching, her hand upon her heart.

"You didn't send him for the paper did you?" she demanded eagerly I knew you would never have sent him"

"Send for the paper, what paper" asked Holt in wonder. "I never sent him for anything"

"Then how did he know what was in my letter to you?"

"Letter? What letter? I never received a letter from you."

"Then he must have opened it and read it. Oh, he will show it to my brother!"

But Holt's voice rang out clearly before her sentence was fairly finished:

"Hiat! Scathlin!"

Scathlin had almost reached the turning at the edge of the woods, but he paused instantly

"Come back here."

Scathlin came, cringing and white with fear. When he was within ten yards of the two Holt spoke again, and all the time the sinister weapon kept guard in his hand aimed straight at Scathlin.

"Give me my letter."

"W-what l-let-t-er?" chattered Scathlin with ill concealed attempt to use his cunning.

"The letter yo uhave in your pocket. Take it out instantly and drop it on the ground or I shall fire," said Holt sternly.

"Well, put down that gun" whimpered Scathlin, fumbling nervously in his inside pocket, "you make me n-n-nervous!"

"Be quick! Drop that letter!" said Holt, still holding the revolver

Scathlin took out the letter and dropped it on the ground. but his bad little eyes gleamed green and yellow hate at the girl in one look of wrath as he turned and stumbled back again.

Holt, still holding the revolver and watching the retreating man, advanced and picked up the letter. When Scathlin was out of sight he read it, then turned with softened eyes to the girl who had meantime secured the paper from its hiding place pinned within her blouse. She held it out him., her hand still trembling with the fright she had been through.

Holt took the paper. but gathered the little hand into his tenderly and stooping, kissed it.

"To think you have been through all this for me." There was awe in his voice. "To think you trusted me instead of your own people!"

For an instant they looked into each other's eyes; then Holt's horse, trained to stand and await his master's will, whinnied softly.

"We must not stand here," said Holt, looking up sharply, "some one might come. I will take you on to Mrs. Foster's, and then go back and see that Scathlin is where he can do no further harm. How long will you wish to be there? Can you stay an hour and then ride back? I will be waiting just in the shadow of the woods and see you to the edge of town where you will be safe. Please don't ride out of town alone again."

"But I shall not be afraid to go back," protested Jean. "You need not take all that trouble. Now that you have the paper I shall not be Coming back, they went by way of Minneapolis and drove the rest of the way to Klemme in seven and a half hours. We say that is making good time.

Process of Milking.

I do not know that the process of milking has ever been described. The forefinger first clasps the upper part of the teat, and then the middle, ring and little fingers, in rapid succession, so as to drive the milk before them through the orifice. The knack is rather difficult to acquire, and at first is very wearying to the hands, though this soon passes.—From "A Farmer's Handbook," by C. E. D. Phelps.

"I'm not sure. When I came back to my room, after giving my brother the wallet, I found this on my floor. It may have fallen when I dumped the things out of my bag. The wallet fell apart and all the papers went out on the table, but I thought I picked up every one. The when I came back to my room I found this on the floor just as I was about to turn out the light. Later I overheard a conversation in which this paper and another were described as missing. The other was somethir[illegible] to do with a mine——"

"Yes, I have it," said Holt.

"You have it? Oh, I a mso glad! Then they can't trouble your claim, can they? I suppose that was what they meant, I'm not very much of a business person. But how did you get it? They said it was in the wallet."

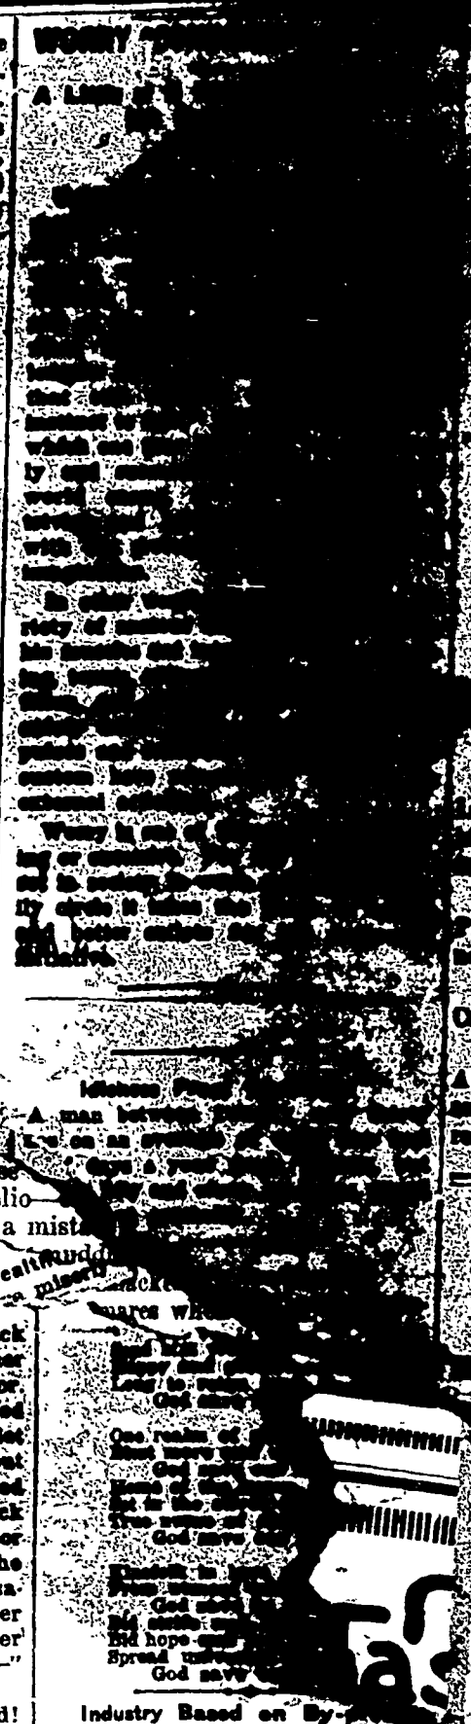
"It was," said Holt, "till Scathlin took it out. I think he intended taking this, also, and leaving with you only the other papers which were utterly valu[illegible]thout these two; but he had to w[illegible]ickly while I was at the other [illegible]e car and he blundered [illegible]t of Scathlin's shoe, just after [illegible]ident occurred, and before I left [illegible]ar we were in. We had a struggle in the dark, but I secured my paper before he flung me off and crawled out of the window. After that, I lost sight of him. I was hunting for him in the water when I found you. I didn't know who you were till I drew you up on the bank. But I never dreamed you had this paper. I thought, of course, it was still with Scathlin. That is why I was away so long, hunting him I didn't know once but I'd lost him completely, but I finally got on his track. I was sure he knew where this paper was and I didn't dare to lose him. I brought him home to watch him; and I've kept him in sight all day today. He thought I was away from home for two days, but I've been in hiding. I had him watched when he went to town and I knew he came home. If he had had this paper he would have gone straight to your brother. A field glass and a whistle will do a good deal to keep track of a man. When he stole out of the house toward the woods I knew something was happening and signalled my men They are waiting now. They'll look after Scathlin till I get back"

He raised a tiny whistle to his lips and blew a long, silvery blast, followed by two more, and in a moment there came back two answers from slightly different directions.

They were come now to the open road, and Holt drew his horse to one side Mrs Foster's home was but a stone's throw away and she was sitting on the porch in her reclining chair

"I will be here when you are ready to go home," said Holt, looking at her tenderly; then, touching his hat, he wheeled his horse and was out of sight in a twinkling.

The next hour was always a blur in the memory of Jean. Somehow she drew her senses together and dismounted at her friend's door, going through the formalities of meeting, and adjusting herself to the occasion; but not for an instant did her subconsciousness cease to rehearse the events just passed. Her whole body quivered again with the fear that swept over her at sight of Scathlin; she shrang once more from his touch as the full realization of her escape was made known to her; and the look and voice of Holt thrilled her as nothing had every done in her life. How could they say he was not good when he was like that? She had seen the soul of him looking out of his wonderful eyes and she knew. But how had it come about that others had not seen, also? Oh, if they knew once if they could just get a real glimpse of the true man, they would never again feel as they did about him.



Industry Based on By-Product.

From the Shoe and Leather Reporter.

It is well understood in the leather industries that hides are a by-product, and do not follow the ordinary operation of the law of supply and demand. Cattle are not raised or slaughtered for their hides, which result incidentally in quantities determined by the sales of beef. It happens to be a fact beyond the control of the tanners and shoe manufacturers that during many years past the per capita consumption of beef has decreased while the per capita consumption of leather has increased. There are many foods other than beef, but until comparatively recently there was no alternative for leather. Here we have a peculiar commodity the raw material for making which does not respond with larger supplies under greater demand. The United States government publishes a census of live stock as of January 1 each year. These statistics show that years ago population and the cattle supply were on almost equal terms. There was nearly one animal for each inhabitant of the country, but later there was not much better than half a beef for each person.

Trade Channels Shifting.

From the New York Sun.

The opening of an express train service from Paris to Bucharest, via Milan, Trieste and Jugo-Slavia, is an indication not only that the European channels of commerce are at last being opened, but of the new directions these channels will take. Had Germany won the war, the great transcontinental line would have run from Constantinople to Hamburg. But how it is toward Paris and the channel, not toward Germany, that the commerce of eastern Europe is to flow.

The new express passes over a number of different roads, not all of them yet in perfect working condition, but it is a great step forward to be able to leave Paris on Monday evening and arrive in Bucharest on Thursday afternoon. Although for the present passenger service only has been started, it is impossible to exaggerate the importance of the opening of this route. Its immediate effect is to give to the people of Jugo-Slavia, Rumania and Greece a sense of nearness to their great western allies, a feeling that immediate support, political and conomic, is at hand.

But there is a deeper and more lasting significance. The express has blazed the way for what is to become one of the world's most important routes. The eastern countries are anxious to find for their wares, so long shut off from overland passage to Italy and France by the interposing bulk of Germany and Austria-Hungary, a new and lucrative market. Soon France will be receiving from them large quantities of lumber, meat, corn, grain and petroleum in return for the products of the workshops of Paris, Lyons and Bordeaux.

In short, the opening of this new line inaugurates an epoch in the political and economic history of Europe. It marks the diverting of the currents of trade and thought, which so long flowed toward Berlin and Vienna, to Paris, London and Rome; it is a material manifestation of what undoubtedly is to be one of the most important of the war's results, the permanent supremacy of western ideas and influence in the east.

Replace Lost Bonds.

From the New York Times.

The sailors and officers who lost more than $100,000 worth of Liberty bonds when the cruiser San Diego was sunk after striking a mine off Fire Island, July 19 last year, will have their losses made good by the issuance of duplicate bonds, according to State Senator Martin Saxe, who acted for the gallant men presenting their claim.

Probably All It Is Worth.

From the New York Times.

That the French government should have bought out its own railways at a cost for the vast amount of property in France is startling to the United States seems at first thought another illustration of what has so often been asserted in regard to French peculiarities when conducting financial transactions with foreign nations. The offer does not seem usurious, however, when it is remembered that it is a greater part of this property, including railways and much rolling stock and the expensive terminal facilities provided at the ports used by American ships, were created in the pure days of Wilkes, not to the days of gold.

THE USE OF DRUGS.

Drug addiction in the cities is on the increase in spite of the Harrison law to that there is a general agreement far as the rural districts are concerned nobody need be disturbed. The question is, what do the people of the cities propose to do about it? New York and Cleveland seem to be interested in the question. Other cities are still indifferent.

Major McPherson and Captain Cohen made a close study of the drug addicts in a New England military camp through which 53,000 soldiers passed. Several per cent of all the men throughout as a result of physical examination in that camp, were rejected on account of drug addiction. They found [illegible] this number being 0.3 per cent of the drafted men.

They found that the drug addicts were about on a par with [illegible] some examined. They found [illegible] that drugs seriously [illegible] the moral fabric, at least within the [illegible] or that men become [illegible] because of being [illegible] and find them below par [illegible] judgment and perseverance [illegible] habits.

Ten per cent were foreign born. 90 per cent native born. The use of drugs is more prevalent among natives in proportion to numbers. Negroes were not found to be unduly addicted to drugs. Most reports have shown that [illegible] less drugs than the white.

Ten per cent of those [illegible] started the habit from [illegible] from physicians. Eighty [illegible] they were taught [illegible] report says: "The secret [illegible] large majority of cases [illegible] active agent in [illegible]

The fear of death is so constant a companion of the black people that they have come to consider their native witch doctor a more important than the ruling foreign government or the chief of their own tribe. But once the white man sets foot on the fever trail the witch doctor might just as well throw away his crazy medicine. In his heart he knows he is a humbug. Gore and Borah Again.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

Senator Gore has joined the ranks of those who declare they will insist on "reservations" in the League of Nations covenant. Senator Gore is from Oklahoma. Further, he is the man who in March, 1916, introduced a resolution declaring among other things, that

"Whereas the RIGHT of American citizens to travel upon armed belligerent vessels rather than upon unarmed vessels is essential neither to their life, liberty or safety, nor to the independence, dignity or security of the United States. * * * Resolved That it is the sense of congress that all persons owing allegiance to the United States should in behalf of their own safety and the vital interest of the United States forbear to exercise the RIGHT to travel as passengers upon any armed vessel of any belligerent power."

The idea Senator Gore had then was that the right of American citizens to use the high seas should be denied them. Germany was torpedoing vessels in defiance of every principle of law and honor. To protect our citizens meant that we must interfere with Germany's game.

That was the Gore resolution, and of the senators who to their lasting discredit voted with Senator Gore against tabling it, Borah was one. Is it strange that Gore and Borah should have the same standard?

Dakar Awaits Destiny.

From the Nation's Business.

The insignificant port of Dakar is on Cape Verde in Senegal, West Africa. Dakar is comparatively unimportant. Its contiguous area, generally speaking is neither highly developed nor colonized, yet in spite of itself Dakar may become of colossal importance as a world shipping center.

The town of Dakar is the closest port to the western hemisphere. It looks out over the narrow waist line of the Atlantic and is only 1,715 miles away from Pernambuco. Europeans are considering linking this West African port to Europe by a through railway and if such a thing comes to pass it will become the great port for export from all Europe to the South American countries.

In the Woods.

I wandered today in the wonderful woods, a forest majestic and grand. Woods solitude, silence, and similar goods are spread with a liberal hand. Afar from the hurry and noise of the town I journey through alleys of pines; I thought 'twould inspire me to sit myself down and write you some soul searching lines. The forest is noble, impressive and sad, as poets have wotted and weened; but I was rejoiced to get back to the grad, and sit in a room that is screened. The forest is full of unusual bugs, which bite in unusual ways, and I am anointing my system with drugs, to soften the swellings they raise. The forest's mosquitoes are larger than hens, they're hungry and active and mean; the spots where they bit me are looking like wens, and I am a sight to be seen. The woods are the homes of malevolent ants, which thrive in the shade of the trees; they crawl up inside of the wanderer's pants, and eat all the flesh from his knees. The town has its faults, it is wild for the cash, it's swarming with odious souled men; but if you would lure me to chase to the brush, I say to you: "Never again!"

If the Ladies Would Insist.

From Commerce and Finance.

[illegible] time is woman's time. Her manner of summer dress [illegible] her well and puts the ungentler sex in the background by contrast. The spectacle of a perspiring man in a hot coat dining [illegible] a woman in cool lawn or organdie does not redound to the everlasting glory of the male. No man can dominate the eye or give [illegible] to the heart with a wilted collar or a damp spot the size of a [illegible] on the back of a Palm Beach coat.

French people believe that their credit is very good. At the beginning of the war [illegible] 000,000 to 6,000,000,000 francs of trade acceptances outstanding.

[illegible] men were mobilized and 2,000,000 more in the next [illegible] fortnight. [illegible] this stopped practically everything, and the only remedy was to put [illegible] general moratorium. Now, of these frozen bills to date only 80,000,000 francs are still unpaid, and it is expected that finally not more than half of that amount will remain unpaid, being practically only the bills drawn on people killed or ruined by the war.

Explains $23,000,000 Gain.

From the Chicago News.

Julius Barnes, president of the grain corporation today explained how the corporation had been able to show a profit for the 22 months' operation ending July 1 of $23,000,000 and declared that this was a very reasonable profit on the actual percentage of business. Criticism of the grain corporation was contained in recently published dispatches from Washington.

"I have no direct advice from any members of congress of any criticism as to [illegible] statement made by the grain corporation except a number of favorable letters that this agency of the government for one at least, was able to conduct its business without loss," the president said.

The corporation used of the funds of the national treasury as capital, substantially $50,000,000 for the first year and $150,000,000 in the last year, and so $10,000,000 of the $23,000,000 reported profit was interest on national capital employed in the business.

"From those two years neutrals not associated with us in war had no scruples in requiring us to pay very high ocean freights for the products which they had to sell—namely, their vessel carriage. We had a sound conception that; this being true, it was proper to conduct our sales to neutrals on a basis of moderate profits. The grain corporation bought and resold, largely overseas, nearly $2,000,000,000 worth of goods, and the net profit in this vast business was ½ of 1 per cent, or $9,000,000, making up the balance of the $23,000,000 reported earned. More than that, the grain corporation was peculiarly fortunate in not having lost a dollar by fire and in exceptional freedom from marine sinkings. This fortunate outcome is a factor, in making the final profit result."

Big Taxpayers of Britain.

From the London Times.

According to an estimate prepared by the board of inland revenue, and issued yesterday as a white paper, there are 148 taxpayers in this country who have incomes of £100,000 and over per year. The taxable income of these is £27,600,000, and they pay in income tax and supertax £13,352,000. The number of persons with incomes of between £130 and not exceeding £2,500 is 5,236,900, of whom 1,940,000 are entirely relieved from tax. The number of those with over £2,500 and not more than £100,000 is 59,100.

The total taxable income is estimated at £1,970,000,000, producing an aggregate income from income tax and supertax of £338, 800,000. Of this sum £100,424,000 comes from taxpayers with incomes of less than £2,500 a year, while £163,393,000 is derived from the larger incomes. Other incomes, which principally consist of moneys held by various companies, bring in at total of £65,484,000. The net produce of the income tax, apart from the supertax, is £236,000,000.

Roads to National Parks.

From the San Francisco Bulletin.

The motoring public has forced recognition from congress of the recreational value of the national forests. Appropriations for the construction and maintenance of roads within the national forests, totaling $19,000,000 of federal road funds, are now available. Of this sum, according to information obtained by the California State Automobile Association from Federal Forest Supervisors R. W. Ayres, approximately $2,300,000 will be spent within a short time in providing additional automobile roads for the tourist and traveler leading to the 19,000,000 acres of national forests in California.

Stopping Capital Riots.

From the Washington Star.

In weighing the factors which contributed to a material decrease in the race rioting which had disgraced Washington for more than 48 hours, this important feature should not be overlooked. The best element of the colored citizens of the district gave unstinted support to the admonitions of the authorities that the streets be kept clear after nightfall. By the spoken word, by printed circular, by force of example they urged strict compliance with this advice upon their fellow citizens. And to their efforts, as much as to the sporadic showers, the police authorities give credit for the happy fact that the mobs which, on the three preceding nights, swayed through the colored sections of the city were entirely checked. Distrustful of the orders and advice of the authorities, Washington's colored citizenry heeded the words of their own leaders and the streets were kept clear.

Will Provided Feast.

From the Milwaukee Journal.

Manitowoc, Wis.—A will, filed here by the late Peter Mueller Kiel, made a bequest as follows: "I bequeath the sum of $300 to be paid for a specified dinner on the day of my funeral, given to all persons who shall participate at the funeral, said dinner to be given at Peter Geigel's hall. All friends are invited." It is understood that the provision was not carried out. The will provided for the best of refreshments.

The Incapables.

From the Los Angeles Times.

The soviet government which took possession of the Italian city had more gasoline, wine and olive oil than its temporary needs required and therefore poured the surplus in the gutters. That is one reason why any soviet rule must be brief. It does not see beyond the desires and passions of the day. Given a full belly it can see no need of saving anything for breakfast. No necessity in preparing for the future because there isn't going to be any. The only god is the appetite of the moment. No soviet government could possibly comprehend the beneficence of planting a tree that it might furnish shade for its descendants. Rather it would cut down a tree to start a bonfire of celebration.

But Mr. Newrich Was in Evidence at Dramatic Performance, as He Had Insisted.

Mr. Corpulent Newrich offered to finance the performance of his daughters' dramatic society, and his announcement was received with acclamation.

But when he added the provision that he paid the expenses on condition that he was given a part the joy diminished.

Mr. Newrich was well endowed with wealth, but his vocabulary did not include a single "h."

They argued, but Mr. Newrich stood firm. "No part, no money," was his decision.

At last they hit on a plan. He was to come on in the second scene and just say "Silence!" He could not go far wrong with that. Mr. Newrich was satisfied. He would be in evidence at the performance.

The great day arrived and all went well until the curtain rose on the second scene.

From the wing strode Mr. Newrich. Holding up his hand, he uttered one word: "'Ush!"—London Answers.

AS IT LOOKED TO BROTHER

Sister Was Doing What Pretty Well All of Us Would Like to Do.

A Muncie family is contemplating the remodeling of its house. Several architects have been calling with plans during the last few days—all very successful architects, too. The other day one who "looked especially good" to the younger children arrived. That noon they discussed him at the family table. "Oh, he's rich," ventured one of the youngsters.

"Why?" smiled the elder sister—just twenty.

"Why he looks so prosperous," came back the answer to the amusement of the rest of the family.

That afternoon the architect made a return trip and displayed his plans to the elder sister. The high-school boy arrived while the two of them were on the veranda looking over the plans. After the architect had gone he strolled over to his sister and remarked: "I see you're trying to get close to prosperity yourself."—Indianapolis News.

EXPLAINS THE WEATHER.

From the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

In the winter the heat rays of the sun strike at our part of the earth at the angle at which you stick the pin into the orange when you wish to make it travel through the meat peeling. In winter the rays strike the earth at such an angle that a great deal of the heat is lost in traveling through the air, because they have to come through so much more of the air. Of course, the sun's rays strike some part of the earth straight down through the peeling of the air at all times, and at the equator this occurs all the year around, so it's always summer there, while at the north and south poles the rays always strike the earth at the greatest possible angle, and it is always very cold winter there. In between, when it is neither hot nor cold, we have spring and fall due to the fact that the rays come down at an angle but not so great an angle.

Order.

It is half past eight on the blossomy bush
The petals are spread for a sunning;
The little gold fly is scrubbing his faces,
The spider is nervously running
To fasten a thread, the night going moth
Is folding his velvet perfection,
And presently over the clover will come
The bee on a tour of inspection.

Britain's National Anthem Revised.

On the occasion of the victory celebration in London a new version of "God Save the King" was sung outside St. Paul's.

During the war and subsequently, a desire had been expressed in many quarters for some alteration in the words of the national anthem, with a view of introducing a reference to the empire and the peoples. This, however, has proved a very easy task.

His majesty's approval, two verses were tentatively substituted, and [illegible] with the original first [illegible] the cathedral, the assembly rose.

WHY HAN... IT TO LIBERTY?

Last week some... who thought they were ju... off a... er stunt set up a coup... of large tin s... g at the cross roads west of Klemme lea... ing into Liberty township, wh... read "Welcome to Mud Township."

Now such things as that do not help matters whatever. The voters of Liberty township should not be criticized for the way they voted on the road question. It is the privilege of every American citizen to have his say on the ballot. To do otherwise is just as... have been fighting the Hun ...ecome. This is a free country ... this should be thought of more ... Now let well enough alone and ... ashers on Liberty township for th... they voted, it was their privilege and it's not our, or anybody ...'s business to put up a big tin sign to remind them of the fact that they did not vote just the way you or I might have voted. However, the sign did not stay up long as one of Klemme's business men helped to take it down and we give him credit for it.

OLD GENTLEMAN DIES ALONE ON ROAD

Joseph Formanek, aged 77 years, 4 months and 24 days, was found dead in the road Sunday by neighbors passing along the highway. The old gentleman had been living alone since the death of his wife some five years ago. It is said he had not been feeling well for a few days, but was not bedfast. It is probable he felt worse ... [illegible] ...me of his son ... death ... passing him while on the way.

Joseph Formanek was born in Bohemia March 9, 1842. He came to America in young manhood. He had made his home near Duncan for many years. He is survived by four children, Joe and Frank, who reside near Duncan, Mrs. John Tlach, also residing near Duncan, and Mrs. John Mraz, whose home is in California.

Funeral services were conducted from the Catholic church at Duncan Tuesday and interment was in the Catholic ... metery there.—Britt News Tribune.

NEW MAYOR FOR GOODELL

At the regular meeting of the City Council, Monday evening, Geo. F. Wolf was appointed Mayor to finish the term of J. E. Hughes who resigned at a special meeting called for that purpose two weeks ago.

Mr. Hughes was elected to the office in 1918 and has given excellent satisfaction as the town's executive officer and an effort would be made to have him finish the term but for the fact that he has sold his property here and will move with his family to Garner in the near future.

Mr. Wolf is a very popular man here and we have every reason to believe that he will make the best kind of Mayor. We wish both the old and the new mayors the best luck.—Goodell Globe.

LIGHTNING DOES DAMAGE

Monday afternoon we were relieved from the intense heat for a short time by an approaching storm which brought very little rain but considerable thunder and some sharp lightning.

It is reported that some stock was killed and several hay and straw stacks burned as a result of being struck by lightning.—Renwick Times.

TRUCK RACE AT GOLDFIELD

Leave it to Goldfield to furnish the thrills. The latest thrill is racing with big trucks carrying two ton loads of coal. This race was pulled off Saturday afternoon between the Farmers Elevator and T. L. Knight's office. The contestants were Milford Stockdale and Arthur Gangstead. We were not informed as to which one won the race but as usual Mayor Montgomery received the usual $5 and costs.—Goldfield Chronicle.

GALT ELEVATOR BURNED

A fire of unknown origin got started Saturday afternoon in the old elevator west of the Shull coal sheds, and in a few minutes it assumed such proportions that the whole town was in great danger, but by heroic work on the part of men, women and children, armed with fire extinguishers and buckets of water, it was kept from spreading over the town. Notice to whom it may concern:

No, that fearful monster which you will see tearing thru the air at a mad rate of speed between the hours of 3 and 5 P. M. Saturday, August 23, will not be an object of fear, but a modern plan of advertising the Hancock County Fair to be held at Britt, Iowa, August 26-29, inclusive, day and nigh.

Keep your weather eye out for that plane and catch some of the messages it will drop "behind the lines" from the air. It will not be propaganda of dangerous sort, but a welcome to meet your friends at the Fair.

The plane will leave Britt for a cross county flight at about 3 P. M. Saturday, August 23, if the weather is favorable and fly over all the towns of the county.

Watch for it. And then keep it in mind, come to the Fair on August 27, 28 and 29, and take a ride in it and see your friends and neighbors take a joy ride in the air.

The Fred Ridder family, Mrs. S. A. Harvey and the Misses Minnie Lau and Arvella Emerson are having a two weeks' outing at Clear Lake and are also taking in the North Iowa Fair at Mason City. They have rented a furnished cottage at the lake and are enjoying themselves immensely.

A MEAN TRICK ON GOODELL BOYS

Monday evening a number of Goodell young men autoed to Klemme to attend the show. It seems that some Klemme boys had a grudge against the young men from our neighboring city for some reason or other, but probably imaginary, and to take out spite on the Goodell boys proceeded to throw eggs at them as they were getting into their car to drive back home again. One lad was quite severely injured as an egg struck him in the eye and he had to have the doctor remove some pieces of the shell from the optic. One piece of egg shell was lodged so tightly in the eye that the doctor could not remove it and he will have to go to a specialist to have the operation performed.

Whoever the young men were that threw the eggs at the Goodell boys was also ashamed of the rash act, it said if the only act in the first place of the Goodell ... grudge against any ... their disputes in a way should settle ... and not throw eggs which ... only way serious injury. ... caus...

We are sorry such a thing sho... happen in our city. The businessmen and citizens of Klemme like to have visitors come to the town and we want to treat them as ladies and gentlemen should treat visitors, as we expect to be treated right when we go to some other town. Chicago successfully launched her farmer to consumers market last Saturday, and both farmers and housewives were pleased. Green goods and eggs sold at the following prices. Potatoes 60c, tomatoes, 25c for two pounds, cabbage, 2½c a pound, green peppers, 10c for six, dried onions 25c for five pounds; green onions, 5c for two bunches, green and wax beans, 10c for two pounds (more than two quarts) eggs 35 cents a dozen, watermelons, 40 cents each, selected; canteloupes, 10c apiece, two for 15c, three for 25c oranges, 25c and 40c a dozen, green corn, 30c a dozen.

The southwest's harvest, characterized as the largest in history, is over. Higher wages were paid than ever before, and there was practically no radical agitation. An army numbering at times 125,000 advanced with the harvest from southern Oklahoma through Kansas and into Nebraska, earning an average of 60 cents an hour. Federal officials say about 100 alleged agitators were arrested on vagrancy charges, but so far there has not been a single complaint of sabotage. College students and returned soldiers predominated among the harvesters.

Armour & Company's profits in 1912 were estimated at 6 per cent. In 1917 they jumped to 19.5 per cent. Swift & Company made 8.6 per cent in 1912, and 23.4 per cent in 1917. Morris & Company, 6.9 per cent in 1912, and 22.6 per cent in 1917, while the Cudahy Packing Company made 7.1 per cent in 1912, and 28.2 per cent in 1917, says the Consumers' League.

WIDOW OF FORMER CONGRESSMAN IS DEAD

Storm Lake, Ia., Aug. 11.—The body of Mrs. Oma Thomas who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. O. Nay, at Augusta, Ga., last Saturday after a brief illness, was brought to Storm Lake on Wednesday morning and taken to the home of Judge and Mrs. James DeLand. Funeral services were held in the Lakeside Presbyterian church at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, conducted by the Rev. Stanton Olinger, Ph. D., of Buena Vista college, and interment was made in the Storm Lake cemetery.

Judge Lot Thomas and Mrs. Thomas came to Buena Vista county from Ashland, Ohio, and located at Sioux Rapids, then the county seat, where he practiced law. It was while there that Judge Thomas was elected to congress, and for three sessions served the Eleventh district. The family moved to Storm Lake when the county seat was located in this city. Judge Thomas died on his way to California, after his retirement from congress.

The pair attempted to break jail at Logan and were caught just as they pushed out the last brick. They had cut through the steel and brick wall.

IOWA EXPECTS TO WIN FOOTBALL GAME

State University to Open Season With Nebraska—Annual Game With Ames to Be Homecoming Day.

Iowa City, Aug. 9.—Four conference games with leading teams of the Big Ten appear on the Iowa football schedule for 1919 which has just been announced by Athletic Director Howard H. Jones. The schedule has been completed definitely to include three games at Iowa City and four on foreign soil. It is as follows:

October 4—Nebraska at Iowa City.
October 11—Open.
October 18—Illinois at Minneapolis.
October 25—Minnesota at Minneapolis.
November 1—South Dakota at Iowa City.
November 8—Northwestern at Evanston.
November 15—Chicago at Chicago.
November 22—Ames at Iowa City.

Contrary to the usual custom, no opening practice game with one of the smaller colleges is to be played this fall. Nebraska will open the season just one week after the beginning of school. Ames is the only state team which the Hawkeyes will meet, and the game with the Cyclones on November 22 at Iowa City will be the occasion of the annual alumni homecoming.

In spite of the fact that next year Iowa faces the toughest conference schedule the Hawkeyes ever tackled, it is confidently predicted that Coach Jones will develop a team which will make a creditable showing. Headed by Captain Fred Lohman, more than half of 1918 eleven, which stood second in the conference, will be back this season to compete again for places on the team. Second team and substitute material, together with some experienced men who will return from army service, will give Coach Jones more capable players at the start of the season than have been available since he took charge of Iowa's football destinies.

Just now it appears probable that A. P. Synhorts, tackle and one of the mainstays of the 1918 eleven, may be able to play again this year. Synhorst has received a degree from Central college at Pella, but Dr. H. J. Prentiss, chairman of the athletic board, has discovered that Central has no recognized athletic standing, and has written to Professor Goodenough, of Illinois, charman of the conference committee on eligibility, explaining the case. Dr. Prentiss believes that the eligibility committee will permit Synhorst to play.

MONONA COUNTY BOY LOST LEG IN ARGONNE

Onawa, Ia., Aug. 9.—It was in the battle of the Argonne Woods that Oscar Tanberg was hot and was compelled to go to the hospital where his leg was taken off. This was just a few days before the armistice was signed. He and David McNeill, an Onawa boy, were pals over there, both being bearers of the same stretcher and had worked together bearing all difficulties and risking their lives for the sake of humanity. David was unhurt the day that Oscar was shot and continued his work on the field. While Oscar was lying in the hospital between life and death, David was out there. It was on the last day that fate decided that David give his life and his name was listed among the dead.

Mr. Tanberg is happy in the though that he is alive and is glad to be back among the home folks once again. He was in Onawa Monday in company with his brotherinlaw, Supervisor George Johnson.

SEVEN GOVERNORS ARE INVITED TO WATERLOO

Waterloo, Ia., Aug. 9.—Governors of seven states have been invited to be present on Governors' day of the Dairy Cattle Congress and International Belgian Horse Show, to be held in Waterloo September 23. Invitations have been extended by Gov. W. L. Harding, Mayor R. C. Thompson, of Waterloo, and officials of the cattle congress.

Governor Harding has accepted an invitation to attend and the following governors of other states have been invited: Frank O. Lowden, Illinois; E. L. Phillips, Wisconsin; J. A. Burnquist, Minnesota; Peter Norbeck, South Dakota; Samuel McKelvie, Nebraska, and Frederick D. Gardner, Missouri.

ASKS $40,000 FOR HIS WIFE'S AFFECTIONS

Eldora, Ia., Aug. 9.—Frank L. St. John, of this county, has filed a petition in district court in which he asks $40,000 of Charles Baskin, of Eldora, alleging that the defendant alienated the affections of plaintiff's wife, Josephine. The petition recites that in the year 1916 the plaintiff was a tenant upon the farm of defendant in Grundy county; that while acting as tenant and busy at the work upon the farm, the defendant frequently and at diverse times called upon the plaintiff's wife, made love to her and eventually won her affections; that in December, 1917, the plaintiff's wife left him and has since that time refused to live with him.

WASHINGTON—Russell J. Minty, of Fort Dodge, nominated by Senator Kenyon, and William Joseph Becker, of Dubuque, nominated by Representative Sweet, have been advised by the war department that they are entitled to admission to the United States military academy at West Point, this month.

ANNUAL CHAUTAUQUA SESSION ON AT PONCA

Ponca, Neb., Aug. 8.—The annual chautauqua for this community will begin here this evening with a concert by the New choir and a lecture by "Sunshine" Dietrick, and will continue five days, closing on Tuesday night. The program this year promises to excel those of former years. Ex-Congressman Finley H. Gray will give an address Sunday evening, and on Tuesday night the Cremona orchestra will render an entire program.

SHORTAGE OF SOFT COAL IS IMMINENT

Iowa Miners and Others of Middle West Are Working Only Part Time—No Demand Now.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. —The middlewest and southwest are threatened by the most serious coal shortage in years, primarily because the mines now are working at only about half speed because of the failure of the public to "shop early" in laying in their winters supply of fuel. This is indicated by production figures made available to local mine operators and labor officials by the United States Geological survey.

According to these figures the 620 mines in Iowa, Arkansas, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas now are working an average of only 3.4 days a week and producing 267,845 less tons per week than their normal output. Of this decrease, 151,419 tons is due to the fact that there is no market, while only 26,585 tons can be blamed on strikes and labor shortage. Car shortage and mine disability is responsible for the remainder of the decrease.

Mine operators declare that in most places they would have little trouble in working their mines at approximately full speed, but that the public generally refuses to purchase coal in the summer for winter use and that as a result they cannot afford to operate more than half the usual time. Urgent pleas are being sent out in all these states, asking that winter fuel supplies be ordered at once.

Missouri is suffering the most from strikes and labor shortage, it is said, while Iowa is affected the least. The weekly loss in production from these causes in Missouri is 11,766 tons, while in Iowa the decrease is only 58 tons. In Iowa, however, a general strike is threatened. The men are preparing to present demands this fall for a six-hour day and increased wages, the wage scale not having yet been formulated.

If the strike is called it will affect 12,000 men and 127 mines. The men now have an agreement holding good until congress ratifies the peace treaty or until January 1, 1920. This agreement was made as a war measure. There are no men on strike in the state now.

BOY ADMITS ROBBERY WHEN FACED BY FACTS

LeMars, Ia., Aug. 8.—A boy about 12 years of age, last week robbed the office of the Sammies Oil Company filling station of $71 in checks and cash. He had been around the place for some time and was walking on crutches at the time of the robbery. He told the marshal after the robbery had occurred that he had seen a hobo go towards the depot. He was suspected and was watched by the station men Sunday and was found to be visiting a small outhouse near the filling station frequently. A search warrant was secured and a search of the house revealed part of the cash hid in the rafters. The boy confessed after the find. He said he destroyed the checks. The amount missing is nearly $40. The boy's parents, who are wealthy, have been requested to settle. However if no settlement is made the boy will be prosecuted.

NETS OVER $100,000 ON SINGLE LAND DEAL

Spencer, Ia., Aug. 8.—Clearing over $100,000 in exactly three months, R. T. Colter recently disposed of the last of 1,571.48 acres of Clay county land when the Iowa Farm Land Company, a Newton firm, purchased a 1,094.87-acre tract for $330,632.75.

On May 1 Mr. Colter, who has extensive land interests in Iowa, Oklahoma, Texas, western Montana, and Alberta, Can., bought over 1,500 acres near here from M. E. Griffin, pioneer Spencer farmer and banker, for a total of $353,583. The purchase was sold in three lots, aggregating $457,647.75, which netted Mr. Colter exactly $104,115.75.

FAMILY QUARREL CAUSES PREACHER TO RESIGN

Red Oak, Ia., Aug. 8.—Rev. W. G. Jones, pastor of the First Baptist church, of Red Oak, which was the scene recently of a church trial in which the domestic affairs of the Bass-Sedan families and their long standing feud were aired, has resigned and it is understood that this resignation is largely due to the factional difficulties growing out of the Bass-Sedam case. Rev. Mr. Jones has reputation of being a peacemaker and has filled various charges where his exceptional qualifications in this respect were called into action. He intimates that he has tired of the role of peacemaker and will enter newspaper work. He is a practical printer.

BIG LAND TRANSACTION CLOSED AT SPIRIT LAKE

Spirit Lake, Ia., Aug. 8.—The Quevli farms have been sold to A. V. Everett, of Rolfe, Ia., for nearly $500,000.

Twenty-five years ago Nels Quevli, now of Mason City, purchased 2,000 acres of wet land near Lakefield, Minn., north of Spirit Lake. Since that time he had continued to develop it until now it has 14 sets of improvements. It really is 14 farms in one block. It is drained by about 70 miles of tile with a self cleaning dredge ditch with 12 feet of fall in one mile. In all there are 2,280 acres. Anthony S. Quevli has been the manager.

COUNCIL BLUFFS BOY IS HUN GAS VICTIM

Council Bluffs, Ia., Aug. 8.—John Engoldsby, aged 21, a member of the 168th infantry, is dead at his home in Council Bluffs, a victim of Hun gas. He returned home about three months ago broken in health as a result of the gas. Engoldsby served in every engagement in France and was with the army of occupation in Germany. His parents and five sisters and three brothers live here.

PALMER ORDERS SLEUTHS TO AID

Hundreds of U. S. Special Agents Told to Turn Attention to Running Down Food Profiteers.

By Associated Press.

Washington, Aug. 11.—All special agents of the department of justice over the country have been ordered to assist district attorneys in uncovering evidence of profiteering in foodstuffs and other necessities.

Attorney General Palmer's instructions were that the special agents should drop everything but the most pressing cases now pending and devote their entire attention to assisting in the campaign to reduce the cost of living. The result will be to put hundreds of trained investigators in the search for men who have inflated prices exorbitantly.

DISCOVER PROFITEERING.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 11.—The Hamilton county grand jury, which is investigating the high cost of living in Cincinnati and Hamilton county, in a partial report to the court today stated it has found evidence of profiteering and hoarding.

No indictments and no names were mentioned. The investigation will be continued.

The jury in its report said that the United States bureau of markets in Cincinnati is one of the big causes of the high cost of living and urged discontinuance of the bureau. It charged the bureau's food price lists are fixed arbitrarily and are not based upon cost of production, supply and demand.

ARREST 32 FARMERS.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 11.—In a drive to curb profiteering among farmers who sell foodstuffs in this city at abnormal prices and do not properly mark measures as required by law, Murray Livingston, city ordinance officer, today arrested 32 farmers charging them with misdemeanors.

REPORT ON CROPS SENDS PRICES UP

Quotations on All Staples Advance on Chicago Exchange Today—Wilson's Speech Discounted.

By Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 11—Every single staple in which there are dealings on the board of trade rose decidedly in price today. Whatever effect to the contrary might have looked for from the address of President Wilson to congress in regard to the high cost of living was entirely obscured by the opposite influence of the government crop report which was issued shortly before he spoke.

So impressed were traders on the exchange here today with the unexpected magnitude of the crop losses shown during July that the president's views appeared to be virtually ignored as a market factor. Price changes turned instead almost entirely on the exceptional severity of recent crop damage estiamted at 7.5 per cent for July alone. The July cut of 221,000,000 bushels in estimated wheat production was said to be the most drastic on record.

Extreme upturns of 4 cents a bushel in the value of corn and of $1.75 a barrel for pork resulted. December delivery of corn jumped to $1.54¾ and September pork to $47.75.

Soaring of prices continued throughout the day, and corn closed at the topmost price reached, with December delivery at $1.56½@1.57, an ascent of 5¼@6⅛c a bushel since yesterday's finish.

LOVER TELLS TALE OF DEATH PACT FAILURE

Unable to Follow Sweetheart In Leap to Death, He Explains —Police Investigate.

By United Press.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 11.—John Shippie, former soldier, and Helen Steel, 18, daughter of a wealthy Los Angeles contractor, wanted to marry, but the girl's parents objected. Last night the two met to spend their last evening together and saw a movie story of lovers, divided in life, reunited in death. They resolved to do likewise.

Toward midnight they met on the beach near Lurline pier. They had agreed to leap together from the pier. After a farewell kiss and talk of their reunion in the beyond, the girl leaped into the ocean.

The man hesitated. Then the scream of his sweetheart as she struck the water completely unnerved him and he fled. Seeking an isolated spot he swallowed a preparation a druggist gave him when he asked for poison.

The foregoing is the story told the police by Shippie, 22, when he was taken to the emergency hospital, apparently poisoned. Investigation, however, disclosed that the druggist gave him a harmless preparation instead of the death fluid, so Shippie is now in jail while police investigate his story.

Thusfar no trace has been found of the girl's parents by local or Los Angeles police. There are many discrepancies in the story, authorities say. No trace of the body has been found.

Frank L. Polk, American assistant secretary of state and head of the United States peace delegation here told a group of French newspaper men Friday that the United States Senate committee on foreign affairs would complete its report on the German treaty by the middle of August and that the Senate would not take more than two weeks to ratify it, says a Paris some day a black president.

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 11.—Northwestern and Milwaukee rail strikers today wired B. M. Jewell at Washington to respect the dictates of union and not the officers by refusing to enter into any agreement with federal officials to end the strike.

FOOD FAMINE FEARED.

By United Press.

New York, Aug. 11.—Possibility of the food situation in New England becoming serious was admitted today by officials of the New Haven railway, when they stated that it has become necessary to accept only perishable foods for delivery because of the strike of shopmen. Freight is piling rapidly at the terminals. Two hundred and forty-one passenger trains, most of them expresses, have been withdrawn. No parlor cars are being operated and only a few sleeping cars.

Possibility of a settlement resting on the agreement of the strikers to consider President Wilson's appeal to return to work.

PRICE AGITATION BRINGS CAUTION

Commercial Circles Showing a Tendency to Await Developments. Says Dun's Report.

New York, Aug. 11.—Dun's today says:

The agitation against high living costs, growing in intensity and finding reflection in the increasing unrest of labor, has not been without influence on business. Instead of the preponderance of advances which has characterized the movement of wholesale commodity quotations for a long period, recessions this week are slightly in the majority and some markets that are largely swayed by speculation have experienced abrupt reactions. Accompanying the recent significant price developments there has been a distinct spread of caution in commercial circles, with a tendency to wait a clearer insight into the future and a moderation of activity has occurred in certain quarters.

Congress will [illegible] all the money [illegible] needed," said Mondell. "In a letter I had no opposition to extending the Lever food control act, if this is believed necessary."

Senator Lodge, majority leader of the Senate, said:

"I [illegible] president made some [illegible] suggestions in regard [illegible] to exorbitante [illegible] and I [illegible] with them [illegible]"

Representative Mondell declared [illegible] congress was [illegible] such legislation [illegible] carry out the president for [illegible] cost of living.

Representative Mann, republican, of [illegible] said "to home and rest [illegible] adding that it was [illegible] of the country [illegible] the House session."

After [illegible] recess was taken until Tuesday.

A number of the president's suggestions have been covered in bills now pending. Committee action on these will be urged next week. They include measures for regulation of storage plants and for stamping of prices on food products.

Resent Peace Reference.

Comment from men of both parties today showed that some of the president's suggestions regarding legislation met with general approval and that his stand against labor strikes as a means of enforcing demands was indorsed. His appeal for ratification of the treaty apparently caused some resentment.

"The president is taking an unfair advantage by using the high cost of living issue as a club to force ratification of the League of Nations," said Senator Brandegee. "He can have peace in two days if he will agree to a reservation excluding the United States from the League of Nations."

Food Control Opposed.

Mondell's willingness to reenact the Lever food control law as a peace time measure is not shared by all members of the House. A number of senators also expressed opposition to this plan.

"I am against further extension of authority," said Senator Gronna, North Dakota, chairman of the agricultural committee before which a bill to reenact the Lever measure would go. "The president has all the authority he needs and I think he has all he'll get so far as the agricultural committee is concerned."

Recommendation for federal licensing of all corporations in interstate business did not appear to be generally approved. There is pending in the Senate however, a bill which would create such a licensing system.

Senator Capper, Kansas, was one of those who supported this feature of the president's message.

Prepares for Tour.

President Wilson, having handed the high cost of living problem over to congress at least for the time being, turned his attention today to plans for his tour of the United States. It was believed however, that he would touch on the high cost of living in his speeches.

In his address to congress yesterday, the president said there can be no real peace price until there is peace. He is expected to use this argument in his campaign.

Before Wilson goes on tour he may hold a series of White House conferences with representatives of both capital and labor to discuss present economic conditions and the remedy for certain evils. In his speech he said many things should be corrected in the relations between capital and labor and that he was ready to confer on the matters with "men who know what they are talking about."

New steps by the executive department of the government to reduce the cost of living were expected today to be started at once by the president who laid down [illegible] lines [illegible] and [illegible] immediate steps to limit [illegible] shipments and credits so [illegible] immediate the purchase of wheat with [illegible] to lowering the price of flour, [illegible] surplus government stocks of food and clothing and to force withdrawal of foodstuffs from storage.

KENYON ENCOURAGED.

Washington Bureau, The Tribune.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Although President Wilson disappointed some members of congress in not specifically urging that action be taken on some of the measures relating to the packers which are now pending before House and Senate, there is no doubt the general effect of message and the movement in congress for legislation to meet high cost of living will be to promote passage of the packers' measure.

Senator Kenyon thinks the time opportune to press it, though aware the packers will seek delay when the Senate agricultural committee begins hearings August 18. Trade Commissioner Colver will be the first witness. He has been active in making up the committee report against the packers.

CAR OF PEACHES ROTTED ON TRACK

Omaha Authorities Dip Up Further Evidence Food Products Are Allowed to Spoil.

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 11.—Nine more cars of fruit and vegetables which it claimed have been permitted to rot on railroad tracks in the Omaha yard rather than be unloaded and be used to assist in lowering the cost of living were uncovered here this morning, by the police. Together with the cars discovered yesterday, this makes 20 car loads of fruits and vegetables found here, all absolutely rotted. The rail value of the cars discovered today is $11,080, and that found yesterday totaled $26,800.

One car of peaches found today has been standing on the track here since August 1, with absolutely no effort at unloading, it is said. This car was shipped from Arkansas on July 28 and arrived here on August 1. It was set on side track and today the peaches are absolutely spoiled.

Seven cars of watermelons, all spoiled, were among the cars uncovered today. All these cars have been on the tracks for a number of days. One car of canteloupes had been standing on the tracks for two weeks and every canteloupe was spoiled. Small canteloupes are retailing in Omaha today at 10 cents each.

The city council's investigations into the waste of fruits and vegetables, as well as into the high cost of living, will begin Monday. Today 25 subpoenas in blank were issued by detectives who have been working up the evidence to present to the council. The detectives were authorized to fill in the names of anyone whom they have reason to think can throw any light on the matter.

Grand Jury Monday.

The calling of the special grand jury which was scheduled for today has been postponed until the first of next week. Judge W. A. Redick, presiding judge of the district, is in Minnesota and has been summoned by telegraph, but failed to arrive this morning. He will reach home Sunday and the grand jury will probably be called Monday.

While the city commission has no authority to force witnesses to testify, County Attorney Shotwell today announced that any witness who refuses to testify before the commission will immediately be taken before the grand jury and forced to tell all he knows or go to jail.

Assistant United States District Attorney Peterson today announced that he will attend all sessions of the commission next week and that if he hears any evidence tending to show a federal law has been violated he will call the witness before a special federal grand jury which will probably be called next week.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Weather predictions for the week beginning August 11 follow:

Upper Mississippi and lower Missouri valleys: Normal temperatures and generally fair, except that occasional showers are probable first half of the week.

PEOPLE'S TRIBUNALS TO TRY PROFITEERS

London, Aug. 11.—Great Britain is making ready to fire the first shot in her offensive against the profiteer.

Steps are being taken in Great Britain to follow up the announcement of Sir Auckland Geddes, British minister of reconstruction, that local tribunals representing the workers and consumers be established, with power to assess $100 fines against profiteers and send more flagrant cases to the courts which will be empowered to inflict a $1,000 fine or six months' imprisonment.

Small traders are the greatest profiteers, rather than the wholesalers and manufacturers, according to Geddes.

"There are instances" he said, "where small haberdashers formerly living in two rooms have been enabled to buy country [illegible]es."

QUORUM ARRIVES TO HEAR WILSON

Congressmen Rush to Washington to Prevent Delaying President's Cost of Living Speech.

Washington, Aug. 11.—The House today adopted a resolution for a joint session of congress at 4 o'clock this afternoon to hear President Wilson's recommendations looking to the reduction of the high cost of living.

A point of no quorum had been made by Representative Blanton, democrat, of Texas, when the chair refused to recognize him for the introduction of a measure, but a roll call developed that a quorum was in attendance.

Many representatives hurried into Washington last night and early today in answer to imperative calls sent out by party leaders, determined to prevent delay in the delivery of the president's address because of lack of a quorum.

Promise Early Action.

President Wilson's address to the joint session is expected by members of both houses to be one of the most important he has made.

"If the president will make concrete [illegible]mals, congress is ready to get needed work with them, sift them man of mass whatever laws are [illegible] There was manator Gronna, chair- [illegible] what the presidential committee.

The message is a[illegible]olation as to [illegible] length. It was read late [illegible]ve to say, the president to the cabinet [illegible]rds in [illegible]tee on whose advice and recom[illegible]dations he drafted it and several minor changes were maintained.

No recommendation will be made for a licensing system of producers, manufacturers or dealers in the president's address.

No recommendation will be made for a law limiting the margin of profit on commodities.

No concrete law clearly defining hoarding and profiteering will be asked although recommendations will be made for laws designed to bolster up the existing laws under which the attorney general expects to reach price gougers and hoarders.

The president will ask for an extension of the Lever food control act to make it applicable as a peace time measure and to include all commodities, shoes, clothing and life necessaries as well as food.

This much as to the contents of [illegible] address was learned after Pres[illegible]n Wilson had called into conference late Thursday members of the cabinet [illegible] the Palmer subcommittee and revised it to meet their suggestions.

The president's message in addition to recommending specific government action probably will take up the labor situation, strikes and product[illegible] was learned today. Greater production without interruption [illegible] needed, the president is [illegible] out.

Appeals for Tickets.

[illegible]ators and repres[illegible]tatives [illegible] ged for tickets of admission [illegible] the galleries. The quotas allowed both House and Senate were gone early today and requests were still pouring [illegible]. Approaches to the House gallery were being roped off so the crowd could be more easily controlled.

The Senate met as usual, its members planning to proceed to the House chamber a few minutes before Wilson is scheduled to begin talking. [illegible] the government plant during the night, and copies of it were taken to the White House this morning.

PROFITEERS FACE CRIMINAL ACTION

County Attorneys of Iowa to Cooperate With Governor and Attorney General In War on H. C. L.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 11.—Iowa's campaign against profiteers in [illegible] began taking definite form today.

At a conference of practically all county attorneys, state dairy and food inspectors and Attorney General Ramer in Gov. W. L. Harding's office, a committee of five was appointed to draw plans for a state wide price probe.

The committee: J. Z. Burnstedt, Hamilton county; J. M. C. Hamilton, Lee county; M. J. Yoran, Delaware county; Carl E. Pierce, Des Moines county and H. A. Willoughby, Grundy county.

George Cosson, former attorney general will probably be retained by the governor Harding as special prosecutor when evidence is collected, it was said.

Cosson, in addressing the conference said 30 per cent more food of the eight principal commodities was in storage today than in the past year but these foods have advanced in price from 8 to 30 per cent.

Criminal prosecutions, rather than attempts to amend state laws, was discussed freely at the conference, it was said. The prosecutors, however, warned the public against looking for relief "too quickly."

THINK DOCTOR IS MISTREATING BOY

Physician, on Errand of Mercy, Beaten by Angry Italian Women.

MOTHER GANG CLUB

Beats Doctor Who Is Trying to Sick Lad Pills—Neighbors Take Hand in the Proceedings—Rescued by Autoist.

Chicago—While on an errand of mercy in the Italian district, Dr James E. Smedley, a well-known north side physician and volunteer Red Cross worker, was clubbed into unconsciousness by a crowd of excited women, who believed he was mistreating his patient, a little boy.

The physician is recovering from scalp wounds at his residence, under the care of his wife, a graduate nurse. He is 60 years old but of powerful physique.

After being rejected for the army Dr. Smedley offered his services to the local Red Cross organization. For months he has given his time to charity cases, often being called from his bed late at night.

Gets Emergency Call.

One day recently he received an emergency call to 1212 Vine street, where Tony, the little son of Mrs. Mary Canfano, was ill. It looked like diphtheria.

The doctor took the boy on his knee and pinched his cheek. Then he tried to slip some pills into the lad's mouth, but his patient became rebellious.

"Come, now, be a good boy," urged the doctor. "They'll make you feel better."

Tony still refused.

Then the physician resorted to the customary expedient of holding the boy's nose, thus forcing him to open his mouth and swallow the pellets.

Mother Clubs Doctor.

The mother, who had been friendly, suddenly became infuriated. She screamed, seized a club and struck Dr. Smedley on the head. He fell to the floor stunned.

Again and again the heavy club descended. Her screams brought several women to the house. They took a hand at the clubbing. Then they locked him in the house and left, presumably to seek some of the male neighbors to wreak further vengeance.

The physician, bleeding profusely from the nose and from deep scalp lacerations, finally broke a window and hailed a passing autoist, who helped him out and took him home.

"The woman simply didn't understand, that was all," said Dr. Smedley. "She thought I was trying to hurt the boy."

BUY DOGS TO CHASE CONVICTS

Police Hounds Are to Be Used on Sing Sing Farm to Run Down Escaping Prisoners.

New York.—For the purpose of chasing convicts who escape from Sing Sing's farm at Wingdale, Capt. J. A. Warner of the state constabulary has installed two mammoth police dogs in the Brewster mobilization station.

Sergt. Charles Broadeld, in charge of the state troopers there, believes the dogs will be able to scent the trail of escaping prisoners who flee from the farm, overtake and capture them. Warden Moyer has lost seven prisoners from Wingdale in the last two years. William Thomas, one of the fugitives, was trailed as far as Brooklyn several weeks ago and is still hiding there.

The police dogs were given to the constabulary by Mrs. L. F. Warner, who had them on her country place near Hempstead, L. I. On one occasion when two convicts fled the farm they stole the prisoner's watchdog by bribing it with meat and also stole a horse and rig.

Court Relieves Him.

Boston.—Arthur M. Loonie nearly went crazy because his friends rubbed in the fact that he was "loonie." The courts decided he may use the name Loomis.

HOW ANCIENTS KEPT BOOKS

Development of Comprehensive System Necessary to Merchant and Wage Earner.

Accountancy, which is the science of systematizing business, has a history that runs back at least 4,000 years. Very early in the development of nations it was found that in commerce, as well as in the affairs of the state, systematic and careful account keeping were indispensable. These systems were at first crude and laborious, but they at least kept the finances of the nation and the marts of trade from being chaotic.

The invention of double entry bookkeeping early in the fifth century by gave merchants and bankers of Venice invaluable commerce of Europe an without which instrument and one enterprises of the great commercial hardly have existed centuries could Thrift. And so it has ording to the present time; there has been known to parallel progress between the accomplishments of commerce and the science of accounting, and it is known to every man in business that the former could not continue without the latter. Even the most unbusinesslike people know this much, and we can hardly imagine any one silly enough to attempt to carry on any kind of business enterprise without keeping books.

Bookkeeping, as a formal subject of study, is taught in most of the public and private schools of this country, but it is only that form of bookkeeping that applies to the affairs of the merchant or the shopkeeper. The public has yet to learn that bookkeeping is quite as necessary to the prosperity of the wage worker, the salaried man, the farmer, and the housekeeper, as it is to the shopkeeper, the merchant or the manufacturer.

CHANCES IN GAME OF LIFE

Must Be Winners and Losers, Since It Is Sure All Cannot Hold Equal Cards.

Life is like a game of cards. Some must win. Some must lose. It all depends upon the player and on the gambling chances that may favor or disappoint him.

All have the same gambling chance, so the player's ability really determines whether he shall be a loser or a winner. Assiduity, persistence, practice and patience all help to make him a winner, and the lack of these a loser.

Those who win make their gains at the expense of those who lose. There must always be winners and losers, the winners rejoicing and the losers disappointed, complaining and jealous of the winners.

How much like the experience of everyday life! Some succeed because of their diligence, earnestness and ceaseless ambition, others lose because of the lack of these winning qualities.

Some live in well-deserved ease and comfort on the proceeds of their success, others in discomfort, proclaiming that they suffer from injustice.

Everybody must play the game of life, and, like the game of cards, in the end every gamester must be a loser. Only the Grim Reaper is sure to be the winner in the end.—John A. Sleicher in Leslie's.

Relic of Old Rome.

During plowing operations in a field near the village of Bratton, Westbury, Wiltshire, Eng., the plow struck what proved to be the cover of a leaden coffin. The coffin has been examined by B. H. Carrington, the curator of the Wilts Archeological museum, who states that the coffin, without doubt, belongs to the period of the Roman occupation, says the London Times. The place where it was found is about a mile from the site of a large Romano-British village. The coffin is 6 feet 8 inches in length; its width varies from 1 foot 6 inches to 1 foot 4 inches and its depth is 1 foot 7 inches. Large iron nails 4½ inches long indicate that when interred it had a wooden outer covering, but that has perished, as have the bones interred, except the leg bones, the pelvis and the lower jaw; there is no trace of the skull. Two pieces of lead form the bottom of the coffin, but the cover is one piece.

To Temper China.

Many a lover of fine china is heartbroken to discover her choice dinner or tea set lined with hairlike cracks. Hot tea or choclate poured into dainty cups cracks them instantly.

A Chinese merchant gave this bit of information when a rare tea set was purchased from him: "Before using delicate china place it in a pan of cold water. Let it come gradually to a boil and allow the china to remain in the water till cold." This tempers the china and it is capable of withstanding the sudden expansion caused by the heat. There is no need of repeating the treatment for a long time.

Unnecessary Luggage.

A Scotchman who had emigrated to America wrote home to his wife instructing her to sell most of their household property and take passage out to him. The good wife asked a neighbor to help in the packing. In the midst of the business they found Sandy's watch. The neighbor examined it closely, and then said: "It's a grand watch, Janet. Ye'll be takin' it wi' ye?" "Na, na!" was the reply. "It wad be o' nae use oot there, for Sandy tells me in his letter that there is some 'oors o' difference between the time here and in California, so I needna be takin' lumber!"

The Finding of Jasper Holt

BY

Grace Livingston Hill Lutz

Author of "Marcia Schuyler", "Phoebe Deane", "The Obsession of Victoria Gracen", etc.

She recognized fully the separation there was between them and it brought a constriction of tears in her throat; but in her heart was a glad glow that he cared for her, and for the time it seemed enough to fill her with deep joy. She was going to see him again in a few minutes, and she could thank him for saving her life again, this time perhaps from something worse than death. She had had no words wherewith to tell him of the infinite relief his appearing had brought, everything had happened so quickly, but it seemed as if a lifetime would be too brief to voice her gratitude for her deliverance She shivered as she remembered the look on Scathlin's face when he tool hold of her

Mrs Foster said Why, you're not cold, are you, dearie, this warm day? I believe they are letting you do too much with all their parties and things. You look white. You'd better come down and stay with me a week or two and get rested up."

But Pean's laugh rang out. It's "Oh, no, I'm not cold me to visit I'm just glad of ...ghted, but you very nice of ...ome next week, and you, and Eleanor wouldn't want to know when the time is so short."

...ing home next week'" exclaimed ... old lady, in dismay "Why, I thought you were going to stay till Christmas"

... was but f ther has to go to New York to a convention. He's been made a delegate, and it's a splendid thing for him He hasn't had an outing in a long time He needs it; and we couldn't leave mother alone you know oMther is an invalid So of course I m going home a little sooner. But I've had a beautiful time here, and maybe I can come again sometime"

All the time that Jean was talking her real self was thinking how wonderful it had been that it was H it who haved her again and not just some gassing stranger

The hour was over at last and Jean joyously mounted her pony and ... her friend good by, but when she ... into the shadow of the woods and ... Holt on his shining black horse w... ing quietly beside the road for h... a great shyness overcame her and s... knew she would never be able to p... into words the great thoughts of her heart and that perhaps it was as well, for he would understand and words were not necessary for them. There could not be much said without saying too much

After all they said very little The way was short till they came to the edge of town though they walked their horse as slowly as possible; but there were looks and glances of the soul, trustful, grateful, worshipful, and each felt the blessedness of these few minutes alone together

Holt told her briefly of Scathlin He was safe? She need fear him no more. He would not be abroad to trouble her during the rest of her stay His eyes more than his words informed her how he regretted the brevity of that stay His eyes told her also that Scathlin's judgment would be tempered with mercy and righteousness

There was one question she wished to ask him She hesitated long but finally ...ked it

"You will enter the tourna...ment?" she asked, lifting her eyes full of pleading that his answer should be yes "You know about it, of course? You know they are giving me a tournament before I go home?"

He bowed gravely

"Yes I know You will like it It is one of the most interesting affairs they have in town I am glad you will see it"

She saw he was evading her question "You will enter?" she asked again anxiously

He searched her face keenly

"You want me to?"

"I do very much," she said and the rich color in her cheeks told him how much she wanted it

"Your friend ... not like it," he said.

"But the tournament is given for me, and I shall like it" she said with spirit. "I am sure you can ride."

"I can ride a little," he said indifferently

"Then you will enter?"

"If you really wish it"

"I certainly wish it," she said gladly.

Then suddenly out from the woods rode two men; fine, tall, sturdy fellows they were, perhaps ten or more years older than Holt, but with strong faces, keen eyes and muscles that looked like iron

They saluted Holt as if he were their military officer, and one rode close to him and said a few words in a low tone. Holt nodded gravely, his fine, boyish face taking on manlier lines as he gave attention to the message, and uttered his brief ready directions, utterly unintelligible to the girl who looked on in bewilderment at this new phase of the young man's character

The second rider halted ... her direction, and waited as a trained servitor should do. Devotion to Holt and absolute obedience were in the attitude of both.

The interview occupied scarcely a minute; then the two men wheeled, saluted, and rode away once more into the woods.

"A little trouble at the mine," Holt explained, in answer to her questioning glance "It'll be all right now, since I have this paper again. We haven't dared to exercise our water privileges as we should and have been moving under difficulties, but now that I have the grant there will be no ... ther trouble I'll take care ... Jean, where no one can steal it ...ng after the

"Oh I'm so glad," ...st disappearing "but who are the... two riders who ...," said Holt. "I have fifty behind ..., fine fellows every one."

"Mine men?" questioned Jean in surprise

"They work for me—in the mine and around the place. I've picked them up here and there. That big fellow that waitd—I took him down from a tree where they'd hung him up for stealing a horse. H's the one I told you of—I thought he was dead, but there he is! He wouldn't take a pin now that blonged to anyone else He's the straightest fellow on the place The other one was almost gone with fever when I met up with him. W've nursed each othr twice apiece since then. There are others I'd like you to know if things were'nt as thy are You'd see the good in them, I'm sure You seem to understand."

Jean's eyes were alight as she watched him

"They know hoy" she exclaimed "They've seen the real you, and they trust you' I saw it in their eyes."

"Maybe," he said, returning her look. "They'd fight for me any time I asked it, and they'd die for me if it came to that"

'Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends" The words seemed to come ...mselves from the girl's lips as she ...hed the man in wonder and adoration.

"You took a mighty slim chance on ...r's for me about an hour ago" Holt's eyes spoke volumes. "Why didn't you give him the paper? It was by far the safest thing for you to do. Didn't you know that?"

"Yes" said the girl, her soft lips setting in a firm line and her chin taking the tilt that gave her sweet face its strength and fineness. "But the paper was yours, and I was sure it was valuable I didn't trust him."

"And you trust me yet, in spite of all the things I know you must have heard about me?"

"I trust you forever."

Her eyes were clear and steady, and her voice was sweet with a ring of triumph in it as she made the declaration

For a moment they looked at one another with a great blinding light of deep gladness shining from their eyes; then the man bowed his head gravely and, reaching over took her hand in a strong, quick clasp.

"You shall never have cause to lose that trust," he murmured solemnly, and turning, rode back into the woods and left her to go on alone through the town.

CHAPTER XV.

When Jean reached the Harrington home she found a group of girls on the piazza waiting for her, who chattered and laughed and took absolute possession of her They were planning an all day trip on horseback with lunches and all sorts of interesting things by the way, and Jean must help them. Then they give her no chance to speak, but told her all in chorus, until she could scarcely make out what it was about She smiled and agreed, but half the time she did not know what they were saying, for something still and beautiful within her soul was claiming her attention, something that seemed too high and holy to be affected by any of these foolish little things wherewith the others wanted to while away the time—the brief, dear time left her to be in his neighborhood. Yet she smiled and agreed, and they all thought her charging and went on making their plans.

They made out their list of men who were to be invited. She heard t... ames read, and took no account of whom they had selected for her escort. What did it matter? His name was not among them! She heard their talk about their horses.

"RobinHood has gone lame," declared one maiden pettishly, "isn't that a shame? Father says it's my fault, but I know better. He's going to get me a new horse pretty soon when he can find one to suit him. I know just the one I want; coal black and shines like satin. He can go like the wind and take a river as if he had wings. I'm dead in love him him. I'm just dying to ride him, but his owner won't sell him. Isn't that mean? He belongs to Jasper Holt. Father has offered him a fabulous price, but he won't sell him at any price, he says. I think he's perfectly horrid. Of course he only does nit just to be disagreeable because he thinks I want him. That man makes me tired!"

There was a soft color on Jean's cheeks and she looked up as if a challenge to defend her friend had been flung to her.

"Perhaps he's fond of the horse," she said gently, as she glanced around on all those scornful young faces.

"He, fond of anything! Oh, my dear! You don't know him!" declared one of the girls.

"He never was fond of anything in his life," laughed another. "Why he's the cruellest thing! You don't know, Jean."

"Men grow very fond of horses" said Jean, holding her hed high and the roses in her cheeks deepening, "and their horses grow fond of them A horse loves one who is ... him."

She was remembering as he rode beside her in the ...arch of Jasper Holt's ...s but a short half hour before met by a shout of merri... a sneer in it pierced above ... laughter:

"Kind to them! Jasper Holt was never kind to anything in his life! My dear, you simply don't know him"

"But I do know him!" said Jean now rising from he rocker and standing slim and straight against the vine covered pillar of the porch. "I know him better than you all, and I know he is kind. He was kind and splendid to me! No man could have done more! I am sorry you feel that way about him. It isn't right! He is my friend!"

She had spoken! She had always meant to, ever since she came; but there had been little opportunity without being deliberately disagreeable and dragging the subject in. Perhaps Eleanor had warned her caller not to mention Jasper Holt, for they usually seemed to avoid speaking of him; but she had always felt the time would come when she could speak and let them all know what she thought about him, and now it had come and she had spoken. Her heart beat wildly, her cheeks were rosy red, and her eyes shining starrily, but she stood unabashed and faced them all.

A sudden silence fell upon the little group and they exchanged furtive glances of understanding as if a mutual agreement sealed their lips to things that they might say if she were not with them

"Oh, well, of course you're grateful," said one girl in a conciliatory tone. "One couldn't help being grateful under such circumstances; but he would have been a brute not to have pulled you out of the water and showed you the way to Hawk Valley"

"Perhaps he wants his black to ride in the tournament," said another girl mischievously, hoping to lift the cloud that had fallen over them all. "He has audacity enough for anything, though he has never seemed to care for anything going on in the town. Of course he has never been encouraged to have."

He wouldn't dare!" said another with flashing eyes.

"Why wouldn't he dare?" asked Jean turning steady eyes to the haughty young speaker

"Because it wouldn't be tolerated," declared the girl still haughtily

"I have seen him dare greater things than that, said Jean with a far away look in her eyes and something like a smile on her lips.

The girls looked at her a minute in silence and wonder, interchanged quick glances that said "She does not know," and change dthe subject They liked eJan too well and she was too popular among the men for them to risk angering her, so they chattered on about what they would have in the lunch boxes and who should bring what; but Jean with that far away look in her eyes and that half smile on her lips, as if she knew things that were hidden from others, said no more.

They chattered and giggled and chorused to the end of their subject and their time at last, and took themselves away, but it was the dinner hour and Harrington was coming up the walk with two men who were to be their guests for dinner There was just time for Jean to change her riding habit for a dinner dress and hurry down again, no chance for the rest and the quiet thoughts that cried out to have their way

The evening was filled with callers, as every evening had been since she came that was not actually taken up by some entertainment or invitation. It seemed a wearisome time to Jean, who longed for her quiet room and her own thoughts. She watched the men who were talking to her, trying to please her; saw that they were good to look upon, cultured, and refined; saw that any one of them would be a good friend to her if she would let him; and yet, when she considered it, there was not one who came up to the standard of the man who had saved her life. She tried to look at the matter from their standpoint and understand why it was that she could not like any of them as she liked him; why they all seemed rather tedious in their intercourse and tiresome in their coming; and the great thought came down upon her that it was because she had first known him, and he was so much larger and finer a man in every way than they.

She had no more though than at the beginning that she would ever see more of Holt. The future showed no bright hope that they might come together. He had said it would not do, and she trusted him. Whatever he willed concerning their friendship she bowed to, for she trusted him utterly; but there was something vivid and both strang and gentle in him that made all other vapid beside him.

She roused herself to be pleasant and entertaining, but her heart was not in it. Her sister, noticing as the evening went on that she looked white and tired, finally managed to send their guests away And indeed, there had been moments when all the gaiety and laughtery seemed far away to her, and she had only seen the evil face of Scathlin and heard his voice demanding the paper and threatening, ... had find it for himself. Once she ... as if shuddered and shivered visibly in haste she were chilly, and the ... scarf and ened to pick up a ...shoulders, while throw it around ...lled down the win- Freeman Thorne dow.

...ey were all gone Eleanor But with peace about her sister and was...etty negligee she came in presently to perch upon the bed and question her.

"Is anything troubling you, Jean?" she asked anxiously. "You seemed so white and tired tonight?"

"Nothing at all, dearest," said Jean brightly. "What a big responsibility I am to you, you precious big sister! You mustn't worry about me, I have had a lovely visit But I get a little tired of talking to so many people sometime and having to say the same things over to all those men."

"You queer child!" said her sister, looking at her curiously. "Almost any girl would be proud to have so many admirers and you take them as a matter of course and don't seem to care a bit for them."

She studied the fair face of the girl keenly for any trace of self consciousness, but Jean's smile was as placid as ever.

"They are all nice, Eleanor," said the girl wearily, "but they do grow a little tiresome; all day long some of them, and every day. I wouldn't mind if you and I had a day or two now and then just all to ourselves."

"Well, you certainly are hopeless!" said her sister "Tell me, child, is there someone at home to whom you have given your heart?"

"Oh, no!" said Jean quickly, laughing at the thought. "Who would there be? You know all the boys, and there isn't one I could care for."

"Hell, I didn't know but that new bank cashier—"

'Tom Lloyd? Hhy he's engaged to Bella Harkness Did no one tell you? Besides, he's years older than I am"

Well there's that oldest Shafton boy oMther wrote he had come hom from college and started in business. They are a good family, Jean."

Jimmy Shafton? Oh, Eleanor' You ought to see him! He's the biggest snob! But there! I suppose he's nice enough, but I don't like him, that's all He has a weak chin, and somehow I don't trust him. Now, Eleanor, you funny little match maker, just give me up as a hopeless case. You can't marry me off yet awhile and you will have to make up your mind to it. I'm going home where I belong to take care of my mother and teach my Sunday school class, but I've had a glorious time while I was here and I shall enjoy thinking it over a lot when I get home."

Eleanor was baffled, but persistent.

"Don't you like the Captain?" she asked.

"Yes, a lot. He's going to take me a ride through the canyon tomorrow. Will you go along? He promised to ask you.

"Well, probably he didn't want me," said Eleanor significantly

"Well, I do," said Jean decidedly. "I told him I wouldn't go without you."

"Why, yes, I suppose I could take Betty on her pony.

"Do." said Jean, "I love to ride with Betty, and then you can talk to the captain when I get tired"

"You funny little girl! Well, don't you like Freeman Thorne?"

"Of course," said Jean. "He's going to bring me some Indian arrow heads to give to my boys at home."

Eleanor sat back and surveyed her inscrutable little sister hopelessly. There was one more question she wanted to ask, but somehow she didn't dare, because she hated to see that look of hurt dignity come into Jean's eyes whenever she spoke of Jasper Holt; but there lingered in her heart just a little uneasiness about th handsome outlaw whose part the girl had so loyally taken on her arrival, and about whom her lips had remained so significantly sealed ever since Yet, despite her uneasiness, she went to her hoom with the question unasked, and Jean locked her door and turned out her light with a sigh of relief that at last she was alone.

Senatorial "Courtesy."

From the Louisv... ...rrier-Journal.

A headline said Senator Lodge escorted President Wilson to the rostrum when he arrived in the Senate chamber to make his speech. The text of the dispatch says the president was escorted by a Senate committee headed by Senator Lodge. Senate formalities are exacting in their requirements. It is said that after John Sharp Williams, of Mississippi, declared he should never speak to James K. Vardaman again, so greatly did he disapprove of Mr. Vardaman's course, it became necessary, in obedience to the custom of the Senate, for the two to walk down the aisle together upon the occasion of Mr. Williams being sworn in to succeed himself as one of the senators from Mississippi. Senator Vardaman started down the aisle upon Senator Williams left when he should have been upon his right. "Pardon me, I'm on the wrong side," whispered Mr. Vardaman, hastily shuffling around his colleague.

"Yes, d—n you, you always are on the wrong side!" growled Senator Williams, to the great amusement of those near enough to hear him, unable to overcome temptation to speak to Mr. Vardaman.

Beginning with this year, some knowledge of the bible will be a part of the requirements for admission to Columbia university.

EX-SOLDIER ASKS ADVICE.

L H S. writes "I am a discharged soldier having amoebic dysentery. Although I have been in the hospital for months there is a question as to the proper diet. Therefore, I am writing to you for advice as to the proper thing to eat and not to eat. I have discontinued treatment as it did no good"

Take my advice and get into a hospital for treatment You may not have had very good luck, but you should not stop trying.

Diet makes no great difference one way or the other in amoebic dysentery. Amoebic dysentery is due to an infection with and animal parasite—the amoeba coli. While there is more of this disease in the southern part of the country than elsewhere, it is found in all sections: Edwards tells of having seen 20 cases in which the disease was contracted in Chicago.

The parasites burrow in the wall of the large intestines causing chronic tropical dysentery Nearly one-third of the cases develop abscess of the liver.

The old treatment consisted of irrigation with a quinine solution. This method cured a certain proportion of cases. A better treatment is the internal administration of powdered ipecac in large doses and the hypodermic use of emetine. Ipecac is a specific for amoeba diseases, but there are drawbacks connected with its use.

The Duel.

The gingham dog and the calico cat
Side by side on the table sat;
'Twas half past twelve, and (what do you think?)
Nor one nor t'other had slept a wink!
The old Dutch clock and the Chinese plate
Appeared to know as sure as fate
There was going to be a terrible spat.
(I wasn't there; I simply state
What was told to me by the Chinese plate')

The gingham dog went "bow-wow-wow!"
And the calico cat replied "mee-ow!"
The air was littered, an hour or so,
With bits of gingham and calico,
While the old Dutch clock in the chimney place
Up with its hands before its face,
For it always dreaded a family row!
(Never mind: I'm only telling you
What the old Dutch clock declares is true')

The Chinese plate looked very blue,
And wailed, "Oh, dear! what shall we do!"
But the gingham dog and the calico cat
Wallowed this way and tumbled that,
Employing every tooth and claw
In the awfulest way you ever saw—
And, oh! how the gingham and calico flew!
(Don't fancy I exaggerate—
I got my news from the Chinese plate')

Next morning where the two had sat
They found no trace of dog or cat;
And some folks think unto this day
That burglars stole that pair away!
But the truth about the cat and pup
Is this: They ate each other up!
Now, what do you really think of that!
(The old Dutch clock it told me so,
And that is how I came to know.)

BABY'S HAND IN WRINGER

The little baby of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Anderson, residing east of town, caught it's hand in a power ringer one day last week and while it did not break or crush any of the bones of the hand it did bruise it badly. Medical assistance was summoned and the little sufferer is now getting along nicely and will no doubt recover fully in a short time. It was fortunate indeed that the tiny hand was not crushed.—Kanawha Reporter

DAME NATURE'S LITTLE JOKE

Old Lady Seems to Have Played Favorites in Arranging Some Climatic Conditions.

Nature plays a cruel joke in the difference of altitude of India and Tibet. Had they been reversed one would have said that it was a providential arrangement. The traveler who crosses the Himalayas from Cashmere has to climb nearly twice as much as the traveler who comes from the north, because while India averages only perhaps 100 feet above sea level, Tibet averages 12,000 feet, and for this reason is called the Roof of the World.

Now, had India had this elevation, south of the mighty range of the Himalayas, and thus shielded from the north, as well as nearer to the equator, her climate would probably have been as temperate as Britain, and one of the healthiest in the world. While had Tibet lain as low as India, instead of being the dreariest, most inhospitable of lands, it would, by reason of its latitude, be one of the most habitable countries in the world.

Accidental Shooting Near Klemme

HERBERT GREIMAN ACCIDENTALLY SHOT SUNDAY WITH RIFLE BULLET

Leaden Ball Enters Base of Skull and Lodges in Front Between Eyes

Last Sunday afternoon Herbert, the fourteen year old son of Wm. Greiman living north of Klemme, was accidentally shot by his brother while the two lads were out target shooting. The boys were out in some tall slough grass when a large "shy-pock" bird flew up and the one boy blazed away at it and did not notice his brother in the grass ahead of him, who got in the line of fire and was the victim of one of the rifle's bullets. Herbert was immediately rushed to the Park Hospital at Mason City and was unconscious for some time but when he came to seemed to be quite well for the experience which might have caused his death.

The doctors say that the ball entered the base of the skull at the back, then the bullet followed the skull between the brain and the tissue finally lodging underneath the skull in front between the eyes Up to the time of this writing no operation has been performed to remove the bullet as the physicians are waiting further developments to determine if it will be necessary to operate.

Herbert had a very narrow escape and it seems a miracle that he was not instantly killed But at this report he is getting along quite well and seems to feel good.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT JERUSALEM CORN LOOKS LIKE?

Radpa Heifner has a very curious plant growing next to the side walk at his back porch that has caused a lot of guess work as to what it was. He does not know how the plant ever came to grow there but thinks perhaps it came from some chicken feed that was dropped near the walk.

The plant looks very much like ordinary corn, but unlike corn it springs out into a sort of bush instead of single stalks. It has five branches that look like corn stalks coming out of one hill It has no ears but the fruit, or seed part of the plant is in the blossom or tassel part, looking very much the same as sugar cane, except that the seed tassel hangs down It is hard to give an accurate description that will picture the plant. It is not as tall as corn as it is only about four feet high, but is also spread out about the same distance.

Those who are acquainted with the plant say that it will grow in very barren soil, with little moisture or cultivation.

HIGH PRICED HOGS

The high price of Iowa land has nothing on the high price of Iowa pigs. The other day a litter of pigs was sold at Algona, bringing over $17,000 for the litter, consisting of five sows and six boars, less than a year old. Still better is the price Mr. John Anderson paid for a boar at the sale at Algona when he paid $3,300 for a Duroc Jersey, a nine months' old son of the great hog at that city which $100,000 will not buy. At a hog sale held at Dows last week one hog sold for better than $6,000. Another big price was paid by some Sheldon farmers who bought a Poland China hog at another sale at Algona paying the handsome price of $25,000 for the animal. Talk about Iowa land selling for $300 or $350 an acre, what does it amount to when it comes to buying thoroughbred hogs?

NEW COP IN THE OLD BURG

Chas. Axe has been appointed to succeed Wm Lau, who resigned last week as Chief of Police of this city. Chas. has had the star before and is no new hand at the game, and no doubt he will make a good, considerate officer for Klemme.

LAKE EDWARD BEING DRAINED

Andrew Aageson, who has the contract for draining Lake Edward, tapped the lake last Thursday evening ad a twenty-inch stream of water has snce been steadily flowing out thru the tile. This drainage will redeem about sixty acres of lake bed, most of the land, we believe owned by Mr. Voorhees and the Benson Bros., who live on the west and east banks of the lakes respectively. It was a pretty little body of water, but being a shallow lake was not of much value as a fishing resort, but the hunters of the northern part of the county made many good bags of ducks there. Some time in the stone age it was the home of many Indians, as even in this late day many relics—arrow points, scrapers and stone hammers are still found. Indian graves have also been uncovered in the neighborhood different times in the past. We remember when we first came to the county of finding a fw arrow points at the lake, and John Benton, a former resident of this place who lived here at that time and in his youth was a resident on the banks of the lake, told of finding hundreds of arrow points. The lake will now be but a page in the history of civilization.—Britt News-Tribune.

AULGER BROS. BIG SHOW

Once every year this company visits our city, bringing to us a play, a band and orchestra and a tented pavilion, that proves to be our greatest treat of the season.

The name alone stands for merit, and that Klemme is appreciative, is proved by the crowds that are in evidence on the night of the big show.

This year they are presenting Addison Aulger's latest successful drama, "The Tenderfoot."

Their date here will be Monday, August 25th.

LEGENDS OF THE ELEPHANT

Many and Wonderful Are the Tales Told Concerning Its Virtues and Its Wisdom.

Naturally we talked first about elephants, of which he was almost as childishly fond as I. But in contrast to my poor knowledge, he possessed the rich lore of a man who had not only observed hathi for many years with loving interest, but had also listened to the tales of mahout and shikari from Siam to Ceylon. He poured out a hundred gifts from an apparently inexhaustible store. He told of "round-ups" in Burma, when the wild herds are driven into gigantic corrals to be tamed for the service of puny man. Then, turning to the names bestowed by doting mahouts on these colossal darlings, he pointed out that in this nomenclature of affection Lotus, or Lily or Pearl was only a commonplace, while even Silver Star and Golden Joy seemed inadequate. Folk tales, too, he repeated, among them the narrative of the wise elephant that used to be sent out from a certain city the morning after the king's death to bring back in its bejeweled howdah the man it had chosen as successor to the throne. Finally, just as we were leaving the bank of the stream, he spoke of the part played by the elephant in the story of him who became the Light of Asia. Before the birth of Gautama, destined to be the savior of mankind, his mother dreamed that a six-rayed star from heaven entered her right side, and of this star the token was a white elephant with six perfect tusks. Again, in the prophetic vision of his father, the second Fear was ten huge silver-tusked elephants, signifying the ten great gifts of wisdom, in strength whereof the prince should shake the world. In Buddha's middle years an enemy sought to take his life by sending against him a raging elephant, but the animal recognized the good head of the "Venerable Omniscient One" and stood in peaceful adoration before the divine person.—Asia Magazine.

Last Hole, Indeed.

The story is told of an ancient Scotch golfer whose companion died and was about to be buried. The Scotsman struggled out to the cemetery to be present at the interment, and arriving there, did not know where the grave was. He summoned a boy with a whistle. "Whist, lad," he said. "It's a new course. Whaur's the hole?"

Daily Thought.

Silence is deep as eternity, speech as shallow as time.—Carlyle.

Makes Improve- On His Farm

John Neuberger is hauling a lot of sand these days to his farm. He is building some fine new buildings that will be modern and up to date. Foundations are being laid for a combination corn crib and granary. The grain bins will be above the cribs, with a driveway thru the center of the building. This building will be about 28x32 feet, with 16-foot posts. The other building is a hog house which will be put up along the latest lines and will be about 26x40 feet when completed. His idea at first was to put up the buildings of hollow tile but owing to the fact that he can not secure the tile at this time he is putting the buildings up with lumber. This will make a fine addition to the farm.

PIGS TAKE JOY RIDE

Farmers near Klemme are now haulig their hogs to town in auto trucks. Tuesday we heard funny noises coming from a truck which flew past but we could not see who the farmer was that was driving it. The funny noises proved to be pigs and we presume they were enjoying their ride so much that they wanted to express their feelings with happy squeals.

WHY AMERICAN PEOPLE LIKE WESTERN DRAMAS

Because they are truly American plays, wherein American characters; real, live, breathing specimens of American manhood; work and play in a manner that all understand and appreciate. There is no disagreeable atmosphere about a Western play, no sprawling in moral misery, common to so many of our modern sex and other displeasing dramas. The Aulger Bros. offer for your approval, Addison Aulger's latest play, "The Tenderfoot," a story of the East and the West. Played for the first time in Klemme, on Monday, August 25th, in their big tent.

Swallowed a Pet Chameleon.

Four years ago I purchased a chameleon at the Wakefield fair, F. H. Sidney writes in Boston Evening Transcript. The little fellow made himself at home among our house plants and kept them clean of bugs; he became tame and answered to the name of Mickey. The tiny lizard would come when we called him; and he kept the plants free from bugs and the house clear of flies. On warm days Mickey would crawl out onto the piazza and sun himself. One day my neighbor's flock of guinea hens wandered around my house, and although Mickey had changed his color to that of the piazza boards, the sharp-eyed guineas spied him and made a rush, and before my pet could escape one of the guinea hens swallowed him. I complained of the guineas to my neighbor, but he said his guineas were too well bred to invade any one's premises; and that furthermore, lizards were reptiles and not fit for house pets.

Origin of Neck Shaving.

A study of the many necks to be seen on the walls of the National Portrait gallery enables me to state that the custom of neck shaving, although said to have been recently imported from America, was undoubtedly known and most likely popular in the days of Agincourt.

The portrait of Henry V. shows quite clearly that his neck was shaved, and if the king did it it must have been fashionable.

Most Americans have their necks shaved, and in one of Jack London's novels, the hero, a teamster, on strike, points out to his wife that he must patronize the barber because he cannot possibly shave his own neck!—London Express.

Where Wives Are Cheap.

What is the market in wives? It is said that among the Ainus the price of one is a bear ham. The Kamr figure varies from four to eight oxen, according to the competition for the particular bride.

A score of cartridges buys a wife in Uganda, and the Australian black gives the weight of his better half in butter, while the Tartars in Turkestan get as many wives as they want at the rate of a box of matches each.

In Wales wives are given away—they are paid for afterward, mostly in weekly installments.—Cardiff Western Mail.

TWO KLEMMEITES TAKE RIDE AMONG THE CLOUDS

Gerald McCullough, the long legged short slim barber, of this city, was the first Klemme man to take a ride in an airship. "Slim" and some more of the fellows were on their way to the fair at Mason City last Thursday evening and whn they passed the aviation field between Mason City and Clear Lake "Slim" was suddenly stricken with a mad desire to get a better view of the moon in order to determine if it was made of green cheese or India rubber. For this knowledge he signed up the death warrant and deposited fifteen dollars with the aviator, which we presume was to buy flowrs for the funeral if they should come down before they wanted to, etc. However, "Slim" lives to tell the tale but says he got too dizzy to see how the moon was made and will try it again. Sunday Marlin Croner autoed to Mason City and was accompanied by Fred and John Henschen and Chas. Lewis. "Ole" (Marlin) only had fourteen dollars and ninety-nine cents, this was not enough to take a trip to the moon, so his friends raised the other "copper" between them and took first mortgage on his life insurance. Well, "Ole" also signed up his death warrant, bade his pals good-bye and went skyward with the pilot. "Ole" has the goods with him to show that they went high. He broke a small piece off of a star and carries it around in his pocket to show his friends that he went higher than "Slim." Chas. Lewis has to hang a weight on his nose to keep is head down as he gazed at the sky so long Sunday that it warped his neck all out of shape but he may recover in time.

GYPSIES VISIT KLEMME, BUT SOON GET OUT WHEN THE COP GETS THEIR COAT

Last Thursday a load of Gypsies traveling in a Ford truck hit Klemme from the south. They sure had a loadful, for there were two women, one man, three or four kids, a dog, two chickens (one of which was a dead one too, ready for the pan), and just all kinds of bags, bedding, tin pans, etc.; too numerous to mention, besides bugs.

The Marshall at Belmond phoned up and told the cop here to hold them that a parcel post package had been stolen from a farmer and the gypsies were seen to pass there. In due time the Belmond cop was here, a search warrant sworn out and the gypsy wagon was searched, but only a lot of junk was found, the bedding was tipped out and the gypsy ladies done some tall cussing because the cops were mussing up their house. Nothing was found, the old gypsy all the time reminding the cops that he was "honest man, no steal." After a thorough search of the wagon they were invited to leave town. The parcel stolen contained clothing—which might easily have been concealed on the person of the "Gypsy queen" in her wid flowing garments. (Just a hint to the cop that the Gypsies might have the parcel post).

The delinquent list for license fees on Motor Vehicles has been delivered to th several County Attorneys for collection, and those who are in arrears for such fees better get busy and pay same, as the costs and penalties will increase as the days go by.

The list for Hancock county shows about 570 automobiles and 59 motorcycles of which the following number is designated to the twons below named: Britt 155, Kanawha 105, Garner 101, Woden 39, Klemme 35, Goodell 27, Corwith 51, Hayfield 11, Forest City 19, Crystal Lake 10, Miller 7, balance scattering.

Motor cycles: Garner 17, Britt 8, Kanawha 7, Goodell 6, Hayfield 3, Forest City 3, Klemme 2, Corwith 2, Miller 1, Woden 1. The other 9 are Hardin county and in this by mistake.

SAYS LAW TO STAND

WILSON AGAIN VETOES REPEAL OF DAYLIGHT MEASURE.

DECLARES COUNTRY NEEDS IT

Realizes Annoyance People Are Subjected to, But Avers Act Essential to Increased Production.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson for the second time vetoed a bill repealing the daylight saving law.

This is the law by which the clocks are set forward an hour on the last Sunday in March and turned back an hour the last Sunday in October. The first veto was several weeks ago, the repeal being attached as a rider to the annual agricultural appropriation bill.

White house officials and members of congress are unable to recall a previous instance of a president having twice vetoed the same bill. Efforts to pass the agricultural measure over the veto failed in the house and then the separate house repeal bill then pending was passed by the senate

Leaders in congress doubt that the two-thirds vote necessary to pass the repeal measure over the president's head can be obtained.

The president's message vetoing the bill follows:

"To the House of Representatives: I return this bill, H. R. 3854, 'An act for the repeal of the daylight saving law,' without my signature, but do so with the utmost reluctance. I realize the very considerable and in some respects very serious inconveniences to which the daylight law subjects the farmers of the country to whom we owe the greatest consideration and who have distinguished themselves during these recent years of war and want by patriotic endeavors worthy of all praise But I have been obliged to balance one set of disadvantages against another and to venture a judgment as to which were the more serious for the country

"The immediate and pressing need of the country is production, increased and increasing production, in all lines of industry. The disorganization and dislocation caused by the war have told nowhere so heavily as at the industrial centers—in manufacture and in the many industries to which the country and the whole world must look to supply needs which cannot be ignored or postponed.

"It is to these that the daylight saving law is of most service. It ministers to economy and to efficiency. And the interest of the farmer is not in all respects separated from these interests He needs what the factories produce along with the rest of the world He is profited by the prosperity which their success brings about His own life and methods are more easily adjusted, I venture to think, than those of the manufacturer and the merchant.

These are considerations which have led me to withhold my signature from this repeal. I hope that they are considerations which will appeal to the thoughtful judgment of the house and in the long run to the thoughtful judgment of the farmers of the country, who have always shown an admirable public spirit."

Ohio Hot After Profiteers.

Columbus, Ohio. — Forty warrants charging Ohio food dealers with food hoarding and profiteering have been issued by the state of Ohio and a number of arrests have already been made On top of this Governor Cox has asked federal authorities to confiscate approximately 2,000,000 pounds of meat and poultry which have been held in cold storage houses longer than the period allowed by the Ohio law He also has sent word to United States Attorney General Palmer that evidence has been uncovered by inspectors of the state dairy and food department that some of the big Chicago packing companies have shipped food into the state and then back to Chicago and again shipped into the state and sold "for the double purpose of deceiving the authorities of Ohio and Illinois and of keeping food necessities off the market in order that deficiency and higher prices might come together" On this alleged showing the governor asks the federal attorney general to bring criminal prosecutions, offering evidence gathered by Ohio officials.

Britain to Suppress Sinn Feiners.

London.—The government announces that owing to increase in crime in County Clare, Ireland, it has been decided to suppress all Sinn Fein and kindred organizations in that county.

Texas Democrats Split.

Fort Worth, Tex.—Two factions of Texas democrats, dissatisfied with the present party organization, met here and determined upon separate lines of endeavor.

Iowa After Food Barons.

Des Moines, Ia.—A special investigation of every cold storage house in the state has been ordered by State Food and Dairy Commissioner W. B. Barney in the drive against profiteering.

Recover Gold From Sea.

Buncrana, Ireland — Gold ingots worth 1,000,000 pounds have been recovered by salvagers from the wreck of the former White Star Dominion liner Laurentic, sunk January 26, 1917, off Lough Swilly.

FORD IS AWARDED SIX CENTS

Verdict of Jury Ends Long Drawn Out Libel Suit—Both Sides Claim Victory.

Mount Clemens, Mich.—Henry Ford's $1,000,000 suit against the Chicago Tribune, which editorially called him an anarchist, and which was begun more than three months ago, came to an abrupt end when a jury, after ten hours' deliberation, awarded the automobile manufacturer damages to the amount of six cents.

The jury had been instructed by Judge Tucker to regard the editorial complained of by Ford as libel and not justified by the defendant. He told the jury that the only question before it was the fixation of the amount of damages sustained by Ford.

After the verdict was read, Attorney Alfred J. Murphy, for Mr. Ford, said:

"The important issue in this case has been determined favorably to the plaintiff. He has been vindicated. Money damages were entirely subordinate and were not sought by Mr. Ford. He stands not only vindicated, but his attitude as an American citizen has been justified after a trial which raised every issue against him which ingenuity and research could present. His friends are entirely satisfied."

Weymouth Kirkland of counsel for the Tribune, said:

"We call it a victory for the reason that Attorney Alfred Lucking, in closing for Mr. Ford, stated that anything less than substantial damages would be a defeat for his client."

Mr. Ford was not in court. The Tribune was represented by Captain Joseph Medill Patterson, one of the publishers.

Mexico Warned By U. S.

Washington, D. C.—The Carranza government of Mexico has been warned that "if the murders and outrages of Americans continue the United States may be forced to adopt a radical change in its policy with regard to that country."

The government announced its action by publishing an exchange of notes with Mexico City, and prefaced its official statement with the explanation that the diplomatic representations referred to had been taken "in view of the long series of murders and outrages of American citizens in Mexico, culminating in the murder of Peter Catron in San Luis Potosi last month and the perpetration of other acts in disregard of American lives and property."

The communication to Mexico is couched in probably the strongest language used in any from this government since the exchanges preceding the Vera Cruz occupation.

No Reason for Boosting Coal.

Washington.—General Director of Railroads Hines told congress that while there had been some car shortage in the bituminous coal districts, he did not "anticipate any shortages in transportation which will be in any sense exceptional or abnormal or which will justify oppressive prices for coal."

"The danger that confronts the public in this matter," the director general asserted, "is that any shortage either in production by the mine or in transportation may be exaggerated so as to serve as a pretext for heavy increases in the coal prices, which, in my opinion, are already high, generally speaking."

Strike Endangers Populace.

Charleston, W. Va.—More than 100,000 persons, including thousands of children, face starvation in the mountain mining region of Coal River, Cabin Creek and Logan county, as the result of the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad shopmen's strike, according to reports.

State authorities have been asked to prevent further suffering. The strike has prevented food supplies from reaching the southwestern section of the state.

Bar Arms to Carranza.

Washington.—The Carranza government will not be permitted to import further arms and munitions from the United States for the present at least. This became known following the publication of the exchange of notes between the United States and Mexico in which the American government threatened a change of policy unless Americans in Mexico were adequately protected.

Wilson Calls Labor Meeting.

Washington. — International labor conference provided for in the peace treaty has been called by President Wilson to meet in Washington October 29.

Cheap Shoes Poor Sellers.

Boston, Mass.—Shoes retailing for $6 and $7 a pair are a drug on the market, according to witnesses who appeared at the grand jury investigation of the high cost of living.

Battle Deaths 49,498.

Washington.—Final casualty reports from the American expeditionary forces in France, made public by the War department, give the total battle deaths as 49,498; total wounded, 205,600; and prisoners, 4,480.

Gray Goes to Washington.

London. — Viscount Grey, former British secretary of state for foreign affairs, has agreed to represent the British government at Washington, pending the appointment of a permanent ambassador.

METHODS OF SALES

PLAN OUTLINED FOR DISPOSING OF ARMY SUPPLIES.

ORDER BLANKS TO BE ISSUED

To Be Distributed to Purchasers Through Postmasters and Carriers. Limit Weight of Packages.

Omaha, Neb.—Instructions regarding methods of handling orders for army food through the parcel post have been received by postoffice authorities here. Stores in this city will be distributed in the states of Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming, North and South Dakota and parts of Utah and Iowa. No packages in excess of 125 pounds may be sent through parcel post, the order says.

Regular parcel post rates will be charged for delivering the food. Orders of more than 125 pounds will be divided into packages of 125 pounds each or a fraction of that amount.

Order blanks are being prepared by the postal department and these will be distributed to all postmasters, who in turn will supply letter carriers with the blanks.

Anyone desiring to place an order for army food may obtain a blank from his mailcarrier. The person making the order will then fill out the blank and return it to the letter carrier with the cost of the food and delivery through the parcel post from the nearest quartermaster depot.

The letter carrier will give the order and money to his postmaster, who will mail it to the quartermaster depot in this city. These goods will be packed and delivered. Cost of delivery of food will be based on the gross weight (weight of food plus weight of wrapping and packing material).

Striking Actors Sued.

New York.—In an effort to prevent a spread of the strike called by the Actors' Equity association to other cities, the Producing Managers' Protective association announced that its attorneys had been instructed to bring injunction suits against the Equity in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, restraining it from interfering with productions in those cities. It also was stated that the suits for $500,000 filed by the Shuberts against the Equity and nearly 300 of its most prominent members were but the forerunner of suits to be filed by other managers, which would run into the millions. Ten theaters here have been closed because of the actors' strike and several have been made dark at Chicago and other cities.

Campaign Bringing Results.

Washington. — Word reaching department of justice officials here indicate that the nation-wide campaign against profiteering and food hoarding is bearing fruit. Reports from Chicago, St. Louis and Birmingham of seizures of great quantities of foodstuffs by federal officials who recently were instructed to proceed under the food control act to stop hoarding, have been recived. In Chicago 1,282 tubs of butter, worth $50,000, was seized and in St. Louis 184,100 pounds of coffee which has been showing rapid advances in price, and in Birmingham 100 barrels of sugar. Similar seizures have taken place in other industrial centers.

Children Killed in Collision.

Parkersburg, W. Va.—Eight persons were kiled when a street car, crowded with women and children en route to a picnic, and a railroad engine at Parmanco, two miles north of here collided. More than a score of others were injured, several of whom are expected to die.

A steam pipe of the locomotive was crushed into the car by the impact, throwing clouds of steam and hot water on the imprisoned inmates, many of whom were badly scalded.

Most of the victims are children. An eyewitness of the tragedy fell dead while engaged in breaking windows of the ill-fated car to release those imprisoned.

Prince of Wales Reaches Canada.

St. Johns, N. F.—Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David Windsor, prince of Wales, landed here after his voyage from England. He will tour Canada and later the United States. The heir to the British throne is 25.

Flour Prices Going Up.

Omaha, Neb.—Despite the attack on the high cost of living the price of flour has risen from 35 to 40 cents a sack in the past two weeks, while wheat prices remained unchanged.

Fighters Home by October.

Washington.—Demobilization of the army, "so far as combatant troops are concerned," will be completed the last of October, Secretary Baker announced.

Legislature Documents Stolen.

Helena, Mont.—The room of the journal clerk of the Montana house of representatives was entered the other night after the extraordinary session of the legislature had adjourned and the proceedings stolen.

Auto Plunges Into Canyon.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—Two persons were killed and five injured, three seriously, when a large touring car in which they were riding, plunged on the highway in Phantom canon, near here.

HOME TOWN HELPS

FREE PLANS FOR DWELLINGS

United States Housing Corporation's Scheme to Assist Own-Your-Own-Home Committees.

The fact that plans for dwellings, prepared by the United States Housing corporation during war time for various government projects, are to be made available for general public use by the own-your-own-home section, information and education service, United States department of labor, will serve to stimulate the interest of women in all parts of the country in this movement.

Several types of houses have been selected, and the plans for these will be given to own-your-own-home committees which are now carrying on campaigns in more than 40 cities. These plans are for dwellings that will best serve the needs of average families. Beauty and utility have been combined in the most practical manner and the plans are capable of many variations. It is explained that the purpose is not to interfere in any way with the work of local architects by thus providing government plans, free of cost, but it is expected that when the estimates in widely separated states are compiled the information will be of value to prospective home owners, while it will afford comparisons of the varying cost of construction in many parts of the United States. The employment of local architects is advocated.

Requests that local own-your-own-home campaigns be started without delay were sent out by the United States department of labor to 400 cities. Letters were addressed to mayors, labor organizations and the clergy as well as to clubs and other associations that have expressed willingness to aid the campaigns. While there are now 40 cities conducting well-advanced own-your-own-home campaigns, nearly 200 others have started the work of stimulating building.

SEES NEED FOR ZONING LAW

Writer Points Out Why Exclusively Residence Districts Should Be Afforded Proper Protection.

Chicago is asking the Illinois legislature for a zoning law—a law that will permit cities in Illinois to say what part shall be reserved for residence purposes. This is a thing that every city in the country has some interest in because it is a step in the right direction, asserts the Davenport Times. There must be factory and commercial districts, of course, and there must also be residence districts. But it isn't fair to a man who has developed a residence property, beautified the grounds, and arranged the house to suit him, to have all of sudden, some sort of business concern established next door, to the deteriment of his home. Every city in the country has numerous examples of just that sort of thing. Restricting residence property is going to become more and more the thing as the years go by. We have a few districts in Davenport that are thus protected, but there are many other districts where the people who own homes have no protection at all from the possibility of undesirable construction and business enterprises on the lots next door.

Building a House for Sunshine.

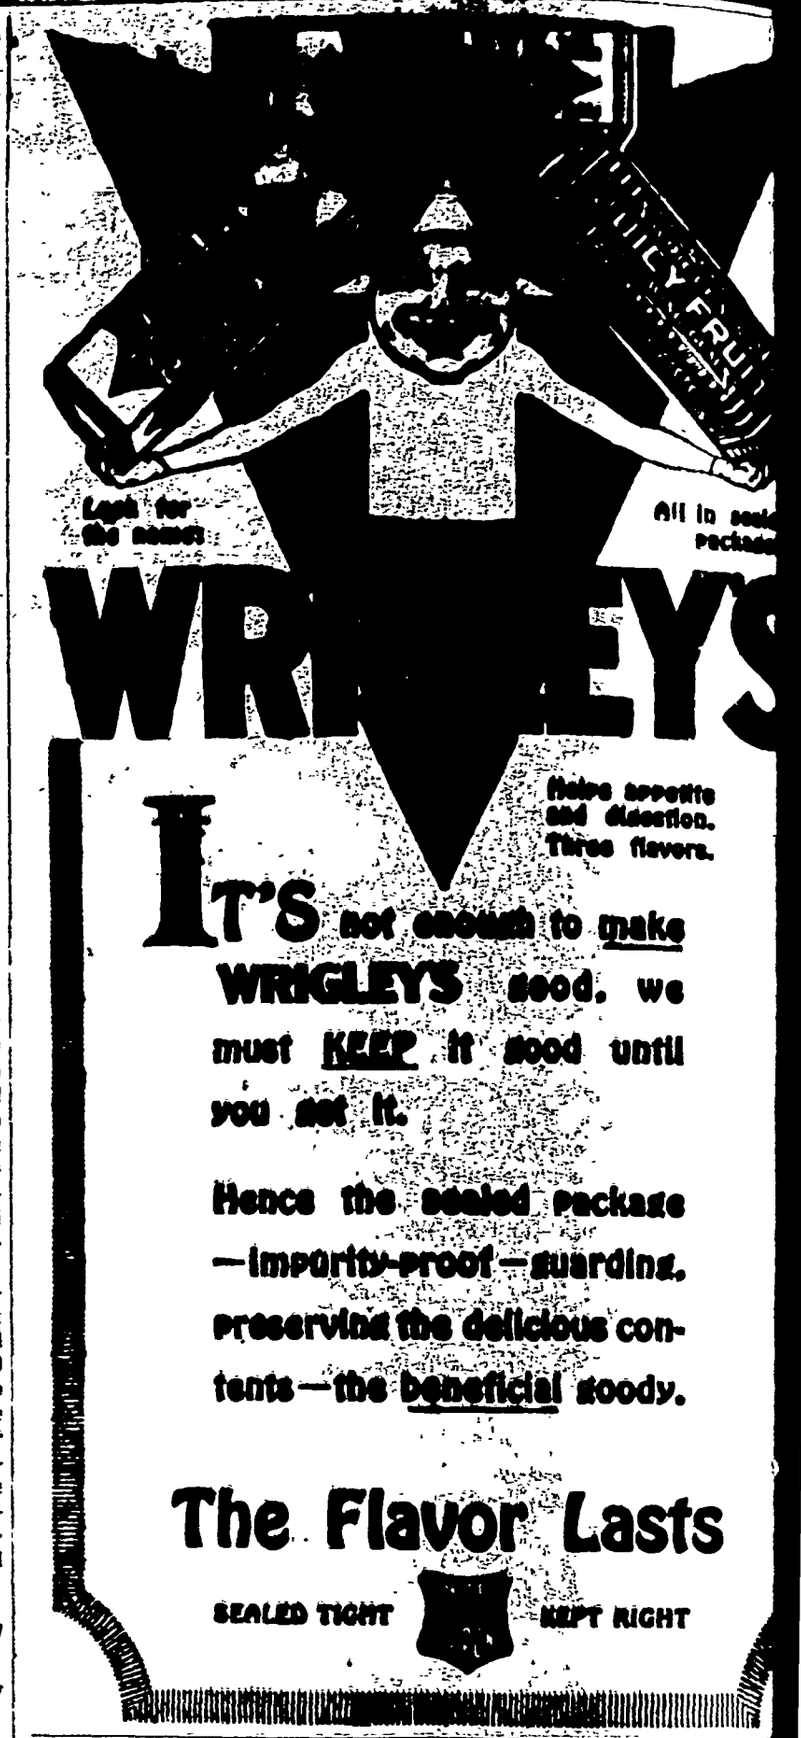
One of the problems of modern city planning is to get sunshine. For example, to quote a Canadian city planner propounding what almost sounds like a conundrum: "How shall a detached building be constructed and oriented so that not only the exterior wall surfaces, but also the surface of the ground around them shall have the direct rays of the sun for as long a time as possible on December 21?" The problem, it appears, can be worked out, and has been, in the case of at least one town, in which each house, and even each building in the business section, is a solution of this technical problem. It appears also that the way not to do it is to follow the long established custom of many builders in the north temperate zone and square the walls of the building with the points of the compass. The town that gets all possible sunlight has no north and south or east and west streets, and the walls of its structures stand at various angles with the weather vane, if there is one, on the church steeple.

Own a Home.

The ownership of homes makes for the spirit of co-operation for the good of the community, based upon full appreciation of the fact that no man's real success can be built upon the failure of those around him. Of the lasting impressions that one gains upon going to a new town are the character of its inhabitants and the character of the houses that they live in.

Roller-Skating in Business.

Roller-skating, once indulged in only for pleasure, has now become an important accomplishment in many business houses. Several large mail-order houses in both Chicago and New York require office boys to know how to get about on skates, giving them a carefully worked-out route between the different departments.



NEEDED A COURSE HIMSELF

Why Shabby Visitor Failed to Impress Merchant With His Offer to Improve the Memory.

The shabby visitor laid his hat upon a chair, and, drawing a booklet from his pocket, approached the merchant prince.

"I can tell you," he said, "how to become a great success; how to win independence for life."

"Three seconds gone from the minute I'm giving you," said the merchant.

"I have here," went on the thinker, "an infallible memory system. Master it, and you will master the world. You will not forget to post the letter your wife gave you this morning, and you can do without that worsted on your finger."

"My trouble," said the merchant, "is that I can't find a reliable system for forgetting things I want to. Your minute's up."

Sadly the visitor departed, but two minutes later he returned to the office breathlessly and excited.

"I forgot my hat!" he said.

Sailor's Fine Record.

Admiral William B. Caperton, late commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, who retired from active duty June 30th, had an unusual career. In the world war Admiral Caperton had the difficult task, requiring the greatest naval skill and diplomatic tact, of patrolling the Pacific waters and of having close relations with the governments of South and Central America. Since his graduation from the United States naval academy in 1875, he has seen active service in all waters, was in Cuban waters during the Spanish-American war, and had much service in Latin America in the subsequent revolutions, including the Mexican disturbance.

Don't Go From Bad to Worse!

Are you always weak, miserable and half-sick? Then it's time you found out what is wrong. Backache, headaches, dizziness, nervousness, stiffness, rheumatic pains, and disordered kidneys are often symptoms of serious trouble. Don't neglect them. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Local and State News

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Fuller returned last Thursday from their two weeks' trip to Chicago where they visited with relatives and friends. The Fullers had a very nice trip for they drove the entire distance in their car. They left here for Waterloo and then took the Lincoln Highway into Chicago, taking plenty of time along the way to view the beautiful scenery along the river. They returned by way of the Hawkeye Trail. They saw many interesting old things along the Mississippi river, for instance, there were many old log cabins and at one place up on the hill side was an old fashioned grind stone, the wheel of which was set in the crotch of a tree and with a great big handle to turn it.

Iowa News

William Graham of Dubuque, in his eighty-ninth year, has been practicing law in Iowa for sixty-three years and is still so busy that he hasn't had time to think of retiring. Between brief dictations to his stenographer and frequent reference to his books, he found time to tell his formula for longevity. Here it is: "Keep a clear conscience; attend the Presbyterian church regularly; and vote the democratic ticket every time."

The commercial club at Eagle Grove has decided to purchase a tractor, road drag, dump wagon and roller for use on the streets and the roads leading into town. It is proposed to assess each automobile owner in the city $10 and permit the business men to contribute as much more as they desire. In this way they expect to raise a fund of $5,000 for the purchase of equipment and the improvement of the roads of the vicinity for one year.

Rains during the past week have helped considerably the assurance of Iowa's 1919 corn crop, according to the weather and crop bulletin. The ears of corn are filling well and from all indications the 5 per cent above normal crop for the last ten years will prove out, according to Charles D. Reed, director. The report for the week ending August 12 is as follows: Good rains in nearly all portions of the state improved the condition of corn and pasture, but delayed threshing and slightly injured shocked grain where the wind blew the caps off the shocks. In some of the southwest counties the corn has fired seriously and the rain came too late to fully restore it, but only a small per cent of the total area of the state was thus affected.. The crop is unusually variable, ranging from that which is just beginning to shoot to that which is well past the roasting ear stage and beginning to dent. Generally the ears are well filled and are heavy and beginning to fall down. In many localities it is believed that the soil moisture is sufficient to insure the crop without more rain, but normal rainfall during the remainder of August would no doubt be beneficial It is reported in Chickasaw county that the corn crop will be safe from the frost on the first of September. Threshing is about two-thirds done in the southern and one-third done in the northern counties. The later threshing returns are not reassuring. The rain put the soil in good condition for plowing which was begun in many sections preparatory to seed winter wheat. The hot, dry summer has injured potatoes, it is believed, though some remarkable recoveries late in the season are on record and it is too soon to pronounce the crop an absolute failure. Hail and wind have done considerable damage in Clayton county, it is reported.

People of Des Moines are walking to and from work, unless picked up by generous auto drivers, since 600 motormen and conductors walked out unannounced All street car lines are tied up, with no cars running. Interurban system is not affected at present. Powerhouse employes are still at work, by permission of the union The strike was caused by failure of the company to pay the men $100,000 in back wages, awarded them by the arbitration board. This amounts to $150 p[illegible] man.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schneider autoed over from Garner last Thursday evening to get some gasoline as they said they couldn't get a single quart at the county seat town. Sure, whenever you want something real bad, come to Klemme, we can fix you out.

Last Wednesday during the thunder shower the lightning struck the Askew house on north Filbert street, knocking down the chimney and otherwise slightly damaging the house. A fire alarm was turned in but as the house did not catch on fire their trip was unnecessary. The house is at present unoccupied.—Belmond Herald-Press.

RECORD FOR HANCOCK COUNTY

The Smith Brothers (Dwight and Dale) of Garner, hold the record for the sale of the most land in Hancock county, having sold over a half million dollars worth in three weeks during the month of July. They have devoted all of their time to the good Iowa soil and especially to Hancock county which is excelled by none and as a result have a line of a great many good farms. Land is still increasing fast in value so now is the time to buy before the prices get much higher.—Garner Democrat.

William Chambers of Corwith, claims to own the only virgin piece of soil in Kossuth county. Last week he purchased a section lying six miles west of Corwith and two miles south that has no improvements, has never been plowed and has never produced anything but wild hay and prairie flowrs. He paid the handsome sum of $225 per acre. Mr. Chambers says he will put on a set of buildings and perhaps two sets, will drain, fence and otherwise convert this prairie into a productive Iowa farm. He says with Kossuth county over the top for good roads, the land will be worth $400 per acre in a few years. William has the right idea. Buy, build and create values.—Britt News-Tribune.

Dr. Fillmore lost his dog Jim at Algona on Home Coming Day. A local in one of the Algona papers and the name plate on the dog's collar soon re-united these two pals It seems the dog was all right and remained in the auto when he had been left till the fireworks started. These were too much for him so he hiked.—Corwith Hustlr.

There were a number of Klemme people at the North Iowa Fair each day that it was in session last week. The fair was better than ever this year.

While A. D. Gimer is away on his two weeks' vacation Val Josten is helping at the creamery. So for a couple of weeks we will have to take a chance on Valentine's butter, but at that we guess he can get by all right.

A. D. Gimer is taking a two weeks' vacation from his duties as buttermaker at the creamery. So the fore part of the week they autoed to Abbott, Iowa, for a few days visit with relatives and friends and then the family will go on to Des Moines to take in the Iowa State Fair.

WHAT THE PREACHER SAID

While the editor of a certain newspaper was away from home for a while he left the paper in charge of a minister of the gospel. During the minister's stay in the office the following letter came from a subscriber:

"I know very well that I paid my subscription to your paper the last time I was in your office. If I get any more letters from you as I received last week I will come in and maul the h—l out of you." The minister wrote in reply: I have been trying to get that out of the editor for ten years, and if you will come down and maul it out of him, then my dear sir, I have twenty members of my church I will let you operate on."—Kanawha Record.

Last week we asked someone to bring us a stalk of corn that was taller than the one Editor Frank Clark has on display at his office. Our good friend, Peter Gilbert, came to our rescue. Peter has a small field near the creamery and this morning pulled a hill from the patch. There wre two stalks in the hill, one measured thirteen foot and eighteen inches and the other thirteen feet and six inches. As he deliveren the specimns to us, he remarked that it was a shame to pull it at this time as it was not more than half grown. On one of the stalks there was an ear that measured seventeen inchs from the shank to the tip of the ear. This is not a case of Editor Frank telling his story first, but the stalks are living testiuonials of our honesty. One of them is at the Farmers National Bank and the other is just outside the Democrat office door.—Garner Demorrat.

Hostess Saw Reason for Thankfulness in View Set Forth by Her Young Visitor

Out on the east side the other afternoon a group of women were having a porch party. Now all except one were married, and the married ones constantly talked to the one young spinster on the subject of getting married. They even went so far as to suggest some candidate for her hand. And of one the young woman said, "Oh, he wouldn't do. He's been married, and I've not yet reached that stage where I have to take a widower."

Absolute silence followed that remark. With a wild start the girl realized that three of the women present including the hostess were second wives. She was just beginning to reach the most painful stage of embarrassment, when the hostess laughed easily, and tried to utter a remark that would put everybody at ease. "Thank goodness you haven't," she said. "Otherwise you might be in my shoes and I in yours."—Indianapolis News

Old, but Ever New.

A preacher at the close of his sermon said: "Let all in the house who are paying their debts stand up. Presently every man, woman and child, with one exception, rose to their feet.

The preacher sented them and said: "Now every man not paying his debts stand up." The exception, a careworn, hungry looking individual, clothed in his last summer's suit slowly assumed a perpendicular position.

"How is it, my friend," asked the minister, "you are the only man not able to meet his obligations?"

"I run a newspaper," he answered "and the brethren here who stood up are my subscribers and I—"

"Let us pray," exclaimed the minister.—Exchange

Ulterior Motive

He had just bought a 25-cent cigar and had gone out of the shop and down the street puffing like the Twentieth Century Limited when the cigar girl remarked to the next customer.

"That man has a very polite way of begging for a living."

"Why do you call a man a begger when he buys 25-cent cigar?" asked the customer, puzzled by her remark.

"That's easy," she replied. "A blind man will give a lead pencil when you drop a dime in his hat, but that gink's been wantin' to sell me some oil stock."

No Interruption

"How about that great speech you were going to deliver?"

"I am holding it in readiness," replied Senator Sorghum. "Just at present I am too busy playing the game to stop for conversational display."

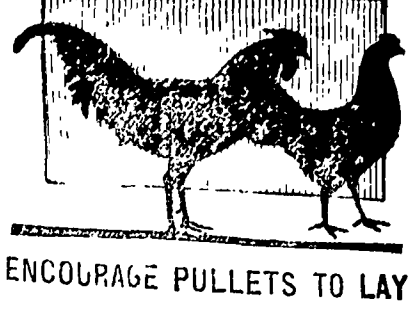
POULTRY



ENCOURAGE PULLETS TO LAY

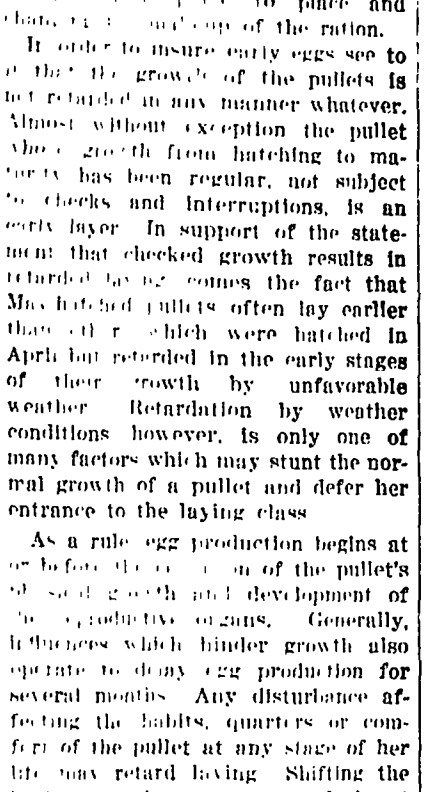
Avoid Any Interruption of Regular Habits or Radical Change in Fowls' Diet

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The growing pullet is a creature of habit. Especially subjected to regularity and vigor is exposed to disturbance and unusual commotion. It is essential for the good of the flock in its entirety that the pullets should grow and mature like clockwork, from the time of hatching to maturity. Growth is often retarded by seemingly trifling disturbances such as moving the pullets from place to place and changing the makeup of the ration.

In order to insure early eggs see to it that the growth of the pullets is not retarded in any manner whatever. Almost without exception the pullet whose growth from hatching to maturity has been regular, not subject to checks and interruptions, is an early layer. In support of the statement that checked growth results in retarded laying comes the fact that May-hatched pullets often lay earlier than other which were hatched in April but retarded in the early stages of their growth by unfavorable weather. Retardation by weather conditions however, is only one of many factors which may stunt the normal growth of a pullet and defer her entrance to the laying class.

As a rule egg production begins at or before the completion of the pullet's physical growth and development of the reproductive organs. Generally, influences which hinder growth also operate to delay egg production for several months. Any disturbance affecting the habits, quarters or comfort of the pullet at any stage of her life may retard laying. Shifting the birds from place to place and abrupt changes in the diet often disturb the fowl enough to retard laying. In fact, poultry fanciers who desire to keep pullets in condition for exhibition often use this means of keeping them from laying. On the average, pullets about to begin laying are more sensitive to disturbances than at any other stage of their growth and therefore require greater care in handling, but disturbances retarding the growth even of small chicks are likely to postpone the beginning of egg production.



A Flock of Well-Developed Pullets Ready to Begin Laying.

It is imperative that every poultry keeper exercise the maximum of caution from the time the chicks are hatched until the pullets attain maturity, so that the fowl will make regular growth and not be subjected to any factors which will stunt or divert the proper development of the birds. The alphabet of proper management of the pullets emphasizes such factors as correct nourishment, constitution, exercise, and cleanliness. Given the proper care and surroundings, the early-hatched chick will develop into a profitable, early and persistent producer of eggs. This is the goal toward which every poultryman should work.

YOUNG CHICKS NEED WARMTH

When Brooded by Hens They Remain Under Mothers Nearly All the Time for Three Days.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The first requirement of young chicks is warmth—a temperature comfortable for them. Chicks hatch in a temperature of 102 degrees to 105 degrees F. When brooded by hens they remain under the mothers nearly all the time for two or three days. Chicks shipped in small boxes are kept warm by the heat of their bodies so long as the boxes are not exposed to near-freezing temperatures, but this natural heat is not sufficient when they are given more liberty.

With your fingers! You can lift off any hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the hard skin calluses from bottom of feet.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs little at any drug store; apply a few drops upon the corn or callus. Instantly it stops hurting, then shortly you lift that bothersome corn or callus right off, root and all, without one bit of pain or soreness. Truly! No humbug!

UNHURT BY LONG IMMERSION

Articles Salvaged From Sunken Ships Found to Be Practically Unharmed by Action of Water.

Capt. Reginald Humphreys of the British navy in speaking of the action of the sea on vessels and merchandise says:

"Wooden ships, after being sunk, are rapidly covered with a marine growth which forms a sort of lime deposit and preserves the wood in some cases for several centuries. We are informed by one of the underwriters of New York who had charge of the salvage operation on the Oregon that bicycles were brought up from her hold that had been in the water over four months and yet looked as bright as when they went down; also silks the outer folds of which only were injured."

Some wines that had been recovered from a vessel sunk about fifty years brought $75 a bottle at auction. Gold and some other metals, glass and precious stones are never affected.

A new avenue of wealth is opened to the world by means of the salvaging submarine.

A NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—Miss FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

Imitations Are Dangerous.

AN OHIO druggist writes to "The Practical Druggist," a prominent New York Drug Journal, as follows: "Please furnish formula for Castoria. All the formulas I have worked with are either ineffective or disagreeable to administer."

To this "The Practical Druggist" replies: "We do not supply formulas for proprietary articles. We couldn't if we wanted to. Your experience with imitative formulas is not surprising, but just what is to be expected. When Castoria is wanted, why not supply the genuine? If you make a substitute, it is not fair or right to label it Castoria. We can give you all sorts of laxative preparations for children, but not Castoria, and we think a mother who asks for Castoria would not feel kindly toward you if you gave her your own product under such a name."

No mother with a spark of affection for her child will overlook the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher when buying Castoria.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Mothers Must Use Care.

Why do we so often call your attention to imitations of Fletcher's Castoria? Because it is a baby's medicine and imitations are always dangerous, particularly imitations of a remedy for infants.

Your druggist may not keep an imitation but they are to be found on drug-store shelves. Reliable druggists think only of the welfare of their customers. The other kind only of the greater profit to be made on imitations.

Your own judgment tells you that Fletcher's Castoria having for over thirty years at great expense held up its reputation, must jealously guard it. Then, it follows that this company must use the very best of material. Must employ experts in the selection of the herbs. Must retain skilled chemists in its manufacture.

Your same good judgment must tell you that these irresponsible imitators are trading on your credulity and the reputation built up by Mr. Fletcher, during all these years, for his Castoria.

GAVE NAME TO NEW ENGLAND

Result of Capt. Smith's Exploration of Shores of "North Virginia" in the Year 1614.

Capt. John Smith, famous for his romantic career, particularly the Pocahontas episode, is generally associated with Virginia, but he was also the first to discover the beauties of the southwestern half of the Maine coast and the first to draw a map of it, an exchange recalls. In 1614 he explored the shores of what was then known as North Virginia, but which he called New England, a name that has stuck, as have many others given by him.

In "A Description of New England," printed in London in 1616, Smith wrote "I have seen at least forty severall habitations on the Sea Coast and found about 25 excellent good harbors. * * * and more than 200 isles. From Penobscot to Sagadahock this Coast is all Mountainous and Isles of huge Rocks, but overgrown with all sorts of good woodes for building houses, boats, barks or shippes: with an incredible abundance of most sorts of fish, much fowle and sundry sorts of good fruites for man's use * * * The Salvages compare their store in the Sea to the haires of their heads; and surely there are an incredible abundance upon this Coast. * * * The most Northern part I was at was the Bay of Penobscot, which is East and West, North and South, more than ten leagues."

The northeastern half of the Maine coast was put on the map by Champlain. Ten years before Smith's voyage he had visited Nova Scotia, discovered and named the St. John river, and cruised as far south as the mouth of the Penobscot, which he, too, entered.

NERVES THAT TIRE EASILY

Sense of Smell One That Is Quickly Fatigued—Heat Nerves Practically Never at Rest.

The most easily tired nerves in the body are the nerves of smell. As you pass a rose in the garden the quantity of perfume that gets into your nostril must be many millions of billion of times smaller than the tiniest grain of sand. But rub the strongest perfume on your upper lip, and in a few seconds you fail to notice it, the nerve of smell is so quickly fatigued

The heat nerves and cold nerves, which are quite distinct from the nerves of ordinary sensation, also give over working very quickly. A bath that seems quite hot when you get into it very soon ceases to cause any particular feeling of heat.

Nerves of hearing and sight can go through an enormous amount of work. For sixteen hours a day they work hard, and are still willing to do more.

The nerves of the heart are the most untiring of all. From the first dawn of life until the last gasp they work without stopping for one instant.

Various Modes of Greeting.

Savages rarely osculate. The salutations of the Mongols, Malays, Polynesians, the Eskimos and Laplanders consist chiefly of smelling each other and rubbing noses; while in Tibet, instead of greeting by an adhesive touch, the mode of salutation consists of extending the tongue, but this is done simply because the custom of the country does not permit of any physical contact. North American Indians do not kiss excepting in the presence of death, when they profusely fondle and kiss the feet of their beloved departed ones. The native Australian and Fiji islanders salute with a hug like a bear. The Celtic race is not especially demonstrative and rarely kiss in public unless it is in greeting after a long absence, then men very rarely kiss each other and the women are not over lavish with their manifestations of devotion.

Margaret Fuller's Friends.

Went to see Hawthorne; it was very pleasant, the poplars whisper so suddenly their pleasant tale; and everywhere the view is so peaceful. The house within I like, all their things are so expressive of themselves and mix so gracefully with the old furniture. H. walked home with me; we stopped some time to look at the moon. . . . He expressed, as he always does, many fine perceptions, I like to hear the lightest thing he says.

Waldo and I have good meetings, though we stop at all our old places. But my expectations are moderate now; it is his beautiful presence that I prize far more than our intercourse. He has been reading me his new poems, and the other day he asked me how I liked the "little subjective twinkle all through."—Margaret Fuller's Journal.

London's Holy Well.

London's holy well may, after all, still be in existence. John Diprose, printer and historian of St. Clement's Danes, investigated the many rival claims put forward as to its site, including Lyons Inn, the old Dog tavern in Holywell street, and part of the site of the law courts, and found no evidence to support any of them.

He suggested that the holy well might be identical with the well covered by the stone-built house in St. Clement's churchyard looking like a burial vault above ground.

This, an inscription tells us, was erected in 1830 "to prevent people using a pump that the inhabitants had put up in 1807 over a remarkable well which is 121 feet deep, with 100 feet of water in it."

COULD NOT HOLD ARMADILLO

Writer Admits Underestimating the Strength of Little Animal He Was Trying to Capture.

When he was a small boy, W. H. Hudson, the author of "Far Away and Long Ago," came to grief while he was attempting single-handed to capture an armadillo. One day, he says, I was standing on the mound at the side of a moat, some 40 yards from where men were at work, when an armadillo bolted from his earth and, running to the very spot where I was, standing, began vigorously digging to bury himself in the soil.

Neither men nor dogs had seen him, and I at once determined to capture him unaided by anyone. I imagined that it would prove to be a very easy task. Accordingly, laid hold of his black, bone-cased tail with both hands and began tugging to get him off the ground, but could not move him. He went on digging furiously, and getting deeper and deeper into the earth, and I soon found that instead of my pulling him out he was pulling me in after him. It hurt my pride to think that an animal no larger than a cat was beating me in a trial of strength, and I held on more tenaciously than ever and tugged and strained more violently, until—not to lose him—I had to go down flat on the ground.

But it was all for nothing. First my hands and then my aching arms were carried down into the earth, and I was forced to release my hold and get up to rid myself of the mold that he had been throwing up into my face and all over my head, neck and shoulders.—Youth's Companion.

EPIGRAM IS NOT GREELEY'S

Great Editor Long Wrongly Credited With Advice, "Go West, Young Man, Go West."

The famous epigram "Go West, young man, go West," so commonly attributed to the pen of Horace Greeley, was not written first by that venerable editor of the New York Tribune, but by John L. B. Soule, editor of the Terre Haute Express. In 1851 Richard Thompson, afterward secretary of the navy, urged Soule to go west and grow up with the country, and praised the editor's talents as a writer. He wagered a barrel of flour that Soule could write an article that could be attributed to Horace Greeley.

The result of the suggestion was a column editorial about the West's opportunities for young men. It declared that Horace Greeley could never have given a young man better advice than contained in the words, "Go West, young man." Although stated merely as Soule thought Greeley might have put it, newspapers all over the country began to credit Greeley with the epigram. So widespread did the quotation become that Greeley's paper reprinted the editorial from the Express, with the following footnote:

"The expression of this sentiment has been attributed to the editor of the Tribune erroneously. But so fully does he concur in the advice it gives that he indorses most heartily the epigrammatic advice of the Terre Haute Express, and joins in saying, 'Go West, young man, go West.'"

How Do You Meet Emergency?

Your treatment of life's accidents is a test of your ingenuity. Things that can be done by rule can be relegated to the clerk. Things that demand the exceptional must be handled by the man who is master of affairs. When the accidental comes there is no time for preparing to meet it. It's an emergency that demands immediate action. If the note is not taken truly it brings discord. When life's notes out of the usual scale are not promptly and properly met they bring dissatisfaction and calamity. It's the mark of the master to be able to make the usual contribution to the whole of life. And best of all the man with the right spirit enjoys the challenge the accidental gives in life. It not only affords change but it suggests stages of development by which he can estimate growth.

Man Tested by Trials.

A man's dependability can be measured by the way he takes accidentals. The great mass of men can go along serenely when everything goes according to custom. But the appearance of the accidental throws them out of balance. The same thing is true of life. So many fellows lose their heads when they need them most. Trouble in any quarter seems to flash the red flag before them. The unusual unnerves them. Turmoil in the camp becomes contagious and they bolt when they should be the most steady. It takes trials to test the man. Any one who goes wild with the appearance of the accidental can never be trusted to meet life's real problems.

Doing.

When you have a thing to do, you will do it right in proportion to your love of right. But do the right, and you will love the right; for by doing it you will see it in a measure as it is, and no one can see the truth as it is without loving it. The more you talk about what is right, or even about the doing of it, the more you are in danger of exemplifying how loosely theory may be allied to practice. Talk without action saps the very will. Something you have to do is waiting undone all the time, and getting more and more undone. The only refuge is to do.—George MacDonald.

OLD RESIDENT OF GOODELL DIES

Charles Church, a retired farmer living near Goodell, an old resident of Hancock County and this point, passed away suddenly last Thursday at the age of eighty-two years. Mr Church was very active for a man of his age and was about the town nearly every day and driving about in his car. As usual he came to Goodell and after visiting around drove back to his farm. He had some odd jobs to do out around the field and went out to cut some weeds. Shortly afterwards he was found in a sitting posture, thought to be sleeping, but on investigation it was found that he was dead.

He is a brother of Henry Church of this city and also a has a brother Cyrus at Belmond. He lived at the home of his son, Frank, at Goodell, who happened to be at Mason City at the time of his father's death. He also has another son, W. P. Church, who runs the hotel at Goodell, besides having other sons and daughters residing in California, Montana, South Dakota, Colorado and Iowa.

BASE BALL TOURNAMENT

A big base ball tournament is being planned for the early part of next month.

The tournament will cover a period of two odays and eight teams will compete for the purses.

Renwick now has a fine diamond and a hot contest is expected between the best teams.

We have not learned what teams will be represented, but Bode, LuVerne, Humboldt, Webster City, Gowrie, Rowan and the Lost Island Giants with our home team would be able to make a fine showing.—Renwick Times.

CAR STOLEN AT FAIR

The Charles Steiner Buick was stolen while his son was attending the North Iowa Fair at Mason City Thursday evening. Lewis had taken all the precautions a careful autoist could to guard against theft and carried several small parts in his pocket—all that the Steiners now have to remember their automobile by. The Sheriff at Mason City was notified as soon as the theft was discovered, but took no action until noon the next day when Mr Steiner journeyed to Mason City to take the matter up. The car was a new one and is a heavy loss to the Steiners.—Britt News-Tribune.

WEARS GOOD GLASSES

CARROLL, Ia.—Earl C. Bundy, editor of the Carroll Times, put his nose glasses in his shirt pocket when he started out on an aeroplane flight with Lieutenant Carl Sturges of Carroll one day last week. At a height of 3,500 feet Sturges looped the loop several times, and the glasses came up missing at the end of the flight. Early last week three small boys, playing in a pasture south of town, found the missing spectacles and restored them to the owner. Notwithstanding a fall of 3,500 feet, unprotected by a case or even metal rims of any kind, the glasses were not even nicked. The owner claims that this is the high altitude record for falling glasses.—Globe-Gazette.

ENGLISH METHODIST CHURCH

Services next Sunday as follows:

The morning service will be at 11 o'clock, (note the changed time), followed by the Sunday School.

Union service at the park at 8:30 p. m. Everyone is very cordially invited to be present at all the services.

WEEDS MUST BE CUT

The city council order that all weeds must be cut down and removed from streets, alleys ,and lots before the sixth of September. If anyone fails to rmove weeds from his or her premises before that time then the town will hire a man to cut the weeds and the expense for the same will be charged against the lot.

FRANK GRUETZMACHER, Mayor

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bachman and daughter, left last Thursday for Montana where they expect to visit a sister of Mrs. Bachman's and also they will go to Seattle and other points in Washington, expecting to be gone on their vacation a month or six weeks.

Wedding Bells Ring In Klemme

YOUNG COUPLE MARRIED HERE SATURDAY

Mr. Lewis Lange and Miss Luella Miller, both of Decorah, Iowa, were married at the First Methodist parsonage last Saturday afternoon at four thirty by Rev. A. H. Meyer. Mr and Mrs. Wm. Keraus were witnesses of the ceremony.

These young people will make Klemme their future home adn they have taken a position at the Crystal Cafe. Both of the happy young couple grew up together from childhood at Decorah where they have resided practically all of their life. When war was declared Mr. Lange enlisted in the army and saw service in the Philippines, Honolulu, Japan, China, Guam Islands and Russia. He was in Russia about eight months prior to his discharge when he reached the United States only a short time ago, when h visited at home and then coming to Klemme where he worked in the Wiles Garage until he took the position at the Cafe. The Bride is a nice appearing young lady who is one of Decorah's best in the young people's circle. We welcome these young people to Klemme and extend congratulations and our best wishes for their future.

SCHOOL BEGINS MONDAY

Vacation is almost over now and Monday will see the boys and girls with books and tablets under their arms going in the direction of the school house.

They have had a fine vacation and should get right to work on their books and strive for higher marks than they did last year. The past year the attendance and study averages were very good, now this year all the students should try to beat their record of last year both in attendance and receiving high marks in their classes.

We will try to arrange to have school notes written for the paper each week so that the parents may know exactly how the school is progressing along the various lines.

AULGER BROS. PRESENT GOOD SHOW

Aulger Bros. appeared in Klemme Monday night and played to a large crowd. Their play "The Tenderfoot" was good from start to finish. Their band is perhaps the best band carried by any tent show playing in Iowa. They gave an excellent concert on the street before the show which sure was enjoyed by our citizens. A good show like Aulger Bros. always receives a good welcome whenever they come to town.

MASON CITY MOTOR CYCLE POLO MEN PLAN TO GIVE DEMONSTRATIONS AT COUNTY FAIRS

S. J. Snyder and his motor cycle polo men are practicing the new sport similar to auto polo and will give their performances at county fairs. Snyder and his men, Al Clemmons, Spavins brothers and Miller and Paura are slated to perform at the Hancock County Fair today and tomorrow. This new fangled idea promises to have more thrills than the auto polo which is now so popular.

CHILD RUN OVER BY PLOW DIES

Little Adrian Leonard, 18 months old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leonard was fatally injured when he was run over and struck by the share of a plow.

The little fellow was out in the field playing near where his father was plowing with four horses. He had strayed in some tall grass at the other end fo the field and had perhaps set down to rest and fallen asleep. Before the father could stop, the team had walked over the lad in the grass and he was struck by the plow.

California's Magnesite.

Magnesite, a mineral which is over 52 per cent. carbon dioxide, the gas which is used for charging soda water, ginger ale and similar beverages, is found in greater quantities in California than in any section of the country. California magnesite is probably excelled by few, if any, of the foreign deposits and is superior to much that is mined abroad.

WILL ENDEAVOR TO CLEAR UP VILLISCA AXE MURDER AGAIN

The old axe murder mystery at Villisca will be uncovered again when the grand jury meets October 14. The sheriff is busy serving out subpoenas to everybody they think have any knowledge of the Moore murder. From all indications it appears extensive and costly investigations will be made to clear up the mystery of the murders in the Moore home which have each year for the past seven years been the basis of some investigation.

CRICKETS INVADE KLEMME

Strange as it may seem, a flock of crickets decided to invade Klemme Saturday night and they did a very good job. There were crickets, and more crickets and these were joined by all their relation. Every place in town was full of crickets, they seemed to come as if by magic and disappeared in the same manner. However, there are still a few sticking around here yet. The crickets were so thick that they were trampled into th side walks and left large grease marks where the shoe prints showed plainly. It is a mystery where they came from and where they went to after leaving Klemme. They most likely flew over, or hopped across to Meservey as that would make a lovely place for them to die.

Iowa News

Dr. Edwin A. Schell, for ten years president of the Wesleyan college at Mount Pleasant, and during the war actively engaged in France with the work of the American Red Cross, has been appointed state manager of the Salvation Army campaign Sept. 21 to 28. After the signing of the armistice, Dr. Schell was removed from France and sent to Siberia, where he distributed thousands of sacks of flour, groceries, clothing and other needed material to the starving people.

Officials have been unable to identfy the body of a boy, not more than eighteen, that was found near a railroad track at Tara a week ago. The body is being held in a Fort Dodge undertaking establishment. Though in civilian clothes it is thought the boy had recently been discharged after overseas service. In his clothes were found several French coins and he wore a signet ring made from a French coin and with the word "Alsace" engraved on it.

On the property of Dr. D. O. King and H. E. Bateson in Eldora may be seen a bunch of ring-necked pheasants and wild ducks. The birds have become so domesticated that they eat from their owner's hands, having apparently lost the desire to flee from man who has hunted them in years gone by with such utter abandon. Mr. Bateson also owns several wild geese, but these in the fall and spring of the year particularly evidence a desire to flee from their moorings and join again their mates in the flight to the north and southlands. The fowls are a novelty in captivity and hundreds of people are attracted to their enclosures.

Seed corn is ready to pick. The ears are filling well and much has reached the denting stage. Husks are beginning to dry, according to the weekly weather crop bulletin, issued by Charles D. Reed. For the week ending Aug. 19 the report follows: "Good rain with moderate temperature and abundant sunshine were favorable for all crops. Corn has made excellent progress. Indications are that the yield will be far above normal. Threshing has progressed rapidly in spite of occasional delays by rain. In some localities threshing is completed. A fine third crop of alfalfa is being harvested. The yield and quality is as good as the second crop. Fall plowing has made good progress, the rain having put the soil in good condition for this work. Preparation of the ground for winter wheat is well along in some sections. Indications are that the acreage seeded to this crop will be considerably reduced."

At a meeting held at Earlham recently, sixty-five farmers in that vicinity organized the Earlham Farmers' Co-operative elevator with a capital stock of $50,000. On the day of organization $12,000 was subscribed.

A few days ago Michael Daley, president of the Ayshire creamery, received in his mail box on his farm, a letter containing $46 in currency. An unsigned letter with it stated that the money belonged to the creamery and that the sender had confidence that Mr. Daley would see that it would be returned.

Boy Thought To Be Kidnapped

Remmit Pals Disappears

Mr. and Mrs. George Pals, residing six miles east of Belmond and three miles southwest of Mererver, are grief stricken over dissapearance of their fifteen year old son, Remmit, who is thought to be kidnapped by parties driving past in a car toward sundown Sunday evening.

Remmitt had been playing with the neighbor children in the road near the farm. The other children had gone home a few minutes before and Remmit had lingered to play with the dog. An auto was noticed to pass but nothing more was thought of it until later when the boy failed to come home and he was nowhere to be found. The sheriff and county attorney were notified and they are doing all in their power to find the missing boy and get the kidnapper.

The boy is an adopted son, being adopted in Des Moines when but three years old. It is thought that some of his relatives are figured in the case as attempts have made before to lure him away.

Captain Clyde Doolittle of Delhi has announced his candidacy for the republican nomination for representative from Delaware county in the state legislature against S. W. Kleaus. He enlisted in 1917 and went to France in December of that year as a second lieutenant in the One Hundred Sixty-eighth infantry of the Rainbow division.

"Council Bluffs is to have a new million dollar enterprise. An elevator costing that amount is to be erected in North Riverside, farmers being behind the movement. The site will be on that formerly occupied by the vinegar and pickling works. Ten acres of additional ground adjoining it has been purchased for the purpose.

Had it not been for the screeching of a Northwestern locomotive, the town of Fairfax would be in ashes. The siren aroused the town and almost everybody got out to find that the Farmers' grain and coal elevator was on fire. Twelve cars of coal in the building were burned, as the flames razed the place. The loss was partially covered by insurance.

The Peoples' National bank of Waukon have contracted with a Dubuque firm for the erection of a magnificent new bank building. The general construction will cost $37,967, exclusive of vault equipment and other fixtures, and plumbing and heating. The building will be of cut stone construction with granite base and pillars, the dimensions to be 40x67 feet.

To see her 2-year-old child perched fifty feet in the air and fearing its death by falling, is an experience not craved by most mothers. Mrs. H. L. Penny, of Little Cedar, upon going into her yard, discovered that her little one had climbed to the top of the windmill tower. No one being at hand she was obliged to go up herself to bring the child down, which she did in safety.

After a complete traction tie-up of a week, street cars are again running on normal schedule in Des Moines. The street car men returned to work on the assumption that the city council will immediately pass the ordinance calling for an election which will provide a 6 cent fare, and that Judge Martin J. Wade of the federal court, will then order the receivers of the street car company to pay them in cash the $105,000 in back wages, which they demand.

He Believes in Dreams.

Never be vindictive, even in your sleep. Mr. Miggs, a well-known citizen of the North End, was chased by a bull in his dreams the other night. Across the pasture dashed Miggs, the bull gaining at every jump. Breathlessly Miggs reached the fence at last, and, safe astride the top, turned and kicked the bull in the nose, breaking one of his toes on the wall beside the bed. He is out on crutches this week.—Newark News.

Bismarck's "Sacred" Number.

Belief in the number 3 was almost a religion to Bismarck, for it ran like a vein of gold through all his dazzling career. He served under three months, and in three great wars and signed three treaties of peace. He was the father of the triple alliance, and from his three names and as many words in his family motto, "Strength in Trinity," and his three children, there was no period or undertaking in his life in which this "sacred" figure was not of the best omen to him.

STORY COUNTY SORRY THEY VOTED FOR MUD ROADS

Story county is waking up to the fact that they were in the wrong when they voted against paved roads and are now trying to forget their mistake for the time being by draining and graveling their roads. The merchants of Ames have dug into their pockets and are donating toward fixing up the roads near their city. Thet rustees in Washington township have arranged to drain, grade and gravel seven miles of highway. No doubt in two years Story County will vote and carry for good roads.

TIPS OVER IN FORD

Last Thursday evening when some of our Klemme people were bound for the dance at Goodell, they were witnesses to a queer auto accident. An old man driving a Ford was just a short distance ahead of them when he met a car coming from the opposite direction he turned out too sudden adn the old man and the Ford both hit the ditch. The Ford as witnessed by our Klemme friend, was fanning the breezes with all four wheels turned up and going like the deuce. The old man was underneath and crawled out between the door all covered with mud, took a look at the car and says, "Now don't that beat h—l." That was all he said. The boys helped him turn the car over and he proceeded on his way.

MESERVEY SCHOOL WINS PRIZES

The Canning Club girls of Meservey are to be congratulated for their effrts put forth to place their school among the other exhibits of every school in the county, winning first place in Junior class and fourth place in all classes.

It is hoped that next year a greater effort will be exerted by more in this very important work which means so much in the line of H. C. L. Each girl entered an individual jar, in which four won 1st and two won 3rd and 4th places.—Meservey Register.

LOOKS LIKE A GOOD CROP

Over near Sheldon the farmers are bragging about the big ears of corn they have. Last week C. C. Benns, living a few miles from Sheldon, brought to town a fine ear of corn. Although the corn was still in the milk when picked and the kernels were not matured, the ear weighed one and three-fourths of a pound. The kernels were counted and there were 1,012 on the ear, consisting of twenty-two rows. This farmer says he has a whole field of corn just like this.

THREE PLACES WERE ENTERED SATURDAY NIGHT

Thieves Keep Up Their Work Looting Around Dows

On last Saturday night the Miller-Lampert Lumber Co's. and the Farmers Grain and Lumber Co's. and the Dows Lumber Companies offices were broken into by persons breaking the windows. There was nothing taken to amount to anything. At the Miller Lampert Lumber office they entered thru the windows and started to unlock the safe. Mr. Delderich said that the safe was unlocked and while the parties were trying to get in, they simply locked the safe, which contained $25.—Dows Advocate.

George Kluckhohn was telling us of an interesting trip he and the family made recently. They drove thru to Richland Center, Wisconsin, in their big Hudson car. George says the scenery was grand around the Mississippi river; all up and down, thru timber and over rivers. They crossed the Mississipp on a ferry and enjoyed a three or four mle ride in their car over the water. The entire drive in Wisconsin was thru winding, woody roads and up and down hills and crossing streams and rivers every few miles. They crossed the Wisconsin river several times getting to their destination and each time they crossed George had to cough up "two bits" for bridge toll. One thing George noticed was the small farms. They had to be small as there was hardly enough level land to set a tomato can on. Some of the curves were so sharp that George said they would meet themselves coming back or they would wonder what car was smoking ahead of them and then they would discover that it was the smoke coming from the rear of their own car that they were meeting around a bend.

Buy Your Coal Direct From Mine—Big Saving

The high cost of coal is a thing of the past! At least, there are no complaints on this account—since the removal of government restrictions—among those who have learned how to buy coal. The way to buy coal is to get it direct from the mines. This saves several middlemen's profits. It saves hauling expenses. Anyone can now buy at mine prices, whether a carload buyer or one who uses only ten or fifteen tons a year. This has been made possible through a plan evolved by a large and old-established concern, THE BERNICE COAL COMPANY, with main offices at 937 So. Dearborn St., Chicago.

This company has thousands of customers in various sections of the United States who receive all of their coal direct from the mines. These customers are pleased not only because of the many dollars they save every year, but also because of the quality of coal they are getting. Many write that they never before had coal that makes so little dust, that burns so well, leaving so few ashes. If you are a coal user—whether you use hard or soft coal, much or little—it will be greatly to your advantage to write the Bernice Coal Co. at once for prices, stating kind and quantity of coal you use. TEETH IN FOOD ACT

CONGRESS PASSES LAW MAKING PROFITEERING A PENALTY.

FACE FINE AND PRISON TERM

Measure Extended to Include Clothing —Farmers Escape—First Move in Wilson's Program.

Washington, D C.—Without amendment and with practically no opposition, the house voted to amend the Lever food control act to extend its provisions to include clothing, containers of food, feed or fertilizers, fuel oil and implements used in production of necessities, and to penalize profiteering by a $5,000 fine or two years' imprisonment

Proposals to make the act apply to profiteering in house and room rents, adopted by the house in committee of the whole, were stricken out in the final vote

Efforts were made by both republicans and democrats to have the amendment's provisions cover necessities other than those included in the amendment as reported by the agricultural committees. Inclusion of kerosene and gasoline was proposed by Representative Strong, republican, Kansas, who said the prices of these products had increased 300 per cent in the last two years, but his amendment was rejected by a close vote, while that of Representative Newton, republican, Minnesota, to include raw cotton, was eliminated on a point of order by Representative Blanton, democrat, Texas.

Attempts to bring farmers and farm organizations within the jurisdiction of the amendment also were blocked.

Recommendations of Attorney General Palmer, to include retailers doing a business of less than $100,000 under the profiteering section so that the Department of Justice might go after the "little ones," were included in the measure as passed.

Five hours of general debate preceded passage of the measure—the first legislative step in carrying out the recommendations of President Wilson in his recent address to congress on the high cost of living.

U. S. Will Pay Bandits.

Marfa, Tex.—Major General Joseph T Dickman, commander of the southern department announced here that as long as the punitive expedition continues to follow a hot trail in pursuit of the bandits who held Aviators Peterson and Davis for $15,00 ransom, it will remain in Mexico, unless orders to the contrary are received from the War department.

That an effort will be made later to pay the remaining $6,500 ransom to Jesus Renteria or his family, was indicated by Gen. Joseph T. Dickman.

General Dickman took the position, at the time Captain Matlack rescued Lieut. Paul H. Davis without payment of the total ransom, that the United States government is too great to go back on its word, even to bandits. He stated that he feared Captain Matlack's action would result in treachery on the part of Mexicans at a later date, in case other Americans are captured.

Want Carranza to Quit.

San Antonio, Tex.—A copy of a manifesto calling upon President Carranza to resign, issued in Mexico City by Alfredo Robles Dominguez, prominent engineer and former adviser of President Madero, has been received here.

Dominguez, who heads his manifesto "Before the Danger," and who asserts that he is not a rebel nor an advocate of sedition, urges a provisional government to succeed Carranza. He charges Carranza is responsible for all the interior and exterior difficulties of Mexico.

The manifesto is being circulated, it is said, along the border in Mexico and in the Mexican quarters of this city.

Steel Workers Vote to Strike.

Youngstown, O.—Ninety-eight per cent of the steel workers voting on the question of a national strike voted in favor of a walkout, it was announced here by W. Z. Foster, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Labor's committee on organization in the steel industry, which canvassed the vote recently.

The matter of setting a date for the strike has been referred to a conference committee, Mr. Foster said, which includes Samuel Gompers.

Carload of Sugar Seized.

Chicago, Ill.—A carload of sugar was seized here by government agents in the campaign against profiteering The seizure followed the arrest of the fourth sugar jobber. All have been charged with profiteering under the Lever food control act.

Planning Air Derby.

New York.—Plans for a transcontinental aerial derby from New York to San Francisco, with more than $100,000 in prizes, are being made by the Aero Club of America.

German Polish War Imminent.

London—War between Poland and Germany is described as an immediate possibility by reliable news reports from upper Silesia, where the situation allegny is bordering on open warfare.

RESUME CONTROL OF SUGAR

Department of Justice and Food Administration Get Together.—Will Revoke Profiteers' License.

Washington, D. C.—Active control of sugar prices has been resumed by the government, through an agreement reached between the department of justice and the food administration that licenses will be revoked by the latter when it is shown dealers have been profiteering.

Sugar should reach the consumer at approximately 11 cents a pound, it was announced

"Our desire is to secure a fair price for the consumer," said Attorney General Palmer in announcing resumption of sugar control, "and we do not wish to pursue a wholesale policy of recommending the cancellation of licenses. Where trade adjusts itself to a fair price for the future, past transactions, unless flagrant, will not ordinarily be made the basis of a recommendation by this department for the cancellation of the license"

Sale of army subsistence supplies now in progress will cover virtually the entire surplus, the War department announced, including enough to give 2 pounds of meat and 1¼ pounds of canned vegetables to every person in the United States.

Oppose Federal Control.

Washington, D C—Federal regulation of the packing industry, proposed in the Kenyon and Kendrick bills now on hearing before the senate agriculture committee, found neither friends nor advocates in the long list of witnesses who aired their views during the past week. Though those testifying came from points all the way between Missouri and Georgia, and their occupations ran the gamut from farmer, through feeders, stockers, retail butchers and dealers in produce, and while their opinions as to the reasons and responsibility of high cost of living were diverse and occasionally most forcefully put, the packers, all insisted, should be left alone. Interference with them, the tenor of the statements ran, would be dangerous to the consumer and everybody else

Deported from United States.

New York Count James Minotto, son-in-law of Louis F Swift, the Chicago packer, and Dr Karl Muck, former leader of the Boston Symphony orchestra both of whom were interned during the war as enemy aliens, sailed from here for Copenhagen on the Scandinavian-American liner Frederick VIII

Dr Muck just before sailing, asserted that he was an American and not a German and that he sailed for Denmark "a man without a flag or country." He was in a bitter mood as he took his departure from the land in which he had been applauded

Eight Hours for Britons.

London. — Premier Lloyd George made the assertion during a long speech before the British house of commons that the government will embody in a bill recommendations for a joint industrial council of employers and employes and a 48-hour week and a living wage applying to nearly all industries. At the same time he used strong words in dealing with the necessity for the promoters of the league of nations to show good faith by reducing armaments. He said those who believed most in the league of nations must trust it most and the rest would follow them

Daylight Law Repealed

Washington, D C—Repeal of the daylight saving law has been accomplished. Both branches of congress passed the repeal measure over President Wilson's veto, the house by a vote of 223 to 101, and the senate 57 to 19. The bill provides for continuation of the daylight saving plan until the last Sunday in October, when it will be abolished entirely It is one of the very few measures which have twice been vetoed by a president and have become laws in spite of the veto.

Names Rhine Forces.

Washington—American forces which will remain in Germany after September 30, are the Eighth infantry, Seventh machine gun battalion, Second battalion of the Sixth field artillery, 35th field signal battalion, First supply train, First mobile ordnance repair shop, Company A of the First engineers, Field Hospital No 13, and Ambulance Company No. 26. This was announced by the War department.

WILSON TELLS SENATE TO ACCEPT OR REJECT TREATY.

PROSPERITY AWAITS SANCTION

Discusses Pact With Committee In Contradiction to All Precedents —Interprets Covenant.

Washington, D. C.—The senate must accept the peace treaty and the league of nations covenant as they stand, or reject them utterly, President Wilson told the senate foreign relations committee during a long conference at the White House.

There can be neither amendment nor reservation in the ratification resolution, if the senate would avoid sending the compact back both to the allies and Germany for reconstruction and reacceptance, he said.

The president added, however, with reference to Article X:

"I do hope that we are at liberty, contemporaneously with our acceptance of the treaty, to interpret our moral obligations under that article."

In a prepared statement the presidentdent also declared there could be no reasonable objections to interpretations accompanying the act of ratification, providing they do not form a part of the ratification resolution.

The president urged the imperativeness of speedy ratification, declaring the Austrian, Hungarian and other treaties await disposition of the German treaty, and that American prosperity awaits restoration of peace

Meeting the committee in a round table discussion in the east room of the White House, in contradiction to the precedents of more than a century and with the whole nation listening through the medium of a relay of public stenographers, the president went into many of the details of the peace negotiations and touched on all the hotly debated questions which have divided the senate in its consideration of the peace treaty While interpreting the league of nations covenant for the committee, the president declared it imposed no legal obligations for the use of American military force in protecting the territory or independence of any other nation.

But he added that the covenant might involve, in certain circumstances, an "absolutely compelling moral obligation" which might be even stronger than a legal promise.

Carranza Makes Protest.

Washington, D C.—Protest against the American cavalry expedition into Mexico after bandits who captured two army aviators and held them for ransom has been made to the State department by Mexican Ambassador Bonellas. Immediate withdrawal was demanded The text of the protest was not made public, and officials would not discuss it further than to say that no reply had been made.

Army officers have hopes that the punitive expedition will clean out bandits from the territory south of the border.

The American forces went into Mexico on a "hot trail," seeking the bandits who held the American army aviators, Lieutenants Davis and Peterson for ransom, and it was indicated that the Mexican protest would not hasten their withdrawal.

Yanks Within Rights.

Presidio, Texas.—Gen. Manuel Dieguez, commander of the Mexican federal forces at Chihuahua City, has sent word to Gen. Antonio Pruneda, commander of the Carranza column now operating near Cuchillo Parado, that the American troops are within their rights in pursuing bandits in Mexico. General Dieguez cited the treaty of 1882, between the American and the Mexican governments.

Encounter With Bandits.

Marfa, Texas.—Four Mexican bandits were killed by American troops in Mexico when an encounter took place in an adobe block house that the Mexicans had constructed in a mountain pass. The bandits fought desperately when they found they were trapped, and two escaped.

Carnegie Worth Many Millions.

New York.—Although Andrew Carnegie, steel magnate and philanthropist, declared during his lifetime that he expected to give away his huge fortune and "die a pauper," his estate, to be disposed of by a will, was "several times $50,000,000," it has been learned. Publication of a story to the effect that Mr. Carnegie had given away all of his estate with the exception of about $50,000,000 brought the statement that the estate was much larger.

Bandits Secure $60,000.

Nashville, Tenn.—Four masked bandits held up and robbed a Louisville & Nashville passenger train near here, securing $60,000 in cash.

Over 100,000 Enlistments.

Washington, D. C.—The army is 86 per cent demobilized, the War department announced. There have been 100,333 enlistments since March 1.

QUEER OLD "MAGIC MIRROR"

One in British Museum Known to Have Been Used by Aztecs and Ancient Mexicans.

Crystal gazing and the use of magic mirrors played an important part in religion and wizardry in the past, and though almost every nation had its own method these did not vary as much as it would be supposed.

Thus while Japan had in her inner temples mirrors which only the priest saw, and which were always to reflect the good and the beautiful for the gods, the ancient Mexicans taught that their god Texcatlipuco had a magic mirror in which he saw everything that happened each day in the world.

A real obsidian mirror with its strange textile string still attached is in the British museum now and was used by the Aztecs and ancient Mexicans for various purposes and very probably for crystal gazing. It is much the same as the other crystals used by so-called "wizards," so far as its shape is concerned. Even in recent years crystal gazing has been practiced, and it is said by those who have tried it that the mirror or crystal seems to disappear into a mist after it has been stared at in complete silence for a great length of time, and then—if ever—the visions appear.

Cure for Shell Shock.

Cases of shell shock and army nerves are being treated by an officer of the British medical corps through study of the patient's dreams. The afflicted man is persuaded to relate the features of any nightmares or other dreams, concentrating particularly upon the emotional recollections. The observant physician is able to identify, by the expression of the subject and sometimes by symptoms of terror, the exact nature of the disturbing vision, and thereby to adopt means to combat its influence.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

TAFT OUTLINES LEAGUE PLAN

Puts It Into Plain Language Free From Legal and Diplomatic Verbiage, in Response to Request.

MANY ARE CONFUSED BY PRESENT DEBATE

Danger That People Will Lose Sight of Basic Principles During Discussion of Complicated Details and Technicalities.

(By ex-President William H. Taft.)

The plan for a League of Nations is based on a few simple principles, which are not hard to understand when lifted out of the morass of technical discussion and freed from legal and diplomatic language. As the only authority best able to present these points without partisanship, ex-President Taft has been asked to put the matter into a few plain words for the benefit of millions of Americans who desire a better understanding of the plan but find themselves confused by the debate in the United States Senate. In response to this request he has written the following article

Purpose of the League.

The chief purpose of the League of Nations is to keep the world in a state of peace. Another way of expressing it is to say that the league is designed to prevent wars.

We have just finished the greatest, which is to say the most horrible, of all conflicts between nations. We have won a glorious victory. But that victory will be wasted unless this war has made the nations ready to put aside their differences and cooperate to end war forever.

It is not enough however, to provide for the prevention of wars and the settlement of disputes after they have arisen. We must foresee causes of trouble and remove them before they have reached an acute stage. Hence there must be provision for frequent consultations of members of the league for exchange of information, for agreement on common policies and for the gradual formation of rules of international law which at present are uncertain and incomplete.

The representatives of the great free nations which won the war have met at Paris and, after long consultation, have drawn an agreement which they believe will accomplish these ends. At the very least it will set in motion great changes which will result in universal benefit to all mankind. This agreement is called the Covenant of the League of Nations and it is a part of the peace treaty.

There will be no league worth talking about, however, unless the United States is a member. The decision as to whether the United States shall join rests with our Senate. The Senators, chosen by the people, will in the end vote as the people desire. For this reason the people themselves will decide whether or not the United States will join the league. In this question every citizen should have a voice. He or she can express opinion either by writing direct to Senators, by letters to the newspapers, by speeches in his lodge or local union or in conversation with friends.

Methods of Maintaining Peace.

Since the prime object of the League of Nations is to preserve peace—and to reap the benefits of peace—let us see how the league will operate to accomplish that purpose.

In the first place it will seek to remove the main causes of war. By the formation of an international court it will create a means for the peaceful settlement of disputes between nations. Then it will seek to compel the nations to make use of this court. This is nothing more nor less than an application of the rules and customs governing private individuals in civilized communities to the relations between nations.

Secondly, the League will seek to remove a great temptation to war by the general agreement to reduce the size of armies and navies. This will halt the race for military and naval supremacy which was largely responsible for the war just ended. The amount of armament any nation may maintain will be strictly defined. Thus it will be impossible for one country to overwhelm its neighbor by unexpected attack, in the way that Germany crushed Belgium and would have crushed France had not the other democratic nations gone to her aid. The idea is that each country may keep an army and navy large enough to enable it to fulfil its responsibilities as a member of the League, but no larger. The United States, for example, probably would be expected to keep a check on Mexico and the state of constant turmoil in that country would be taken into consideration in deciding how large an army we should need.

The third important safeguard which the League will set up is a system of penalties. This will make an outlaw of any nation or group of nations which goes to war in violation of the rules of the League. The outlawed nation will be boycotted by all the other members of the League and will find itself cut off from both business and social communication with the rest of the world.

How It Will Prevent Wars.

It is not claimed that the League of Nations will do away with war altogether. Every possible provision that human intelligence can devise will be made to settle international disputes peaceably. But should all these measures fail and two nations go to war, this is what will happen:

If both parties to the dispute have observed the rules of the League, the other nations will stand back and let them fight it out. War under such circumstances is difficult to imagine, however, because before the angry nations will be allowed to fight in accordance with the rules of the League, so much time must elapse that in all probability their anger will cool and they will reach an amicable understanding.

What we have to fear is that some nation will go to war in defiance of the League, and every precaution has been taken to suppress such a nation by the immediate use of the united power of the other nations. If international boycott failed to bring her to terms she would have to face a combined international army and navy. The founders of the League believe that the mere possibility of such a situation will prevent any nation from violating its agreement. Does anyone think that Germany would have begun war five years ago if she had known that nearly all the other great powers would combine against her?

Doing the World's Work.

In addition to settling international disputes peaceably the League of Nations will provide means for doing much of the world's work more systematically and effectively than can be done now when each nation is working only for itself. The people you know best and like best are those who work with you on the same job. It will be the same way with the nations of the future. The more they work together, the sooner they will come to understand and like each other.

For example, the League will establish an international organization for the bettering of labor conditions in different countries, for the protection of women and children and the native inhabitants of civilized and semi-civilized countries. One of Germany's greatest crimes has been her barbarous treatment of the helpless people in some of her colonies. One of the chief tasks of the League will be to look after peoples that are not strong enough to protect themselves.

The League will appoint commissions to take charge of various international undertakings so that they may be carried on, not for the benefit of any one nation, but for the benefit of the whole world. Provision will be made for promotion of fair and equal trade conditions.

These are only a few of the benefits the world will derive from the League. As time goes on we shall find more and more tasks at which the nations can work in common and a greater number of opportunities to remove causes which stir up jealousies and animosities between races and peoples.

Objections Answered.

Of course we cannot hope to make the great changes such as the League of Nations will bring about without opposition. Fortunately the war has taught us the great advantages of international co-operation. It was only by good team work that the free liberty loving nations were able to whip Germany.

The treaty which the United States Senate is debating obligates the members of the proposed League to protect one another against attack from enemies outside their own boundaries bent upon conquest. Although this agreement (Article X of the Covenant) is vital to any arrangement which seeks to prevent war, it has been attacked on the ground that it would draw the United States into wars in various parts of the world and force us to send our boys to fight in quarrels which did not concern us.

We should remember, however, that the main purpose of Article X is to frighten nations tempted to wars of conquest from yielding to the temptation, by the certainty that they will be crushed if they begin such a war by a universal boycott and a union of forces of the world against them. If a big war breaks out again, the United States will be forced to take part in it whether we have a League of Nations or not. We tried hard enough to keep out of the war with Germany but found we couldn't.

A little war contrary to the League rules could be handled by the powers close at hand. Certainly it would not be necessary to send American troops to suppress an uprising in the Balkans when prompt action by the armies of Italy or some other nearby powerful nation could suppress the fracas before American troops could even get started.

Great Gain for Small Loss.

We had to make many sacrifices to win the last war and we made them willingly because we knew they were worth while. It will be the same in a smaller degree with a League of Nations. When men form a business partnership each one has to make concessions to the views and opinions of the other members of the firm. When we enter the League of Nations we may have to give up certain privileges, but the losses will be small compared with the profits.

The United States will not have to sacrifice her independence or right to make her own decisions.

Bill, the Builder
Hits the Nail on the Head When He Says—

"'Tis Cheaper to Build Well at the Start Than to Make Repairs All Your Life"

Don't make the mistake of buying building material by price only. Under-size timbers that cannot stand the strain of weight are a poor investment at any price. A little careful attention to the requirements of your material will often save the expense of frequent repairs.

Strength Where Needed

When you buy lumber here, you get with it the benefit of our years of experience. We will gladly check your specifications with the plans and verify the correctness of the sizes you order. We will see that the sizes ordered are adequate to carry their load safely and enduringly.

Don't let this important feature escape your attention

All the roads and highways in Twin Lake Township included within the watershed of the district

To the Trustees of Twin Lake Twp. and to Ed Olson, Township Clerk of Twin Lake Township and to Mrs. Heiko Rust Sr., Bessie P Mitchell, Ellsworth and Jones, Annis & Rohling; The Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company The Merchants' Loan and Trust Company; Clarion Savings Bank, Clarion Iowa C L. Swenson; W. M Healy Jesse Anderson, and Hattie L. Fuller Lienholders and to all other persons in any way interested in any of the following described real estate situated in said District, Hancock County, Iowa.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on Dec 26, 1918, there was filed in the office of the County Auditor of Hancock County, Iowa, a petition addressed to the Board of Supervisors of said county asking that certain lands above described be incorporated into a drainage district and that a system of drains be constructed for the relief of said district.

You are further notified that on Jan. 2, 1919, A. J. Lilly was appointed engineer to make a survey, plat, profile and field notes of said proposed district, and that on Aug 8, 1919, said engineer filed his report recommending the establishment of said district and the construction of a system of drains for the relief of said district and that said report is now on file in he office of the County Auditor of said county and may be amended at any time before final action is taken thereon by the Board of Supervisors and that Oct 1 1919 has been fixed as the time of hearing thereon. All objections and claims for damages must be filed in the office of the County Auditor not less than five days before said hearing

Witness my hand and official seal at Garner, Iowa, this 25th day of Aug. 1919.,

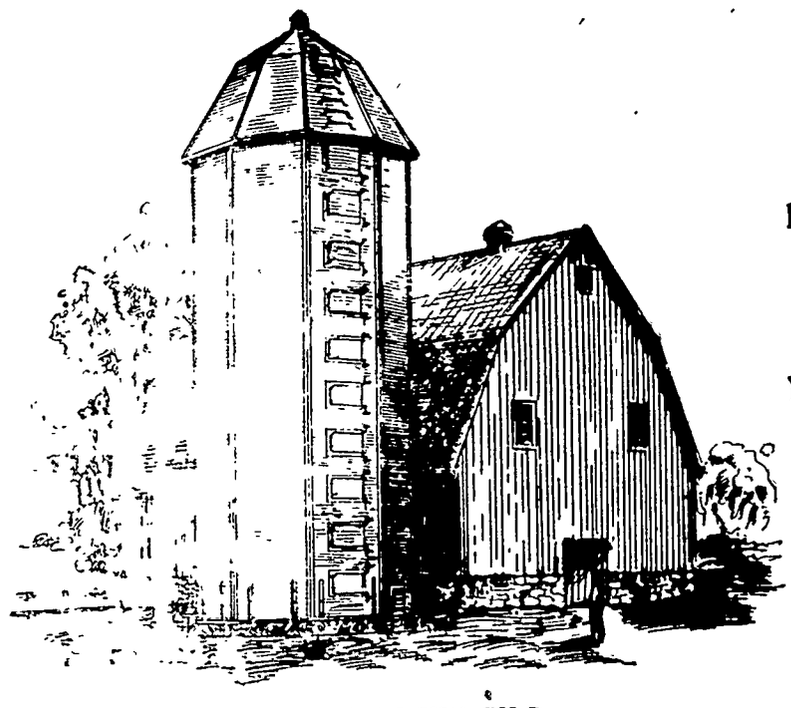
The Endlock Silo
The Silo with a 5 Year Guarantee

NO BANDS to adjust

NO HOOPS to disapoint



NO GUY WIRE to molest

You can build it Yourself!

THE "ENDLOCK" SILO

Won't Blow Down, Can't Fall Down

The "ENDLOCK" has a double tongue and groove around the silo between each successive layer of units. These interlock at the end—fit into and against a shoulder or lock—hence the name of the silo: "ENDLOCK." This makes a perfectly tight wall and the fact that these tongues are three quarters of an inch from both inside surfaces, with proper and scientific provisions to take care of any and all expansion, making the wall solid at all times. This silo will stand all weather conditions and at the same time keeps the silage in perfect condition at either the center of the silo or near the wall. The "ENDLOCK" is simply the BEST.

Differed as to Needed Sleep.

Sir Philip Sydney calls sleep "the poor man's wealth," and he might have added, "it is every man's health." The "immortal Alfred" of England divided the day into three portions of eight hours each, assigning one for refreshment and health of the body by sleep and exercise, another for business and the third for study and devotion Bishop Taylor considered three hours' and Richard Baxter four hours' sleep sufficient for any man.

Insulted Great Scientist.

When a pension was voted to Faraday for his remarkable additions to scientific knowledge, from which untold millions of pounds sterling have inured, an ignorant lord was selected to announce the grant, but informed Faraday that he did not think much of this science business, and added: "Now, really, Faraday, it's all a humbug anyway, isn't it?" The insulted chemist refused the pension until other better informed officials apologized humbly for the impertinence of "his lordship."

In Good Company.

A contemporary wants to know what's become of the old-fashioned man who used to say: "I says, says I." When last seen he was standing on a street corner in close conversation with the old-fashioned man who says, "Sezee to me, sezee." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Effect of Mirrors.

Mirrors lend a finished appearance to rooms. Hang them in dark corners or opposite windows and doors so that they will give interesting pictures. Fire screens, really antique ones, or else modern imitations, are also good for "finishers." So are some of the delightful little footstools that are now made. Pottery and brass are also good for finishing touches.

Strathcona's Tie to Scotland.

Among the vast possessions of the late Lord Strathcona must be counted the little island of Colonsay, one of the fragments of the shattered west coast of Scotland. The snug island is the first haven which the storm-tossed voyager reaches after he leaves the shadow of the Mull of Kintyre and crosses the open sea past the terrible Torrans rocks.

Reason for Placing Wedding Ring.

The third finger is the only one where two principal nerves belong to two distinct trunks; the thumb is supplied with its principal nerves from the radial nerve, as are also the forefinger, the middle finger, and the thumb side of the ring finger, while the ulnar nerve furnishes the little finger, and the other side of the ring finger, at the point of extremity of which a real union takes place; hence the ancient reason for placing the wedding ring on this finger.

NOT STRONG ON NAVIGATION

Records Show Weakness of the Spanish Sailor in That Highly Important Matter.

The Spaniards of early days were most adventurous explorers, but, for all their discoveries of distant lands, very poor navigators. After coming upon the Solomon islands in the western Pacific, they could not find them again, and they were lost for 150 years.

The water supply of their ship was kept in big earthen jars. As it was impossible to provide in this way enough to drink for a long voyage, they took to sea many large mats, which when it rained were spread to catch the drops. From the mats the water was drained off into the jars.

Probably it was no fault of Columbus, but his first voyage to America, which occupied two months' time, was mainly a drift. When he landed in Cuba he thought he had reached Asia, and sent an expedition inland to treat with the great khan of Tartary. Later his flagship, the Santa Maria, ran aground off the coast of Haiti, the natives of which island welcomed him most hospitably. He noticed three or four of them whose naked bodies showed scars which they attributed to bites inflicted by man-eating savages of another island called Canba. Whence the origin of the word cannibal—the island inhabited by these anthropophagi being Porto Rico.

Less than 100 years ago Spain still claimed ownership of the whole Pacific ocean, declaring it a Spanish lake on the strength of Balboa's discovery in 1513. Acting upon this idea, the Spanish government ordered the commandante of San Francisco to seize the Columbia, the first vessel that carried the American flag around Cape Horn.

JUDGED BY SKILL AT POKER

Business Man Estimated Another's Qualifications by His Actions at the Card Table.

After all, there is something to be learned from cards, even if the average gambler, who plays for the passion of the game and for the money he expects, does not always learn it. A Los Angeles business man recently asked an acquaintance, "What do you think about Smith? Do you think he would be a good man to take into our firm?" His friend looked him straight in the eye and replied, "Yes, I think he'd be a first-class man to tie to and I'll tell you why. I played poker with him last night and I discovered that he plays safe. He is what religious-minded people call 'good;' what cautious, conservative people call 'wise,' and what the world in general, especially the bold ones, call a coward—but a man whom nearly every one secretly respects, envies and almost fears. He never takes a chance. He doesn't gamble. When he bets on a hand he's got the cards. When he doesn't get the cards he lays his hand down with a smile and waits until they 'come to him,' and then he plays 'em to the limit. Yes, I think he's safe all right. He could play with my money at a card table or in the field of business."—Los Angeles Times.

Familiar Quotations.

The quotation worthy of the high title of "familiar" must have stood the test of time and passed unhurt through the shifting tastes and fashions of centuries. In its lofty or in its humble way it must show that, like Shakespeare, it "was not for an age, but for all time." I use the word "humble" because the rhymes of childhood, of the nursery, fulfill the requirement of age in a quotation worthy to be called familiar. Their intrinsic, their abstract merits may appear slight, they may even seem to be sheer nonsense, but they are passed on by mothers and nurses and by the children themselves from generation to generation. We may be assured that they would not thus have lived and prospered if they had not possessed some quality, however slender, of genuine worth, of real humor or imagination, which gave them permanence.—Henry Cabot Lodge in Scribner's.

Neutral Nations in War Time.

James Mill, the English economist, as early as 1821, almost a century before ruthless submarine warfare was introduced by Germany, advocated a commercial world traffic under free tariff rules, so far as concerns the property of individuals in time of war. In this way, he thought, an end would be put to the difficulties and disputes about the maritime traffic of neutrals. In advocating this principle he was of the conviction that all nations gain by the free operations of commerce. Mill was also of the opinion that what justifies a nation to enter a war also determines when a war ought to cease. He maintained that if the legitimate object of a war is compensation for an injury received and security against future injury, then a successful war ought to terminate immediately on the attainment of the object.

Spitzbergen's Mineral Wealth.

The enormous coal and iron beds in Spitzbergen belonging to the British company, the Northern Exploration company, Ltd., have been investigated by experts who declare that the iron beds are without exception the largest in Europe. Whole mountains of massive iron ore are said to have been observed, covering a distance of over 17 miles and situated on good harbors, in which ships of any size can enter. One of the English coal beds is stated to be working already.

Infancy and old age spanning five generations, touched hands at the home of John L. Woolsey and wife in Atlantic a few days ago. Those at this gathering were "Grandma" Emaline Earl; her daughter, Mrs. John L. Woolsey; the latter's son, Frank, and the infant son of the latter. "Grandma" Earl is in her ninetieth year. She makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. John L. Woolsey, who is past 70 years and who has been married fifty-two years.

"Three bills are now before the congress for universal military service, any one of which, if passed, will Prussianize the United States, create a great military machine and make the league of nations and its anti-war program absurd" said Adjutant General Louis G. Lasher on his return from Washington, D. C. "These bills are the Chamberlain bill, the Kahn bill, and the Wadsworth bill, all introduced within the past few days and so similar that one is forced to admit that the militarists of the country have united their forces, first upon the Chamberlain bill; if this fails then the Kahn bill, and if the public will not stomach this, then the General Staff bill, approved by Secretary of War Baker, and introduced by Senator Wadsworth by request. All of these bills have as their foundation conscription of the boys of the nation for military service in time of peace, and the upbuilding of a great military machine, which if authorized will soon do away with the National Guard, the organization which bore the brunt of the fighting in France, a volunteer organization of young patriots, who live at home, despise professional militarism, and have as their spiritual guides, the minute men of '76. The Iowa National Guard association has asked Iowa's delegation in con-

Here Are the Twenty Queries

The 20 questions ... President Wilson ... were submitted to him by Senator Fall at the conference held at the White House Tuesday, are in brief as follows:

Questions I to IV ... the president, with the ... proclaim a state of peace ... many and permit the resumption of trade?

Question V asks the president to define the ... of Nations ... tions will have to ... the peace treaty before such ... be perfected."

Question VI ... Nations reduce the ... in the United States?

Question VII What do Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland and Switzerland think of the League of Nations? Will they join and when?

Questions VIII and IX deal with resumption of commerce with Germany.

Question X asks if certain committees as stipulated by the league have been appointed and ... whom they make report.

Questions XI and XII To what does Germany renounce certain territorial rights which it is required to renounce under the treaty?

Question XIII inquires as to the disposition of overseas possessions by the United States.

Question XIV—What ... made of Germany's ... sions?

Questions XV, XVI ... for interpretations of certain ... of the league and the reason for the appointment of ... tain commissions.

Questions XVIII, XIX and XX—Why was the United States made a party in the appointment and fulfillment of certain missions ... the settlement of foreign plebiscite questions?

The President's Reply

President Wilson's letter to Senator Fall, replying to the senator's 20 questions on the treaty and the League of Nations, is as follows:

"My Dear Senator Fall:

"You left yesterday in my hands certain written questions which I promised you I would answer. I am hastening to fulfill that promise.

"I feel constrained to say in reply to your first question not only that in my judgment I have not the power by proclamation to declare that peace exists, but that I could in no circumstances consent to take such a course prior to the ratification of a formal treaty of peace. I feel it due to perfect frankness to say that it would in my opinion put a stain upon our national honor which we never could efface if, after sending our men to the battle field to fight the common cause, we should abandon our associates in the war in the settlement of the terms ... and dissociate ourselves ... responsibility with regard to ...

League to Pass on Disposition.

XIII ... a provisional ... as to the disposition of ... possessions whose con- ... is dependent upon the ... League of Nations ... The United States is a party to that provisional agreement.

XIV ... agreement between France and Great Britain with regard to African territory, of which I am cognizant, concerns the redisposition of rights already possessed by those countries in that continent. The provisional agreement referred to in the preceding paragraphs covers all the German overseas possessions in Africa as well as elsewhere.

XV No mention was made in connection with the settlement of the Saar basin of the service of an American member of the commission of five to be set up there.

XVI It was deemed wise that the United States should be represented by one neutral of the commission for settling the new frontier lines of Belgium and Germany because of the universal interest America's representative would add to the commission a useful element of ... disinterested judgment.

League to Pick Saar Commission

XVII The choice of the commission for the Saar basin was left to the council of the League of Nations because the Saar basin is for 15 years to be governed under the care and direction of the League of Nations.

XVIII Article 83 does in effect provide that five of the members of the commission of seven to fix the boundaries between Poland and Czechoslovakia should be nominated by certain countries because there are five principal allied and associated powers, and the nomination of five representatives by those powers means the nomination of one representative by each of those powers.

"XIX. No such commission has yet been appointed. (The commission referred to is that for the fixing of the Polish boundaries.)

"XX It was deemed wise that the United States should have a representative on the commission set up to exercise authority over the plebiscite of Upper Silesia for the same reason that I have given with regard to the commission for settling the frontier line of Belgium and Germany.

"Sincerely yours,

"WOODROW WILSON."

Burmese Marriages.

A curious idea among the Burmese is that people born on the same day of the week must not marry. Hence each girls carries a record of her birthday in her name, each day having a letter belonging to it, and all children are called by a name that begins with that letter.

Roughing It.

Robert and his father were stranded one night out in a country district. Their car had broken down and they were obliged to stay all night in a humble little home. Everything was strange to Robert, who was strictly a city child. When he returned home I heard him tell his little neighbor friend: "Say, it was great! We slept on a feather bed and washed in their dishpan on the back porch."

The Trouble.

"Jim was always a fellow to take time about everything."

"Well, he doesn't have to take it now. The judge is giving it to him."

GREEN'S AUGUST FLOWER

In the good old summer time when fruits of all kinds are getting ripe and tempting, when cucumbers, radishes and vegetables fresh from the garden are too good to resist, when the festive picnic prevails and everybody overeats and your stomach goes back on you, then is the time for "August Flower," the sovereign remedy for tired, overworked and disordered stomachs, a panacea for indigestion, fermentation of food, sour stomach, sick headache and constipation. It gently stimulates the liver, cleanses the intestines and alimentary canal, making life worth living. Sold everywhere. Adv.

Useful Portable Saw.

The portable circular saw, attachable to any lamp socket and capable of doing much of the hand saw's work, is not the least of recent labor-saving devices. Such a tool, self-contained, weighs only 12 pounds, has three and one-quarter inch blades, and consists of a sliding cylindrical base carrying the blade and a one-quarter horsepower motor having a speed of 12,000 revolutions per minute. Special gauges insure accurate cross cut or rip-saw work. The tool is guided by an ordinary saw handle, a push button controls the operation and a suitable guard gives it safety.

AS YOUNG AS YOUR KIDNEYS

The secret of youth is ELIMINATION OF POISONS from your body. This done, you can live to be a hundred and enjoy the good things of life with as much "pep" as you did when in the springtime of youth. Keep your body in good condition, that's the secret.

Watch the kidneys. They filter and purify the blood, all of which blood passes through them once every three minutes. Keep them clean and in proper working condition and you have nothing to fear. Drive the poisonous wastes and deadly uric acid accumulations from your system. Take GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules and you will always be in good condition. You will feel strong and vigorous, with steady nerves and elastic muscles. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules are imported direct from the laboratories at Haarlem, Holland.

They are a reliable remedy which has been used by the sturdy Dutch for over 200 years, and has helped them to develop into one of the strongest and hearthiest races of the world. Get them from your druggist. Do not take a substitute. In sealed packages—three sizes.—Adv.

HAD THE SPIRIT OF GERMANY

Old Man Green Might Have Been a Model for Some of the Hun Statesmen.

A senator was discussing one of the German counter-propositions.

"The spirit of the thing," he said, "reminds me of old man Green.

"Old man Green's house was overrun with rats, and he hired a rat-catcher for $2 to clean the rodents out.

"The rat-catcher worked like a Trojan. He killed a whole packing case of rats. Then he said to the old man:

"'There you are, Mr. Green. My ...

"'There you are, Mr. Green. My job is done. You'll have no more trouble with rats, and you needn't bother about these here dead ones, neither. I'll cart 'em away myself.'

"'How much do I owe you, friend?' said old man Green.

"'Two simoleons, like what was agreed on, boss.'

"Then the old man pointed at the huge packing case and said in a protesting voice:

"'Don't I get nothing for all them rats?'"

Going to Be Married.

My husband and I went to a strange town to be married, and after we got off the car we asked a man the way to the courthouse. He told us where to turn after so many blocks and we started out and arrived at the jail. Wonder if he was married, too?—Chicago Tribune.

Calling the Turn.

"In our army," said War Correspondent George Patullo, "it doesn't pay to pull the long bow.

"I once heard a captain scold a doughboy for pottering too long over his meals.

"'Why, when I was on the west coast,' said the captain, 'I had to hunt my breakfast in the jungle. Out I'd start every morning, and I'd penetrate several miles into the wilderness, shoot my food, skin it, cook it, eat it, and be back in camp again inside of half an hour.'

"He paused impressively, then he added:

"'Of course you've heard of the west coast?'

"'Oh, yes, sir,' said the doughboy. 'Baron Munchausen came from there, didn't he?'"

Wonderful Persian Shawl.

Mrs. Bernard E. Grace, a collector of St. Louis, submitted a rare Persian shawl at the New York Metropolitan museum. The owner had traced its history back 163 years. The shawl is eleven feet by four feet, worked in long flowing designs of the palm leaf and the River of Life with the stories of the mosques. The predominating colors are mellowed garnets and brown, with alternating sheens of steel gray and rusty brown. A Washington expert to whom the shawl was shown said its make-up probably represented the lifetime of the weavers.

Can't Puncture Nor Blow Out

DAYTON AIR-FLEX TIRES in the past 7 years have been used by thousands of owners of light passenger and delivery cars in all parts of the civilized world, and have conclusively demonstrated:

1st—They can't puncture nor blow out.

2nd—They ride as smoothly as pneumatics.

3rd—They give much longer wear than the average pneumatic.

4th They absolutely will not injure the car.

They have been endorsed by 100,000 or more satisfied users, including the late George Westinghouse and Edward Grey, formerly Chief Engineer of the Ford Motor Company.

Piers of live, elastic rubber built about one inch apart inside the casing and vulcanized or welded to it take the place of an inner tube.

Nothing can happen but wear.

They are made only in 30x3 and 30x3½ sizes but can be used on cars using 31x4.

TO ELECTRIFY FARM HOMES

Arrangements Have Practically Been Made to Bring Electric Service to 50 or More Rural Homes

Several meetings of farmers held within the past few weeks, have about brought to a climax the matter of electrifying a large number of farm homes in the vicinity of Garner The boys who reside on the Woodrow Wilson Way northwest of here started the ball rolling several weeks ago by perfecting an organization and now we larn of a line or possibly several lines that will be extended in a north and easterly direction that will carry current to homes five or six miles removed from our city Practically every farmer living north and east of Garner clear to the Reformed church in the German settlement have signified their willingness to become parties to such a project and there appears to b but little doubt but that the line will be built Commercial Engineer C C Tessier has been assisting the farmers in every way possible—meeting with them and giving them the benefit of knowledge acquired in extending lines of this character. We know of no one more entitled to the convenience and comforts to be had from improvements of this kind than the farmer Within the next decade, no farm equipment will be quite complete without electric power, light and heat Democrat

Urges Ratification on Ground That Peace Treaty Will Collapse Without League of Nations.

Herbert Hoover is so deeply concerned over the opposition to the League of Nations in the United States that he has let himself be interviewed at length on the League situation. In a talk with the New York Times correspondent in Paris, the Food Administration Chief asserts that having caused the League idea to prevail America cannot abandon it. We cannot withdraw, he says, and leave Europe to chaos. "To abandon the League Covenant now means that the treaty itself will collapse."

Mr. Hoover's wide acquaintance with conditions both here and abroad, his reputation as an administrator, a man of great affairs who deals with facts, not theories, make his statement one of the most important contributions to the recent League discussions.

"There are one or two points in connection with the present treaty," said Mr. Hoover, "that need careful consideration by the American public We need to digest the fact that we have for a century and a half been advocating democracy not only as a remedy for the internal ills of all society, but also as the only real safeguard against war. We have believed and proclaimed, in season and out, that a world in which there was a free expression and enforcement of the will of the majority was the real basis of government, was essential for the advancement of civilization, and that we have proved its enormous human benefits in our country.

American Ideas Have Prevailed.

"We went into the war to destroy autocracy as a menace to our own and all other democracies. If we had not come into the war every inch of European soil today would be under autocratic government. We have imposed our will on the world. Out of this victory has come the destruction of the four great autocracies in Germany, Russia, Turkey and Austria and the little autocracy in Greece. New democracies have sprung into being in Poland, Finland, Letvia, Lithuania, Esthonia, Czechoslovakia, Greater Serbia, Greece, Siberia, and even Germany and Austria have established democratic governments beyond these a host of small republics, such as Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan and others, have sprung up, and again as a result of this great world movement the constitutions of Spain, Rumania, and even England, have made a final ascent to complete franchise and democracy, although they still maintain a symbol of royalty.

"We have been the living spring for this last century and half from which these ideas have sprung, and we have triumphed. The world today, except for a comparatively few reactionary and communistic autocracies, is democratic, and we did it.

"A man who takes a wife and blesses the world with several infants cannot go away and leave them on the claim that there was no legal marriage.

"These infant democracies all have political, social and economic problems involving their neighbors that are fraught with the most intense friction. There are no natural boundaries in Europe. Races are not compact: they blend at every border. They need railway communication and sea outlets through their neighbors' territory

"Many of these states must for the next few years struggle almost for bare bones to maintain their very existence. Every one of them is going to do its best, to protect its own interests, even to the prejudice of its neighbors.

Governments Lack Experience.

"We in America should realize that democracy, as a stable form of government as we know it, is possible only with highly educated populations and a large force of men who are capable of government Few of the men who compose these governments have had any actual experience at governing and their populations are woefully illiterate.

"They will require a generation of actual national life in peace to develop free education and skill in government

"Unless these countries have a guiding hand and referee in their quarrels, a court of appeals for their wrongs, this Europe will go back to chaos. If there is such an institution, representing the public opinion of the world, and able to exert its authority, they will grow into stability. We cannot turn back now.

"There is another point which also needs emphasis. World treaties hitherto have always been based on the theory of a balance of power. Stronger races have been set up to dominate the weaker, partly with a view to maintaining stability and to a greater degree with a view to maintaining occupations and positions for the reactionaries of the world.

"The balance of power is born of armies and navies, aristocracies, autocracies, and reactionaries generally, who can find employment and domination in these institutions, and treaties founded on this basis have established stability after each great war for a shorter or longer time, but never more than a generation.

"America came forward with a new idea, and we insisted upon its injection into this peace conference. We claimed that it was possible to set up such a piece of machinery with such authority that the balance of power could be abandoned as a relic of the middle ages. We compelled an entire construction of this treaty and every word and line in it to bend to this idea.

"Outside of the League of Nations the treaty itself has many deficiencies. It represents compromises between many men and between many selfish interests, and these very compromises and deficiencies are multiplied by the many new nations that have entered upon its signature, and the very safety of the treaty itself lies in a court of appeal for the remedy of wrongs in the treaty.

Benefits of the League.

"One thing is certain. There is no body of human beings so wise that a treaty could be made that would not develop injustice and prove to have been wrong in some particulars. As the covenant stands today there is a place at which redress can be found and through which the good-will of the world can be enforced. The very machinery by which the treaty is to be executed, and scores of points yet to be solved, which have been referred to the League of Nations as a method of securing more mature judgment in a less heated atmosphere, justifies the creation of the League.

"To abandon the covenant now means that the treaty itself will collapse.

"It would take the exposure of but a few documents at my hand to prove that I had been the most reluctant of Americans to become involved in this situation in Europe. But having gone in with our eyes open and with a determination to free ourselves and the rest of the world from the dangers that surrounded us, we cannot now pull back from the job. It is no use to hold a great revival and then go away leaving a church for continued services half done.

"We have succeeded in a most extraordinary degree in imposing upon Europe the complete conviction that we are absolutely disinterested. The consequence is that there is scarcely a man, woman or child who can read in Europe that does not look to the United States as the ultimate source from which they must receive assurances and guardianship in the liberties which they have now secured after so many generations of struggle.

"This is not a problem of protecting the big nations, for the few that remain can well look after themselves. What we have done is to set up a score of little democracies, and if the American people could visualize their handiwork they would insist with the same determination that they did in 1917 that our government proceed."

FARMER RUNNING STILL

WATERLOO, Ia.—Ol' Kaintuck and Tennessee have nothing on Iowa when it comes to distilling the liquor warranted to kill at 100 rods, as a still was recently discovered on a farm near Eldora, Hardin county.

When the alleged "moonshiner" was brought before Commissioner J. E. Dempster in Waterloo, he was bound over to await the pleasure of the federal grand jury. The accused, W. T. Joyner, was sent to the Linn county jail in lieu of posting an appearance bond of $5,000.

M. L. Healy, deputy United States marshal, after complaint was made, investigated and found the still in a clump of willows. The still had all the required apparatus of a real moon-shine plant, equipped with a 50-gallon boiler, pipes 'n everything. The still was yet warm while some brand new whisky was found in the container. A quantity of cracked corn and corn meal also was found, according to testimony before Commissioner Dempster.

The Vedda of Ceylon.

Students have long been interested in the Australian aborigine, the African bushman, and the Ceylonese Vedda. The Veddas are recorded as far back as 543 B. C., and their customs and beliefs are thought to have changed but little since the stone age. But the Veddas, on report of a traveler lately returned from the wilds of Ceylon, are reaching the end of this peculiar interest. For now "hardly a Vedda faithful to the traditions of his ancestry survives: not one, perhaps, that wears leaves for clothing and depends for subsistence solely on the products of the jungle." The bow and arrow are still sometimes used, but have been largely supplanted by old-fashioned muzzle-loading guns, and the skillful archery for which the Veddas were notable has become a lost art. In this Ceylon jungle a few typical Veddas are left, but these are isolated specimens. In any circumstances it has been held that the Veddas are incapable of civilization. But then that depends, of course, on what is meant by civilization.

Dream Reveals Crime.

A dream once played its part in a celebrated English criminal case—the "Red Barn Murder"—the memory of which is kept alive by the melodrama still played in country towns.

Mrs. Marten, the mother of Maria Marten, the victim, dreamed three successive nights that her daughter had been murdered and buried in the Red Barn. She insisted that the floor should be taken up.

This was done and the body of the missing girl was found, and constituted a link in the chain of circumstantial evidence on which the murderer, William Corder, was convicted and executed in August, 1828.

Tricks of Watches.

Watches are tricky things in peace time, writes a correspondent, and war time seems to have made them trickier than ever.

The universality of the wrist watch has led to some queer discoveries. I know an officer, for instance, on whose wrist no watch will work properly; the same watches, transferred to another soldier's wrist, regain their composure and keep time.

In another instance the same watch will persistently gain on one man's wrist and as persistently lose on another's.—London Chronicle.

New Brick Building

HENRY LAU TO BUILD NEW IMPLEMENT STORE

Henry Lau has begun operations to build a new brick building on Main Street next to the place h now occupies. The building will be put up of brick and one story high. Work has begun on the building and it will be pushed along as rapidly as possible. Henry needs a new place to house his growing business and we are glad to see him help along the appearance of the town by putting up a new building. Before long we predict there will be all new brick buildings on the street to replace the frame buildings which are now standing, some ready to fall down when a good wind hits them. That may be putting it a little strong, as most of the buildings are in good shape and well kept but new brick buildings would look much better.

AMERICAN BUFFALO INCREASE SEVENFOLD; DEPARTMENT MAY GIVE SURPLUS TO PUBLIC

Provision is made in the 1920 Agricultural appropriation act for the Secretary of Agriculture to give buffalo to municipalities and public institutions from any surplus which may exist in the herds now under the control of the Department of Agriculture. In order to aid in the propagation of the species, the bill provides that animals may be lent to or exchanged with other owners of American bison. No provision is made to give them to individuals, and only one may be given to each municipality or public institution.

This provision is made because of the surplus of bulls in some of the Department of Agriculture's buffalo herds, particularly the one in the Wichita National Forest and Game Preserve, in Oklahoma, and because the department is nearing the realization of the first stage in the preservation of the species—the acquisition of at least 1,000 head of buffalo by the Government.

Have Increased Seven Times

There are approximately 7,000 buffalo in North America. Canada has something over 3,500 and the total number in the United States is more than 3,000. This is about seven times the number in the United States in 1889, when the first buffalo census was taken. Individuals in the United States own approximately 2,000 of the total number in this country. There are eight Government herds, six of which are under the control of the Department of Agriculture. The largest herd in this country is in charge of the Interior Department, and is located in the Yellowstone National Park, where there are about 450 bison. The Smithsonian Institution now has a herd of 18 at the National Zoological Park, Washington, D. C.

The first herd of buffalo under the Department of Agriculture was established in 1906 on the Wichita National Forest and Game Preserve. The original herd consisted of 15 animals, the gift of the New York Zoological Society, and this has now increased to more than 100 animals without any outside additions.

Two New Herds Established

Two herds have been established in the past year, one in Sullys Hill Park, North Dakota, the other in the Pisgah National Game Preserve, North Carolina. The other herds supervised by the Department of Agriculture are located in the Montana National Bison Range; the Niobrara Reservation, Nebraska; the Wind Cave Game Preserve, South Dakota.

The plan of the Department is to establish at least 10 herds, widely distributed in order to prevent the spread of any contagious disease, should it become uncontrollable in any of the herds.

No More Worries Over Excessive Coal Bills

It is not generally known that even the small coal consumer can have his coal shipped direct from the mines, thus saving the profits that otherwise would go to wholesaler and retail dealer, besides saving hauling expense. Of course, big manufacturers and other large consumers have always bought this way, but the man who buys only enough for his household is now in position to take advantage of the same purchasing privileges The well-known BERNICE COAL CO 933 South Dearborn St., Chicago, is doing an enormous business in supplying small consumers—as well as the big ones with all grades of hard and soft coal at mine prices.

That these customers are highly pleased is evidenced by the letters they write after receiving and trying their coal. The following are extracts from several such letters "Have found your coal entirely satisfactory and your dealings courteous and fair I shall continue to buy my coal from you" Ed G Gereka Burlington, Ia. "More than pleased with it Please quote me prices on same coal for December."—Arthur Churchman Alexandria, Ind. "Well pleased with it Expect to buy more from you"—Fritz Bros., Pompeii, Mich. Retort Convincing.

Nine year old Edith insisted on playing with her three-year-old sister's doll Her grandmother tried to argue with her "Why, you're such a big girl—so much older than your sister," she said "Don't you think for that reason alone you should not want her new doll so much?"

Edith looked at grandmother "Oh, I don't know," she returned carelessly. "You're a lot older than mother and yet you want her new baby all the time"

Eat Less and Take Bitro-Phosphate To Put on Flesh

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well, if you tire easily, do not sleep well, or are too thin; go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months, if your nerves are not steadier, if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing

TIME LIMIT IS SET

R. R. MEN GIVE GOVERNMENT 3 MONTHS TO MAKE GOOD.

ACCEPTANCE OF OFFER URGED

Unless Something Done to Relieve Situation Workers Reserve Right to Strike to Enforce Demands.

Washington, D. C.—Industrial peace in the United States, according to the legislative council of the railroad shop crafts, depends on the results the government can show in the next 90 days in its campaign to reduce the cost of living

That time limit was tacitly set by the council in suggesting to union locals throughout the country that President Wilson's compromise offer in response to their demand for higher wages should be accepted pending the outcome of the effort to restore a normal price level

If the cost of living does not come down the 500,000 members of the shop crafts would reserve the right to strike for more money and with them probably would be associated the remainder of the 2,500,000 railroad employes, all of whom have been considering the same problem.

The letter of the executive council served to compose somewhat the uneasiness felt in official circles over the immediate labor situation and to focus attention on the legal measures being directed by Attorney General Palmer and his assistant, Judge Ames, to take the inflation out of prices, to punish hoarders and profiteers.

"In our opinion," the letter said, "the next 90 days will bring the entire situation to a head and if a strike is to take place every class of railroad employes should be willing to join in the movement, share their full measure of responsibility and not leave the issue to be decided by the 22 per cent of the railroad employes represented by the federated trades."

Rank of General for Pershing.

Washington, D. C.—Universal laudation of General Pershing at the hands of his fellow countrymen was not confined to any particular section when the house had under consideration, and with four negative votes passed the bill authorizing the president of the United States to confer on him the permanent rank of general Two Nebraskans paid General Pershing praise

Congressman Reavis, speaking of the human side of his solicitude for his boys of the American forces, brought sobs from the galleries as he told of the efforts put forth by Pershing to give the men under his command that moral and physical training that would make them clean and fit to return to their homes

Congressman Andrews told of his first acquaintance with Pershing when Andrews was private secretary to Governor Crounse and the general, then a captain, was taking a degree in the law department of the University of Nebraska Mr Andrews said he did not want to pluck one laurel wreath from Missouri, but as a Nebraskan he wanted to lay claim to General Pershing as a Nebraskan because of the length of time that he had lived in Nebraska, and because of the further fact that his relatives live there now in the capital of the state.

Battle Forest Fires.

Missoula, Mont.—Five thousand men, composing the fire-fighting force of the federal forest service, are waging a battle against hundreds of forest fires sweeping over Montana and northern Idaho, with no prospect of controlling the flames further than to save whatever towns may be in their path until rain intervenes. This estimate of the situation was made at forest service headquarters here where it was said that despite the refusal of federal troops to aid in the fight against the flames, no shortage of men is feared, civilian recruits filling the daily vacancies in the ranks of the fighters.

Three Lost in Fire.

Boise, Idaho.—Three men are lost in a forest fire raging near Burgdorf, north of Lake Port. They were part of a crew of 200 which turned out Monday night to save the village of Burgdorf Heavy winds swept the flames through the forest and cut them off from the crew The fire is the largest of the season in southern Idaho.

To Start National Song Hour.

New York.—Thousands of women, representing the national council of women, will meet in St. Louis, Mo., on November 11 for their biennial convention, and will celebrate the first annual of the signing of the armistice by starting a "national song hour" from that city. Birth to this idea was given by Mrs. David Campbell, of New York, chairman of the community music department of the council.

President's Speaking Tour To Occupy Twenty-five Days.—Address To Be Made at Omaha.

Columbus, O.—President Wilson's tour of the country to give an account to the people of the negotiation of the treaty of Versailles will begin with an address here Thursday evening. The trip will occupy 25 days, ending about September 28. Speeches appealing for the immediate ratification of the peace treaty without change will be made in the principal cities of the west.

Stops enroute to the Pacific coast will be made at Indianapolis, followed by speeches at St. Louis, Kansas City and Topeka, in the order named From the latter city the presidential party will go to Omaha, Neb., thence to Sioux Falls, S. D.; St. Paul or Minneapolis and Bismarck, N. D

Then will follow speeches at Billings and Helena, Mont; Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Spokane, possibly Seattle Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and San Diego. Speeches may be made from the train between these cities, but it is known the president is opposed to making open air addresses.

Returning from the Pacific coast stops will be made at Reno, Nev; Salt Lake City, Denver and Oklahoma City, thence south and eastward.

Ole Hanson Quits Mayorship.

Seattle, Wash.—Ole Hanson, Seattle's mayor, who gained nation-wide fame as a result of his stand for Americanism during the general strike here last February, has resigned

"I am tired out and am going fishing," he said in a statement accompanying the resignation, which was immediately accepted by the city council.

C. B. Fitzgerald, a councilman, has been selected by Mayor Hanson and five members of the council to become the next municipal executive

"I have no political plans for the future," Hanson asserted when asked about rumors that he might be a candidate for the republican nomination for vice president

U. S. TO OPEN STORES

GOVERNMENT HAS SCHEME TO REDUCE LIVING COSTS.

SALE TO COMMENCE SEPT. 26

Establishments to Operate in Fourteen Cities; Stocks to Be Kept Up By Additional Purchases.

Washington, D. C.—Announcement has been made that retail stores for the sale of household commodities included in the surplus stocks of the war department will be established September 25 throughout the country. The stores will be located in depot centers and other large cities and they will accept and fill mail orders.

The present plan is to open stores in the fourteen zone supply cities, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Baltimore, Jeffersonville, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, San Antonio Omaha, El Paso, San Francisco and Washington The chain will be extended to additional cities as rapidly as possible.

Continued purchase by the department of certain necessities so that these stores may be continued indefinitely as a part of the government campaign against the high cost of living is understood to be under consideration

Prices on all commodities offered for sale will be so fixed as to prevent discrimination between the purchasers who buy over the counter and those who purchase through the mail.

All mail orders will be delivered by parcel post, but the policy of making these sales through the post office department is to be discontinued. All such orders will go directly to the stores.

To expedite the mail order sales the post office department has been asked to establish sub-stations in each store. Catalogues quoting prices and giving the location of all stores are being prepared and will be available at every post office in the United States.

Bandit Chase Concluded.

El Paso, Tex.—The bandit chase in Mexico by American cavalry men and aviators is ended The United States forces are back at their camps on this side of the border Withdrawal was effected when further search for bandits seemed futile

With the reported killing of Jesus Renteria, leader of the bandits, and four other bandits, capture of nine more by the Mexicans and arrest of six suspects by the Americans, Maj. J. P. Yancey said the fourth punitive expedition into Mexico had accomplished its objective of clearing away the bandits from the section of Mexico just below the border from the Big Bend Texas district

Aviators George Rice and Louis Bouquet, missing on a flight from Marfa were located at Terlinqua, Texas, where they were forced by a storm to land.

Our Interest to Stick With France.

Washington, D. C.—While Germany has been vanquished for the present, "nothing but force is likely to restrain her from seeking world domination at the earliest opportunity," in the opinion of the senate judiciary subcommittee appointed to report on the validity of the proposed treaty by which the United States would go to the aid of France in the event of an unprovoked attack by Germany.

In holding that ratification of the special defensive treaty would be constitutional, the subcommittee said it was for the interest of the United States that France should be allowed to recuperate and recover her old time vigor

"She will then," said the report, "be a great shield and protection to us against the German menace in the future."

Facts in Coal Situation.

Washington, D. C.—Entering on an investigation of the increased price of coal, a senate interstate commerce subcommittee brought forth testimony that shortage of cars and labor difficulties were hindering coal production, that certain elements in the miners' union were intent on nationalization of the coal mines with adoption of a six-hour day and a five-day week, plus a wage increase, and that unless problems of production were solved, the country would be brought face to face with a coal famine in the coming winter

RATIO MAKES FOR HARMONY

Peculiar Arrangement of Chinese Musical Instruments Said to Be Work of Chinese Emperor.

The characteristic musical instrument of the Chinese is a series of bamboo tubes, the longest of which measures about nine inches, and of which the remainder diminish in length at a regular ratio, each being just two-thirds the length of the one before. This arrangement was devised by the Chinese—they say, by the Emperor Huang-Ti—on the following principle: Between heaven and earth there is perfect harmony. Now, the number three is the emblem of heaven and two of earth. If then two pipes or tubes be made in the proportion of three to two, they will harmonize in tone as perfectly as earth and heaven. So the base tube of the instrument was made nine inches long and the second two-thirds that length, or six inches. Of course, the third has to be two-thirds the length of the second, or four inches; and so on. The result was that the note of the second tube was what we call an interval of a fifth above that of the first, that of the third a fifth above the second, and so on through the whole range.

Think it e prepared to invest on September 13th.

Impressive Figures.

The following calculation is interesting Suppose one boy, aged ten years, determines to rise at five o'clock all the year round Another of the same age, indolent and fond of ease, rises at eight, or an average of eight, every morning If they both live to be seventy years old the one will have gained over the other, during the intervening period of sixty years, 65,745 hours, which is equal to 2,739 and a fraction days, or just 7½ years.

Zola's Dreaded Number.

To Emile Zola 17 was always a number of evil omen, so much so that for years he could scarcely be induced to leave his house, and never undertook any important work, on that day of the month. So perniciously did it dog his footsteps that the narrowest escape he ever had from a tragic death was due to a cab which bore the number he dreaded

WHY

Liberia Deserves Commendation for War Work

Among the enemies of Germany, let us not forget Liberia. This tiny African republic entered the war in all seriousness, has contributed to the victory and bears some honorable scars. It established compulsory military service and sent hundreds of laborers into France for war work. It expects a seat somewhere near the foot of the great peace table.

Some two hundred German citizens controlled 75 per cent of Liberia's commercial activities before the war. These two hundred are now interned in France, and the government took over their enterprises and sold them at auction. It will be remembered that the republic's entire navy was sunk by the Germans last April. It consisted of one small vessel, and the submarine that punctured its hull also shelled Monrovia, the Liberian capital, and killed ten people.

Liberia's military authorities established a basis for determining liability to army duty which is the acme of simplicity. Natives without clothes are not eligible for service, but as soon as a man puts on shirt and trousers he automatically becomes liable for enrollment and service. This is on the authority of Bishop Alexander P. Camphor, head of the Methodist church in the republic. Though Liberia's part in the war has been small, it has been none the less creditable.

POWER OF MIND OVER BODY

Why Ending of War Had Such Good Effect on Soldiers Suffering From Shell Shock.

The fact as stated by Surgeon General Ireland that "more than 2,000 American soldiers in France suffering from shell shock were cured by news of the signing of the armistice" is an interesting contribution to the pathology of nervous disease. These war-hospital patients were not suffering from an imaginary ailment; the physical manifestations of their affliction were apparent, amounting in some cases to bodily disfigurement. Yet their cure seems to have been entirely due to the influence of the imagination, being instantly effected by their realization that they would not again be subjected to the same experience.

This evidence of the mind's power over the body will afford great satisfaction to believers in the efficacy of mental or spiritual methods of healing. What have the materialists to say about it? Psychiatrists will allege the capacity of their art to cure disease of this nature, and according to a statement from the surgeon general's office "improved methods of combating the affliction" in army hospitals have materially reduced it.

Yet the fact remains of nature's dramatic and immediate cure by the simple means of removing apprehension. Medical practice has still some way to go before equaling this demonstration of the great possibilities in mental healing.

How Explorer Fared in Arctic.

Another cherished illusion is dispelled and relegated to the junk heap of vivid misconceptions that have suddenly faded. Explorer Vilhjalmur Stefansson, who has returned from a five-years' cruise in the regions around the North pole, tells us that the weather up there is by no means the frigid terror we have pictured in our minds. It is much cooler in central Siberia than at Herschel island. Even near the geographical pole the climate never gets really bad, although the mercury occasionally runs down to 60 below zero! Indeed, it was so mild and compatible with physical comfort that he usually disrobed on the porch of his igloo and passed the evening in his underwear, resting at night in his sleeping bag. His underwear, by the way, was of reindeer's skin with the fur side inside. He has explored some 250,000 square miles amid all kinds of weather, and claims to have suffered no hardships until his return to civilization.

How Red Cross Worked in Italy.

We have had our "Little Italy" and other transplantations from the Old World to the New, but the case is reversed—"Little America" in Italy—as seen in an article from the Corriera della Sera, the great Milan newspaper:

"The heat is merciless. On the roadside, under the shade of a cluster of trees, stands a hut with an Italian flag and a flag showing a field of blue with stars, and red and white stripes. The soldiers crowd the place. This is a rest house of the American Red Cross. Here our great American ally brings a lot of good things. Coffee, cool drinks, bread, chocolate—as we once knew it—and crackers—we no longer are accustomed to.

"The soldiers have already baptized these rest houses. They call them in a jocular way 'American bars,' and when from afar they see on the road the tricolor and the Stars and Stripes they cry, 'Let us go to visit America!'"

Why City Men Make Good Farmers.

Use of city men as farm workers in emergency seasons has demonstrated not only that many men employed in cities and towns were reared on farms and are skilled in harvest labor, but also that city men can stand the heat and exertion of the harvest field, and attack their tasks with willingness and patriotic enthusiasm. This was reported by the federal farm help specialist in Kentucky at the department of agriculture's [illegible]

WILL GET THEIR NICKNAMES

American Soldiers Object to Term "Sammies," and Are Willing to Wait for a Better One.

Somebody, feeling that the American soldier in France needed a nickname dubbed him "Sammie." Then someone else referred to him by that name and still another adopted it and the use of it became general. The nickname probably was selected because the United States is referred to as Uncle Sam. It is probable that it is referred to as Uncle Sam because the abbreviation of the name of the country was U. S., and somebody built the name Uncle Sam out of the initials as representing the incarnation of the country in one man. No matter what the origin of the name is the soldiers do not like it. The Stars and Stripes, the official publication of the expeditionary forces, says the American soldier did not invent it, does not like it, and never uses it and will not recognize it. It says when he sees it in papers from home it makes him sick.

Seeming to think that a name for the American soldier should be found, the Stars and Stripes says:

"When, in the fullness of time, the American army has been welded by shock and suffering into a single fighting force, with one mind, one heart and one spirit, the American soldier will find his name. It will be the inspiration of some ambulance driver, perhaps, or the outburst of some eloquent cook. It will strike the fancy of a passing guard and be forwarded through military channels like a sentry's call. Wounded boys will carry it back to base hospitals and ammunition train drivers will spread it to the base ports. Some reporter will hear it at some distant bar and put it into the story he has to write that night. It will be printed in America. Paragraphers and cartoonists and vaudeville comedians will use it. It will be caught up at home and in the training camps. The name will be fastened on. The American soldier will have been christened He does not know now what that name will be. He simply knows it won't be 'Sammie.'"

But what is the need of a nickname for the American soldier? Isn't American good enough? There would be no thought of a nickname but for the fact that the British soldier is referred to as Tommy Atkins, and then, losing his surname is referred to as Tommy. But we do not know that the French soldier has a nickname. The Italian, the Belgian, the Serb, the Montenegrin is also referred to without a nickname. Why bother about calling the American anything but Americans?—Florida Times Union.

Trouble With Wounded Soldiers.

"Delmas remarks," says Annales de Medicine, "that as soon as the soldier enters the hospital he steps out of military discipline, and yet the hospital authorities have no jurisdiction over him. He can accept or refuse operations, injections of drugs, etc., at his own will. But almost invariably the wounded or sick soldier absolutely trusts his surgeon or physician as long as no foreign element modifies his grateful confidence."

He further goes on to say that two elements may interfere, one the fear of pain or anesthetics and the other unwillingness to be cured and return to military duty, and calls the latter cases desertion. In either case pressure is brought to bear in the way of pension considerations or the returning of the refractory patient to his regiment for disciplinary measures.

The Mentally Defective Soldier.

"For the first time in the history of warfare," says the New York Medical Journal, "mental hygiene as practiced among the soldiers is given the prominence it deserves, and, profiting by the experience of England and France in the present war, the surgeon general was impelled to inaugurate an elaborate organization both in number and plan, to take care of any mental disturbances detected in the camps or among the soldiers during the war. This is a distinct innovation in the medical army work, for the subjects of mental hygiene and of mental and nervous diseases in general as occuring among soldiers in war time were for many reasons either slightly treated or neglected altogether."

The Unconscious Hero.

When Private Jones, back from France, put his pass in at the railway booking office, he was surprised by the clerk asking to shake hands. They shook, and when Private Jones, still wondering, reached his home in the far north, a sergeant seeing him pass, took him to the colonel, who shook hands, and said: "The army is very proud of you." He did not learn the reason for all this friendliness until he reached home. Then his little brother, curiously inspecting the papers, remarked: "How funny, Vass," (his christian names, by the way are Vassall Charles), "they've put your name—Private Jones, V. C."—London Tit-Bits.

Era of Speechlessness.

"You haven't made a speech in some time."

"Why make a speech?" said Senator Sorghum. "With all this war news they wouldn't print it, and if they did print it, nobody would read it."

Not Mandatory.

"What are you going to order for breakfast?" asked the waiter.

"Order?" repeated the man with a precise manner. "I shouldn't think of ordering. But I will venture deferentially to request a boiled [illegible]

Organization of the One Hundred Sixty-eighth regiment as a national guard unit will now proceed without delay Representative Hull has secured official permission for the regiment to be re-organized without waiting until the auxiliary organizations of the guard were fully completed. A subcommittee of the house military committee will probably visit Camp Dodge within the near future.

More and more Iowans are beginnig to discover pleasure resorts right within the borders of their own state. One of the latest discoveries is a beautiful sheet of water called Twin lakes, located in Calhoun county near Rockwell City. It is the southermost one of the chain of lakes which runs up through Minnesota. Of course the lake has been known to residents of that vicinity for many years but only lately has its delights been discovered by the majority of Iowa people.

Judge F. F. Dawley of Cedar Rapids dismissed the charges against George H. Clark, lawyer for Ernest Rathbun, the rapist, which were pressed with a view to his disbarment The court exonerated the lawyer on all ten of the charges These included accusation of having deceived Governor Harding in securing a pardon for Rathbun. The court held that whatever misrepresentations appeared in the application, the testimony was a matter of record, and accessible to the

The Iowa Federation of Colored Women's clubs have started a campaign to raise $10,000 with which to build a dormitory for colored girls at the state university. Although there are twenty-five universities and colleges in Iowa for men and women, there is not a dormitory or a home where the colored girl who wishes to attend college may stay. There are eight girls now attending the university.

At a special session of the District court held by request of the American Surety Bonding company, by whom W. A. Conway was bonded as cashier of the defunct bank of the town of Conway, Taylor county, Judge Evans held that all funds wrongfully disbursed by the cashier were recoverable from the bonding company. W. A. Conway was sent to the penitentiary in May for an undetermined term, not to exceed eight years.

Hal Mahone, a bay gelding by Prince Argot Hal, was sold by his owner, Warren Dennis, of Salt Lake City, to Ed Peterson, acting for George Brandeis of Omaha. The transaction took place immediately after the horse had won the 2:14 pace at the state fair. Brandeis, who was offered the animal for $1,200 a year ago, paid $6,500 for him. The horse had already won Dennis $1,445 in the race.

A new mark for a single day's attendance was established at Iowa state fair and exposition when 76,664 clicked through the turnstiles Wednesday. The previous record was 67,072 made on Thursday last year. Another record went by the boards when Secretary Corey's cash register rang up $52,804.12, the first time in the history of the fair a single day's receipts reached the $50,000 mark.

George Barker and Charles Long, farmers of Farragut, recently were led by the high price of land to sell their farms, expecting to secure farms at a lower price. They have scoured the country and discouraged over their failure to find farms for sale anywhere near the price received for the land they sold, both men paid a visit to the men who had bought their homes and farm land, and paying them a good-sized premium bought their places back.

Muscatine has won its gas-rate case in the federal court, but the $1 55 gas-rate will continue in effect until the case is decided upon appeal to the supreme court of the United States. An order entered by Judge Wade in the federal court at Davenport upheld his decision in the case, announced some months ago, ruling that the $1 gas rate, as provided for in the city's agreement, was legal and binding, but provided that the injunction under which the company charges $1.55 a thousand for gas shall remain in effect until such time as the case is appealed. It will then be up to the supreme court of the United States to act on the injunction, and eventually either sustain or overrule Judge Wade's decision.

Sergeant Charles W. Peckham, Marshalltown aviator who died of injuries received in the fall of a plane at Iowa field, Des Moines, was buried in Riverside cemetery at Marshalltown with full military honors. Maj. W. J. Barndollar and Howard C Eales circled over the cemetery during the burial rites, dropping flowers around the funeral gathering, one of the largest ever known in the city. The daring young flyer had achieved considerable renown by his exceptional nerve, both in stunt flights in this country and by his courageous work over the battle lines in Europe, where he was trained with the famous Lafayette escadrille. He became a mechanician for the escadrille, and was cited for bravery.

Iowa's corn crop will soon be safe from frost. Charles D. Reed, head of the Iowa Crop Bureau in his weekly forecast, says that the crop is making good progress and farmers are selling old corn, indicating their general confidence in the forthcoming yield. The report for the week ending August 26, is: Rain was generally deficient except in Winneshiek, Scott and adjoining counties and in a few central and south-central counties, where moderate rains occurred. Many of the northwest, west-central and east-central counties had no rain. Temperatures averaged about normal and ranged from about 90 on the afternoons of the 21st and 22nd to well down in the 50's on several nights. Sunshine averaged 5 per cent above normal, being much above normal in the Mississippi river counties and somewhat below normal in the western part of the state. Shock threshing is nearly finished, but considerable stack threshing remains to be done. A considerable acreage of spring wheat in the western counties that was not cut at harvest time has since been cut and removed from the land so that the tame grasses seeded therewith can grow. In many cases this wheat has been threshed and the yields realized were sufficient to cover the expense of harvesting and threshing.

Seven members of the Drake university class graduated from the summer law school, gained the highest marks ever received by an entire class in the state. The class is 100 per cent efficient in army service, every man having had his study of law interrupted by the call to arms for periods of six months to two years The class includes Charles Gregory Brunk, Myron Melvin Cohen, Don Rankin Hutchison, Joseph George Lipshie, Lincoln C McCord, Elmer Edward Miller and Francis

To Keep Above Sordid Grind.

The thing one loves to do is never tiresome, and if you can teach yourself to enjoy the common routine there will never be any depressing fatigue. Perhaps one can never grow to love the drudgery part of any work, but if the mind is kept above it, by working toward a more efficient way of performing the task, or if not that, by training the mind to do the homely things with the thoughts on something else, you will obviate much of the usual weariness, especially in the housework routine.

About the Limit in Hunting.

A Dublin gentleman was spending his vacation with some friends in the west of Ireland. As he was being driven to his destination he noticed a bog that promised good shooting, and asked his jarvey if there were any snipe in it. "Shnipe, is it, sor? Did ye say shnipe? Shure, if ye went into that bog widout a gun they'd ate yez!"

Sympathy.

"I will starve myself if I am put into jail," said the militant suffragette. "I don't blame you," replied the sympathetic citizen. "I was in jail once and the food is enough to make anybody prefer starvation to indigestion."—Washington Star.

DID NOT INVENT TELESCOPE

But Galileo Was the First to Perceive Its Possibilities in the Study of Astronomy.

The name of the man who first framed and used a telescope for the observation of the heavenly bodies is Galileo Galilei, though little known in that form It was this scientist, who died January 8, 1642, who, it may be said, first gave stability and force to the theory which places the sun in the center of the planetary system. In April or May 1609, Galileo heard at Venice of a little tubular instrument made by Hans Libbershey of Middleburg, which made distant objects appear nearer and he immediately applied himself to experimentation on the means by which such an instrument could be produced Procuring a couple of spectacle glasses, each plain on one side, but one convex and the second concave on the other side, and applying his eye to the concave glass, he found that objects were magnified three times, and brought apparently nearer Soon after having made one which could magnify 930 times Galileo commenced observations on the surface of the moon which he discovered to be irregular like that of the earth, and on Jupiter, which, in 1610, he ascertained to be attended by four stars, as he called them, which afterward proved to be its satellites.

CRUSADERS WON AND LOST

In the End Nothing Was Gained by Attempted Conquest of the Holy Land.

During the four centuries from the Moslem conquest of Palestine until the crusades Christian, Jew and Moslem lived together in peace. Then along came Peter the Hermit and the Crusaders. The second coming of Christ had been forecast for the year 1000. The passing of that year without any catastrophe awakened an era of Christian piety that held the world safe through the year 1033, the anniversary of the crucifixion.

Peter the Hermit prevailed upon Pope Urban II to sanction the first crusade It proved a successful venture, for Jerusalem was captured July 14, 1099, and Godfrey of Bouillon elected king of Jerusalem

Saladin became master of Egypt and Syria toward the end of the twelfth century, after defeating the Crusaders at the battle of Hattin in 1187, capturing the most treasured of relics, a piece of the true Cross. This provoked the third crusade, led by Richard Coeur de Lion and commemorated in Scott's novel, "The Talisman." The Crusaders captured Constantinople for the Venetians, but failed of the entire conquest of Palestine.

Are You a Barometer?

Undoubtedly there is a great relation between the elements and certain complaints in the same way that some seasons of the year render certain people liable to illness more than others. The lower we investigate in the animal world the more prone are its subjects to be affected by the weather A cat for as much as three days beforehand feels a coming storm; a horse's fine nostrils can sniff approaching rain in an uncanny manner The birds of the air have but to be watched to see the way in which they seek their nests at a hint of danger in the air The very trees and plants tremble in a peculiar manner before a severe storm Many human beings are just as sensitive to the march of the elements, but do not always realize the significance of their sensitiveness. People who suffer from gout, rheumatism or neuralgia know at once when bad weather is approaching. Old wounds make themselves felt at certain times, and the stumps of members long since amputated give pain. Medical men have never satisfactorily explained these strange phenomena, neither can they tell why some people instinctively become restless and excited or moody, or sullen before thunderstorms.

Wilson Not the Only One.

One other president than Wilson traced his line to Carlisle, England; for Zachary Taylor was fifth in descent from James Taylor of Carlisle, who emigrated to this country in 1658. Considering the fairly uniform British extraction of our presidents, few indeed could have gone to the homes of really near ancestors in the British isles. Andrew Jackson is the only one whose father was born there, the elder Jackson having come from Carrickfergus, Ireland, a decade before the Revolution. Grant is not particularly distinguished in that his family had been American in all its branches for eight generations; as much could be said of others. It seems appropriate that the first president in office to visit the mother country felt so intimately the ties of blood that originally gave it the name of mother country.—New York Post.

Rumor.

The character of that sort of information that is generally known as news is changing with vertiginous rapidity. Once news was generally supposed to be a narration of something that had happened or was possibly going to happen, with, of course, due allowances for errors and mistaken judgments. Now, however, news seems to be made up of reporting what somebody alleges might have happened. Rumor, of itself, has a news value. The fact that a rumor existed is sufficient of itself, aside from the truth or falsity of the rumor, its probability or its possibility.

SHOFAR IN HEBREW RITUAL

Wood Instrument Dates Back to the Very Earliest Youth of the World.

Hebrew historians, with a special eye (or ear) to the racial history, are very proud of their shofar. They say it is the oldest form of wood wind instrument in the world, that it was used in the original Mosaic ritual. It is the one musical instrument, says Dr. Cyrus Adler, which has been preserved unbrokenly in that ritual.

There is even a theory, voiced by Professor Steinthal, that the shofar antedates the people of Israel. He says it probably goes back to prehistoric times. And another investigator points out that it obviously came first from a folk solely dependent on the growing of sheep.

This ancient ram's horn instrument was perhaps earliest used for the signals of alarm which were so necessarily common in primitive society. The Israelites then adapted it to their religious services, and with such fitting effect that it has persisted uniquely since the beginning.

But the Talmud indicates that, even among the Hebrews, the shofar was also developed into a horn for giving alarms Fundamentally these alarms would be incidental to war. Afterward, though, the instrument was blown in other seasons of danger or distress. It warned of famine or of a plague of locusts or of drought. And it was employed in the public service of excommunication.

The children of Israel had other horns which were used for musical and ritualistic purposes, but this is the only one which has survived.

WHAT MIRO READ AT SCHOOL

Youngster's Initiation Into Culture Was Made "Almost a Religious Mystery."

At school Miro was early impressed with the vast dignity of the literary works and names he was compelled to learn Shakespeare and Goethe and Dante lifted their plaster heads frowningly above the teacher's as they perched on shelves about the room. Much was said of the greatness of literature. But the art of phonetics and the complications of grammar swamped Miro's early school years. It was not until he reached the high school that literature began really to assume that sacredness which he had heretofore felt only for holy Scripture, Randolph Bourne writes in Yale Review. His initiation into culture was made almost a religious mystery by the conscientious and harassed teacher As the "Deadwood Boys" and "David Harum" slipped away from Miro's soul in the presence of Milton's "Comus," and Burke "On Conciliation" a cultural devoutness was engendered in him that never really died. At first it did not take Miro beyond the stage where your conscience is strong enough to make you uncomfortable, but not strong enough to make you do anything about it. Miro did not actually become an omnivorous reader of great books. But he was filled with a rich grief that the millions pursued cheap and vulgar fiction instead of the best that has been thought and said in the world. Miro indiscriminately bought cheap editions of the English classics and read them with a certain patient uncomprehendingness.

On Chasing Pleasure.

"I don't believe in makin' much exertions after pleasure. I don't believe in chasin' her up." Says I: "Let her come of her own free will." Says I, "You can't catch her by chasin' of her up, no more than you can fetch a shower up in a drewth, by goin' out doors, and runnin' after a cloud up in the heaven above you. Sit down, and be patient, and when it gets ready the refreshin' raindrops will begin to fall without any of your help. And it's just so with pleasure, Josiah Allen; you may chase her up and all over the oceans and big mountains of the world, but she'll keep ahead of you all the time; but set down, and not fatigue yourself a-thinkin' about her, and like as not she will come right into your house unbeknown to you."—From "Josiah Allen's Wife."

Battle for Prohibition.

Hard drinking in England came to be regarded as a grave national danger. In 1735 a London grand jury held the traffic responsible for a great crime wave, and regulation of the liquor business by law was instituted. Similar experiments were in the meantime being made in America.

The battle in this country against use and abuse of liquor began in a mild way as a protest in pulpits against drunkenness. A New England society went so far as to bind its members not to get drunk except on the Fourth of July and general training days.

Advocates of moderation gave way to those who felt that only total abstinence was the remedy. Then the battle began.

When Romans Ruled Britain.

There is a showcase in the Roman British section of the British museum that contains the discharge certificates given to soldiers in Britain at the time of the Romans. The bronze certificates are quaintly worded, and record the fact that the holders "discharged honorably after 25 years of service," are granted Roman citizenship if not already held, "and the recognition of their marriage with those who are their wives, or in case of unmarried, any wives they may subsequently marry, provided they only have one each."

Bill, the Builder Hits the Nail on the Head When He Says—

"'Tis Cheaper to Build Well at the Start Than to Make Repairs All Your Life"

Don't make the mistake of buying building material by price only. Under-size timbers that cannot stand the strain of weight are a poor investment at any price. A little careful attention to the requirements of your material will often save the expense of frequent repairs.

Strength Where Needed

When you buy lumber here, you get with it the benefit of our years of experience. We will gladly check your specifications with the plans and verify the correctness of the sizes you order. We will see that the sizes ordered are adequate to carry their load safely and enduringly.

Don't let this important feature escape your attention

In United States Orchards.

In the United States there are more than 200,000,000 apple trees of bearing age about 20,000,000 trees, and more than 16,000,000 young trees.

Church Appropriately Adorned

At a special service for fishermen at Corton, near Lowestoft, England the church was adorned with nets, in which herrings were enmeshed, and were festooned around the nave. An arch of oars from which was suspended a sidelight, spanned the center aisle, and flags, buoys, bladders and other fishing gear completed the scene of decoration.

HOW PURITANS REGULATED CONDUCT IN THEIR COMMUNITIES—Like King James, the Puritans disapproved of smoking, and though men might indulge within doors or in the fields, they were repeatedly fined "for drinking tobacco in the highwey" Roland G. Usher says in his "The Pilgrims and Their History." Church attendance was compulsory, but this was no great hardship in a time when no Sunday work was allowed; one might be fined for writing a letter on Sunday at least in the evening somewhat too soon." Christmas was not wholly under the ban. The first year the whole colony kept Christmas at hard labor. The second year some newcomers on the Fortune refused to go to the fields, saying that it would be against their conscience to work on that day," and being under of conscience, the leaders excused them. When they returned to Plymouth village for lunch, they found these conscientious objectors to Christmas labor playing stool ball and other good English games in the street. This public "gaming and revelling" was promptly stopped. The regulation of young people's conduct was very strict. In 1636 a law was passed that no man should propose to a girl without the consent of her parents or (if he were a servant) his master. The gallants of Plymouth were wroth, and it occurred to many to inflict no more than fines for surreptitious courtships.

How to Fight Pneumonia.

The experiments of the army medical corps with vaccination against pneumonia in two of the army camps have had so much apparent success that a memorandum has been issued to officers, enlisted men and employees of the war department announcing that this vaccination is available to all who desire it. At Camp Upton during a period of ten weeks pneumonia was only one-tenth as high among vaccinated as among the unvaccinated, although previous to vaccination the pneumonia had occurred equally in the two groups. The vaccination is not intended to cure those who are ill with pneumonia, and it is not advised for persons who are suffering from acute colds or fever.

WOMEN DEMAND WARS SHALL END

Peace League Means More to Them Than It Can Mean to Men.

DR. SHAW'S STIRRING PLEA.

(By the Late Dr. Anna Howard Shaw.)

Seven million one hundred thousand men who had laid down their lives in the great war. Think of it! Seven million, one hundred thousand young men had died on the field of battle!

What does that mean to the women of the world? It means that seven million one hundred thousand women walked day by day with their faces toward an open grave that they might give life to a son. It means that seven million one hundred thousand little children lay in the arms of a mother whose love had made them face even the terrors of death that they might become the mothers of men.

It means that year after year these women had put up their lives into the lives of their sons until they had reared them to be men. For what? In the hope that these sons of theirs could give to the world the things for which women dream, the things for which women hope and pray and long. These were the things that the women had in their hearts when they gave birth to their sons.

But who can estimate the value of seven million one hundred thousand dead sons of the women of the world? Who can estimate the price which the women have paid for this war; what it has cost them, not only in the death of their sons because that is a phase of our war to which we look.

The Courage of Women.

We hear our orators tell us of the courage of our men. How they went across the sea. Very few of them remember to tell us of the courage of our women who also went across the sea, of the women who died nursing the sick and wounded, the women who died in the hospitals, where the terrible tombs came and drove them almost to madness. They tell us nothing of the forty thousand English women who went to work back of the trenches in France.

They tell us nothing of the thousands upon thousands upon thousands of women who not only toiled and worked and slaved in order that the war might be successful, but we do not hear of the thousands of women, not alone in Armenia, not alone in Montenegro, not alone in Serbia, but in Flanders, in Belgium, in Rumania, in Russia—the thousands of women who lie in graves today, murdered, so horribly murdered that men dare not speak of it.

And yet we women are asked what we know about the League of Nations; asked what we can understand about a League of Nations. Oh men! the horrible deaths; the horrible lives of thousands upon thousands of women today in all these nations, who must live, and who must look in the faces of children unwelcomed, undesired—of little children—and know that these are the result of war.

And then ask women why they should be interested in a league of peace?

Women Suffer Most From War.

If there is any body of citizens in the world who ought to be interested in a league to ultimately bring to the world peace it is the mothers of men, and the women who suffered as only women can suffer in the war and in devastated countries.

And we call upon them, we women of the world call upon the men who have been fighting all these battles of the years, the men who have led armies, and led armies close to their deaths.

We are now calling upon the men of the world to in some way or another find a passage out of the sea of death. We are asking them to form a league which will bring hope to the women of the future. If women are to bear sons only that they may die, if women may not have hope and aspirations for their children, if women may not dream the dreams that have in them the hope of the highest civilizations, the highest moral and spiritual life of the people—if women may not have these in their hearts as the mothers of men, then women will cease to desire to be the mothers of men. And why should they not? Why should they not?

GALEN'S FAITH IN NOSTRUM

Early Father of Medicine Claimed Wonderful Virtues for Compound Known as Mithradatium.

Mithradatium was the name of the great antidote of Roman pharmacy. It had from 40 to 50 vegetable ingredients, few of which had any real medicinal value except opium, and these drugs were blended with honey.

It remained for Nero's physician, Andromachus, to put the finishing touches to this wonderful compound. Andromachus added viper's flesh to the formula and called his new compound theriaca. He wrote some verses dedicated to Nero, describing this medicine and claiming virtues for it which in our day would subject him to prosecution under the anti-trust act. Evidently he believed he had created in this one compound a veritable pharmaceutical monopoly.

Galen, one of the fathers of medicine, went even further. He recommended it as a cure for all poisons, bites, headaches, vertigo, deafness, epilepsy, apoplexy, dimness of sight, loss of voice, asthma, coughs, spitting of blood, tightness of breath, colic, the iliac passion (appendicitis), jaundice, hardening of the spleen, stone, fevers, dropsy, leprosy, melancholy, all pestilences, etc. Nowadays he would probably have included coupon thumb, golf shoulder and movie eye.

As Galen's writing dominated medical thought for ever 1,500 years, it is not surprising that this advertisement made Mithradatium, or Theriea, a valued remedy. Every physician of note for centuries afterward claimed some improvement on the original formula.

MAKE YOUR OWN DECISIONS

Foolish Habit of Leaning on Others Is One That Should Be Sternly Repressed.

Most people who have succeeded in any direction of activity can trace the measure of their success to the habit of deciding things for themselves. One of the greatest temptations we have is to confide in others. By yielding to it we not only become a nuisance to our friends but keep on lowering our own powers of resistance. It is worse than useless to ask the advice of others, because they are rarely so much interested in our troubles as we think they are, or would like them to be. If they were, they would have to know as much about our troubles as we do to pass judgment, and this we can not tell them even if we would.

Sometimes indeed we may know too much about our own troubles, or in such a way that the continuous thought of them puts them in the wrong perspective; but this situation is only made worse by adding the confusion of another's mind to ours.

By deciding everything for yourself you make mistakes; but every mistake is a valuable future asset. It is the only way you can learn how. Learning how is very necessary. Unless you are willing to do this and stand upon your own ground, your permanent success will be doubly difficult.—Pictorial Review.

HOW THEY WON OUT

Singers Thought Up a Really Neat Scheme.

Little Conspiracy That Seems to Point to Truth of the Familiar Old Adage That Every Man Has His Price.

Once there was a male quartet which was booked by a lyceum bureau that would allow a date to be canceled only in the event of a performer's death.

This quartet in question was booked to sing at Buzzard, N. D., one cold winter night. The time-table told the boys to go to Terminal, which was the end of the line, and hire a liveryman to take them over to Buzzard.

They arrived at Terminal on a Saturday morning. The hotel was not at all bad. The first train out was to go Monday. The liveryman said that he would convey them to Buzzard for $10. It was 22 miles. He intimated that he thought he could notice indications of a robust blizzard approaching. He said it was not uncommon for parties to get lost in blizzards and freeze to death before being found. It was spitting snow at noon.

The boys went over to the telegraph office, wired the bureau, explained about the long drive to Buzzard, and the dangers with which the journey was fraught, and asked that they be permitted to cancel the engagement. They offered to compensate the bureau to the extent of its commission if permitted to blow the date.

Their answer from the bureau was an emphatic denial of permission to cancel the date.

And yet the boys did not fill the engagement at Buzzard.

There was only one liveryman in Terminal, and his price for the drive to Buzzard was $10, so the boys chipped in and paid him $20 to write out a statement to the effect that he had refused to make the trip in the face of an approaching storm. They sent his statement to the bureau.

Moral: "Every man has his price." And "where there's a will there is usually a way."

Plate Hangers.

In hanging old china plates for decorative purposes use three large white dress hooks, placed at equal distances apart on the edge of the plate. The hanging wire or cord is run through them from the back side and drawn up tightly. These hooks are much better than the ordinary plate hanger, as they are small and will not show much on the plate.

FARM POULTRY

LICE INJURIOUS TO TURKEYS

Common Body Louse of Chickens Is Often Found in Sufficient Numbers to Be Harmful.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Four species of lice are commonly found on turkeys in this country. One of these, which occurs particularly on turkeys associated with chickens is the common body louse of chickens. This species is not found in great numbers on turkeys but it sometimes becomes sufficiently abundant to cause considerable irritation and doubtless is injurious both to the growing fowls and to the young. The shaft louse of chickens also has been found on turkeys, but probably does not breed on that host. The other two species seem to be native to the turkey probably existing on this fowl in the wild state. The large turkey louse probably is most abundant. It occurs on the feathers on various parts of the body, especially on the neck and breast. The slender turkey louse is a species of good size, though rather elongate, resembling in shape the head louse of chickens. Normally neither of these species is excessively abundant, but on crippled or unthrifty turkeys they may cause serious annoyance and undoubtedly they are injurious to poults.

INEXPENSIVE HOUSE IS GOOD

Fowls Should Be Given Serviceable, Fairly Roomy and Well-Ventilated Structure.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is not necessary to build expensive houses for poultry, but they should be serviceable, fairly roomy, well lighted and well ventilated without drafts. The house should be built with a view to simplicity, economy, and convenience, and should be constructed according to the location and climatic conditions.

The walls may consist of (1) one thickness of boards, matched or unmatched; (2) one thickness of boards matched or unmatched, covered with one or two thicknesses of building paper or roofing; (3) one thickness of boards covered with paper, then shingled or covered with lapped siding of matched lumber, making a solid double wall; (4) double boards with dead air space between; (5) double boards with space between filled with straw, hay, or other similar material. The second and third methods are the most common.

BIG EGG LOSS PREVENTABLE

Consumer Compelled to Pay Higher Price for That Portion Which Finally Reaches Him.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In marketing poultry and eggs there is an enormous preventable loss in quality and value between the producer and the consumer. It has been conservatively estimated that this loss amounts annually to $75,000,000 in poultry and $45,000,000 in eggs. While this loss falls upon all who handle poultry and eggs it is borne chiefly by the producers and the consumers. The producers' loss, caused by a decrease in price, under present conditions represents that due to spoilage or poor quality. The consumers' loss is due to a curtailed supply because of the pounds of poultry and dozens of eggs that are either of poor quality or a total loss; hence the consumer has to pay a higher price for that portion which finally reaches him.

THE MAY BASKET

By GENEVA A. ELDREDGE.

Scent of apple blossoms filled Cynthia Smith's living room, a clumsy bee tumbled up and down the outside of the screen door, and now and then a swallow darted across the sunshine, his blue wings glistening. Away down the street sounded the rat tat of a drum and Cynthia heard the patter of children's feet running toward the town square. Still she sat tense and upright in the old-fashioned rocking chair her mouth drawn in a straight hard line her eyes fixed upon the work in her hands.

The screen door squeaked on its spring and a round-faced, brown-eyed little boy squeezed in, his eyes filled with surprise when he saw her sitting there so stiff, her work in her hands, and he stammered a little as he said: "Wh-why, Aunt Cynth, ain't you going to meet the train and see the p-parade?"

Soft and quick came her answer: "No, dear, not today."

"But Aunt Cynth, they ain't goin' to be no more p-parade days, an' I got on my white suit, an' mother thought maybe you'd like to have a little boy what was all spic and span to go wiv you."

And his little face grew wistful and troubled. He had never seen an Aunt Cynth like this before, so straight and strange.

He meant to know before he left just why she was staying home the day everyone else in town was going down to welcome the boys from France. So he crept up close and whispered: "Is it 'cause Joe ain't comin', auntie?" Tears sprang to her eyes as she gathered the little spic and span boy close.

"Yes, Teddie boy, that's just why auntie isn't going. She can't bear it."

Now that Teddie was sure he felt that he ought to say something to help make auntie happier, so he said as he stroked her face with his fat little hand: "Never mind, auntie; I've got a secret and maybe tonight 'bout dark you'll know it. Maybe right 'fore supper, maybe right after, anyway, don't you come out doors right that time, will you?"

And auntie promised to stay in the house. Then hearing his mother calling he scampered away leaving Aunt Cynth alone with her thoughts. Slowly she closed her eyes and in imagination saw the town square filled with people, the train pulling in filled with returning soldiers, the happy greetings, and far and faint she heard the band and the cheering.

The hot tears trickled slowly down her face as she whispered, "And mine reported missing; my boy, who was the pride of my heart!" And then Teddie's happy little face seemed to shine out, and she remembered what a comfort he had been all the weary months, "and now he is coming to hang me a May basket, bless his dear little heart, and I must cheer up for his sake. I think I will plan a little surprise myself."

So she went into her dining room and set the pretty table, bringing in great bunches of apple blossoms to decorate it with until the room looked like fairyland in the pink and white dress. She frosted little round cakes and made an iced drink for the crystal glasses, and almost before she knew it, twilight came drifting down. The drums had ceased their rat-tat and happy voices called to one another in the street. "It's almost time for Teddie and his secret," she thought as she patted her hair into place. Then she heard steps tiptoeing up the board walk and a child's quick panting breath, and she smiled the old-time glad smile that she used to greet the boy with who was missing tonight when he came to hang May baskets at the very same door.

When two fat fists pounded hard on the screen door she waited only long enough for a small boy to hide before she opened the door, to find a dainty little basket, all fringed and festooned and fairly bursting with candy kisses, setting on the step.

"Why, how surprised I am," she said. "Who could have left this beautiful little basket here? Surely it's a mistake; some little boy must have thought Susie Grimes lived here."

Just then a small boy in white wriggled out from behind the snowball bush and called breathlessly, "No, no, Aunt Cynth, 'tain't no 'stake, it's my secret and some more of it is 'hind the catalpa tree. You come see." But just then a khaki-clad figure sprang out with wide-open arms, and then Ted's secret was out.

"Oh, Joe," cried Aunt Cynth as she wept in his arms, "how you must have felt not to find me at the train to meet you."

"That's all right, mother; I don't blame you under the circumstances.

"When Ted told me his secret I thought I'd wait and surprise you.

"Some May basket all around, hey? Say, Ted, it looks like frosted cakes and lemonade in the dining room; let's hurry for mess."

And as mother and son wiped the tears of gladness from their eyes, a little voice shrilled out: "You won't never cry no more on p-parade day, will you, Aunt Cynth?"

He Did but He Didn't.

Carl Eisenschimel, one of the police department's handwriting experts, was on the witness stand, and the attorney for the defendant was more or less deeply interested in proving that as a handwriting expert Eisenschimel was a mighty fine bricklayer.

"Now, Eisenschimel," he asked, "have you ever made a mistake?"

"Yes, I have," the witness replied.

"Ah," the attorney snapped. "Tell us when you made a mistake."

"I never made one," said the handwriting expert, "but I don't like to hear a man say he's infallible. So put it down on the record—Eisenschimel once made a mistake. But I never made one; let that be clear."—San Francisco Chronicle.

Valuable Recipe.

The schoolmaster had the boys out for a "hike," and stopping near a certain tree he said: "Boys, when I was a young lad I stood on this spot and threw a silver dollar to that large rock there." There was a short silence and then Sammie spoke up: "Aw, you couldn't do it now."

"Yes, I could," said the teacher. "In fact, I believe I could even throw it farther."

"Say, teacher," said Sammie eagerly, "will you please come home with me an' show my mother that trick?"

"There is no trick; what do you mean?" asked the puzzled teacher.

"Why, mother is always sayin' that she'd give a lot to know how to make a dollar go as far as it used to," explained Sammie.—Philadelphia American.

Hard on White Waists.

The coal mine labor troubles now fomenting all over the world led Samuel Gompers to say at a Pittsburgh dinner:

"Nobody would deny justice to the coal miner, for what life is so laborious, irksome and dirty as his?

"I heard a story the other day about a Pennsylvania woman who complained because her cook put seven white shirt waists in the wash every week.

"'Why, Emma,' the woman said, 'my own daughter doesn't dream of putting seven shirt waists a week in the wash!'

"'Maybe she don't, ma'am,' said Emma, 'and maybe she ain't engaged, neither, to a coal miner what insists on hard spoonin' every blessed night.'"

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:

"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. KOERNER HAS BAD ACCIDENT

Last Friday afternoon Al Koerner was out south of town near Swalve's farm along the road doing some work at the top of a telephone pole when the pole snapped off and as Al slid down, the pole broke once more which was the last he knew of the affair until he regained consciousness about an hour later. He had fallen about thirty feet from the top of the pole to the bottom of the deep ditch along the road in which he found himself when he came to. He received severe bruises about the head and face and it is also feared that he received internal injuries in the fall. The accident happened on the main road but nobody saw him fall and passing cars did not see him as he was laying in the bottom of the dry ditch. He is able to be about the town but "looks tough" for his experience.

A GREAT COMBINATION

When it comes to auctioneers we believe that the new firm of Young & Hanson, Auctioneers, can't be beat. J. A. Young was in our office Monday and informed us that he had dissolved partnership in the auctioneering business with R. R. Kester and that he had taken Peck Hanson as his sales ring partner, which will make a very strong combination of auctioneers that will be hard to beat.

Everybody knows Jim Young for he has cried sales since he was knee high to a grasshopper. Away back in th old times Jim used to help his father in the auction ring and then in 1880 Jim went into the business for himself and has since been crying the majority of sales in Hancock county. Jim needs little introduction as he is well known all over the country.

E. P. Hanson ,better known as "Peck" Hanson, is the other gentleman in the new firm. "Peck" is also well known thruout the county, having served several years as county auditor besides being in business in the county for a great number of years. Mr. Hanson has had about five years of active experience as an auctioneer and in that time has proved to have the real "makings" for the auction ring and has cried a large number of sales in that time.

Young & Hanson will handle all kinds of sales, they will sell anything from tooth picks to large farms. See their ad which you will find elsewhere in this issue, it will explain further details.

WE THANK YOU FOLKS

Last week we mailed out a bunch of "reminders" to our subscribers who were in arrears and we want to thank those who were so prompt in settling up the small amounts due us from subscriptions. It is a small matter and very easily forgotten by our subscribers and nearly all who came in to pay up said they were glad that we had reminded them of the fact and that they otherwise would have delayed paying for the Times. It's only a small amount to each subscriber, but when you come to think that we mailed out several hundred little reminders it amounts to quite a sum with us. We thank you for being so prompt in this matter.

The Annual Problem

Scene Near Klemme With Eggs at 40c a Dozen

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Keraus returned Monday in their car from Minneapolis where they spent about a week taking in the fair. They stayed right on the fair grounds during the entire time and report that they had a fine time, that they took in everything and that the fair was much bigger and better than ever. They were very enthusiastic over the fine gravel road between Mason City and Minneapolis and said that it was as smooth as pavement all the way.

J. C. Grobaty, of Garner, experienced a little excitement the other day according to a report given us. Mr. Grobaty and Cap. Barnes were returning from a two thousand mile trip made in the former's new Oakland car and everything had gone well until they had nearly reached Garner when Mr. Barnes happened to glance back and noticed that the rear end of the car was in flames. Quick work and presence of mind saved the car. Grobaty backed it around so the wind would not blow the flames ahead and plenty of water applied soon killed the flame.

On account of the rain last Wednesday the big land sale which was pulled off did not give the best results. There were many buyers from a distance who had planned to attend the sale and whose attendance no doubt would have made a great difference in the sale, could not come on account of the threatening weather. Despite all this G. W. Kluckhohn, manager of the sale, went right ahead with the project and two of the four farms were sold. A gentleman from Belmond purchased one of the farms and another man from near Dows was a buyer.

J. E. Baumgartner took a little vacation last Friday from barbering. However "Baum" has to stick a little bit to his trade so he substituted a paper hanger's brush for the barber's brush and journeyed to Garner to hang some wall paper for his father. "Baum" says its all along the same line and the only difference is in the size of the brush and it's just as easy to smear paste on a wall as to stick lather on a guy'sm ug—that is when you know how.

Appetites.

Sir John Lade and the duke of Queensberry ("Old Q.") once laid a wager for £1,000 on who should produce a man to eat the most at one sitting. The duke could not attend the contest, but his representative wrote: "I have no time to state particulars, but merely to acquaint your grace that your man beat his antagonist by a pig and an apple pie." What must they have eaten!—London Chronicle.

Case of Mistaken Purpose.

"Does your father object to kissing?" "I dont' know. Shall I tell him that you would like to kiss him?"

Right.

A good many people sympathize with the under dog, but they don't want the upper dog to know it.

Heiress a Successful Artist.

Heiress to one of the greatest fortunes in America, born to a life of ease and luxury, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney is a shining example of the type of American woman who is combining successfully a career while she performs her duty to her home and society, says the Washington Times.

The former Gertrude Vanderbilt, daughter of the late Cornelius Vanderbilt, has for the last ten years worked untiringly as a sculptor. Splendid examples of her art have been exhibited in New York, many of them selected in competition in which the best artists of the time have been her competitors. Among Mrs. Whitney's best known works are the Titanic memorial, which has been erected in the national capital; a fountain in the New Arlington hotel at Washington, exhibited at the Panama-Pacific exposition in California; another massive fountain of Aztec design in the bureau of American republics, also in Washington. Mrs. Whitney has also done some splendid work in oil, water color and crayon.

War Stops "Sea Bathing."

Humorists have recently added to the list of the war's alleged horrors the fact that Londoners can no longer bathe in sea water in their own homes. The facts in the case are reported by Popular Mechanics Magazine, as follows: It seems that for years one of the English railways has maintained a "sea-water" service. For the small sum of 12 cents it has delivered to any customer a large can of real ocean water for bathing purposes, calling for the can the following day. Now, however, Londoners, who pride themselves on being "the best tubbed people in the world" must forego these "sea baths," for the railway has discontinued its service on account of war conditions. Henceforth fresh water must suffice for cleansings.

Swiss Adopt 24-Hour Clock.

The Swiss federal council, under date of April 19, 1918, has decreed that the Swiss transportation systems, the management of the telegraph system, the customs service, the federal government works and the remaining institutions under federal government management shall, up to the return of normal conditions, but not before May 1, 1919, establish the 24-hour day, numbering the hours from 1 to 24, beginning at midnight. The Swiss federal railway department is empowered to fix the definite date upon which the 24-hour day is to be enforced.

Gloomy Outlook.

"I guess your boy will soon return from college."

"Yes," replied Mr. Cobbles, with a thoughtful look.

"No doubt you expect him to help you on the farm this summer?"

"No. When Henry was elected president of the Sophomore Dancing club my faith in him was considerably shaken, but when I heard he'd taken to playin' on a ukulele I quit havin' any illusions about that boy."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

His War Garden.

Mrs. Flatbush—Oh, John, there are two chickens fighting in our garden!

Mr. Flatbush—Well, let 'em fight. I've got to have some excuse for calling it a war garden, haven't I?

Crying Baby of Some Use.

A baby "crying in the night and with no language but a cry" found that language in a New Jersey town quite sufficient for the immediate family, as it was information to the effect that the house was on fire, thereby at the early age of one year saving twenty lives. This ought somewhat to justify that generally acknowledged nuisance, the crying baby.

Sleep While on the March.

Sleep can persist with the exercise of certain muscles. Couriers on long journeys nap on horseback. Among the impressive incidents of Sir John Moore's disastrous retreat to Coruna, in Spain, not the least striking is the recorded fact that many of his soldiers pursued their march while fast asleep. Burdach however, affirms that this is not uncommon among soldiers.

Inherited Character.

It has been explained that character and behavior of all organic matter, plants as well as animals and human beings, is determined by what are known as character units. Thus in taking a hypothetical case of the shrewd, cruel father and the shiftless, kind mother, we have four distinct character units, which through inheritance reappear variously grouped in the offspring.

"Bull" From North Wales.

Wales produces bulls other than those found in cattle shows. A North Wales correspondent, says the Western Mail, calls upon the parish councils to hold meetings of protest. "In the meantime," he says, "I hope abler pens than mine will put their shoulder to the wheel and flood the columns of your paper until satisfaction is forthcoming."

Bismarck's "Sacred" Number.

Belief in the number 3 was almost a religion to Bismarck, for it ran like a vein of gold through all his dazzling career. He served under three months, and in three great wars and signed three treaties of peace. He was the father of the triple alliance, and from his three names and as many words in his family motto, "Strength in Trinity," and his three children, there was no period or undertaking in his life in which this "sacred" figure was not of the best omen to him.

Differed as to Needed Sleep.

Sir Philip Sydney calls sleep "the poor man's wealth," and he might have added, "it is every man's health." The "immortal Alfred" of England divided the day into three portions of eight hours each, assigning one for refreshment and health of the body by sleep and exercise, another for business and the third for study and devotion. Bishop Taylor considered three hours' and Richard Baxter four hours' sleep sufficient for any man.

Normality the Essential.

The normal man is the one who succeeds in life. He must have imagination and courage, endurance and industry, the power to concentrate as well as intelligence. But first of all he must be normal, moderate in his habits, careful of his health, careful of his digestion and of his nerves.

REV. BARNLUND TO LEAVE KLEMME

Rev. A. W. Barnlund, pastor of the English Methodist church, will leave early next week for a new field of labor, in Wisconsin. He received a telegram on Monday from the Bishop presiding over the Wisconsin Conference at Waukesha, Wis., to the effect that he had been appointed to the Algoma St. Methodist church of Oshkosh, Wis.

This news came as a complete surprise to him, he not having expected the call. The church to which he goes is the second best in the Fon du Lac District, having a membership of more htan 350, and having 500 in the Sunday School. Next Sunday will therefore be his last Sunday in Klemme and with his parish here. The duties of his new charge will make it impossible to fill out the full time until the annual session of the N. W. Iowa Conference, which convenes at Sioux City, October 1st.

ELECTRIC LINES FOR FARMERS

The farmer should not be denied anything which his town brother has the privilege of using and one of these items is electricity for the farm. The farmers east and south of Klemme are thinking strongly of having the "high line" extended out from Klemme to their farms so that they can install electric lights and power in their homes and farm buildings. We think this is a very good idea and we don't see why this can't be done. We understand the farmers northwest of Garner are having a line run out their way and there is no reason why the farmers near Klemme can't do the same. It is a good move to push along and we invite the farmers to make use of the columns of this paper to promote the project. We would like to hear from some of the farmers who are interested in this move, let us hear what you are doing. We will be glad to help all we can.

GARNER BASEBALL TOURNAMENT, SEPT. 16, 17, 18

Last week we mentioned the fact that a baseball tournament would be held this week. However, since that time the dates of the tournament have been changed and now it is planned to hold the tournament next week on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 16, 17, and 18. Garner, Forest City, Britt and Buffalo Center will compete for a purse of $550. The baseball tournamens have been suspended during the war but Garner is going to cut loose on them again and they promise to put up some real exciting games. The games will all b played in the afternoon this year.

ENGLISH METHODIST CHURCH

Services next Sunday as follows:

Morning worship at 11:00 o'clock. Our Dist. Supt., Rev. Herbert Clegg, will be present and will preach, as also lead in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The Sunday School follows the morning service.

In thee vening there will be the usual union service, but it will be held in the Methodist church, Rev. Barnlund preaching, the service being his last in Klemme before going to his new field of labor. The evening service will be at 8:30. There will be special music at both the services of the day. Everyone is very cordially invited to attend.

Light From Stars.

The light we receive from stars of the first magnitude, like Vega, is equal approximately to a forty-thousand-millionth part of that of the sun. It is calculated that the total light received from the lesser stars is equal to that of 3,000 stars of the first magnitude, or a sixth part of that which is sent to us from the moon.

Last Hole, Indeed.

The story is told of an ancient Scotch golfer whose companion died and was about to be buried. The Scotsman struggled out to the cemetery to be present at the interment, and arriving there, did not know where the grave was. He summoned a boy with a whistle. "Whist, lad," he said. "It's a new course. Whaur's the hole?"

WILSON RECEIVES GREAT OVATION IN ST. LOUIS PARADE

President in Missouri Metropolis for Two Speeches in Behalf of League.

DECLARES LEAGUE'S FOES ARE QUITTERS

In His Address at Indianapolis He Explains and Defends the Pact and Challenges Opponents to Suggest Something Better—Great Crowds at All Stops.

St. Louis, Sept. 6.—President Wilson left no doubt in the minds of his audience here that he means to obtain the ratification of the peace treaty. He made two addresses, both to capacity crowds and to the first, in referring to the men in the senate opposing the treaty, he said in cold, crisp language:

"They are absolutely contemptible quitters if they don't see the game through."

His words electrified the 1,500 men and women in the roof garden of the Hotel Statler, brought them to their feet, sent them climbing chairs and tables, and precipitated a roar that had force enough to disturb the calm waters of the Mississippi.

Beautiful sunshine combined with a soft breeze and most of the population of St. Louis had the effect of making the president's second day out of Washington the most enjoyable thus far of the trip. The crowds gave the president and Mrs. Wilson a great reception and the city was decked in gala attire in honor of the guest. From the railroad station to the Hotel Statler, where the president spent a restful afternoon before appearing at the Coliseum, he was driven through cheering throngs. The people were glad to see him and showed their happiness in scores of ways.

Big Crowd at Indianapolis.

Indianapolis, Sept. 5.—President Wilson's address in the coliseum of the state fair grounds here was practically a failure because of the size of the crowd on hand to hear him.

It was estimated at 12,000 to 14,000 persons and was so huge it was unmanageable. Added to this feature was the unfortunate occurrence which befell Governor Goodrich of Indiana, who was intended to introduce the president. The governor made the mistake of talking too long and the crowd resented it, causing great confusion.

Meets American People.

The president ran the whole gamut of human emotions on the first day of his transcontinental trip. Figuratively, he met the American people at every waystation and crossroads where his special train stopped. And the American people congratulated him, and called him by his first name.

The president was escorted to the Coliseum at the state fair grounds here by a committee which included Gov. James P. Goodrich, Mayor Jewett, Indianapolis; Thomas Taggart, former Gov. Samuel L. Ralston, and Franklin McCray, president of the Indiana branch of the League to Enforce Peace. Thousands of persons, including many visitors to the state fair, crowded the streets and cheered lustily as the president passed.

"I have come upon a very sober errand—indeed, I have come to report to you upon the work which the representatives of the United States attempted to do at the conference of peace on the other side of the sea, because I realize, my fellow citizens, that my colleagues and I, in the task we attempted over there, were your servants."

Thus the president opened his address, continuing: "We went there with a distinct errand, which it was our duty to perform in the spirit which you have displayed in the prosecution of the war and in conceiving the purposes and objects of that war."

After recalling some of the circumstances of the war and the conditions under which the treaty was formulated, the president said:

"I want to point out to you what apparently has escaped the attention of some of the critics of the League of Nations, that the heart of the League of Nations does not lie in any of the portions which have been discussed in public debate.

"The great bulk of the provisions of that covenant contained these engagements and promises on the part of the states which undertook to become members of it.

"That in no circumstances will they go to war without first having either submitted the question to arbitration—in which case they agree to abide by the result, or having submitted the question to discussion by the council of the League of Nations, in which case they will allow six months for the discussion, and engage not to go to war until three months after the council has announced its opinion upon the subject under dispute.

"So that the heart of the covenant of the league is that the nations solemnly covenant not to go to war for nine months after a controversy becomes acute."

Defends Article X.

Later, taking up article X, he said: "You have heard a great deal about article X of the covenant of the League of Nations. Article X speaks the conscience of the world. Article X is the article which goes to the heart of this whole bad business, for that article says that the members of this league—and that is intended to be all the great nations of the world—engage to resist and preserve against all external aggression the territorial integrity and political independence of the nations concerned.

"That promise is necessary in order to prevent this sort of war recurring, and we are absolutely discredited if we fought this war and then neglect the essential safeguard against it.

"We engage, in the first sentence of article X, to respect and preserve from external aggression the territorial integrity and the existing political independence, not only of the other member states, but of all states, and if any member of the league disregards that promise, then what happens?

"The council of the league advises what should be done to enforce the respect for that covenant, on the part of the nation attempting to violate it. And there is no compulsion upon us to take that advice—except the compulsion of our good conscience and judgment.

"So that it is perfectly evident that if, in the judgment of the people of the United States, the council adjudged this was not an occasion for the use of force, there would be no necessity on the part of the congress of the United States to vote the use of force. But there could be no advice of the council on any such subject, without a unanimous vote, and the unanimous vote would include our own."

Force of Economic Boycott.

The president called attention to the provisions in the treaty for an absolute economic boycott of recalcitrant nations and predicted the complete efficacy of such action, continuing:

"I dare say that some of those ideas are new to you, because it is true, as I said this forenoon, in Columbus, that apparently nobody has taken the pains to say what is in the covenant of the League of Nations.

"They have discussed three—chiefly three—out of twenty-six articles, and the other articles contain the heart of the matter; that instead of war there shall be arbitration; instead of war there shall be discussion; instead of war there shall be the closure of intercourse; that instead of war there shall be the irresistible pressure of the opinion of all mankind.

"I am arguing this thing with you, my fellow citizens, as if I had any doubt of what the verdict of the American people would be. I haven't the slightest doubt. I just wanted to have the pleasure of pointing out to you how absolutely ignorant of the treaty, and of the covenant, some of the men are who have been opposing it.

"If they do read the English language they do not understand the English language as I understand it. If they have really read this treaty and this covenant they only amaze me by their inability to understand what is plainly expressed. So that my errand upon this journey is not to argue these matters, but to recall you to the real issues which are involved."

Touches on Irish Question.

Alluding evidently to the Irish question, Mr. Wilson said:

"There were a good many delegations that visited Paris waiting to be heard by the peace conference who had real causes to present and which ought to be presented to the view of the world.

"But we had to point out to them that they did not happen, unfortunately, to come within the area of settlement; that their questions were not questions which were necessarily drawn into the things that we were deciding. . . .

"I therefore want to call your attention, if you will turn it up when you go home, to article XI, following article X of the covenant of the League of Nations.

"That article XI, let me say, is the favorite article in the treaty so far as I am concerned. It says that every matter which is likely to affect the peace of the world is everybody's business and that it shall be the friendly right of any nation to call attention in the league to anything that is likely to affect the peace of the world.

"There is not an oppressed people in the world which cannot, henceforth, get a hearing at that forum."

In closing, the president explained the necessity for the Shantung settlement, and then challenged the opponents of the treaty and league to suggest a better way to secure world peace.

Chinese Music Unwritten.

Chinese music is not written. The words of some of the famous songs have been preserved, but the music has been handed down from father to son for generations that go far back before the day of the troubadours. When music is played it is played according to the memory of the musician and his ideas of interpretation. A musician varies the performance as his best judgement dictates, and the strings, reeds or brass may break in at almost any time.

The Constitution Adopted.

The Constitution was adopted by the states at different dates. Delaware adopted it on December 7, 1787; Pennsylvania, December 12, 1787; New Jersey, December 18, 1787; Georgia, January 2, 1788; Connecticut, January 9, 1788; Massachusetts, February 6, 1788; Maryland, April 28, 1788; South Carolina, May 23, 1788; New Hampshire, June 1, 1788; Virginia, June 25, 1788; New York, June 26 1788; North Carolina, November 21, 1789; Rhode Island, May 29, 1790.

TREATY IS REPORTED

FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE FINISHES ITS WORK.

CONTAINS FORTY AMENDMENTS

Reservations to the League Covenant Adopted.—Actual Consideration to Begin About September 15.

Washington, D. C.—The senate foreign relations committee has finally finished its work on the peace treaty with Germany. Final action of the committee resulted in the adoption of four reservations to the league of nations covenant, after which the treaty was ordered reported to the senate with about two score amendments previously incorporated.

The treaty now passes, so far as the United States is concerned, into its final stage—that of open consideration by the senate for ratification or rejection. Committee action was deferred on the special treaty to protect France and on other treaties submitted.

Chairman Lodge will return the treaty to the senate with a formal majority report in a few days. A minority report by the democrats opposing both amendments and reservations is to be filed within three days thereafter, and it is expected that actual consideration of the treaty will begin about September 15.

Weeks of debate before the final vote are expected. The first contest will be over the committee's amendments with the final and decisive struggle over the reservations, which the resolution provides must be specifically accepted by three of the four great powers—France, Italy and Great Britain.

The treaty has been in the hands of the foreign relations committee for nearly two months. The pact as amended and incorporating about forty amendments adopted recently by the majority will be reprinted for the senate's deliberations.

Following the committee's action, democratic leaders reiterated predictions that all of the amendments would be rejected by the senate, but refrained from predictions of probable disposition of the reservations.

Trouble Looms in Balkans.

Paris.—The greatest discord is developing in the Balkans, and the question is again uppermost in Europe's mind as to whether southeastern Europe is about to start fresh bloodshed on a colossal scale.

It is authoritatively stated that Serbia has decided to refuse to sign the peace treaty with Austria because Serbia does not recognize the clause protecting the minority rights of Jugo-Slavia, taking the view that such a concession would be a blow to its, Serbia's, sovereign rights. Roumania declines to sign the treaty on similar grounds.

Diplomats here agree the situation was never worse in the Balkans, even in the days of Ottoman suzerainty. Anything may be expected to happen within the next few days, perhaps hours.

Another Blow at H. C. of L.

Washington, D. C.—The war department struck another blow at high prices by putting on sale over 5,000,000 pounds of frozen poultry, mutton, pork loins and shoulders now in cold storage in the New York and Chicago zones.

Orders will be taken from municipalities all over the country in the order of their receipt. Carload lots only are to be sold. Orders may be placed with the war department or with the zone supply officer in New York or Chicago. The offer is open until September 25. Prizes are: Poultry, 43 cents per pound; pork, 27 and 22 cents; mutton, 16 cents.

Germany in Critical Position.

Berlin.—The productiveness of all branches of German industry has declined at an alarming rate, the official bulletin of the majority socialist party declares in a recent issue, adding that the German people will not be able to survive unless the rate of production begins to rise. "The fact is the whole industry of Germany is ailing and unless it rapidly improves, the German people will freeze and starve during the coming winter, says the bulletin.

Ratify Soldiers' Bonus Law.

Milwaukee, Wis.—The Wisconsin soldiers' bonus bill providing approximately $15,000,000 to be obtained through taxes, which passed the recent legislature with a referendum amendment attached to it, at a special election throughout the state, was ratified by a wide margin. Under the measure soldiers, sailors, marines and nurses who enlisted in the world war will receive $10 for each month's service, the minimum to be $50.

Food Supplies Greater Than Ever.

Paris.—Food supplies now held in the United States are greater than at any time since 1913, Herbert Hoover said, testifying before the American congressional committee investigating war expenses. A tremendous drop in food prices in the United States may be expected in the next few months, he said. The speculators have reached the end of their powers, Hoover declared, and are no longer to maintain corners in stocks, owing to Europe's inability to purchase America's over-production.

CANNOT BOOST FOOD PRICES

Attorney General Forbids Committees Under Any Circumstances, to Raise Prices Above Present Levels.

Washington, D. C.—Fair price committees throughout the country were informed by Attorney General Palmer that their activities were not expected in anywise to include official sanction for raising prices above present levels.

Reports that in a few places committees co-operating with the Department of Justice in the government's effort to reduce the cost of living had advanced charges to consumers, caused an official circular to be prepared making it clear that such a step had no approval from Washington.

"The purpose of this campaign is to reduce the high cost of living, and the committees were not expected in any wise to increase it," the circular said. "Fair price committees should not at any place or under any circumstances increase prices. If in the judgment of the committee a price is too low it should not be touched. It is only prices which are too high with which we are concerned."

It was made clear that the jurisdiction of the fair price committee includes fuel and wearing apparel as well as foods and feeds.

Starts Drive for Peace Pact.

Columbus, Ohio.—President Wilson made his first appeal direct to the people for ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, including the league of nations, here. He addressed an audience which jammed Memorial hall to the roof, and his words were greeted with a thunder of applause.

The speech lasted about forty-five minutes. A throng, which blocked the street, cheered the president as he emerged from the hall. People surged around his car while soldiers, police and Boy Scouts sought to hold them back. In the evening of the first day of his 10,000-mile speaking tour the president spoke to a throng of ten thousand persons at Indianapolis. The president started the campaign by calling upon opponents of the league of nations to "put up or shut up." "If the critics of the league have something better to suggest," he told the Indianapolis crowd, "I hope they will hold their convention and do it now." Great crowds are attending the addresses of the president wherever stops are made.

Meets Death With Wife.

Chicago.—"I'll stay with you Mary." With these words William F. Tanner, a cashier in the office of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad here, closed his eyes, embraced his wife whose foot was caught in a railroad frog and was killed with her when a limited train of the Chicago & Northwestern railroad crashed into them. John Miller, a flagman, in attempting to rescue the couple, lost his left leg and sustained a fracture of the right arm.

Three little children are orphans because of the fateful decision of Tanner to die with his wife.

Conference Dates Set.

Washington.—The conference called by President Wilson to discuss relations between labor and industry will meet in Washington October 6 and will be composed of five persons selected by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, five by the National Industrial Conference board, 15 by the American Federation of Labor, three by farming organizations and three by investment bankers and 15 representatives of the public.

Permanent Rank for Pershing.

Washington, D. C.—Amid applause from senators and spectators, the senate in open executive session unanimously confirmed the nomination of John J. Pershing to the permanent rank of general of the regular army as a reward for his services as commander of the American expeditionary forces. As a mark of special honor, a rising vote was taken.

Mexico Regrets Incident.

Washington, D. C.—Regret over the firing at an American army airplane on the border has been expressed by the Mexican government, it was announced at the State department. Assurances were given that an immediate investigation would be made with a view to a satisfactory adjustment.

Havelock Strikers Return.

Lincoln, Neb.—Shopmen who went on strike at the Burlington shops at Havelock, returned to work, following settlement of the strike. According to Thomas Roope, superintendent of motive power, the men returned under the same conditions that existed prior to the strike.

Sunday to Invade Canada.

Ocean Grove, N. J.—Billy Sunday will storm Canada in the interests of prohibition, he announced at the conclusion of his ninety-day campaign here.

Rain Checks Forest Fires.

Missoula, Mont.—Recent rains here and throughout northern Idaho and western Montana have aided greatly in the fight against forest fires in this territory.

Bryan To Go On Dry Tour.

Columbus, O.—W. J. Bryan will tour Ohio from October 6 to November 2 to urge enforcement of the existing prohibition laws, the enactment of additional dry measures, defeat of the wet proposals and election of dry candidates to office.

FOR FUNSTON YANKS

GREAT MONUMENT BUILT AT CAMP DEDICATED.

STANDS SIXTY FEET HIGH

Made of Stone Taken From Quarries In Hills of Reservation.—Overlooks Golden Belt Road.

Camp Funston, Kas.—A lasting memorial to men who gave their lives on the battlefields of France, the native stone monument erected at Camp Funston by soldiers who trained here, was unveiled and dedicated September 1 by Major General Leonard Wood, commander of the Eighty-ninth division during its training period at Camp Funston, and now commander of the central department of the United States army. A bronze table on the monument bears this inscription:

"To the Men Who Trained at Camp Funston for the Great War, 1917-1919."

Construction of the monument was authorized in December, 1918, by General Wood and was begun in February, 1919, under the direction of Major Sidney H. Negrotto, being completed in May. The material used was native stone, secured from quarries in the hills of the reservation over which the soldiers took many a hike during training days.

The monument, which has a thirty-foot base and stands sixty feet high, is of cyclopean structure and is located in the heart of the camp on West boulevard, about 500 feet from the Golden Belt highway.

Soldiers from South Dakota, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona, composing the Eighty-ninth division, trained at Camp Funston from the fall of 1917 until the division left for France in May, 1918. Men of the Ninety-second and Tenth division also trained at Funston.

Carranza Defends Mexico.

Mexico City, Mex.—A defense of Mexico against foreign representations, particularly from the United States regarding the lives of foreigners and their property was contained in a message of President Carranza, read at the opening session of the Mexican congress here. Particular reference was made in the message to alleged injustices practiced against Mexicans in the United States.

A long list of the alleged offenses was given under the section of the address devoted to foreign relations.

The message also defended Mexico's neutrality during the war and protested against charges that the Mexican government was incapable and unwilling to protect foreign lives and property.

Austria Gets Final Terms.

Paris.—The treaty on the conditions of peace submitted to the Austrian delegates by the allies and associated powers does not in any way exempt people of Austria and Hungary from responsibility for the calamities which have befallen Europe during the past five years. A note accompanying the presentation of the treaty said careful consideration has been given to the counter proposals of the Austrians and with some modifications, which are noted, the text of the treaty as presented must be considered final.

Employes to Share in Control.

Washington, D. C.—The War department has announced that employes in the Rock Island arsenal have been given a share in the actual control of the production activities of the arsenal harness shops, including appointment of foremen, and determination of prices to be paid workmen. It is reported the new plan is intended to bring about a radical reduction in manufacturing costs. The system will be extended to other departments of the arsenal, and if found successful, will be placed in operation in all United States arsenals, it was learned.

Want Ludendorff Story Barred.

Washington, D. C.—Senator Chamberlain has received a telegram from the American Legion post at Portland, Ore., asking him to take up with the department of justice the question of preventing publication of the Ludendorff story of the war. Chamberlain has appealed to American newspapers to refrain from printing Ludendorff's book. The Portland Post pointed out that unless the publication is officially stopped, some newspapers, which have bought the book but decided not to publish it, might be sued for breach of contract.

Actors' Strike Costly Affair.

New York.—More than $2,000,000 has been lost in New York's theatrical war, it is estimated. The strike, which lasted twenty-five days, has tied up twenty-five leading theaters.

Railroads Show Profit.

Washington.—For the first time in many months, government operation of the railroads in July showed a surplus instead of a deficit.

Admits Warning Turkey.

Washington.—It has been officially announced that in warning Turkey that massacres of Armenians must stop, Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, commander of U. S. forces in Turkey, was acting under instructions from the state department.

OLD AND NEW WORLD LIN

Roots of Country's National Life Exclusively Planted This Sid of the Water.

The American Revolution wa questionably a great historic eve reason of its connection with the mal institution of a new nation the roots of our national life were then planted. They run back to first settlements and the first cha and agreements, nor is the gene the nation to be found there; as are the beginnings of our hi on this continent, no student could tent himself with a conception o national life which took into ac only the events and conditions o mined by the people and soil of A ica. Even in actual relations bet America and Europe there never been a time when the Atlantic ha been an ebbing as well as a flo tide, and the instinct which now us to the Old World in passionat grimages is a constituent part o national life.—H. Old Beliefs Lost.

Few are the beliefs and still fewer the superstitions of today. We pretend to account for everything until we do not believe enough for the humanity so essential to moral discipline. The phantasmic age has long been unfurnished of all its ingenious garniture. That glowing day has set, leaving none of its ethereal hues in our old twilight. We have lost something for which we have no substitute

Deep Sea Creatures.

An interesting little creature of the deep is the lencelet. It ranks about halfway between a fish and an invertebrate. Among its many peculiarities is the absence of a distinct head. The mouth is in the middle of the body, and is surrounded by tentacles. At great depths shrimps have been found that have luminous bodies. When put into the aquarium, they lose their light-giving properties. Scientists believe the Creator made these creatures luminous to give them light in the dark depths of the sea.

Customs Differ.

HOW WAR COOKS MADE THEMSELVES BELOVED BY THE SOLDIERS

The problem of making bricks without straw was solved, it is said, by the war cooks. They made porridge out of army biscuits, croquettes from bully beef, rice rissoles, amazing savories from tins of sardines and bloater paste.

"They seemed always cheerful," writes Lieut. J. B. Morton. "I do not remember ever to have met a surly cook. I have a picture in my mind of cookers that stood near Harley street on the La Bassee sector, and of cooks that always had a cheery word at the worst of times. Day after day they cooked the meals under shell fire; and once, when a cooker was hit, they sent up a report that there had been an accident to the tea, and that it would be brought up later. That is all they said about it; and the tea was brought up later. I saw them again in a ghastly wood in Picardy. They were still cheerful, and still at the same work.

"They do not get many medals, and the thrill of battle is rare for them, but they are proud of the appreciation of the men. As I write they are moving forward with the army of occupation, in the highest spirits, trying to keep those quaint old cookers up to the speed necessary to follow an advancing army."

CYCLIST UNITS WON PRAISE

How the "Petrol Cavalry" Did Its Part in the Crushing of the Detested Hun.

During the recent actions in France the military cyclist units have won well-earned praise, London Tit-Bits says.

When it is remembered that well-trained military cyclists can cover 60 miles a day on average roads and come into action fit at the end of the ride something of their advantage over cavalry can be realized. Cycles, unlike horses, do not tire rapidly, and, furthermore, require neither food nor drink.

In a rearguard action, when whole armies are falling back into new positions, it is difficult to send up supplies to horses, and even the transport of infantry in omnibuses causes congestion of the traffic. Cyclists, on the other hand, can literally "get through anywhere."

The men are all skilled riders, and practiced shots, and, above all, well trained in map reading and finding their own way. Carrying the normal equipment of cartridges on their person and a further supply on each machine, they come into action quickly and bring their full fire power to bear.

It is now 30 years since military cyclists were officially recognized among the official forces of the crown, but it was never thought that they would play such a valuable part as the "Petrol Cavalry" has done in this great struggle.

Why Windows Should Be Open.

Sabourin mentions the great hostility of the public to the open-window treatment. Apparently it is necessary to compromise with the patient's relatives on this score. There is, of course, no objection to airing the room while it is empty. The windows should be closed when the patient returns, to allow him to undress, and the bed should be as far as possible from the open window, with its foot turned toward the latter. The window should be wide open after the patient is abed. However, it is advisable to establish tolerance by raising the window but a short distance the first night and increasing it gradually. There are various devices to use in cold weather to keep the wind from blowing on the patient, chief of which is a screen to be placed at the foot of the bed.—Journal de Medicine et de Chirurgie Pratiques.

How Aphis Will Be Fought.

War has been declared on the aphis that annually destroyed thousands of dollars worth of crops in eastern Washington and Oregon. An army of ladybugs is being recruited by the United States bureau of entomology with the assistance of game wardens throughout the two northwestern states.

The ladybug is the natural enemy of the aphis. When liberated in a colony of aphis the ladybug's actions are anything but ladylike. One ladybug is said to be more than a match for 100 able-bodied aphis. The army of ladybugs is now in winter quarters in the mountains at an altitude of about 3,000 feet. The game wardens will be required to round them up and have them ready for the spring drive.

Why Lemon Is Valuable.

If the testimony of the Sicilian citrus chamber is given due consideration in determining the status of a lemon, it deserves an important place in the list of first aids. According to the authority mentioned the lemon aids are chiefly medicinal and hygenic. Its juice is of value in treating diphtheria and gout. For ordinary colds it is a great specific. It will cure slight wounds and chilblains. The juice of several lemons taken every day will help to cure rheumatism and prove an antidote for diabetes; small slices applied to corns will ease the pain.

WHY

Modern Environment Was Fatal to Eskimo

Mene, the Eskimo boy whom Admiral Peary brought back from the arctic zone years ago, is dead of pneumonia in a logging camp. It was scarcely a kindness, though meant as one, for Peary to take him away from his native snow and ice. A man of the old stone age could not survive in the modern environment of civilization; or perhaps in the view of the Cro-Magnons, who drew pictures in colors on the walls of French and Spanish caves 20,000 years ago, drawings that still survive, civilization does not amount to much when dangers from street cars, automobiles, falling airplanes, influenza and a multitude of other things are greater than were those from the sabre-toothed tiger or the woolly rhinoceros in their day.

No Eskimo has ever flourished in the temperate zone. The scenery of Greenland and Baffin Land may be monotonous, it may have a certain uniform whiteness that tires the eye, but fresh air is abundant and nipping. It is not poisoned by soft-coal smoke, and it suits the native's lungs.

TO ENGLISHMAN THE HONOR

How Ice Cream, Perhaps Most Popular of Delicacies, Was Given to Appreciative World.

Many persons think that Dolly Madison made the first ice cream, but Thyra Samter Winslow, an English woman, who has made a long and careful study of the subject declares that Dolly Madison was merely the first person in America to serve it. This was at a White House reception during the administration of President Madison. The guests liked the cream so well that they asked how it was made, and from that first beginning a vast business has grown up. According to a creamery expert, the American people eat more than 250,000,000 gallons of ice cream in a year. The first ice cream was made by a London confectioner named Gunton, and others learned to make it. Gunton's methods of freezing were crude and uncertain. It remained for Nancy Johnson, wife of an American naval officer, to invent the ice cream freezer.

How Huns Maligned British.

Away back to Jeanne d'Arc went the Germans in their attempt to get up a rookus between Great Britain and France during the recent war.

In newspapers copiously illustrated and written in French the Boches hoped to persuade the poilu that all was wrong with the Tommy. How they must have improved the morale of the allies by the mirth they created.

Two samples of these newspapers, La Guerre Qui Vient, and L'Anglais tel qu'il est, were recently received by Mrs. Dorothy Llewellyn Field from her husband, Lieut. Ralph E. Field, Twenty-sixth Engineers, A. E. F.

Portraits of plump British colonels photographing starving Hindus, of British sportsmen tying darky babies to the trees of the river bank as bait for crocodile, Great Britain represented on the map as an octopus (none of whose tentacles established any revolution during the war!)—all these and many other items give the British a rare showing up.

And you should see how the missionaries and the Salvation army are laid out! So it happened that on November 11——

How Monument Was Started.

Many months ago a girl—the sweetheart of a soldier at Camp Devens, Mass.—brought to the camp a bit of stone from her home and gravely laid it on a designated spot. That little action was the beginning of the sweetheart's monument.

In the months following, other girls, the rich and the poor, from the coast fishing villages and the Berkshire hills, brought bits of stone and laid them close to the first.

Today where the first piece of rock was laid, there is a tall shaft composed of hundreds of multi-colored stones. It was dedicated as the sweetheart's monument and has a bronze tablet with the inscription: "To the memory of those who at the call of humanity laid aside their vocations to become soldiers in the grand army of liberty."

How to Tackle Business.

There's satisfaction in getting down to business.

It's a worry when you feel the responsibility resting upon you and you can't change the weight. To be able to get down to business after every interruption, to take up the thread where it was dropped without having to go back, makes a man feel like a conqueror. This consciousness of strength helps him master trials without worry. That leaves a reserve for other demands that shows a man's strength. Once feel that you are master of your own self and the problems that confront you and you can tackle double duty and get away with it. It's a matter of getting down to business and letting other things go. It's the mark of success offered the many but mastered by the few. Be one of them.

How Flying Tanks Operate.

One of the reasons why the Germans quit was that the flying tank was coming into large use by the allies. The Huns had learned to dread any hint of a tank but their own. The flying tank is an armored battleplane that could not be punctured by small artillery and the business it could do with the enemy was something fierce.

In United States Orchards.

In the United States there are more than 200,000,000 apple trees of bearing age, about 20,000,000 pear trees, and more than 16,000,000 cherry trees.

Church Appropriately Adorned.

At a special service for fishermen at Corton, near Lowestoft, England, the church was adorned with nets, in which herrings were enmeshed, that were festooned around the nave. An arch of oars from which was suspended a sidelight, spanned the center aisle, and flags, buoys, bladders and other fishing gear completed the scene of decoration.

Paul Somers, of Grinnell, has been appointed Des Moines city high school Y. M. C. A. secretary. Mr. Somers recently returned from overseas, where he served fifteen months with the Thirty-seventh and Eighty-eighth divisions. He is a graduate of Grinnell college. When in college he played on the all-state basketball team.

Violation of the anti-trust laws of the United States, and a conspiracy of Muscatine button manufacturers to control absolutely the pearl button industry, is charged by E. E. Thomas, of Paducah, Ky., a former employe of George Birrell, Inc., in a suit for $50,000 damages and $10,276 alleged due him for services, filed in the district court at Muscatine.

Winners of first prize in the County farm produce display in the agricultural building at the state fair in their respective divisions were Winnebago, Grundy, Guthrie and Keokuk counties; seconds were taken by Clay, Polk and Cass counties; thirds by Warren and Greene counties; fourths by Marion and Carroll, and fifths by Washington and Dallas.

A pure bred Short Horn heifer club has been organized in O'Brien county for girls or boys between the ages of 12 and 20 years. The club will start October 1. The management will purchase heifers between the ages of 10 and 18 months which will be distributed by lot. The banks have agreed to take notes for the calves.

Spontaneous combustion of paint in the office of the Aalfs Harper Wall Paper company at Sioux City caused a fire which caused $50,000 damage to the wall paper company and $100,000 loss to the Orkin company, ladies' furnishers, next door.

All mention of the rank of delegates attending the state convention of the American Legion were taboo. Discharged soldiers, sailors and marines were all plain "mister." But one district reported using titles and the speaker quickly made apology for the error.

The new farm electric lines which will carry power and electricity to practically every farmer within a considerable radius of Webster City, are to cost approximately $460 a mile. This line, eighteen miles in length, will provide the Stonega elevator and forty farm homes with electric current, will cost in material alone, $8,400.

Iowa ranks fourth in the number of American Legion posts established in the United States according to the last bulletin sent out from national headquarters. New York is first with 331 posts, Pennsylvania second with 28, Massachusetts third with 180 and Iowa fourth with 159 posts. Iowa's number has since been increased to 180 posts.

Strychnine poisoning caused the death of the 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brody, of Nevada. The father had been doctoring a cow and the child found the bottle of medicine and drank some of it. When found in convulsions the child was hurried to the office of a doctor in Cambridge, but died soon afterwards. The medicine contained strychnine.

Sheriff Green, of Denison, received notice that a bogus check artist named King had been apprehended in Colorado, and has gone after him. It is alleged that he defrauded fifteen banks in Crawford county, while acting as solicitor for a Sioux City elevator company, selling stock. King, in the past, has held several responsible positions, including that of express messenger, and is married, his wife living in Sioux City.

E. H. Mallory, of Hampton, who for a year has held the record in Franklin county for price received for a shipment of live stock to the Chicago market, has recently made another record and set a high mark for a single consignment of fat stock. Seven cars of cattle shipped out brought $27,000, and two cars of hogs will bring a check of close to $6,000, making a total of $33,000, probably the largest amount ever received in Franklin county for fat stock at one time.

Mason City is to have a new eight-story or more hotel, modern in every particular, to cost without the site $650,000. That was determined recently when a group of capitalists and property owners made a proposition to the board of the chamber of commerce which assures Mason City of a new modern hostelry in the very near future. The proposition was submitted by C. H. McNider, F. E. Keeler, J. E. Decker, George Feldman and others representing much wealth and capital.

Peter Kehoe will continue to be the mayor of Cascade, according to the ruling made by Judge Kinsinger of Dubuque. When a petition was presented some time ago, Judge Kinsinger ordered Kehoe removed from office. But a counter petition asking for a reversal of that petition was signed by a large majority of the citizens of Cascade and upon the showing Judge Kinsinger ordered Kehoe reinstated. The charges against Kehoe arose from radical feeling caused by the war.

Housing and sanitary conditions in most of the mining camps in Iowa are very poor, according to H. E. Sands, state housing commissioner, for whom C. S. Nichols, of Ames, sanitary engineer, has just completed a survey. Of the fifty-six camps investigated, forty-five, or about 80 per cent, are in bad condition, the survey shows. Lack of good drinking water is one of the chief troubles. Houses built in a ramshackle style and entirely incapable of keeping a family warm during a cold winter will also be corrected as much as possible by the state housing commission.

The 12-year-old son of Bert Black, Shellsburg, climbed one of the steel poles connected with the high tension power line of the Iowa Railway & Light company, and when about 35 feet from the ground touched one of the wires and was thrown from the pole with great force. The boy was dead when picked up. It is not known whether the current killed him or whether it was the fall, but more than likely the former. It is reported that the lad had said a number of times that he would like to climb the pole and touch the wire, but it was not thought he really had it in mind to do so.

The Devil's Backbone will be formally opened as a state park early in October, according to the plan adopted at a meeting on the rocky ridge of the Backbone itself, near Manchester. State Treasurer E. H. Hoyt called together representatives of four counties nearest to the park, Delaware, Buchanan, Clayton, and Fayette, and after a picnic dinner at which the caretaker, G. F. Durham, and "Ned," as the state treasurer is known to every one in this part of the state, had collaborated, the men got together and chose S. W. Klaus, representative from Delaware county, to preside over the meeting. The park has proved very attractive and many auto loads of people have visited it during the summer.

A state convention that will be conducted from beginning to end in absolute silence is to be held in Dubuque next year. It is the meeting of the Iowa Association for the Advancement of the Deaf.

Mrs. Jane Kirkwood, wife of Iowa's war governor, celebrated her ninety-eighth birthday at her home. Mrs. Kirkwood has been in the best of health and retains all her faculties. She is extremely interested in world politics at the present time and is hoping for early adoption of the league of nations covenant.

Great Men Needed Little Sleep.

There are some remarkable cases on record of deviations from the customary amount of sleep. Many persons have reached advanced age without ever having more than one or two hours' sleep out of twenty-four. General Pichegru informed Sir Gilbert Blane that in the course of his active campaigns he had for a whole year not more than one hour of sleep in the twenty-four hours. Frederick of Prussia and Napoleon, as a general thing, never devoted more than three or four hours to sleep.

Ubiquitous Scot.

Lord Strathcona often declared that a Scotsman, though he spent his life abroad, often remains a Scotsman, and the ubiquity of the race was a favorite conventional theme with him. To illustrate, he told of a Scotsman in Shanghai who wagered with an incredulous southerner that he would discover a brother Scot in every ship in the harbor. Going to each ship in turn and shouting, "Are you there, Mac?" into the engine room, he got "Aye, aye," as answer every time.

Trinidad's Mangrove Trees.

The mangrove tree, which is found in Trinidad, has many peculiarities. For one thing, its seeds germinate on the branches, and when the shoots are considerably grown they fall off and take root in the mud. As the young tree grows it sends out fresh roots from its trunk and lower branches, until at last the tree seems to be supported by a network of roots, or complicated series of arches, in the midst of which crabs, aquatic birds and insects take up their abode.

Pigeons Are Hardy Bathers.

Pigeons are very persistent bathers. Whenever the horse trough is left uncovered a cheesy white scum shows they have been there; and one bitter cold day when the plumbers turned a stream from the pipe they were repairing into an icy hollow the pigeons flew down and began plunging into the freezing pool.—From "A Farmer's Note Book," by C. E. D. Phelps.

Queer Hats of Soldiers.

Korean soldiers wear black or brown felt hats decorated with red horse hair of peacock feathers, and hanging from the sides, over the ears and around their necks, are oval balls of porcelain, amber and a queer kind of gum.

Dyspepsia Routed by Laughter.

You may beat your dyspepsia by joking at it. I sat down at the club lunch opposite an artist suffering from indigestion, myself being a fellow sufferer. I prescribed. Let's take the absolutely worst things! We ordered roast pork, roly-poly pudding and Scotch ale, laughed all the time at the solemn men who were giving other advice, and—when we met again confessed that our dyspepsia had disappeared in laughter!—London Chronicle.

Light's Influence on Flowers.

It is known that light influences very largely the aroma of flowers. A garden is more fragrant when it is shaded than when the sun is allowed to shine in full blaze upon it. This, at any rate, is the conclusion of a Frenchman who has recently made a vast number of experiments. That which affects the fragrance of flowers is not the oxygen of the atmosphere, as has been commonly supposed, but the light.

Immune From Certain Diseases.

It is believed that previous to civilization baldness was unknown among American Indians. The uncivilized Indian apparently is yet free from pellagra and almost immune from cancer.

A FARM AT AUCTION SALE!

Saturday, Sept. 13

AT 1:30 P. M. RAIN OR SHINE

On the above date I will sell at Public Auction to highest bidder my 45 acre farm lying just north of the town of Klemme. Well located, close-in; suitable for farming. (No better soil on earth), Dairying and Stock Raising, Market Gardening or building purposes.

Is well improved. Has good five-room house with cellar and cistern. Good well and windmill. New barn 28x36, good silo 14x28, corn crib, good cattle barn, chicken house, hog house and large cement feeding floor well sheltered. All outbuildings have cement floors. The farm is enclosed with hog-tight fence, also cross fenced. There are about fifty young fruit trees just beginning to bear. The place is close-in. The house is only 2½ blocks from the School House, and on the same street. Electricity is easily available. For the purposes set forth this place is unexcelled. Is especially attractive to those wishing to retire, either from farm or business.

WILL BE SOLD AS FOLLOWS

Four 5-acre tracts, east front, facing good highway. Tract No. 1 will be sold with the privilege of tract Nos. 2, 3 and 4 at the same price, thereby affording the purchaser an opportunity to regulate the size of their purchase. Twenty-five acres containing the buildings will then be sold in a body, then the 45 acres as a whole, the owner reserving the right to accept the bid netting the most money.

A Gold Prize will be given away during the sale on which every person present will be given a chance.

Look this place over and come prepared to purchase. September 13 is the date. 1:30 p. m. the hour.

TERMS: $2,000 cash, $8,000 can be carried five years at 5½ per cent interest. Balance on or before March 1st.

Chas. Ax, Owner

E. P. Hanson, Auct. 1st Nat. Bank, Clerk B. J. Rhodes, Sales Mgr.

Is Klemme on the Map?

Listen! No town of 800 population in the state has a better "NOW" or a brighter "TOMORROW" than Klemme. The town is well laid out with wide streets, well kept. Has beautiful, modern homes far exceeding the number usually found in towns several times its size. Has excellent business houses well managed. First class creamery, two splendid banks with total deposits aggregating considerable over a million dollars. Has two grain elevators and three garages. Good system of city water, and 24-hour electric service. Has City Park, good public school, and three churches. Is located adjacent to the "Wilson Way." Has large trade territory containing some of the most prosperous people of the earth. Why not make your future home in Klemme. Think it over and come prepared toi nvest on September 13th.

HOW THE HUMBLE BUT NECESSARY NEEDLE IS MANUFACTURED.

—Needles go through many operations in the course of their manufacture. They are first cut in suitable lengths from coils of steel wire. After a bath of such bits as have been cut out, they are placed in a furnace, then rolled until perfectly straight. Next, the needle-pointer takes up a dozen or so of the wires and rolls them between his thumb and finger, with their ends on a turning grindstone, first one and then the other being ground. The little steel bobbins are next fed into a machine, which flattens and gutters the heads, after which the eyes are punched. They are now complete needles, but rough and easily bent. Careful heating and sudden cooling give them the necessary temper, and nothing remains but to give them their final polish. On a coarse cloth needles are spread to the number of 40,000 or 50,000. Emery dust is spread over them, oil is sprinkled on, and soft soap daubed over the cloth, which rolled tightly, is thrown into a pot with others, where it rolls about for twelve hours or more. When taken from this friction bath the needles require only a rinsing in clean hot water, when they are ready to be sorted and packed.

GIFT THAT AVERTED STRIFE

How Doll, Presented to Papoose, Influenced Redskins to Return Peacefully to Reservation.

A band of Apache Indians were once induced to go back to their reservation by the gift of a doll to a papoose. The incident was as follows:

General Crook had been trying to put these Apaches back on the reserve, but could not catch them without killing them—an action that did not appeal to him. One day his forces captured a papoose and took her to the fort. She was quiet all day; but her black eyes watched everything. When night came the child broke down and sobbed.

The fort was in despair, until Major Burke, the general's aid-de-camp, borrowed from the adjutant's wife a doll that had been sent to her little girl the previous Christmas. When the young Apache understood that it was hers to keep her sobs ceased and she fell asleep. When morning came the doll was still clasped tightly in her arms. She played with it all day, and seemingly had given up all thought of ever getting back to the tribe.

Several days passed with no sign being made by the tribe, and finally in despair the papoose, with the doll still in her possession, was sent back. When the child reached the tribe with the prize grasped in her chubby hands it created a sensation among the Indians, and her mother later went to the post with it. She was received in a hospitable manner and kindly treated, and the effect of her visit was such that through her overtures were made, with the result that soon afterward the entire band moved back to the reserve.

How Father Handicaps Himself.

It has been noticed that in many cases of influenza the father succumbs to the disease, while the rest of the family gets well.

"I find that the father is less careful of his energy than the rest of the family," said a woman who has been doing a great deal of volunteer nursing since the epidemic. "In the first place, he thinks he has a ball cold and keeps on with his work. Then when it is absolutely necessary for him to stay at home he attends to the furnace and waits on the others who are sick. If every man would go to bed and stay there when he is first ill, it would be much better for his family, as he is the wage earner and the protector generally, and needs care that he may conserve his own energy for the purpose of fighting the disease, and getting well that he may take care of his family as long as they need him."

Why Pullmans Are Put Ahead.

A rearrangement of the order of the passenger coaches on through trains passing through Statesville has been noticed. The Pullmans are carried next to the engine with day coaches, followed by the "jim crow" car and baggage and express cars. This reversed order has become a law with through trains, being adopted as a safety measure, that the steel cars may be next the engine. It has been observed in railway wrecks that steel cars in the rear of the train have caught and crushed lighter coaches next the engine, causing great loss of life and property. The carrying of the heavy steel cars next the engine is deemed safer.—Statesville (N. C.) Record.

Why Wooden Tie Must Go.

The increasing size and weight of rolling stock and the advancing cost of material and labor make it patent that a substitute must be found for the wooden tie. Both steel and concrete ties have been advocated for years, but the fact remains that they have not come into general use. Two steel and concrete ties of different types, showing the trend of inventors at present, are described and illustrated in Popular Mechanics Magazine. Each of these ties has been given tryouts on sections of different railways where the traffic is heavy.

AMERICA'S PLEDGE SACRED--WILSON

PRESIDENT SAYS OUR PROMISE TO TRY TO PREVENT FUTURE WARS SHOULD BE KEPT.

ONLY HOPE IS IN WORLD LEAGUE

Says Germany Would Not Have Dared to Strike If Nations Had Been Banded Against Aggression.

(By Mt. Clemens News Bureau.)

St. Louis—Displaying a high confidence that his fellow citizens in the great majority agree with him in his desire to end war forever, and that the peace treaty with its League of Nations inclusion is ratified by the senate, President Wilson is making a successful way across the country on the long journey he has undertaken for the purpose of laying before the plain people a report of his work in Paris and explaining to them just what the League means.

Thus far in his travels he has everywhere met with warm greetings, both in the great halls where he has spoken formally and in the little cross road hamlets where his train has halted at times and he has exchanged words with the villagers who pressed forward to greet him. He feels, and does not hesitate to say so when chatting with his traveling companions, that the American people want no more of war and want to become part of the League so that there may be no more war. He struck his keynote when he said in his first address, in Columbus, Ohio:

"This treaty was not intended merely to end this single war. It is meant as a notice to every government who in the future will attempt this thing (what Germany attempted) that mankind will unite to inflict the same punishment. There is no national triumph to be recorded in this treaty. There is no glory sought for any particular nation. The thought of the statesmen collectd around that table was of their people, of the sufferings they had gone through, of the losses they had incurred, of that great throbbing heart which was so depressed, so forlorn, so sad in every memory it had of the five tragical years that have gone by. Let us never forget those years, my fellow countrymen; let us never forget the purpose, high and disinterested, with which America lent its strength, not for its own glory but for the defense of mankind.

"As I said, this treaty was not meant merely to end this war. It is intended to prevent any similar war. I wonder if some of the opponents of the League of Nations have forgotten the promises we made our people before we went to that peace table? We had taken by process of law the flower of our youth from every countryside, from every household, and we told those mothers and fathers and sisters and wives and sweethearts that we were taking those men to fight a war which would end business of that sort, and if we do not end it, if we do not do the best that human concert of action can do to end it, we are of all men the most unfaithful—the most unfaithful to the loving hearts who suffered in this war, the most unfaithful to those households bowed in grief and yet lifted with the feeling that the lad laid down his life for a great thing, and, among other things, in order that other lads might never have to do the same thing.

"That is what the League of Nations is for—to end this war justly and then not merely to serve notice on governments which could contemplate that they will do so at their peril, but also concerning the combination of power which will prove to them that they will do it at their peril. It is idle to say the worlds will combine against you; but it is persuasive to say the world is combined against you; The League of Nations is the only thing that can prevent the recurrence of this dreadful catastrophe and redeem our promises."

A League of Nations would have prevented the late conflict, the president asserted, explaining:

"I did not meet a single public man who did not admit these things; that Germany would not have gone into this war if she thought Great Britain was going into it, and she most certainly would never have gone into it had she dreamed America was going into it. And they all admit that a notice beforehand that the greatest powers of the world would combine to prevent this sort of thing would prevent it absolutely."

Applause and cheers greeted each declaration of the president that wars might be avoided in the future by operations of the League. He pointed out other important features of the Peace Treaty, how it was the redemption of weak nations, giving them freedom which otherwise they never could have won; how it says "These people have a right to live their own lives under governments which they themselves choose", and how "that is the American Principle and I was glad to fight for it", and that was the very heart of the Treaty, he said.

He drew attention to the section of the Treaty which is a "Magna Charta of Labor," which shall dispose of the hours, conditions and remunerations of labor.

"It forecasts the day", he said "which ought to have come long ago, when statesmen will realize that no nation is fortunate which is not happy, whose people are not contented, contented in their lives and fortunate in the circumstances of their lives".

In conclusion the president said he felt certain the Treaty will be accepted, and was only impatient of the delay. He added: "Do you realize, my fellow citizens, that the whole world is waiting on America? The only country in the world that is trusted today is the United States and the world is awaiting to see if its trust is justified."

WHY

Music Is Essential Feature of Soldier's Life

The association of musical sounds and colors is usually rated a thing for people whose hyper-aestheticism ranges toward the elevation of crankdom. This, we discover, is a grave error. Color music finds champions in not merely the healthy but in the very keepers of health, the men of medicine. We have the following from the editorial typewriter of the Medical Record:

"During the war, the psychological importance of music has been demonstrated, and it is now recognized as an essential feature in the soldier's life. It is therefore of particular interest just now to note what may be termed a 'new departure' in music; though the idea may not be new, it has never been put to any extensive practical use, and color music is still more or less an unknown quantity.

"Cases are cited of pianists who had been unable to memorize and who therefore could not appear in public, but who by means of color music committed to memory and played most advanced and difficult compositions after a few hours' study of the manuscript. An interesting story is recorded of a young girl who naturally associated music and color and when asking for a particular piece would say that 'pink tune,' or that 'red tune.'

"It is thought that children with their receptive minds will be able easily to assimilate this new teaching basis. It might even prove a means of elevating the race by increasing the perception and love of music."

HUNTED TO SOME PURPOSE

How Cat Made Scientific Discovery While With Exploring Expedition in Australia.

While the cat has often served the purposes of science, it has generally been not to her own comfort and frequently with the loss of her life. One cat in Australia, however, proved her usefulness in the advancement of human knowledge without being compelled to sacrifice herself on the altar of science.

This cat belonged to a member of an expedition into the interior of Australia. One day she brought to her master a strange little animal which she had captured among the rocks.

The man handed the animal over to the naturalist of the party, who saw at once that pussy had made an important discovery. The animal she had caught was a new and apparently rare species of the tribe of insect-eating marsupials belonging to the great family of which the giant kangaroo is the most conspicuous representative.

How Wireless Is "Jammed."

"Jamming" a wireless apparatus is a practice usually resorted to by weaker ships trying to escape, and consists in sending a storm of electric waves through the air with such rapidity and strength that the pursuing ships cannot get messages of warning through to other vessels of their fleet. This plan was frequently resorted to by German sea raiders in the early stages of the war. The Goeben and Breslau, German cruisers, which were thought penned in the Adriatic by a British fleet, jammed the messages of the vessels that sighted them, and succeeded in getting out of the Straits of Otranto and into the shelter of the Dardanelles. When the Karlsruhe exchanged shots with the British cruiser Bristol during a running fight in East Indian waters it succeeded in jamming radiograms so that other British cruisers in the vicinity did not get the Karlsruhe's location in time to come up with her. As a result the German vessel escaped into South American waters, and continued to raid British shipping for some months.

How to Test Color-Blindness.

There are degrees or varieties in color-blindness, and the United States public health service finds that, while 8.6 per cent of men and 2.2 per cent of women are affected to some extent, it can be regarded as dangerous to 3.1 per cent of men and 0.7 per cent of women. These are persons who cannot safely be intrusted with any service requiring the recognition of colored signal lights. Placed in the dangerously affected class are those who are able to see less than four colors in the spectrum; those able to see more than three colors but who have the red end so shortened as to fail to detect a red light two miles away; and those with an area in the field of vision that is wholly or partly blind to red and green. In testing for color-blindness, the Eldridge-Green color lantern is preferred to the old-time method of separating colored yarns.

How to Clean Barrels.

Cleaning cider barrels and kegs to be used for other purposes can be effectively done with steam. Place the barrel on a stand and under it an iron kettle with a flat wooden cover and a three-quarter-inch pipe leading through it into the bunghole of the barrel. A fire is built under the kettle, and the steam penetrates into every corner of the barrel. The condensed steam flows back through the same pipe, depositing all dirt in the kettle, from which it can easily be cleared. If the cover is bolted to the kettle flange with a paper gasket between, a higher pressure can be generated, doing the job quicker and better, but care must be taken that the pressure does not become high enough to injure the barrel

OBSERVE STARS IN DAYTIME

If One Is Sufficiently Interested They Can Be Seen From Bottom of Well.

Not only have the astronomers devised a means whereby they may observe the stars in the daytime, but anyone may, if he choose, see them at such time if he will go to the trouble to do so. At the bottom of a deep well an observer on looking up will see the stars if the sky is clear and the sun does not happen to be shining directly into the well.

Why cannot the stars be seen from the surface of the ground in the daytime? They certainly give forth their usual amount of light, and it will be remembered that the moon is frequently seen during the day.

The question resolves itself into the capacity of the human eye. During the day the sun shines on particles suspended in the atmosphere itself, and its rays are reflected in every direction from the different particles. We thus have diffused light by means of which one can see objects not directly in the sunlight.

If it were not for this diffusion of light, or irregular refraction, as it is called we could not possibly see anything not in the direct sunlight. Now, these rays irregularly reflected enter the eye in enormous numbers, so the intensity is comparatively great with starlight.

But to a person in a deep well or mine shaft only the perpendicularly reflected rays enter the eye, and from only those particles directly over the mouth of the shaft. Thus comparatively little light enters the eye, and any starlight that comes down at that time is easily perceived and the presence of the star is recognized.

DON'T LIFT RABBITS BY EARS

Expert Condemns Practice Which Has Always Been More or Less in General Use.

Some people seem to think that because rabbits' ears are so long it is a good reason to use them as handles. They have told me that "the mother rabbit carries her young around by the ears!"

I have had a pretty good opportunity to observe such a feat, but I have never seen such a performance. It is all right to hold them by the ears, but I always put my hand or arm under their hind legs to lift them up, and then I know I am not hurting them.

One peculiarity I have always noticed about rabbits is their apparent lack of clear vision. If you will notice their eyes you will see that they scarcely, if ever, move the eyeball to look up or down or at either side, as a cat does. You can't tell when they are looking directly at you, as you can with a cat.

If you throw a carrot to them they will not sight it and go directly to it, but will smell about with nose to the ground till they find it, and they may go six inches past it a few times before they strike it.

Put a rabbit on a chair, table or box, and he will go carefully to the edge, leaning his head over and seemingly wondering how far he is from the ground, whereas a cat would think nothing of springing down from such a height.—Boys' Life.

Towns and Their Trades.

Some towns are famous for the industries they carry on, either because they are favorably situated for their work, or else because some leader of the industry has started a model factory which has grown larger with the lapse of time. Perth with its climate especially suited for dyeing, and Belfast, with its linen manufacture, are examples of the former, while Port Sunlight, famous the world over for soap, and Saltaire, with its manufacture of mohair and alpaca, owe their prosperity in each case to one man. Keighley makes a specialty of textile machinery and Brighouse is said to spin more silk waists than any town in England, while the Rossendale valley provided half the world with felt slippers. Stapleford, in Cambridge, makes a specialty of parchment; Daventry whips were once considered better than any, while Wymondham, in Norfolk, was noted for its wooden tops.

Animal Faces.

The likeness of certain human types to familiar animals is a matter of common observation. Caricaturists from the days of the Greeks and Romans down have made use of its suggestions. In our daily speech we naturally describe men as rat-faced, hoggish or foxy in appearance, or say of a noble looking old man that he possesses a leonine head.

Still other persons we pronounce simian, and although few of us would care to merit a personal application of that adjective, it need not be wholly uncomplimentary, as one would imagine. The dignified and venerable Charles Darwin accepted it as applied to himself with no resentment.

Many Films in Preparation.

Films are also being prepared as part of the campaign which the forest service is making in co-operation with the fuel administration for increased wood fuel production and the substitution of cordwood for coal in regions where coal will be scarce during the winter.

Many features of the department's work which received little or no emphasis during the war, such as game preservation and the development of recreation on national forests, will also be featured in new films to be released during the winter months.

VIENNA'S AGED DYING ON FEET

Most Austrians Suffer From Ravages of the Many Wartime Maladies.

CHILDREN ARE EMACIATED

Scrawny, Limp, Listless From Malnutrition and Seldom Smile or Play —American Red Cross Is Helping.

London.—Dr. Ethel Williams, a Newcastle doctor of 30 years' experience, recently has returned to England from Vienna. She attended the Woman's International conference at Zurich, where she heard so much about the conditions of disease in Austria that she decided to see for herself what those conditions really were. She spent a week in Vienna, visiting the hospitals and the school kitchens, studying medical statistics, interviewing representative people, and seeing as much as she could of the city. Speaking to a Manchester Guardian representative, she said:

"What impressed me most was the appalling condition of every old person I saw, and of 95 per cent of the children. The old people were like walking death's heads. There are so many things that persons over sixty cannot digest. The mortality among the old has increased by 150 per cent.

"What struck me most when walking about the streets was that there were no toddlers. Children of three and even four years were carried by their mothers. The children did not run about, or shout, or quarrel. It was four days before I saw a child playing.

Most Children Emaciated.

At least 95 per cent of the practically well children were painfully emaciated, with discolored circles around their sunken eyes and the tendons of their necks showing like those of old people. Even middle-class children have these scrawny necks, and when they run their cheeks flap like those of old people. But they seldom run. They are all limp and listless.

"The scene in the out-patients' department at the biggest state children's hospital was pitiful—no sound or attempt to play. The children sat quietly on their mothers' knees or against a wall.

"I saw several cases of osteo-malachia, a disease so rare before the war that the only two cases I had ever seen had been shown to me as a curiosity. It seems to come from lack of fresh food, and there have been 250 cases in Vienna, and I heard of another epidemic in a German town.

"The bones soften and become distorted, the pelvis bones fold inward. In early stages it is curable, but a bad case never will walk again, and a rather bad case always will have difficulty in walking.

"The cases were those of older children and adults. They told me that the hospitals were receiving about 15 cases a day, and those they had to turn away inevitably must become worse. I used to test the condition of the children I saw by feeling their fleshless arms. When I touched one child the father said: 'Don't touch him. He has this bad new disease, and it hurts him so much.' I realized that I had hurt him, but the child was too listless to shrink from the pain.

"The doctors could do practically nothing for the out-patients who could not be taken to the hospitals. The mothers were in despair. The doctors said the greatest want of all was for cod liver oil. Funds raised in England had sent a supply, but it only lasted two days. Practically every child under two is rickety.

Suffer From Starvation.

"It is extraordinary how little Vienna has suffered from war epidemics such as typhus. The enormous increase in sickness is due to starvation disease. Almost all of its child population is stunted, starved, left without vitality, vigor or energy. An enormous number are tubercular and a considerable proportion of these will die. Another considerable proportion will for all their lives probably be stunted in mind and body, and all will be handicapped."

The children of school age provided with one meal of soup and bread in the day by American Red Cross workers at a special kitchen she visited were watched lest they should take the bread home. "You must eat the bread," the workers told them. "All that we can do is to help you to keep well and strong." The American Red Cross is opening more of these kitchens, and hopes to feed 40,000 or more children, but that only means food for one section of the people, the children of school age—and even then only one meal in the day.

Philip B. Kennedy, newly appointed chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, says that trade restoration in Europe, including that in enemy countries, is dependent upon the return to work of the different peoples.

FAMINE IN MEN TO FIGHT FIRES

Shortage Makes Forest Fire Situation in the Northwest Desperate.

FEARLESS MALES SOUGHT

Husky Man Who Is Willing to Work Looks Good as Million Dollars to Officials of United States Forestry Service.

Spokane, Wash.—One of the biggest "industries" of the northwest this summer is the fighting of forest fires.

A good, husky man, with two strong arms and a willingness to work, looks as good as a million dollars to the officials of the United States forestry service, and the big lumber concerns, who are losing vast values in timber.

There is a famine in men. That is the great reason fires, started by careless campers or lightning storms, have been able to spread over many miles of America's richest lumber lands and cause damage that will not be replaced for a generation.

One large fire in the Pack river district, northern Idaho, burst entirely beyond control and spread over forty-five square miles of territory without showing the least signs of dying down. Men to fight it were few and far between.

War Against Flames.

In Spokane as well as the coast cities the forest service is waging recruiting campaigns similar to those carried on during the war. It is a war—against flames almost as destructive to America as the flames that broke out in Europe.

Lumberjacks, those big-shouldered veterans of the forest life, make the finest fire fighters. This summer they have had little chance to engage in their regular work of cutting timber, and have bent all their efforts to saving the forests that house the nation.

The forest service maintains a ceaseless lookout. As soon as smoke is discerned the news is flashed to headquarters; a crew is hastily recruited and equipped, and sent into the burning area with full supplies of food, tools and bedding.

But they have little chance to use the bedding. Fire fighting is an all-night all-day job.

How Fire Is Beaten.

The only successful method of stopping a fire is to get in front of it, clear a wide trail, and widen it by backfiring.

A slight change of wind will make the back fire cross the trail and endanger the workers' lives.

Blazing trees frequently fall with the wind, across the trail, and undo the work of a day.

One result of the epidemic of fires in the present summer will be a vigorous effort, on the part of lumber companies and forestry men alike, to secure from congress a greater appropriation for the forest service than ever before. America's forests are no longer so numerous and well-grown that the trees can be sacrificed without national suffering.

Bells for City Dogs.

Asheville, N. C.—As unreasonable as it sounds the city authorities have announced that every canine resident of this city must wear a bell during the next year, and to prove their earnestness they have purchased a large supply of the necessary ornaments for distribution among the owners of dogs here.

PERSHING QUALIFIES AS A MARKSMAN

General Pershing, on a visit to the great rifle range at Le Mans, France, demonstrated to the onlookers how he handled a rifle in his frontier days.

USE TACTICS OF QUAIL

How Villa and His Men Foil Pursuit.

Bandits Scatter and Hide as Federals Appear—Brown Uniforms Aid.

Juarez, Mex. — Francisco Villa's method of evading pursuit by Mexican government troops is almost identical with that used by a covey of quail to escape the hunter. Even the detail of protective coloring has been applied by Villa, for his men always wear brown cotton clothing which blends with the desert landscape and dust clouds through which they travel in campaign.

Hunters know that the quail's instinct directs it to scatter when danger approaches and seek cover in the near-by landscape. Villa and his rebel bands do the same thing when a superior federal column approaches.

Often Villa's band will number 2,000 men under his chiefs, Angeles, Lopez, Diaz and Garcia. They make a column which coils across the plains like a giant snake and leaves a great dust cloud in its wake.

But let General Castro's government troops approach with artillery, machine guns and cavalry mounted on former American army horses and the column will break up into little bands of 100 under petty chiefs, will disappear in some mountain canyons and go into hiding until the federals pass. Once the danger of attack is over the column reassembles, occupies some town in its path and again disappears with its loot.

Villa's men have been known to hitch their horses to plows in the fields of the irrigated districts and be industriously plowing when the federal scouts appeared. They have learned various tricks of deception during the years of evading the federals, and even drive a herd of burros with them so they may transform themselves into wood venders on occasion.

ANTHRACITE PRODUCTION UP

Shipments Show Hundreds of Thousands of Tons Over Latest Normal Production.

Philadelphia.—Shipments of anthracite for July as reported to the anthracite bureau of information aggregated 6,052,334 tons, an increase over June of 432,743 tons.

Compared with July, 1916, the latest normal year in anthracite production, the shipments last month showed an increase of 619,456 tons.

The shipments for the first four months of the coal year, beginning April 1, amounted to 22,608,555 tons, as compared with 21,146,536 tons for the corresponding period in 1916, an increase of nearly 1,500,000 tons.

WENT COLONEL ONE BETTER

Occasion When Talkative Old Bore Met More Than His Match at the Club.

Several and various were the uncomplimentary exclamations heard when the talkative Col. Cholmondeley Fitz-Fulke strolled into the Back-to-Nature club one evening just in time to hear a discussion going on about the crows in the cornfields and their part in the winning of the war.

"Haw!" laughed the colonel reminiscently. "Speaking of crows reminds me of the time my father made a scarecrow out of me, egad!"

"Was it your father that did it, colonel?" asked Charlie Smithers, smilingly, followed by a snicker among the members.

"Er—ah—yes. You see, the crows in our cornfield became so used to our regular scarecrow that they grew quite fond of him. And they used to bring him grains of corn and deposit them in his pockets and corncob pipe. It was quite a beautiful and heart-melting sight, gentlemen," and the colonel flicked a sentimental tear from his eyeglass.

"Well, I conceived the idea of making a scarecrow that would smite the crows and chase them away, donche-know. So father decided to dress me up in some old tattered rags and have me smite them. And, bah Jove, I frightened them so bally bad that they didn't return for a year, and then it was after they had seen me go abroad!" concluded the colonel, picking up Charlie Smithers' glass and emptying its contents.

"Huh! That's nothing," said Charlie. "My father made a scarecrow so fierce looking that seven of our crows that had stolen ten bushels of corn came back the next day and put every one back!"

It was several minutes before the colonel could control himself sufficiently to walk out amid the roar that arose.

CORTEZ' HOUR OF TRIUMPH

Impressive Scene When the Spanish Adventurer Met Emperor Montezuma of Mexico.

On the morning of November 8, 1519, the Spaniards were on the causeway which was one of the three to connect Tenochtitlan with the mainland, and so wide that eight of the Spanish cavalry could ride abreast on it. On all sides, in the road and in canoes on the lake, a crowd of Aztecs gazed at the descendants of the god who had at last, as they believed, carried out his promise. At the entrance to the city they were greeted by 1,000 principal citizens with salutations and kissing of hands to the bare earth; and then, after crossing a drawbridge, they saw approaching in a gorgeous litter none other than the great Montezuma, escorted by 200 of his courtiers.

Never has there been a more impressive scene in the history of the American continent than this meeting between the emperor of all Mexico and the Spanish adventurer. The picturesque surroundings, the silver-towered city rising from the gleaming lake, the countless hosts of gayly dressed subjects watching in awed silence, the magnificence of Montezuma and his train, the bronze, war-worn yet fiery appearance of the Spaniards—all these seem like a page from the "Arabian Nights" rather than sober history. The Spaniards, we may be sure, realized they were living a romance of the first order, and their hearts beat high with triumph, as with swords clanking and horses prancing they advanced into this city of legend.—From "Mexico," by Louise S. Hasbrouck.

Helpful Home Library.

"I like to pass my books on," said the friendly woman. "When I get a new book I begin a 'roster' of readers on the flyleaf. If the book proves to be a good and helpful one, it is a delight to multiply its usefulness by passing it on. The penalty assessed is that the reader sign the roster. I have one book that has been loaned to 23 different readers, and another that almost as many have read. The flyleaf bears a request that the book be returned.

"In time the books get broken backs, of course, but you learn to love books, as you love people, that get crippled in a good cause. The plan enables me to encourage my friends to read good books, and the list of readers is interesting to others to whom the book is offered."

A Little Tree.

I never see a little tree peeping confidingly up among the withered leaves without wondering what trials and triumphs it will have. I hope it will live with rapture in the flower opening days of spring; that it will be a home for birds; and that it will find life worth living and live long to better and to beautify the earth. If it is cut down may it become the ridge log of a cabin where love will abide, or if it must be burned, I hope it will blaze on the hearthstone of a home where children play in the firelight on the floor.—Enos A. Mills.

Plenty of Pine.

Deliveries of southern pine to the government from July 1, 1917, to May 28, 1918, were 2,600,000,000 feet, which, it is estimated, would require a solid train of cars extending from the gulf of Mexico to the Canadian border, and would make a board walk three feet wide extending six times around the world, or build a solid board fence 50 feet high that would circle the geographical borders of the United States.

Dayton Airless Tires

Cannot Puncture or Blow-Out

Three items you must figure this winter.

1st.—Dayton Airless tires can PUNCTURE or BLOW OUT. Absolutely trouble proof. Cannot rim and will take you Anyplace through ice, snow, glass, nails, over rough of roads and will wear down to shreds.

2nd.—Dayton Airless tires are easy riding. They will not jar your car like a pneumatic nor d-r-a-g like a low pneumatic. The "pressure" is always "right" in these tires. We have positive proof they will not injure your car in the least.

3rd.—Dayton Airless Tires are most economical. Compare the cost of tires on a Ford. You must carry four tires, two sizes, also two extra tires both sizes. You must buy four tires and six innertubes. The average price of six pneumatic tires is more than the cost of a complete set of Dayton Airless Tires, and remember you don't need to carry extras with Dayton Airless on your wheel. Just think what that means.

Absolutely Guaranteed for 8,000 miles. Average run of these tires is 20,000 and 25,000 Miles. We can point you to first set of Dayton Airless Tires in this county, run 5 years at about 22,000 miles with no trouble and still going.

PREPARE NOW FOR YOUR WINTER'S TIRE TROUBLES. Phone or write for demonstration.

FINGER TAKEN OFF IN BINDER

Bert Dutton, living three miles north of Meservey, had the misfortune to have the middle finger of the left hand cut off while running a corn binder at his place last Thursday. The binder became clogged and while digging the stalks out his finger was mangled so bad it was necessary to remove it a little above the knuckle joint. It is apparently getting along nicely, but Bert will no doubt use a sling for his arm for several days.—Meservey Register.

The horses ran through two or three wire fences and stopped without doing much damage to themselves.—Goodell Globe.

Corporal Lew Byers is the possessor of a French Croix de Guerre. The particular citation for which this honor medal was given, is, according to the statement from Petain, Commander-in-Chief of the French Armies of the East, for the reason "that from the 2nd to the 12th of October 1918, he did his duty in a courageous and efficient manner at an advanced post while exposed to the bombardment of the enemy." Other decorations are due to Lew—one a U. S. honor medal. Lew returned from his overseas service with a record of which his people can well be proud.—Democrat.

SERIOUS DAMAGE BY CLOVER WORM

Alfalfa Crop Suffers Much Injury in Eastern Part of the United States.

BEST MEASURES OF CONTROL

When Outbreaks Are Particularly Severe Use of Hopperdozer Is Advisable—Caterpillar Feeds on Different Plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Serious damage to alfalfa by the green clover worm has been reported to the United States department of agriculture from several parts of the eastern half of the United States, where this pest is distributed generally. Although for many years it has been known to occur commonly on clover and has received its popular name from this fact. its injury to this crop has rarely been sufficiently serious to justify control measures. It usually confines its attacks to leguminous crops, such as alfalfa, clover, soy beans, cowpeas, and vetch, but sometimes feeds on strawberries and blackberry plants and some common weeds.

Best Control Measures.

The best control measure consists in timely cutting of the alfalfa crop, so as to remove the food supply when the caterpillars of this insect are most abundant. Clean culture is also recommended, and when outbreaks are particularly bad the use of the hopperdozer is advisable.

Alfalfa Is Highly Regarded as a Forage Crop.

There are three or four generations of the green clover worm a season, according to the bulletin, which allows ample time for the insect to increase greatly in a summer. The caterpillars are killed in considerable numbers by natural insect enemies, but this method of control can not be relied upon for protection of the alfalfa crop. The alfalfa should be mowed when the insect is in the caterpillar or worm stage—from ten days to three weeks after the time of the appearance of the moths in great abundance. To insure success the field should be left as clean and bare as possible in order to remove the food supply and any shelter protecting them from the direct rays of the sun, which hastens their destruction.

Clear Fields of Insects.

If these measures can not be carried out without injury to the alfalfa, either from premature cutting or too prolonged delay, wait until the alfalfa is ready for another cutting. It ought to be possible, however, before the summer is passed, to clear the fields of this insect in this manner.

In the eastern states premature cutting often results in permanent injury to alfalfa, especially while it is young, and for this reason the cutting of this crop much in advance of the normal period is not recommended.

As the caterpillar feeds on many different plants, ditch banks and fence rows should be kept free from weeds.

The caterpillars have been caught readily by dragging a field with a hopperdozer, such as is used for grasshopper outbreaks. It does not hurt the alfalfa when not used to excess, and will catch many injurious insects.

EARLY FRUITS MOST DESIRED

Light Soils With Southern Exposure Are Best Adapted for Purpose—Liable to Injury.

Early fruits are usually most desirable, and light soils, with southern exposure, are best adapted for that purpose. Light soils, however, require heavy fertilizing and more mulch in summer. They are also more liable to injury to drought. As a rule, they produce lighter crops. If clay soil is used for early berries, it must be well drained, is more difficult to prepare, matures later crops, and is not so favorable for winter protection. If earliness is not a consideration, then one should not hesitate to use any soil, provided it can be made rich.

NOTICE TO FILE OBJECTIONS TO FORMATION OF CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL DISTRICTS

TO WHOM THIS MAY CONCERN:

It Must Be So!

Feminism, like socialism, is difficult to confine within the boundaries of a formula. Mr. W. L. George, in "Woman and Tomorrow," has done what is possible in this direction. Feminism, he says, is, broadly, the furthering of the interests of women, philosophically the leveling of the sexes, and specifically the social and political emancipation of woman.

WARD - RIDDER

WEDDING BELLS

Wedding bells rang in the home of Mr. and Mrs. August Ridder last Thursday at high noon, when their daughter Miss Ella was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Ward.

The wedding took place at 12:00 o'clock. Mrs. Clarence Arnold played a beautiful wedding march while Miss Sylva Ward, sister of the groom, acting as bride's maid, and Mr. William Ridder, brother of the bride, acting as best man, led the way to the arch where the ceremony was performed by the writer. After a very appropriate song by the quartette, the wedding guests, about 45 in number, consisting of the near relatives of both parties, were invited to a seat at a long table beneath the beautiful shade trees in the yard, which was spread with the good things that help to make up a wedding feast. The day was ideal and all present seemed to enjoy the wedding feast in Klemme, Iowa.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ridder, and one of Klemme's fairest maids. Her life and character stands out as an open book. She is loved by all who know her. She is a Christian from every standpoint. She is a very worthy member of the First Methodist church, and one who is always in her place of service.

The groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Arther Ward of Algona. He is well known around Klemme, having spent some time in these parts. Frank was converted and united with the English M. E. church in Klemme about five years ago, and has remained a true Christian. He spent several months in service for his country in France, and resisted the temptations of army life, returning home as pure and clean as when he left.

The happy couple left Friday for Joan where they will make their future home on the Ward farm.

The many friends of both the bride and groom, in and around Klemme, regret very much to loose them from the ranks of the young people, but all join in wishing them unbroken bliss in their new home. "What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put asunder."

Paving has been more or less delayed the past week on account of lack of material. Shortage of crushed granite made necessary a move from one part of the job to another, and a shortage of cement stopped proceedings entirely for a day or two. However the granite appears to be coming in now and of course the cement shortage was only temporary, so that barring bad weather, thee paving should go along without serious delay further.—Belmond Herald-Press.

Square Deal for the Shops.

"If women had only the courage to stop shopping when they are tired," said a young woman the other day. "They buy things then that they do not and never will like and it is a bother to the women and a needless expense to the shops. The goods are inevitably returned and credited. When shops are so decent about accepting goods and crediting them it is only fair to such establishments to give them a square deal."

Platinum.

Platinum, with the exception of iridium, is the heaviest of all the metals. The name originated with the Spaniards on account of its silvery color, plata signifying silver. It was unknown in Europe until about 1741, when its existence was announced to the world by a Spanish scientist after a trip to South America.

WEALTHY FILL SARATOGA SPAS

Cheapest Thing at the Most Famous of American Resorts Is Money.

SOCIAL BARRIERS LOWERED

Newly-Made Millionaires Strut About the Place to Display the Wealth They Acquired During the War —Gambling Is Heavy.

Saratoga, N. Y.—The cheapest thing in Saratoga is money. Everybody has it in abundance off and on and spends it with the abandon of the drunken sailor in the old song.

Clerks bet $1,000 on a horse at the race tracks. Newly made rich pile up checks and counters on cards and the elusive roulette ball. Men throw dollars around as they used to toss dimes.

Women accustomed to ginghams and rhinestones gladden the eye and stimulate the sense of humor in their efforts to carry with grace silks and diamonds. The most suitable is discarded for the most expensive.

Extravagance and a contempt for money values intrudes itself at every turn on the picturesque streets of the most famous of American resorts, and oldest of the cures, in the corridors of the great barn-like hotels, at the race track, in the dining places and in the lake sections and flits by in the bewildering parade of flashy motorcars.

Natives Reaping Harvest.

And anybody who knows the ruling passion of Saratoga doesn't need to be told that the prudent native is getting his.

What escapes him falls to the hotel keepers, the bookmakers, the sleek and rat-faced gentry that cap for sequestered resorts of chance where the green cloth, the dealing box and the other implements of their craft are to be found without much difficulty.

The crowds that flock to the race courses are greater by thousands than ever before.

All the old social barriers have been broken down and trampled under foot by the crowd that comes from the financial marts of Wall street, the resorts of upper Broadway, the bench and forge, and forest and mine and farm, upon which the fortunes of war have smiled.

The number of resorts where women are admitted to the gaming tables is probably less than four. In the other small places where the wagers range from $5 to $50 at roulette, hazard and one or two other contrivances for getting the money women are not admitted. It is not considered clubby to advertise the location or names of the owners of the gaming establishment because it might stir the local officials to interpret too literally the legal inhibition against such enterprises.

There has already been more or less trouble—for the gaming purveyors—as it is. During the first week of the racing season all games were closed up for three days, due to a misunderstanding as to the number that were to be privileged—and the failure of certain other negotiations that are of interest to politicians.

Display of Gowns and Gems.

The greater part of the women are of the middle class type. The display of gowns and gems is, if anything, more striking than in the other days when Saratoga had "atmosphere." Almost every woman that passes in review seems to have prospered from the war, if diamonds be accepted as convincing evidence.

One woman was at the Union whose maid—she had one—had displayed great ingenuity in finding vacant spaces on her mistresses' frock on which to pin a stupendous assortment of brilliants. Her husband made a fortune out of scrap iron in Chicago. Another woman, whose costume no sane man would attempt to describe, seemed to run to pearls. She wore more than any two women has any right to possess. The combination of dazzling colors and gems provoked one of the new voters to comment, "Dressing that woman up is like putting gold harness on a mule."

But for all the vanities and jealousies the women seem to be having as good a time as the men and to be as well supplied as they with all the money necessary to pay for it. Because the statement made at the beginning of this chronicle holds good to the end. The cheapest thing in Saratoga is money.

Each Beauty in Harem Demanded a Gold Tooth.

Trials of a toothpuller in a harem were described by Dr. A. S. Hungerford of Teheran, Persia, who visited Toledo on his way back to the Pacific coast.

Fourteen years as the royal dentist for his majesty, the Shah of Persia, who has a nifty harem in his palace, has convinced the dentist that life with a surplus of beautiful spouses does not have all the traditional joys.

One of the doctor's first duties in the Shah's palace was to pull a tooth for a member of the harem. When the dentist finished her beauty had been enhanced by a brilliantly flashing gold bicuspid. Such jealousy did this addition to her beauty strike in the hearts of the harem that forthwith they all went salaming and sobbing to the Shah, charging his majesty with partiality. His majesty got out of the difficulty by ordering a gold tooth for each of them, but to even matters up ordered three United States molars for himself.

ERUPTIONS FOR THE SCIENTISTS

Volcanoes in the Southwestern Part of Alaska Are Accommodating.

GEOGRAPHIC SOCIETY THERE

Members Who Went to Study Mount Katmai and Its "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" Are Favored With Fine Performance.

Juneau, Alaska.—Volcanic peaks in the far southwestern corner of Alaska are in eruption this summer, evidently for the benefit of a party of scientists sent by the National Geographic society to study Mount Katmai, the greatest of Alaska's smoking mountains, and its "Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes."

Persons who have returned recently from the volcanic country to the westward said Shishaldin peak, on Unimak island, in the Aleutian chain, was in eruption recently. They also reported it was believed Mount Bavloff on the southwestern Alaskan mainland, also had spouted, as the snow about the summit was coal black.

When the party of scientists left Anchorage, Alaska, on their way to the Katmai country, they said they believed there was little likelihood of an eruption this summer and declared they were certain there was absolutely no danger attached to the investigation. Katmai's last big "blowoff" was in June, 1912.

The party of twenty-six scientists is headed by Professor Robert A. Griggs of the University of Ohio, and some are from Carnegie institute. They were planning to make observations of the botanical, biological and geological effects of the 1912 eruption.

In 1913 Professor Griggs headed a party of scientists to Katmai and returned with the announcement that the crater was the largest on the globe and that near Katmai lay a great valley whose floor was dotted with thousands of mouths vomiting gray vapory gas and smoke. This valley Prof. Griggs named "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes." Instead of 10,000, it is said there are literally millions of smoking vents.

Congress recently set aside "The Valley of Ten Thousand Smokes" as national property, and it is believed that some day it will be a second Yellowstone geyser field. Steaming springs, it is said, will eventually take the place of the present smoking vents.

Professor Griggs and his party expected to remain in the Katmai district until the middle of September. Until they return nothing probably will be heard from them, as there is no direct means of communication. Mrs. Griggs and her children accompanied the professor to Kodiak, an island near Katmai, and will remain there during the summer waiting for him to return.

Moving pictures of the smoking mountain and valley are to be brought back by the party.

WANTED HER DOG UNWITCHED

Pennsylvania Woman Asked the Federal District Attorney for Help, but Got None.

"Its name is Lady. The woman that did it is a witch. My poor dog didn't eat for two weeks. Whenever I go away from home Lady keeps house for me, but this woman bewitched it, and I want the dog to get well again."

No one in the district attorney's office knew of any magic word that could unwitch the dog.

YAP AND ITS PEOPLE

Interesting Facts About the Little Pacific Island.

Food, Drink and Clothes All Obtained From Trees—Men Have Bachelor Clubs.

Washington.—Since the little island of Yap was mentioned the other day at the White House conference between the president and senate foreign relations committee, there has been a general demand for information about this former German possession, which the American navy wants for a cable and wireless station.

According to the National Geographic society it is the westernmost of the western Caroline islands, is situated about 500 miles southwest of Guam and 800 miles east of the island of Mindanao of the Philippine group. It has a population of about 7,000.

Yap is strangely old and strangely up to date. Its inhabitants are still in the stone age of progress. The natives are strict prohibitionists. Bachelor clubs closed to the women dot the islands. Food and drink and clothes all grow on trees. In Yap wealth is truly a burden. A single coin of their stone money sometimes weighs hundreds of pounds. Yap, or Uap, when translated, means the land, and is the only land that many of the islanders know.

Married and unmarried men alike belong to the club, which maintains a fine faiu, or bachelor house, the hostess of which must be secured by force or cunning from some distant tribe. There she lives under a polyandrous system where no man becomes jealous and the wives of the village never object to their husbands' evenings at the club.

The chief decoration of the male is a string of pink shells made into a necklace, and since no man is rich enough to own such a treasure the best ones are loaned out for such a period as the wearer may choose to be dressed in the height of fashion. As there are no button holes, the man may wear two bouquets in each ear, a sort of corsage bunch in a large hole in the lower lobe and a small boutonniere in a smaller hole in the ear higher up. Shell cuffs made of conchs add the finishing touch to the correct attire.

Yap women do not wear the veil. Their only dress is a voluminous skirt made of leaves of fiber and composed of four or five thicknesses. Although one month is the average life of a woman's dress, the style does not change.

ATTACK ON TREATY

SENATOR BORAH TELLS WHY IT SHOULD BE REJECTED.

LARGE CROWD HEARS SPEECH

Orator Given Ovation By Throng of 7,000.—Delivers Telling Blows Against Covenant.

Omaha, Neb.—United States Senator Borah of Idaho spoke in opposition to the ratification of the peace treaty at the city auditorium before a crowd estimated at more than 7,000. It was an enthusiastic audience and applauded the senator's attack on the president and the league of nation's covenant in a manner that left no doubt in the minds of those present that Nebraska is divided on the great issue.

The senator smashed up and tore to bits with cold, unimpassioned, indisputable and clearly understood argument the league, the covenant and the entire peace conference with all its adjuncts, hereditaments and impedimenta.

Every argument he set forth was made clear and was understood by all. Obscure points of the "mysterious document," as he smilingly called it at one time, were laid bare and explained in such a way that all could understand.

Among the telling blows aimed at the document by the senator were:

When men are responsible for tearing away the sacred traditions of American history and uprooting the traditions upon which this country was built, how can you expect anything but bolshevism?

I haven't any doubt if Washington had been living he would have entered this war immediately after the sinking of the Lusitania, but he would have gone in as an independent and sovereign nation and he would have remained an independent and sovereign nation after the fight was over.

If we take part in European affairs is there any sane man who believes we can keep Europe out of American affairs? That is why I don't propose to vote for any league of nations at all.

Those who are in favor of the league think more of it than they do of our republic.

The president doesn't like the Shantung clause. No honorable man could like it. Yet he accepted it. Now he says the only way to right it is to go ahead and finish it—and record a protest that we don't like it.

So far as I personally am concerned, the matter in which I am most interested in this league is never to get into it, but the next matter is to make it as easy to get out as possible.

If Japan, or any other power, says, "No, you have not fulfilled your international obligations," we would be obliged to remain until they were fulfilled to its satisfaction, which would be long after the angel Gabriel had blown his horn.

Riots Shake Boston.

Boston, Mass.—Lawlessness, gambling and looting, following the calling of Boston's police strike, resulted in the death of eight persons and the injury of more than three-score. Twenty-four hours after the police struck, city authorities called upon Governor Coolidge for state troops to protect the city. The governor responded by calling out the entire state guard and placing the city virtually under martial law.

Mobs Fired Upon.

Several of the fatalities were due to firing by guardsmen into mobs found breaking windows and looting stores, while two resulted from efforts of soldiers to break up dice games, which during the first two days were played openly in the streets and on Boston common. Another of the dead was a striking policeman, shot down by a storekeeper who feared his place of business was about to be sacked.

Accept Gompers Suggestion.

Frank McCarthy, New England organizer of the American Federation of Labor, announced the policemen's union had accepted the suggestion of Samuel Gompers that they return to work and await the outcome of the labor conference at the White House on October 6.

Prepare to Return Roads.

Washington.—Preparing for the return of the railroads to private control, Director General Hines has ordered all roads to begin an inventory of supplies on hand as of December 31, 1919, the date indicated by President Wilson in his address to congress as the termination of government supervision.

World Series Extended.

Cincinnati, O.—Nine games will be played in the world series base ball games this year, as against seven last year, August Herrmann, chairman of the National Commission, announced.

Building Industry Resumed.

Chicago.—After seven weeks of tieup by a strike of carpenters and a lockout of allied trades, Chicago's building industry has resumed operation.

Steel Workers to Strike.

Washington, D. C.—Representatives of the steel workers' unions in conference here decided to recommend a strike September 22, unless in the meantime they come to satisfactory arrangements with the United States Steel corporation.

NEW YORK GREETS PERSHING

Demonstration at Nation's Metropolis When General Returns Greatest in All U. S. History.

New York.—General John J. Pershing, commander of the greatest army that ever fought under the Stars and Stripes, was given a welcome upon his arrival here from France greater than New York has ever before conferred upon an American citizen. From the time the giant steamer Leviathan with the commander-in-chief aboard poked her nose into the New York harbor until she was warped at the pier Pershing stood on her great deck receiving the plaudits of the multitude on hand to welcome home the man who had planned the decisive blow in democracy's supreme fight against tyranny.

It was without a doubt the most remarkable reception ever accorded a citizen of this country.

Every state in the anion was represented in the crowds that greeted the general. There were delegations from El Paso, where he was stationed during the Mexican border trouble; from Cheyenne, where his late wife lived before their marriage; from Laclede, the little Missouri town where he was born, from Lincoln, Neb., where his sister lives and who was one of the first to greet the nation's idol, and from nearly every city, village and hamlet identified with him or with the great armed force he commanded.

Just after the general walked down the gang plank at Hoboken he received the first reward which a grateful country has offered him. In the name of the same Secretary Baker handed him his commission as full general in the American army, a rank held previously by only three men, Grant, Sheridan and Sherman.

Heads Monster Parade.

The second day after the general's arrival in this country he was called upon to head a review of the First division, which furnished a triumphal climax of New York's war-time parades. It was the grandest sight ever witnessed in the nation's metropolis. The entire division, totalling more than 25,000 soldiers, completely equipped for battle, and more than 1,000 wounded members of the famous unit (these were in automobiles), tramped through long lines of massed humanity to the accompaniment of resounding cheers. At their head rode Pershing. It required six hours for the parade to pass a given point.

Hurricane Sweeps Florida.

Key West, Fla.—Lower Florida suffered serious damage as the result of a violent hurricane that passed over that section.

Not a house in this city escaped damage. Three hundred and twenty frame buildings practically were razed, two church edifices were wrecked and five retail stores tipped over. The damage is estimated at more than $2,000,000.

Shipping off the coast met with disaster. Several small vessels were sunk and others were driven to the reefs.

Although the property damage was enormous, not a single fatality has been reported.

Austria Signs Treaty.

Paris.—In the absence of the elaborate details such as accompanied the setting at Versailles, the allies made formal peace with Austria. Dr. Karl Renner, Austrian chancellor and head of his country's peace delegation, signed the treaty at St. Germain at 10:15 a. m., Sept. 10.

Aside from the peace treaty, the Austrians signed two engagements, one by which they will undertake to indicate allied ships lost during the war which were sunk by the Austrians, and another which obliges them to furnish within a month a list of persons responsible for the war, that the allies may place them on trial.

Canada Ratifies Treaty.

Ottawa, Ont.—The Canadian house of commons has ratified the peace treaty. The motion for approval of the pact and the covenant of the league of nations passed without a dissenting vote.

Canada's next step will be to notify the king of the parliamentary action and advise him to ratify the treaty in the name of the dominion. The senate gave its approval on September 4.

Influenza at Chicago.

Chicago, Ill.—One death and nineteen cases of influenza have been recorded by the city health department in the last eight days, it was announced by Health Commissioner Robertson.

Denies Change in Russ Policy.

London—Winston Spencer Churchill, secretary of war, in a statement issued here, denies that there has been any change in the British policy to evacuate North Russia.

Foch to Visit Minneapolis.

St. Paul, Minn.—Marshal Ferdinand Foch, commander-in-chief of the allied armies, will visit the national convention of the American Legion in Minneapolis November 11, according to word received here.

7,000 Telegrams Greet Pershing.

New York.—More than 7,000 telegrams of greeting and gratitude to General John J. Pershing have been received in New York by Elsie Janis, who was with the American army in France.

NICKEL BY NICKEL

Newspaper Man Dribbled His Profit to Beggar.

Little Transaction by Which Scribe Thought He Was to Make $2.65 Didn't End in Just That Desired Way.

"A newspaper friend of mine," said Mr. Goslington, "tells me of an unusual experience he has had, in fact is still having with a beggar.

"He met this beggar first about a year ago. The circumstances attending this first meeting were novel and interesting and my friend wrote a little piece about it which was printed in his newspaper and for which he received $3. As he had given the beggar a nickel he figured that his net profit on this was $2.95. But:

"A couple of weeks later he again met this beggar, who again asked for a nickel, a request that my friend did not feel warranted in refusing. I don't think he would have refused anyway, my friend being an easy mark for beggars; but having profited by his original transaction with this beggar, he felt impelled to hand over this second nickel promptly, thus reducing his net on this little piece to $2.90.

"It wasn't long before my friend discovered that this beggar lived somewhere in his neighborhood and made that part of the town his quarry; for now he used to meet him here and there by intervals. Not always, by any means, when they met did the beggar approach him; commonly they passed each other as any other two might do, with no sign of recognition; but once in a while the beggar would ask for a nickel, which always my friend gave. In this way in the course of three months he gave up 35 cents, thus reducing the net of that $3 to $2.65. Then my friend had an idea.

"He foresaw that if this went on indefinitely, as there seemed every indication it would do, the beggar would get all of the $3, which to my friend seemed scarcely reasonable. But he did think that an even division would be no more than right to the beggar, and so when the $3 got down to $2.65 he set aside, in his mind, $1.15 as a drawing account to the beggar's credit, and he said to himself that when thus the original fund had been evenly divided he would stop giving and consider that he had done the square thing.

"Well, my friend tells me that, counting a nickel that the beggar drew yesterday, he has now drawn $1.40, so that now it is a question of a very few weeks only, three or four at the utmost, when the beggar will have drawn his full share.

"Then, my friend says, he is going to shut down and keep the rest himself; but what I think he will do will be to keep on paying till the whole three dollars is gone, his original profit being thus wiped out completely. I don't know what he can do then, unless he should write, covering all his experiences with this unusual beggar, another and longer story; moving then to another part of the city."

Transform Historic Westminster.

Prominent citizens of London are planning to rebuild the district around Westminster abbey as a memorial to those who distinguished themselves in the world war. The improvements include the construction of a great avenue, 120 feet wide, and a new Lambeth bridge. The design for the bridge will be chosen from plans submitted by architects from all over the world. Splendid buildings are projected for the University of London, for a Shakespearean theater, and for arts and science exhibits. The new avenue will contain groups of statuary commemorating the heroic deeds of the British, Canadian, New Zealand and Australian forces, as well as those of Britain's allies. It is intended to make this the finest and most impressive monumental avenue in the British empire.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Chinese Railways Busy.

Latest reports indicate that the 3,000 miles of government railways carry annually more than 25,000,000 passengers a total of 1,000,000,000 miles. Thirty-seven per cent of the receipts of the government railways come from the passenger service. On five of the lines the passenger revenues exceed those from transportation of goods. Ninety-five per cent of the passenger traffic is third-class at an average fare of one cent a mile, which means a large amount of travel by the poorer classes.

Wide macadamized highways are being constructed in the suburbs of many cities. The coming of the automobile will hasten this development. An automobile service across the Gobi desert connecting Peking with Urga and the Russian railway has been inaugurated.

English Lenses Superior.

When aero-photography commenced to play its great part in the war, it was found that the German-made lenses would do the work of picturing from above far better than British-made lenses. But the English opticians set to work, and in a short time they produced lenses that beat the German product fair and square. Captured aero-photographic apparatus during the latter part of the war showed that the lenses were inferior in quality to those made in Britain. No German-made lens has yet been found that would picture a barbed wire entanglement from a height of three miles, but the British product would, and very often did.

NEEDED IN BUSINESS WORLD

Urgent Reasons for Transplanting Returned Soldiers From Army to Civil Life Without Delay.

Your cosmopolitan doughboy who has shaken hands with the king of England, danced with the princess of Roumania, learned the slang of a dozen nations and cocked a knowing eye at all the choicest sights of the Continent, may sound extremely sophisticated by cable, but wait until he strikes the United States and see what furrin travel has done for him! It has made him love, not Europe less, but home more, and he hardly tries to conceal his grand passion under a poker face, either. For he has been homesick and weary for months, and the Goddess of Liberty looks like an angel, and New York harbor like heaven, to his fond eyes.

As a national asset, then, the soldier is perhaps our best citizen, and because the A. E. F. as a whole is rampantly enthusiastic about its homeland and her interests, America may look to her soldiers for real inspiration in citizenship. These are the men to put into our business life as rapidly as they can be transplanted from army to civil jobs.

To make the transposition more simple and effective, the war department through Col. Arthur Woods, assistant to the secretary of war, has set up the wheels of a giant machine, which is working night and day to co-operate with all employment agencies for the sake of the returned soldier who has no job. But more than that, this great employment system operates for the good of America. Colonel Woods and his thousands of assisting committees believe in the doughboy and in his power of real achievement in the future national life of the United States.

Fine Memorial to Edith Cavell.

In a quarry, midway between Bodwin and Camelford, on the moors of North Cornwall, England, a memorial is being fashioned out of granite in memory of Nurse Cavell. One of the huge pieces is nearing completion under the guidance of Sir George Frampton, who is giving his services free. This figure represents a woman with arms half upraised, holding a little child on her lap, while underneath, on the base of the monument, is carved a cross. The group is symbolical of the stronger nations protecting the smaller and weaker ones, while the cross is the emblem of mercy. The whole group is carved in the form of a cross, giving special significance to the order to which Nurse Cavell belonged. Another huge block of granite near by has a big lion carved on it, with head erect and mane bristling. Trampled beneath its feet is a serpent, writhing, but defeated. The total weight of the memorial, when finished, will be about 170 tons, with a height of about 40 feet. The group probably will be erected near the British National gallery.

Tasting With the Nose.

The sensation of taste, while of common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts, all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acridity—which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inappropriate temperatures; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped to identify substances placed in his mouth.

Famed Rest of Noted Men.

The Diamond bar, famous for nearly 50 years as a part of the old Auzerais house, of San Jose, Cal., is being fitted up for a grocery store. The Auzerais house, on West Santa Clara street, housed five presidents of the United States and was for a time the abode of a king. It was built in 1863, according to John E. Auzerais of San Jose, and the barroom was the meeting place for many of the men whose names have been written into the history of California.

President Grant was entertained at a banquet in the Auzerais house in 1879. The following spring King Kalakau of Hawaii was a guest, and in September of the same year President Hayes delivered an address from the balcony. President Harrison was a guest in 1891 and both McKinley and Roosevelt visited the famous old hotel on their tours of the United States.

Her Part.

The physician had diagnosed the young woman's case and was compounding for her a bottle of medicine. He put two or three drugs into the bottle and then took up a jar of pepsin. The jar was almost empty and there was not enough pepsin to finish filling the patient's bottle. The physician looked around for another jar. He didn't find one, however. For a minute he was frankly perplexed, and then came sudden relief. He turned to the faucet and finished filling the bottle with water.

"Oh," the young woman's voice was very cool, "you needn't have done that. I can put in the water myself."

Soldiers.

When sovereigns began to hire soldiers, their funds were derived by commutation of the ancient feudal aids; by conversion of the spoils of war; by additional direct taxation. The soldier's interest in his trade was kept up by pay received from his sovereign, by loot, by the love of adventure.

Both of a Kind.

When asked to compare the reception of President Wilson in Des Moines with that accorded him at other stops he has made on his trip, the unvarying reply of the newspaper men who are with the party is that for the comparative size of the crowd and the wholeheartedness of the enthusiasm for the president, this city is by far the best they have found.

The bee raisers of Bremer county met at Waverly and formed an organization to combat the bee disease which is now appearing in the bee colonies of the county. The diseases are of various kinds and seems to be contagious, having spread to several of the colonies. Professor Atkins of the University of Iowa was there and assisted in forming the organization.

Greater Iowa week has been set for Oct. 19 to 25, according to advance notices sent out by the Greater Iowa association. The annual "Boost Iowa" period was abandoned last year on account of the war. Arrangements are being made with the state superintendent, P. E. McClenahan, for the schools throughout the state to observe the week with exercises appropriate to the celebration of Iowa's greatness.

Dubuque county will receive an appropriation for the upkeep of four separate short-term schools in agriculture, according to information received by Superintendent Joseph Flynn. These schools will be opened at convenient places in the county and will receive all male applicants over 14 years of age. The session will be held during the months of December, January and February.

Matthew A. Tinley, of Council Bluffs, has been elected commander of the Iowa Branch of the American Legion, at a recent session of the state convention. Tinley was temporary state chairman. Newton is assured of a $160,000 hospital. It is planned to start work within the next few days. Verne W. Skiff, former merchant of Newton, now a retired millionaire merchant of Chicago, has agreed to give $100,000 to the hospital and the institution will be known as the Mary Frances Skiff hospital, Mr. Skiff giving the money as a memorial for his wife who was buried in Newton Jan. 1 last.

Fifty persons called at the home of Prof. A. Hilgendorf, head of the German Lutheran school at Yorktown. The fifty included a lot of returned soldiers. As a result of the call the school did not and will not open. The committee was named at a mass meeting of residents of Yorktown, held at the opera house. Soldiers from Shenandoah and elsewhere in Page county attended. During the war the teaching of German was discontinued in the school. Authorities of the school declare there is no intention of resuming it. They say English text books were to be used.

The contract has been let to Phelan & Shirley company of Omaha for the grading of the first twenty-five miles of Sioux county's primary road system. The accepted bid gives the Phelan & Shirley company the contract at 48.9 per cubic yard for the earth moved and 15 per cent plus actual costs for all extra work such as grubbing trees, placing drain tile and the like. The contract provides that the work is to be commenced not later than Sept. 21, 1919, and to be completed not later than Sept. 1, 1920. It will include the road from Orange City to Hawarden and from Maurice to Sioux Center.

This is a story of a Duroc-Jersey boar pig. Two years ago, when Louis Miller, living near Shell Rock, purchased the animal from Frank Miller he paid $175. Mr. Miller kept the hog on his farm for two years, when a farmer happened along one day and wanted to buy the pig. Mr. Miller was not anxious to sell, so he thought he would ask a stiff price, and placed the figure at $375. The stranger demurred and haggled, but finally pulled out his check book and wrote the check for $375. Imagine Miller's feelings when the stranger told him that his new possession was a jewel and he had sold it in advance of the purchase for $2,500. Mr. Pig was forthwith loaded and shipped to Kansas City, where within six months the animal sold for $3,500, and the current issue of the Duroc-Jersey Bulletin carries the news that the same animal recently sold for $4,500. Mr. Miller has about 100 shoats from this pig and has refused a lump sum of $10,000 for them.

Urn Many Centuries Old.

Among the relics of pre-Inca civilization, found on the western slope of the Andes and now in the United States, is an ornamental urn, three feet high, and supposedly more than 2,000 years old. Strange to say, with many other valuable finds, in pottery, gold, stone and platinum, this urn was found among the ruins of dwellings built of wood. It seems to be rather fortunate than otherwise that fire-proof vaults were unknown to the pre-Incas.

Dayton Airless Tires

Cannot Puncture or Blow Out

Three items you must figure for this winter.

1st.—Dayton Airless tires cannot PUNCTURE or BLOW OUT. Absolutely trouble proof. Cannot rim cut and will take you Anyplace through ice, snow, glass, nails, over roughest of roads and will wear down to shreds

2nd.—Dayton Airless tires are easy riding. They will not jar your car like a pneumatic nor d-r-a-g like a loose pneumatic. The "pressure" is always "right" in these tires. We have positive proof they will not injure the car in the least.

3rd.—Dayton Airless Tires are most economical. Compare the cost of tires on a Ford: You must carry four tires, two sizes, also two extra tires both sizes. You must buy six tires and six innertubes. The average price of six pneumatic tires is more than the cost of a complete set of Dayton Airless Tires, and remember you don't need to carry extras with Dayton Airless on your wheel. Just think what that means.

Absolutely Guaranteed for 8,000 miles. Average run of these tires are 20,000 and 25,000 Miles. We can point you to first set of Dayton Airless Tires in this county, run 5 years at about 22,000 miles with no trouble and still going.

FARMER CAN MATERIALLY IMPROVE HIS HAY REVENUE BY CAREFUL PREPARATION

A Busy Hay Baling Scene.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Were it as easy and simple to save hay when it rains as it is to make hay when old Sol has his blast furnaces working to capacity, hay producing and marketing problems would, to a certain extent be simplified. To put a gauge on the weather man and to regulate the amount of dew, rain and sunshine served out during the haymaking season, would be the hay farmer's dream of Utopia. Although the hay raiser cannot cash in on any such a vision, he can materially improve his hay revenue by more careful market preparation of his cash crop of forage. Uncle Sam wants to help every farmer to make the most of his surplus hay crop, and hence he has just published Farmers' Bulletin 1049 which is replete in helpful hints and practical suggestions on when, why, and how to bale hay and manage baling crews.

Hay is graded according to the way in which it is baled. Bales of uniform size and of neat, attractive appearance bring top prices, other conditions being equal, while ragged, unsightly bales are penalized. In baling hay for market, various practices are in operation; some are followed unconsciously in order to avoid extra work, while others are followed deliberately with intent to deceive the buyer, which tends to lower the market value of hay in the bale irrespective of its actual quality.

The new department of agriculture publication describes the various types of hay presses, discusses their adaptability and operation under different conditions, and gives detailed information concerning the management of baling crews. The question of owning a press or hiring the work of baling is rather fully considered, as it is believed that many hay growers who now hire custom balers would do well to give careful consideration to the advantages that may accrue from having a press on the farm.

Types of Presses Discussed.

Presses are divided into three classes, according to the manner in which the bale is made—loose or box presses, perpetual or continuous presses, and round-bale presses. These machines are operated either by horsepower or by steam, gasoline or kerosene engines. The perpetual press, which is the most popular type in all sections where hay is grown for market, features continuous pressing; that is, hay is fed into the press, a forkful at a time, and the finished bale is discharged from the opposite end of the bale chamber without stopping the press. If the hay is properly fed into the press it will be easy to separate the bale into as many portions for feeding as there are numbers of charges in the bale, which varies from 6 or 8 to 15 or 20. The first box presses were operated by hand, but now they are run by horsepower or by engines. The box press always makes bales having the same or "even" length, a very valuable feature when loading cars.

Round Bale a New Kind.

One of the most recent types of presses makes a cylindrical bale, bound with binding twine and having an air space running lengthwise through its center. This press was designed so that hay baled from the windrow would cure out after it was baled, the hole in the center being intended to allow air to circulate through the bale and prevent heating. This bale is not as easily torn apart as the continuously pressed bale, it being necessary to chop or split it lengthwise with an ax or other edged implement. When round bales are fed in open hunks or on the ground in the feed lot, they are not opened; the animal pulls out the hay by a mouthful at a time. It is claimed that this way of feeding the hay prevents waste.

One-horse, perpetual presses, made by reliable concerns, are capable of turning out the same kind of bales as are made by the regulation two-horse presses. They are designed for the farmer who has a small average of hay, and they can be especially recommended for the small hay grower if he is in a section where little hay is grown and where hay presses are scarce and hard to hire. The only objection to this type of press is its small production a day. If the prospective purchaser is in doubt as to which size to buy, it would probably be better in many instances for him to buy the two-horse press. The one-horse press can be used to advantage if hay is baled from the stack or barn at a time when there is no urgent need to do other farm work.

The two-horse, full-circle, or continuous-travel, perpetual press is the type of horse press most extensively used. In operating this machine the horses travel in a circle. In buying a press of this type the purchaser should pay especial attention to the power mechanism, the material used for important parts of the press, size of the feed opening, plunger return device, self-feeding attachment, and convenience in tying the bales and in setting and moving the press.

The reversible lever type of press is sometimes called the half-circle press, since the team travels half a circle, turns around, and pulls the lever to the other side, a charge of hay being pressed for each half circle. This type is easily portable and is always ready for work, since it is not necessary to take off the wheels or lower them from the ground to the axle or to stake the front end of the press. It has a smaller hour capacity than the continuous-travel press and requires a well-trained team to operate it to capacity.

Large Growers Use Power.

Large hay growers and shippers who buy and bale large quantities of hay generally use power presses. These are in common use in sections where the usual practice is to bale hay from the windrow or the cock, such as the alfalfa and Johnson grass and prairie hay sections of the South. They are sometimes used in preference to the two-horse type on alfalfa and Johnson grass hay farms, even where the hay acreage is comparatively small, say from 50 to 75 acres, for the reason that they will bale hay about twice as fast as it could be done with a two-horse press, thereby greatly lessening the danger of injury to hay due to bad weather.

As power to drive hay presses, the steam engine, portable or self-propelling, has been almost entirely superseded by the gasoline or kerosene engine. With a gas engine there is no need for an engine and a water hauler. A few owners employ an engineer when doing custom baling with a fast-working crew, because he keeps the engine going and saves expensive loss of time on the part of the press crew. When the crew is hired by the ton the men are not paid for time lost on account of a break-down, and in such cases engineers are not often employed. Usually one of the press crew looks after the engine when it requires attention. On farms where tractors are used, if the tractor is not needed for other essential work when it is time to bale hay, the belt power press should ordinarily be used, since it costs less than the motor press, and since it would not be good business to use a motor press while a tractor stands idle.

Thorough discussion is also given in this government publication to the important features of power presses, the difference between the light-duty and heavy-duty presses, the longevity of the press, as well as facts about the economic operation of these presses. The capacity of the press depends, to a large extent, upon the skill of the crew operating it. The average power press should bale from 20 to 30 tons in a 10-hour day. The capacity of a power press under average conditions is about twice that of a two-horse press.

Economy of Buying a Press.

The advisability of buying a hay press depends upon the amount of hay to be baled yearly, the likelihood of being able to obtain a crew when needed and the rate charged by those making a business of doing custom baling. Whether it will pay the grower to own a press depends upon whether the total cost of baling, including labor, repairs, interest and depreciation, is less than the rate charged by the custom baler.

The practice of baling hay directly from the windrow or cock originated in the semiarid West, where the weather does not often interfere with haymaking. This method has also spread to the alfalfa and Johnson grass land areas of the South, where the weather often is unfavorable. It is popular because it saves labor as compared with stacking or putting hay into the barn. For instance, in Kansas and Nebraska it requires about 1¼ man hours and 1 horse hour to put a ton of hay into the stack with a stacker after it has been brought to the stack with a push rake. The cost of labor for stacking alone, during 1918, was about 60 cents a ton. This work is entirely eliminated when hay is baled from the field, the saving of labor being much greater in sections where it is customary to handle hay by hand. Growers are able to extend the hay-making season by baling part of their hay from the windrow during propitious weather and stacking or holding the baling until the rush of work is over.

DESERVED TO BE PARDONED

Quick-Witted Youngster Must Have Heard of Boast the Surgeon Was Fond of Making.

This Indianapolis physician boasts that he would rather do surgical work than eat. Even the children in the neighborhood know of this, as is proven by the following story:

Recently some of the neighboring boys were playing ball in front of his office. Suddenly the ball went wild went to work to rewrite the duet. To cian's plate glass windows. Of course the doctor was furious and he expressed his feelings to the wee fellow who had thrown it. "Haven't I told you fellows that this would happen some day?" he demanded.

The little fellow nodded his head.

"Then what have you to say for yourself?" was the next thrust.

The little fellow gulped, swallowed and finally sobbed out: "Well, I thought maybe I would hit one of your patients."

His Ailment.

"Bruddren and sistahs," severely said good old Parson Bagster, "now dat de hat has circumnavigated 'round and de contents been counted, we will j'ine in pra'r for de speedy recovery of our po' Brudder Clinch."

"But, look yuh, sah!" spoke up the gentleman designated. "I isn't sick."

"Yes, yo' is, sah! Yo' got lockjaw o' de pocketbook, and got it pow'ful bad. Yo' didn't pungle up nary cent when de hat was passed."—Kansas City Star.

The Responsible Element.

"What's the trouble?" asked the musical comedy manager.

"All the principals of the company have gone on strike."

"How about the chorus and the costumes?"

"They're willing to work."

"Then why trouble me? Go ahead and give the show."

SENATE GETS PACT

GERMAN TREATY SUBMITTED WITH MANY CHANGES.

MINORITY REPORT PRESENTED

Document to Remain In Upper House for Continuous Discussion—Two Months Before Committee.

Washington, D. C.—The German peace treaty is now in the hands of the United States senate for ratification or rejection. It was submitted by the foreign relations committee, a majority of whose members opposed ratification in the form submitted by President Wilson.

Immediately after it was submitted by Chairman Lodge, two months to the day, from the time the president laid it before the senate, Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, ranking democratic member of the committee, presented a minority report urging ratification without amendment or reservation.

Actual consideration of the treaty began the first of the week, and leaders of the senate have announced that it will be kept continuously before that body until some disposition of the pact is made. It is the first great document of the kind to be discussed in the open—without the confines of exclusive session.

Accompanying the treaty was the majority report of the foreign relations committee, covering six pages, explaining the amendments and reservations, all of which it was declared were "governed by a single purpose and that is to guard American rights and sovereignty, the invasion of which would stimulate breach of faith, encourage conflicts and generate wars."

The reservations propose:

1. Unconditional right to withdraw from the league.

2. Declination to assume any of the obligations of the much discussed Article X, "except by action of the congress of the United States."

3. Reserving to the United States the exclusive right to decide what questions are within its own domestic jurisdiction.

4. Absolute reservation of the Monroe doctrine to the judgment of the United States alone.

The principal amendments are proposed to provide:

Equal voting power for the United States with Great Britain in the assembly of the league.

Giving to China instead of Japan the province of Shantung.

Relief of the United States from having representatives on commissions deciding matters in which it has no concern.

Others concern phraseology.

Nebraska to Get Sugar.

Washington, D. C.—Within the next 10 days or two weeks 5,300 tons of cane and beet sugar, and 100,000 bags of beet sugar are to be consigned for shipment from the west and south to Nebraska wholesalers for retail distribution, according to a telegram reboard in New York and made public by Senator Hitchcock. It is thought that this will relieve the sugar shortage in Nebraska. It was made known that for about three weeks prior to September 5 the total shipments of sugar to Nebraska was 2,200 tons, which is considerably below the normal.

Abandon Search for Flyers.

San Diego, Cal.—The search in Lower California by the War and Navy departments for Lieuts. Frederick Waterhouse and C. H. Connelly, aviators, who have been missing since August 21, has been abandoned, Col. H. L. Watson, commanding at Rockwell field, announced. Except from Mexicans who saw the aviators' machine, nothing has been heard of the two men. It is estimated the search has cost the government nearly $100,000.

Start Endowment Campaign.

Cambridge, Mass.—Preparatory to the opening of the $11,000,000 campaign for the Harvard endowment fund in October, a strong team of prominent Harvard men left Boston on a tour of the entire country to speak to alumni members, reorganize zones and confer with zone chairmen, the first attempt ever made in Harvard's three centuries to organize her alumni for a national campaign.

Sailors Perish in Storm.

Miami, Fla.—Twenty-seven members of the crew of the Ward line steamer Corydon lost their lives when the vessel foundered in the Bahama channel in the hurricane which passed over Florida. Survivors clinging to a life boat drifted to shore at Cape Florida. The survivors, numbering nine, reported that all but one of the life boats was pulled under by the suction of the sinking vessel.

Splendid Wheat Yield.

Washington, D. C.—The total 1919 harvest of spring and winter wheat was forecast at 923,023,000 bushels by the department of agriculture on the basis of reports received up to September 1.

Moves to Block Intervention.

Washington, D. C.—In an effort to block any movements that may lead to intervention in Mexico the Carranza government is said to have sent a propaganda fund of about $500,000 into the United States.

Ways of the Hopi Indians of northern New Mexico, their food and religious customs, was the subject of an address in Kansas City, Mo., the other night by Miss Ethel Ryan, for years a Baptist missionary on the Hopi reservation.

"The Hopi women delight in decorating their shoes with 10-cent pieces," Miss Ryan said. "The shoes, which resemble moccasins, often have as many as five dimes on each.

"They have a way of sewing quarters to their dresses and using them as buttons. When they go to market and find themselves short of money they simply cut off a button."

United States Has Monopoly.

Neither Great Britain, France nor Italy has been able to find workable helium fields. Russia may have them, but that is doubtful, Germany has none. The United States seems to have the monopoly, and investigation by scientists of the United States geological survey tends to show that we have all we need. Great Britain may continue of necessity to fill her gas bags with the deadly hydrogen, pending the time when she can buy helium of the United States; but here in America we hope soon to bid farewell forever to hydrogen and all its tragic evils.

SALVATION ARMY HOME SERVICE CAMPAIGN

OUR POSITION.

The Salvation Army has survived the acid test of the war, and has emerged stronger, more efficient and more determined than ever to accomplish its great purpose in the world. The very esteem and admiration which its service with the American expeditionary force have won for the Salvation Army in the hearts of the people of the United States have brought new responsibilities—responsibilities which demand an extension of its facilities and of its activities. The Salvation Army will continue as heretofore to lift up those who are in distress, to bind the wounds of the injured, to teach those who have fallen to raise their heads again and renew their hearts with hope, but the scope of its efforts will be wider, the effects of its labors more lasting. The Salvation Army's millions of new friends demand this; it is the penalty of its new popularity. And to meet the demands that peace will make upon it, the Salvation Army must have financial support.

WHO WE ARE.

Primarily the Salvation Army is a religious body, founded in London by Gen. William Booth in 1865, for evangelistic work. The Salvation Army's labors for social relief, by which, possibly, it is best known, are an outgrowth from its missionary efforts. It was first known as the Christian Mission, but the present name was adopted in 1878 as typifying perfectly its purposes—the salvation of mankind from all forms of moral, spiritual and physical distress. The activities of the Salvation Army are practical, concrete productive. Slum settlements, rescue homes for fallen women, maternity hospitals, industrial homes, working men's hotels, orphan's homes boarding houses for young women, fresh-air camps, free employment bureaus, prison relief, the distribution of free ice, fuel, clothing, medicines and cash—these are only a few of the means the Salvation Army is using to champion the cause of the weak and to uplift the lowly. And these things it does in 61 counties and colonies, without regard to race, or creed or any other imaginable condition.

SALVATION ARMY HOME FUND.

The Salvation Army is asking the American people to subscribe $13,000,000 to maintain its varied work in the United States. The money will be for use in the United States only. Except for a small percentage which will be devoted to national work, the money raised in each community will be spent there.

WHY IS THIS MONEY NEEDED?

Not one dollar of the funds received by the Salvation Army from the gifts of the American people to finance its war work at home or overseas has been, or can be, devoted to its manifold civilian activities. Money given for war service work has been, still is, and must continue to be used for war service and for war service alone. The war has drained the finances of the Salvation Army to the utmost. And now the Salvation Army must not only recoup its resources, but must do so on a scale to keep pace with the broadened scope of its activities and the significant changes going on in the country as a result of the war.

NO SURPLUS FROM WAR FUND

It may occur to some that the Salvation Army might readily effect a transfer to the surplus still remaining from the funds received for war work and use this money for its home service. Possibly, only there will be no surplus. That this is so will be understood when it is shown that of the seven organizations which participated in the United war work campaign of last fall the Salvation Army received only 2.05 per cent of the total amount or $205,000,000 which was collected. The Salvation Army's share was $4,210,000.

WHY $13,000,000?

The amount which the American people will be asked to subscribe in the coming campaign was determined logically and intelligently. It is justified in detail as well as in its entirely. The total amount represents the sum of budgets submitted throughout the country. The budget method was applied rigorously, so that the call would be warranted locally as well as nationally.

THE BUDGET PLAN.

For purposes of administration the Salvation Army divides the United States into provinces, each containing one or several states, which are subdivided into divisions. Provincial and divisional officers report directly to national headquarters in New York. Workers in each community submitted to their divisional officers estimates of the amounts that would be necessary to carry on their work. The reports were scrutinized not only by provisional and divisional officers but by private citizens, not members of the Salvation Army, but knowing the Army and the needs of the communities for which the estimates were prepared. They corrected reports for which the estimates were prepared. The corrected reports were forwarded to national headquarters, and it was by that process that $13,000,000 was determined on as a target for the national campaign.

LOCAL NEEDS ONLY GUIDE.

Unlike the campaigns which were waged for United War Work, the Red Cross, and the Liberty loan, population, bank clearances and other similar elements were not regarded in determining the quota for the Salvation Army home service fund. Local needs, determined locally, were the only factors. Some places are undertaking to contribute quotas larger than neighboring places of larger population and more wealth, but the reason is that local needs and local plans are different. Besides, the money is to be raised at home and spent at home.

IN THE PAST.

Salvation Army workers have always given generously, raising much of the necessary money as well as doing the work. Early in its career the tambourine became the natural collection box at meetings held both indoors and outdoors. Then came the well-known girl with the tambourine, soliciting funds wherever people gathered. Certain branches of the Salvation Army work, chiefly industrial, became self-supporting, often even earning profits which were devoted to the support of other departments or for enlarged service in their own field. In time persons of wealth, who came to know the work of the Salvation Army, gave financial aid. But the tambourine in the hand of the lassie always was the chief means of support—and a too uncertain resource it has always been.

NEEDS—AND RECEIPTS.

The Salvation Army always has needed more funds than were available, and shortage of resources has sorely restricted the service that would have been rendered had means existed. The $13,000,000 asked for home service is by no means in excess of the needs of the Army. Indeed it is not unduly in excess of the contributions of former years. Heretofore, though, the receipts of the Salvation Army were the result of constant and laborious solicitation throughout the year. By its Home Service fund campaign, the Salvation Army hopes to remove the necessity of this continuous seeking of money, thereby permitting its workers to devote their entire time and efforts to the service of humanity to which they have dedicated their lives.

METHODS—OLD AND NEW.

The old methods of financing the activities of the Salvation Army existed only because of necessity. They wasted the time and strength of trained Salvation Army workers, were distasteful to the public and failed to produce adequate results. A large percentage of the time of the workers was required in the soliciting of pennies—and these were all trained workers, prepared for their proper duties of service in Salvation Army training schools. The past methods of money-raising were wasteful and extravagant.

WHY CHANGE NOW?

The Salvation Army proved its qualities to the American people in the fires of war—its industry, efficiency, courage, faithfulness, devotion, economy, as well as its spiritual consecration. And it proved all this before a multitude of witnesses—3,000,000 soldiers and sailors at home and overseas, as well as their civilian families and friends.

IS THE TAMBOURINE TO PASS?

When the American people have responded to the present call, the Salvation Army's financial program for the year will have been provided under a single effort. Street cars, saloons, restaurants, office buildings and curb stones no longer will ring with the sound of the pennies falling into the tambourines of the Salvation Army workers. The tambourine, though, is a symbol. Always will it be identified with the Salvation Army, and for that reason, probably will be used instead of the basket at meetings of the Salvation Army both indoors and outdoors. The Army, though, has no intention of abandoning its appeal for Christmas dinner money for the poor at the holiday season. Santa Claus will still stand beside his kettle at the street corner and jingle his bell.

IDEALS AND PURPOSES.

The primary purpose of the new budgeting plan of finance is to release the Salvation Army workers for real Salvation Army work. It does not signify in the slightest degree any change in the Army's ideals and purposes. The Army will seek out the poor as before; it will reclaim unfortunate women; it will rehabilitate disheartened men; it will distribute ice in the summer and fuel and food in the winter; it will send the children of the poor and their mothers to the open places for breathing spells during the summer's heat. In short, it will continue to do just what it did quietly for 60 years in 61 countries and colonies before the war.

SALARIES.

Officers of the Salvation Army receive only a reasonable compensation for their services, according to a scale, clearly stipulated, depending on the rank of the officer and not on the office he holds. No officer, member or employee is permitted to receive any pecuniary profit apart from this.

ACCOUNTS.

The accounts of the Salvation Army are kept in accordance with the most efficient business principles. Every year an audit company examines the accounts of the international, national and territorial headquarters. Every six months the Army's national auditor examines the accounts of the various headquarters.

The balance sheets of the international, national, provincial and divisional headquarters are published annually. Every corps or field unit in the United States issues a quarterly balance sheet.

WESTERN GOVERNORS PLEDGE ASSISTANCE TO SALVATIONISTS

Prominent Senators, Bankers, Jurists, Manufacturers and Army Officials Also Aid in Drive.

Governors of Western states, United States senators, prominent bankers, eminent jurists, men of noteworthy accomplishment in the world of commerce and manufacture, distinguished engineers and high officers of the United Staates army are included in the national committee which is conducting a national campaign to raise the Salvation Home Service fund. Seeking men to serve on the national committee and accept state chairmanships, Commissioner Thomas Estill, cammander of the Salvation Army in the Western states, considered only doers, "men with the punch," who by the success they had scored in many lines of endeavor might be expected to conduct the coming campaign efficiently and forcefully.

All of those who will serve as national committeemen have assured the commissioner that they will lend their efforts as well as their names toward helping the campaign. Some typical responses follow:

Governor Lowden of Illinois—"I have long been impressed by the valuable work of the Salvation Army, but never more so than during the war period. I shall be glad, therefore, to accept membership on your committee."

Governor Philipp of Wisconsin—"You may add my name to the list of the national campaign committee ,and I shall be glad to render any services I can for the organization."

Governor Allen of Kansas—"Will be very glad to serve on your campaign committee on behalf of the Salvation Army."

Arthur Capper, former governor and now United States senator from Kansas—"I glady accept appointment national campaign committee Salvation Army."

Governor Larazzola of New Mexico—"I take pleasure in accepting membership, and will aid all I can in the national campaign."

WILL YOU HELP THE SALVATION ARMY?

For the last six months ending March 31, 1919, the Salvation Army has given away in the state of Iowa shoes, milk and bread to 1,321 people; 437 banskets of food, 9,708 pairs of shoes, and clothing; 200,900 pounds of coal. It gave meals to 4,230 persons and lodging to 451. It gave 226 men employment and railroad tickets and transportation to 19.

If the Salvation Army Home Service drive is successful it will be able to do twice as much for the poor and needy in the coming six months. Will you help?

$40,000 FOR SOLDIERS' MESSAGES.

The Salvation Army has spent more than $40,000 in sending telegrams to the soldiers' families notifying them of their arrival in New York city. The Western Union has recently shown a keen interest in the arrival of soldiers. Solicitors for the company board every incoming ship in search of business. If the doughboy says he has no cash to pay for the message he is told that it is "all right, we will take care of that." Later the soldier learns to his chagrin that the news of his arrival has been telegraphed to the home folks. The Salvation Army makes no charges.

"I was hungry and ye gave me to eat, I was thirsty and ye gave me drink, I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me."

Think well on these things. Give! Give! Give!

INDUSTRIAL HOMES WHERE JOBLESS MEN WORK OUT FOR THEIR OWN SALVATION

The doors of the Salvation Army Industrial homes are open to every man who is willing to work. It matters not what his past record may be, his nationality or creed, whether he is whole or crippled, if he is willing to work he is given a chance.

Many hospital patients who have not sufficient strength to take a job are cared for during the convalescent period in these industrial homes, where they are given light employment in keeping with their condition.

The principal work of the home is gathering, sorting and repairing clothing and furniture and baling paper and rags. These materials are again put into circulation—the rags and papers to the mills, the furniture and clothing to the poor. And while this work of conservation goes on, the men themselves are restored to the efficient wage-earning class.

Industrial homes of this character are in operation in Minneapolis and St. Paul.

Several hundred thousand meals and hundreds of thousands of beds have been supplied free, or for service, by the Salvation Army Industrial Homes of America in the last year. Most of the men who pass through these institutions return to the great army of wage earners.

MINISTERING TO THE POOR AND DISTRESSED

The Salvation Army is a flying relief squadron, ready to answer every emergency call of the poor and needy, day or night, rain or shine, Sundays or holidays. Its officers are always ready to succor the suffering, the cold, the hungry the naked, the sick and the dying.

In winter, food, clothing and fuel are distributed with an extra supply at Christmas time. In summer, poor mothers and babies are taken on excursions to the beaches or into the country to Salvation Army recreation camps for the week's vacation. The policy is to give immediate relief, followed by the necessary investigation. This prompt, effective assistance has tided many a hard-pressed mother through a critical time in her struggle for existence.

WHO WILL?

Who will be the first man in the state of Iowa to sell one pig and turn the proceeds over to the Salvation Army Home Service fund?

The price of one pig will give 275 meals to the poor. Will furnish 1,000 patients in the hospital with fruit. Will buy 50 pairs of shoes for the needy children this winter. Will give milk to 1,000 babies for one day, or will take care of ten young women in the Girls' Rescue Home.

Aren't any one of these things worth the price of a pig? Say yes today!

"MA" BURDICK PRESENTED WITH HIGH FRENCH HONOR.

At the exercises in Marinette, Wis., on July 4, in honor of the returned soldiers and sailors of Marinette county, "Ma" Burdick of the Salvation Army was presented with the Croix de Guerre. The presentation was made by Brigadier Smith of the Salvation Army on behalf of the French government.

PRESIDENT WOODROW WILSON.

"I sincerely wish Godspeed to the Salvation Army, which has as its main object the betterment of humanity and the making of bad citizens into good ones.

"No one who has watched even superficially the work and progress of the Salvation Army can fail to feel the deepest and most sincere interest."

WHY WAS THE SALVATION ARMY A SUCCESS IN FRANCE?

Because it gave the men what they wanted. There were very few of our American men in France who needed the Salvation Army's help before they went overseas, but when they went into a foreign country, without food or money, who did they go to? The Salvation Army.

It is just the same here in America. There are many men here in our own state who, for some reason or other, lose their position or money, and need help.

Perhaps a man may come from a poor family and he has had to work from childhood to help support the family. He has not been properly educated and has no profession. If he loses his position he comes to the Salvation Army with exactly the same spirit as you called on the Salvation Army in France. He receives help under the same conditions here as you received it on the other side. If he never has money enough so he feels he can pay the Army without depriving himself of the necessities of life he is not expected to pay. This is the way the men were treated in France, and this is the way the men are treated in America.

The Salvation Army gives away more food, clothing and fuel right here in America in one month than it gave away in the A. E. F. during the whole war.

The reason you do not know what the Salvation Army is doing in America is because you do not need its help.

Remember, if a man, woman or child in this country ever needs help all they have to do is to come to the Salvation Army and they will be taken in and given food, clothing and medical aid, or anything else that they might need.

So, is such a wonderful organization not worthy of your help?

Every man who is financially able is expected to contribute liberally to the Salvation Army Home Service drive. Now is the time the Salvation Army needs your help.

Remember the Salvation Army's slogan: "A man may be down, but he's never out."

New Use for Compressed Air.

Blowing cotton from one department to another through suitable tubes is the latest employment of compressed air in manufacturing plants. In one instance a California felt manufacturer makes use of compressed air for conveying damp wool from the scouring plant squeezers to another building across the street, in which are located the sun-exposed drying rooms. The method is said to be clean and rapid.

CRYSTAL CAFE CHANGES HANDS

Monday W. C. Keraus sold out the restaurant business to Scotty Erwin, of Clear Lake, who takes over the business October first. Mr. Keraus has only been in the business here for a couple of months, but during that time has enjoyed a good business. We do not like to lose Mr. Keraus from our business circle, but hope that he may see fit to remain here. Mr. Erwin is very well known here as he farmed near Klemme a few years ago and since that time has been working as a carpenter. We welcome him and his family to our city and wish him good luck. He plans to make some changes about the place and will endeavor to run a good restaurant and keep up the high standard set by the former proprietor.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the First M. E. church will hold its October meeting at the home of Mrs. Chris Blumer on Thursday, the 2nd. Our committees have been appointed for this year and are at work. The topic for study this year is "A Crusade of Compassion," and is especially interesting. The following take part in the next program:

Devotionals by president

Special song, Mrs. Wellemeyer and Mrs. C. Lenz.

"The Place of Medical Missions," Mrs. W. Lau

"What Need There Is," Mrs. Geo. Gruetzmacher.

"The Personnel of the Battalion of Life," Mrs. Will Stille

"The Story of Clara Swain," Mrs. C. Lenz

"Achievements," Mrs. Sam Harvey

"A Plea for Doctors," Mrs. Aug. Ridder

BUILD A DAM IF YOU WANT POWER

WATER-POWER experts say that there is enough running water going to waste in the northern Great Lakes states to run all the cotton looms in the world——

If it could be harnessed to turbines or wheels.

But running water is useless for power purposes unless somebody has enterprise enough to build a dam and impound the water until there is sufficient "fall" to give the required velocity in the turbine casing.

The same is true of the money in circulation. We have in the United States not far from $60 per capita of "circulation"—that is to say all kinds of money that passes from hand to hand.

To get the real force and effect of that $60 per capita average—to obtain the benefit of your personal share of the total "money in circulation"—you must build a dam.

Saving—systematic and regular SAVING—is the dam whereby money gains power to turn the wheels of industry.

The best dam you can build to import "head" and force to your surplus earnings is one built of U. S. Government Thrift Stamps, War Savings Stamps and Treasurying Savings certificates.

Begin today. Every day you delay costs you a lot of power and 4 per cent compound interest to boot.

NEW TREASURY CERTIFICATES ARE LIKE BABY BONDS.

The new Treasury certificates of $100 and $1,000 denominations are like "Baby Bonds." Here are the chief facts about them:

They are tax free, except inheritance, surtaxes, war profits and excess profits taxes.

They bear 4 per cent interest, compounded quarterly.

They mature January 1, 1924.

They may be cashed at the option of the holder for purchase price plus accrued interest any time before maturity date.

They never depreciate in value, but increase monthly, guaranteed by U. S. Government.

They are registered in Washington, which prevents loss by fire or theft. Each bears inscribed thereon the name of purchaser.

Certificates are issued in book form, each book containing ten certificates.

The $100 certificate costs the same as twenty War Savings Stamps. The $1,000 certificate costs the same as 200 War Savings Stamps.

$100 certificates can be obtained at any post office.

Both $100 and $1,000 certificates may be obtained at banks.

$100 certificates increase 20 cents and the $1,000 two dollars a month in price.

The cost by months is a follows:

Month	$100 Certificate	$1,000 Certificate
September	$84.00	$840.00
October	84.20	842.00
November	84.40	844.00
December	84.60	846.00

TAKE 500,000 GRENADE BANKS

Financial Institutions Distribute War Relics to School Children in W. S. S. Campaign.

Nearly half a million hand-grenade banks, the deadly weapon of the world war converted into a savings receptacle, have been ordered by the banking institutions of the Seventh Federal Reserve district for distribution among the school children of Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin in the War Savings campaign of the government. In the neighborhood of 1,200 banks and trust companies have bought the grenade banks in amounts ranging from fifty to fifty-thousand.

The original plan was for the school children to earn during the vacation period the money with which to buy the War Savings stamps to entitle them to the ownership of one of these war relics, but as there was some delay in procuring the grenade banks children may get the banks by buying the War Savings stamps, even if they have not earned the money themselves. Announcement to this effect has been sent to the banks by J. H. Puelicher, Government Savings Director of the Seventh district, as follows:

"As we got started rather late there will be no objection to a little extension of the date by which the conditions of the award are to be completed. Also it will be permissible to make a little broader interpretation of the terms. As the schools soon reopen many of the children will not have an opportunity to earn money but the hand grenades may be given them if they purchase the required number of War Savings Stamps."

DRAINAGE NOTICE

Hearing on Establishment of Drainage District No. 103

STATE OF IOWA, SS.

County of Hancock,

To A. D. White, William E. Smith, A. D. Gilmer, Elmer Arnold, Amanda Tice, Valentine Josten and Peter Josten, Executors of Estate of Valentine Josten, Sr. Trustees of Avery Township and L. Wesenberg Clerk of Avery Township and to all other persons in any way interested in any of the following described real estate in Hancock County, Iowa to-wit:

NE NW; SE NW; NW NE; NE NE; SW NE; SE NE; NE SE; NW SE; NE SW; Sec. 5 Highways on N & S½ Sec. Line of section 5 all in Township 94 North, Range 23, West of the 5th P. M.

You are hereby notified that on May 19, 1919, there was filed in the office of the County Auditor of Hancock County, Iowa, a petition addressed to the Board of Supervisors of said County asking that certain lands above described be incorporated into a drainage district and that a system of drains be constructed for the relief of said districts.

You are further notified that on June 6 1919, Elmer Merten was appointed engineer to make a survey, plat, profile and field notes of said proposed district, and that on Sept. 2, 1919, said engineer filed his report recommending the establishment of said district and the construction of system of drains for the relief of said district and that said report is now on file in the office of the County Auditor of said County and may be amended at any time before final action is taken thereon by the Board of Supervisors, and that Oct. 23, 1919 has been fixed as the time of hearing thereon. All objections and claims for damages must be filed in the office of the County Auditor not less than five days before said hearing.

Witness my hand and official seal at Garner, Iowa, this 20 day of Sept. 1919.

Chris Jacobs,
Auditor of Hancock County.

HOTEL CHANGES HANDS

Oscar Franzen has disposed of his interest in the hotel business to Wm. Howard whot akes possession October first. The Franzens will move to Mason City in the near future, but we do not know what line of business they will pursue. Mr. Howard is the gentleman who works in the Wiles Garage. He plans to make numerous changes in the hotel which will better it for the trade.

EDITORS HOLD POW-WOW AT ALGONA

Last Saturday Ye Editor journeyed over to Algona to attend the Second District Editorial Conference of the Iowa Press Association. Pen pushers from eight counties were present to cuss and discuss all angles of the newspaper game. The commercial club of Algona gave us a great welcome and a fine banquet also. In the morning a business meeting was held at the court rooms and interesting material was furnished by Geo. Caswell, field secretary of the Iowa Press Association. Then came the banquet, and say, you ought to see a hungry bunch of editors eat, it's a sight well worth seeing. Then after the banquet we enjoyed (and some we did not enjoy so much) speeches by various editors, preachers and statesmen of this district. After all this we hied ourselves to the court house again and threshed out a lot of hard problems. It was a day well spent and we enjoyed it immensely. Bro. Letch, of Goodell Globe, Bro. Clark of Garner Signal, and Bro. R. Roberts of Britt News-Tribune, were the editors of this county who were present.

WHAT ABOUT A BAND FOR NEXT YEAR?

We all must admit that Klemme must have a band next year if we have to pull teeth to get one. There are enough players of band instruments in and around Klemme to make up a large band. Why not send your name to the Times if you want to be in the Klemme band next year? By sending in your name we can work out a list. No matter whether you can play or not, all we want to know is who will want to join a band. If we can get enough to join now we can practice thru the winter and by next Summer Klemme should have a good band. You can't learn any younger, if you are only knee high to a grasshopper you can learn to play an instrument. Besides we have talked to some of the old band men and they have promised they would help beginners by giving them free instruction. We will also do the same and will do all we can to get a band started. Now make a noise like a circus band and send in your name to this office and let us know what you playo r would like to play and in this way we can get together later for a band meeting. Make a noise!

SCHOOL CHILDREN ENJOY PICNIC

Tuesday afternoon at two-thirty o'clock was declared a holiday by the teacher, Miss Warnock and her pupils of the seventh and eighth grade. It was to be a big day for them and in order to make the best of it they decided that a picnic in the woods would be the only thing, so with heavy laden baskets of good things to eat they journeyed to woods and river near Lew Avery's farm southeast of town. Frank Gruetzmacher, Chas. Busch, and E. G. Ell furnished cars to take the happy-go-lucky boys and girls to the scene of the picnic. All school regulations and orders were voted off for the day and the children enjoyed themselves in various kinds of games and exploring about the woods. When thes un began to settle toward the west they were beginning to get tired and extremely hungry. Then the big part of the day—the picnic supper, and say that was immense and everybody just simply chucked the good things down, even Frank Gruetzmacher and Charles Busch and up to the time of this writing they haven't fully recovered and are still nursing a sore solar plexis. After the "eats" the children piled into the cars and started home, decorating the scenery on the way back with plenty of shouting and singing. The day will long be remembered and they are looking forward to another such day.

Iowa Day October 24th

Iowa Day, October 24th, will be observed in practically all of the public schools of the State and also in the private and parochial schools, according to plans being worked out by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Mr. P. E. McClenahan. Superintendent McClenahan is communicating with all of the superintendents of schools throughout the state, concerning the general scheme of Iowa Day celebration and suggesting a program which is quite comprehensive.

It is proposed that five or six pupils in each of the schools be designated to learn a short story, each about a different phase of Iowa's present day activities. If the scholar is particularly apt, he or she will learn the story by memory and recite it,—otherwise it will be read.

The five subjects selected treat with history and government, agriculture and animal husbandry, manufacturing, merchandising, civic progress.

Lists of Iowa-made goods are being distributed to all of the schools, and an effort will be made to have some sort of contest, giving the prize to the scholar who can enumerate the largest unmber of Iowa-made products or who can stand the best examination on this subject.

The basic idea of Greater Iowa Week is not to build a wall round Iowa, that will keep Iowa-made goods at home or keep competitive goods out of Iowa,—it is merely an effort to acquaint the people of the state with the manufacturing resources and development of their state, and the creation of a pride in industrial progress, that will, in some measure, be commensurate with their pride in our progress in agriculture and animal husbandry.

Indications are that Iowa Day celebration will be a great success this year.

AMERICA'S LOSS IN WAR 322,182

Official Death List is Placed at 118,492 and Wounded at 205,690

WASHINGTON, D. C. Sept. 23.—The cost of the war to the United States in man power is now estimated officially as 116,492 dead and 205,590 wounded, a total of 322,182. These figures include losses to army and marine units on all fronts to Sept. 1. Killed in action totalled 35,585, or 11 per cent of the entire list; died of wounds, 14,742; died of disease, 58,073; died of accident and other causes 8,092. Under the head of "missing" the announcement records a zero with the notation "all corrected."

COW STAMPEDES CROWD

An amusing incident occurred at Leonard Bros. sale last Saturday afternoon when a western cow with a two-day old calf was put up for sale.

The cow sniffed her way around the circle and paused in front of Joe Olson to get her bearings. Joe wiggled his toe and the cow immediately went into action adn the way she cleared that pen wasn't slow. Never have we seen a hundred men climb a fence in more confusion.

The cow brought over $100. We understand the man who bought her has been bothered by hunters trespassing on his land and he is going to give her the run of his farm.—Renwick Times.

We have received a few old copies of the Klemme Times but we want more. Bring in the oldest copy of the Klemme Times you can find, look in the attic, look in the celalr, look in oldt runks and boxes and fish out an old copy. We will pay you $1 for one copy of the Times if it is the oldest one brought into our office. The next oldest gets 75c and the third gets 50c. Now get busy and find an old paper.

IT SURE IS THE TRUTH

The life of an editor, is in truth a bed of roses. If he criticizes he is called a knocker and if he doesn't he is branded a coward, and his paper is said to be a "kept" journal. He has to suit everybody, including his wife, his banker, his pastor and the boys he sees Saturday nights. He can do and say the right thing a million times without a word of appreciation, but if he blunders it takes a lifetime to live it down. Except for these little things it's a grand and glorious life. —Midwest Printer.

BITRO-PHOSPHATE IS GOOD FOR THIN NERVOUS PEOPLE

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well; if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin; go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less; chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

He Was Fortunate.

He recently returned from France and one of his arms is missing. He is very sensitive about any mention of that loss, particularly so since it doesn't interfere with his work. But two young men, not nearly so efficient as he, who are employed in the same office, insist on talking about his loss. The other day one of them began, "I'll tell you it is tough to lose an arm in a war for millionaires. Now—"

"Now," interrupted the young hero testily, "I want to tell you it's a lot better to be crippled in war than by nature."

And there was absolute silence in that office.

THE MEN IN CLASS A1

A sound, healthy man is never a back number. A man can be as vigorous and able at seventy as at twenty. Condition, not years, puts you in the discard. A system weakened by overwork and careless living brings old age prematurely. The bodily functions are impaired and unpleasant symptoms appear. The weak spot is generally the kidneys. Keep them clean and in proper working condition and you will generally find yourself in Class A. Take GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules periodically and your system will always be in working order. Your spirits will be enlivened, your muscles supple, your mind active, and your body capable of hard work.

Don't wait until you have been rejected. Commence to be a first-class man now. Go to your druggist at once. Get a trial box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. They are made of the pure, original, imported Haarlem Oil—the kind your great-grandfather used. Two capsules each day will keep you toned up and feeling fine. Money refunded if they do not help you. Remember to ask for the imported GOLD MEDAL Brand. In three sizes, sealed packages. —Adv.

A SUMMER COLD

A cold in the summer time, as everybody knows, is the hardest kind of a cold to get rid of. The best and quickest way is to go to bed and stay there if you can, with a bottle of "Boschee's Syrup" handy to insure a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning.

But if you can't stay in bed you must keep out of draughts, avoid sudden changes, eat sparingly of simple food and take occasional doses of Boschee's Syrup, which you can buy at any store where medicine is sold, a safe and efficient remedy, made in America for more than fifty years. Keep it handy.—Adv.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

Copyright, by A. C. McClurg & Co.

Foreword.

Anson Carlyle, aged twenty-three, the ninth in descent from Capt. Geoffry Carlyle of Glasgow, Scotland, was among the heroic Canadian dead at Vimy ridge. Unmarried, and the last of his line, what few treasures he possessed fell into alien hands. Among these was a manuscript, apparently written in the year 1687, and which, through nine generations, had been carefully preserved, yet never made public. The paper was yellowed and discolored by years; occasionally a page was missing, and the writing itself had become almost indecipherable. Much indeed had to be traced by use of a microscope. The writer was evidently a man of some education, and clear thought, but exceeding diffuse, in accordance with the style of his time, and possessing small conception of literary form. It editing this manuscript for modern readers I have therefore been compelled to practically rewrite it entirely, retaining merely the essential facts, with an occasional descriptive passage, although I have conscientiously followed the original development of the tale. In this reconstruction much quaintness of language as well as appeal to probability, may have been lost, and for this my only excuse is the necessity of thus making the story readable. I have no doubt as to its essential truth, nor do I question the purpose which dominated this rover of the sea in his effort to record the adventures of his younger life. As a picture of those days of blood and courage, as well as a story of love and devotion, I deem it worthy preservation, regretting only the impossibility of now presenting it in print exactly as written by Geoffry Carlyle.

CHAPTER I.

Sent Into Servitude.

Knowing this to be a narrative of unusual adventure, and one which may never even be read until long after I have departed from this world, when it will be difficult to convince readers that such times as are herein depicted could ever have been reality, I shall endeavor to narrate each incident in the simplest manner possible. My only purpose is truth, and my only witness history. Yet, even now lately as this all happened, it is more like the recollections of a dream, dimly remembered at awakening, and, perchance, might remain so, but for the scars upon my body, and the constant memory of a woman's face. These alone combine to bring back in vividness those days that were—days of youth and daring, of desperate, lawless war, of wide ocean peril, and the outstretched hands of love. So that here, where I am writing it all down, here amid quietness and peace, and forgetful of the past, I wander again along a deserted shore, and sail among those isles of a southern sea, the home for many a century of crime and unspeakable cruelty. I will recall the truth, and can do no more.

It was still early morning when we were brought out under heavy guard and marched somberly forth through the opened gates of the jail. Ahead we could perceive a forest of masts, and what seemed like a vast crowd of waiting people. That we had been sentenced to exile, to prolonged servitude in some foreign land, was all that any of us knew.

The guards prodded the crowd savagely with the butts of their musketoons, thus making scant room for us to shuffle through, out upon the far end of the wharf, where we were finally halted abreast of a lumping brig, apparently nearly ready for sea. There were more than forty of us. I gained glimpse of the hooker's name—Romping Betsy of Plymouth. A moment later a sailor passed along the edge of the dock and instantly a whisper passed swiftly from man to man. "It's Virginia, mate; we're bound for Virginia."

The eyes of a prisoner met mine. "Virginia, hey?" he grunted. "Ye're a sailorman, ain't ye, mate? Well, then, whar is this yere Virginia?"

"That's all right, mates," I returned cheerily. "We'll fall into the hands of Englishmen out there. In America, where all the tobacco comes from. I've been there twice—and to a land beyond they call Maryland. 'Tis a country not so unlike England."

"Yer better stow that, my man," growled someone above me, and I looked up into the stern eyes of the captain of the guard, "or it may be the 'cat' for ye. So ye've been ter the Virginia plantation, hev ye? Then ye must be Master Carlyle, I take it. I heerd tell about ye at the trial, but supposed ye ter be an older man."

"I am twenty-six."

"Ye don't look even thet. Ay, they're ready for ye now. Fall in there—all of yer. Step along, yer d——d rebel scum."

I stared aft at the poop deck. There were a number of persons gathered along the low rail, probably all passengers. Then my eyes encountered a strange group foregathered beside the lee rail.

There were four in the little party, one of them a negress. Another was clearly enough a colonial proprietor, a heavily built man of middle age, purple faced. I passed these by with a glance, my attention concentrating upon the other two—a middle-aged man and a young woman standing side by side. The former was a dashing looking blade, of not more than forty, attired in blue slashed coat, ornamented with gilt buttons, and bedecked at collar and cuffs with a profusion of lace. A saffron colored waistcoat failed to conceal his richly beruffled shirt, and the hilt of a rapier was rather prominently displayed. Such dandies were frequently enough seen, but it was this man's face which made marked contrast with his gay attire. He was dark and hook-nosed, apparently of foreign birth, with black mustache tightly clipped, so as to reveal the thin firmness of his lips, and even at that distance I could perceive the lines of a scar across his chin. Altogether there was an audacity to his face, a daring, convincing me he was no mere lady's knight but one to whom fighting was a trade. He was pointing us out to his companion, apparently joking over our appearance, in an endeavor to amuse. Seemingly she gave small heed to his words, for although her eyes followed where he pointed they never once lighted with a smile, nor did I see her answer his sallies. She was scarcely more than a girl, dressed very simply in some clinging dark stuff, with a loose gray cloak draping her shoulders and a small, neat bonnet of straw perched upon a mass of coiled hair. The face beneath was sweetly piquant, with dark eyes and rounded cheeks flushed with health. She stood, both hands clasping the rail, watching us intently. I somehow felt as though her eyes were upon me, and within their depths, even at that distance, I seemed to read a message of sympathy and kindness. The one lasting impression her face left on my memory was that of innocent girlhood, dignified by a womanly tenderness.

What were those two to each other? I could not guess, for they seemed from two utterly different worlds. Not brother and sister surely; and not lovers. The last was unthinkable. Instinctively I disliked the man, aware of an instant antagonism, realizing that he was evil; while his companion came to me as revealment of all that was true and worthy, in a degree I had never known before. From the instant I looked upon these two I felt convinced that, through some strange vagary of fate, we were destined to know more of each other; that our life lines were ordained to touch and become entangled, somewhere in that mystery of the western world to which I had been condemned.

What Were Those Two to Each Other?

Then the guards came to me, and, with my limbs freed of fetters, I was passed down the steep ladder into the semidarkness between decks, where we were to be confined. It proved a dismal, crowded hole in which we were quartered like so many cattle, the only ventilation and light furnished by the open hatch above. The ticket given me called by number for a certain berth, and I found this, throwing within the small bundle I bore. Almost immediately there was a sound of tramping feet on the deck above, and the creaking of blocks. Then a sudden movement of the hull told all were under way.

CHAPTER II.

The Prison Ship.

The greater portion of that voyage of 53 days I would blot entirely from memory if possible. I cannot hope to describe it in any detail—the foul smells, the discomfort, the ceaseless horror of food, the close companionship of men turned into mere animals by suffering and distress, the wearisome days, the black, sleepless nights, the poisonous air, and the brutality of guards. I can never forget these things, for they have scarred my soul.

The hatch above remained open, but carefully guarded night and day, while we were permitted on deck for air and exercise only in squads of ten, two hours out of every twenty-four. This alone served to break the dread monotony of the voyage. From our exercise on deck we generally returned below drenched to the skin, but glad to even pay that price for two hours of fresh air, and an opportunity to gaze about at sea and sky. We were herded well forward, a rope dividing us from the main deck, which space the passengers aft used as a promenade. There were only three women aboard, a fat dowager, the young lady I had noticed at embarkation, and her colored maid. I gained but one glimpse of the young lady in the first two weeks at sea, and then only as we were being ordered down to our quarters for the night. Just as I was approaching the hatch to descend our eyes met fairly, and I instantly knew she saw and recognized me. For a single second our glances clung, as though some mysterious influence held us to each other—then the angry guard struck me with the stock of his piece.

"What er ye standin' thar fer?" he demanded savagely. "Go on down—lively now."

I saw her clasping fingers convulsively grip the rail, and, even at that distance, marked a sudden flame of color in her cheeks. That was all her message to me, yet quite enough. Although we had never spoken, although our names were yet unknown, I was no criminal to her mind, no unrecognized prisoner beneath contempt, but a human being in whom she already felt a personal interest, and to whom she extended thought and sympathy. I continued entirely ignorant of the identity of the young woman. She remained in my memory, in my thoughts nameless, a dream rather than a reality. I did learn that the gay gallant was a wealthy Spaniard, supposedly of high birth, by name Sanchez, and at one time in the naval service, and likewise ascertained that the rotund planter was a certain Roger Fairfax of Saint Mary's in Maryland, homeward bound after a successful sale of his tobacco crop in London. It was during his visit to the great city that he had met Sanchez, and his praise of the colonies had induced the latter to essay a voyage in his company to America. But strange enough no one so much as mentioned the girl in connection with either man.

CHAPTER III.

Dorothy Fairfax.

We were not far from two hundred miles east of the Capes. I had been closely confined to my bunk for two days with illness, but now, somewhat stronger, had been ordered to deck by the surgeon. The last batch of prisoners, after their short hour of recreation, had been returned to the quarters below, but I was permitted to remain alone undisturbed.

I was still standing there absorbed when a voice, soft-spoken and feminine, broke the silence.

"May I speak with you?"

I turned instantly, so thoroughly surprised my voice faltered as I gazed into the upturned face of the questioner. She stood directly beside me, her head uncovered. Instantly my cap was off, and I was bowing courteously.

"Most certainly," with a quick side glance toward the guard, "but I am a prisoner."

"Of course I know that," in smiling confidence. "Only you see I am rather a privileged character on board. Perhaps you may be punished if you talk with me—is that what you meant?"

"I am more than willing to assume the risk. I have made few friends forward, and am even bold enough to say that I have longed for a word with you ever since I first saw you aboard."

Captain Carlyle finds a friend but at the same time he finds that he has an enemy on board the Romping Betty. His enemy warns that he will get revenge, but why? Geoffry racks his brain in vain for the answer.

OLD-TIME RULES OF CIVILITY

Undoubtedly Were Taken Seriously in 1675, but Would Seem Somewhat Elementary Today.

There was published in 1675 a curious book called "The Rules of Civility," and one of the things impressed upon the reader is that "being in discourse with a man," 'tis no less than ridiculous to pull him by the buttons, to play with the bandstrings, belt or cloak, or to punch him now and then in the stomach; 'tis a pleasant sight, and well worthy of laughter to see him that is so punched, fall back, and retire, whilst the other, insensible of his absurdity, pursues and presses him into some corner, where he is at last glad to cry quarter before his comrade perceives he is in danger." Further, the reader is informed that "it argues neglect, and to under-value a man, to sleep when he is discoursing or reading; therefore good manners command it to be forbid; besides, something there may happen in the act that may offend, as snoring, sweating, gaping or dribbling."

Always the Viewpoint.

"You made me pay considerably more for this article than it is worth."

"Do you really think so?"

"I do. Don't you call that profiteering?"

"Not when I manage it. When I do anything like that I refer to it as 'salesmanship.'"

Exactly.

WILD ANIMALS VISIT BANFF

Deer and Bears So Tame That They Are Everyday Sights in Canadian Village.

Although Banff is a hustling village during the summer, and is thronged with tourists, wild deer from the mountains are to be seen daily on the streets, and at night stately elk leap from the roads into the bushes to escape approaching automobiles. If a Banff cottager expects to eat his own "garden truck," he builds a deer-proof fence around his patch. The grounds of Brett hospital are open from the street, and the other night half a dozen deer made a raid upon the flower garden. Banff is the capital of Rocky Mountain park, and shooting game within the park limits is forbidden by law. The deer, being unmolested, have become very tame, and even a bear now and then pays a friendly visit to the village. Not long ago a bicylist, speeding down one of the side streets at night, hit a dark object, and turned a somersault or two before he hit the macadam. Sitting up, he looked around and discovered a bear hitting the trail for home as fast as four legs could carry him. Although tame and somewhat obtrusive, the deer, elk and bear do not relish too close an acquaintance with man, and have proved themselves to be not only picturesque but perfectly safe neighbors.—Canadian News Letter.

HOME TOWN HELPS

ERROR HOME BUILDERS MAKE

Too Many Seem to Forget That Individuality Is a Requisite for Attractiveness.

The house which is the real home, beautiful and yet intimate, whether its possessor be rich or poor, is hard to find.

Go among the dwellings of the rich, and you will find thousands of handsome places, architecturally correct, supplied with every convenience, and yet lacking something. Something which you are puzzled to put your finger on—the home note withal.

Cities of the country have numbers of handsome residences of the more expensive type. Some of them are admired academically for their correctness and their magnificence; they appeal to one's sense of the beautiful and to one's civic pride, but of the thousands of these houses there are only a few that bear the aspect of real homes to the average man.

Wander among the houses of the poor and you will find row on row of dingy habitations, crowded one on top of the other, perhaps painted a gray blue—and sadly in need of another coat. Not a tree, a shrub nor a flower near by. Houses and grounds so much alike that a man might go into any one of a dozen of them for his own, in a fit of absent-mindedness.

Yet the owner could be no more possessed of money than he is and still own a much more attractive place. His initial mistake was in picking a house of the same pattern as all the others in the street. He could have picked one, not more expensive but less common, if he had tried harder. One, too, that had an inviting coat of paint on it. Then he should have proceeded to develop a front lawn and garden, to plant some trees, if needful, as well as some vines to decorate the house and redeem it from the commonplace.

MODEL VILLAGES IN ENGLAND

Country Is Recognizing Necessity of Improvement in General Housing Conditions.

It is said that the average English middle-class home is so ugly it ought to be just burned down, and Englishmen are just beginning to realize this fact, with the result that all over England plans are afoot to build model villages and model suburbs.

Brighton is the first to lead the way. It is building a super-suburb, consisting of 900 houses, so planned that there will be not more than ten to the acre. This will allow each house a garden of 16 rods—or 640 feet.

The suburb is to be built in an orchard setting. Fruit trees will line the roadway. There will be no walls, the gardens being divided by hedges. There will be recreation grounds, allotments and common playgrounds. The houses are to be built on modern and artistic lines, the internal arrangements being the last word in house comfort.

The only fly in the ointment is the question of the small boys. Will they be model enough to inhabit a model suburb, or will they help themselves to the fruit that abounds in the public thoroughfares? It is hoped they will become imbued with a great respect for communal rights and thus grow up first-class democrats.

Fruits on Highways.

We have much to learn from other countries, and the general plea for the fruit tree along highways is not so impracticable as many seem to think. Japanese cherries are famous the world over for the beauty of their flowers and foliage. Community spraying would at once change the possibilities of fruit raising and lessen the number of decayed orchards of which we hear. Many a township might easily become famous through the communal fruit it might raise along its roadside and induce its farmers to take up as well, sending to the markets only the perfect fruit and preserving the rest in marketable form. A farmer, observing a dozen fine Baldwin apple trees on the roadside by his place bearing a full harvest of perfect fruit, will not long resist the temptation to try some over his fence.

For Town Improvement.

New England has an organization known as the clean-up campaign committee whose work apparently covers all the six states. It offers as a prize each year a loving cup to the town or city showing the best results in the way of neatness and beautification. The award has just been made for this year and the cup has gone to Malden, Mass., for the third time. Other towns which have received it are Manchester, N. H., which won the prize twice; and Hartford, Conn.

Gardens in Cities.

It is the city dweller who needs the garden most. Anyone who has a back yard and refuses to turn it into a garden has a burden on his soul! Besides yourself many people look down into a city back yard—they can't be shut off like a country estate—it must speak of ugliness and neglect and discouragement to many—or it may sing at morning, noon and night a fresh hymn of hope and beauty, of freshness and new beginnings.—Exchange.

ROBIN'S LANE

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

Hardy had been home a week, and still he felt like a stranger in Taftville. Not but what everybody welcomed him, but they did it in an easy-going sort of way that left his own enthusiasm cold after ten years of anticipation.

He had been twenty-four when he had started West. There had been two incentives, his father's demand that he throw up engineering and go into the store, and Winifred's refusal to marry him.

His yearning to make good and show them the sort of man he really was had been the spur all the years he had worked and climbed. Winifred had told him she liked boys who were "steady." That meant the hardware store, and "Irving & Son" on the long black and gold sign over the door. He had laughed bitterly, out in the lonely Arizona nights, before he had struck his right pace, and yet there had been the sting of homesickness in it too. With all the joy of adventure and experience, the little mill town on the Yantic river back in Connecticut was home to him, and Winifred was the only girl who could bring a thrill to his heart, just little Winifred Blake with her big blue eyes that seemed to challenge a fellow to do the very best that was in him.

He had seen her only at a distance since his return—once in church, twice down along Main street when she was waiting for the car. Then he met her on the old hill road coming from the reservoir Saturday afternoon, her hands filled with violets.

"You know they always did grow longer and larger up there, it seemed," she said, as he waited beside her in the road.

"I was going up after some," Hardy told her awkwardly.

"Take the short cut through Robin's lane, why don't you? Do you remember the way?"

And Hardy deliberately prevaricated. No, he was sorry. He had absolutely forgotten the short cut. Wouldn't she just turn back and show it to him? Winifred hesitated, laughed a little and looked as if she didn't believe him.

"We always went that way after violets, Hardy," she reminded him. "It's just the little lane below the big woodlot. You know it so well."

But Hardy shook his head, looking down into her eyes until she ignored him, and watched the fringe of pines and red oaks ahead of them, with slender white birches lifting tremulous new leaves in the sunlight.

He had made up his mind all the way home that he would ask her again. She had only been seventeen then. Now she was twenty-seven, and it seemed as if the years had only made her sweeter and more desirable. There was something indefinable about her now, something that evaded him. She seemed sure of herself poised and tranquil eyed, more tender, too, in her way. It must have been lonely for her there in the little mill town.

"See the island over yonder," Winifred said suddenly. They had come to the crest of the hill overlooking the reservoir. It had always looked like a miniature western mountain scene, the broad lake with its rocky pine-edged shores, and rocky islands here and there. "What splendid times we used to have up here, Hardy."

"I've never forgotten one of them," he said slowly. "When you're a thousand miles and more away from home, only memories seem real."

"I know," she rejoined quickly. "All the time I was in Japan I felt that way, and when we were sent down to the Philippines it was even worse, for there I would meet somebody from home once in awhile, and everything they said made me want to take the next boat back."

"You've been away?" he exclaimed.

"With Aunt Dora and Uncle Phil," she nodded her head. "There were so many of us at home, and when he was sent to the East by his company, he wanted a secretary, so I coaxed him to take me. Then he died in Tokio, and because I understood the trade situation pretty well, they made me sales manager instead of trying to break in a new man. I've only been home about two months. They want me to try South America this time, but I'm tired of it. I suppose women are just tabby cats after all. You work and make believe you like it, and all the time you're thinking of some cozy corner to curl up in and rest. I'm going to buy the Prendergast place and fix up the garden beautifully, and have five cats."

Hardy laughed, laughed until she turned to look at him almost resentfully. He was so tall and broad shouldered, so resolute and sure of himself, just as she remembered him. One reason why she had gone away was to show him that girls didn't have to stay at home.

"You can't buy it," he told her teasingly, "because I knew you loved it and the deed is waiting for me now. We could make it the homestead, Winnie. I'll have to go West now and then, and I want you to come along. I want to show you all the places where I've thought of you and told myself to keep up my nerve and go back after you and make you say yes."

Winifred looked up at him over the violets held to her lips.

"I always wondered why you stayed so long," she said. "I thought you were just a quitter, Hardy, when you didn't take me with you before."

Needed Polishing.

She had been married just five years and was rather discontented because her husband was not so attentive as he had been in the early days of their marriage. To her mother and high school brother she was telling her troubles. "He neglects me all the time," she complained. "I'm just an old shoe—that's all."

The mother sympathized with her, but the brother openly voiced his opinion in: "Well, don't you know, sis, that a great many old shoes are often made more valuable to their owners by a little polishing?" He looked meaningly at her frowsy appearance. "They are prouder of them, too, then." —Indianapolis Star.

Mr. Reuter Was Almost Helpless From Kidney Trouble, But Doan's Made Him Well.

"I was in terrible shape from kidney trouble," says D. Reuter, North St., West Chicago, Ill. "I couldn't stoop because of the awful pains in my back and the steady, dull misery almost drove me frantic. I had to be helped out of bed mornings, the pains across my kidneys were so bad and nobody knows the agony I went through. I couldn't do anything and was almost helpless; it seemed I would never get well. At times everything in front of me grew dark and I couldn't see for several minutes. I perspired profusely and I was thirsty all the time. The urine passed far too often and burned like scalding water. The passages were scanty and I had no control over them.

Mr. Reuter

"For two years I suffered, trying medicine after medicine without relief. I was just about discouraged and didn't think I would ever be able to work again. Hearing about Doan's Kidney Pills I used them and four boxes cured me. My kidneys became normal, my back got well and strong and all the other troubles disappeared."

Ira P. Adams died at his home in Manchester at the age of 87 years. He was one of the first merchants in Manchester and the pioneer in the hardware trade. He came from New York, and arrived on June 7, 1857. With Ira U. Butler he opened a hardware store and in 1865 he formed a partnership with his brother, Lucius W., and until only a few years ago the firm of Adams Brothers was a leading hardware firm.

Development of the Boy Scout movement in Burlington is being seriously retarded, in the opinion of Scout Executive H. E. Winn, through his failure to secure men to take charge of the troops as scout masters. He states that he could form at least ten additional troops in Burlington if men would volunteer to assume charge of them. There are now 375 boy scouts in Burlington, and he believes the number could be increased to nearly 700 if he was given assistance in handling the troops.

The baby of Mr. and Mrs. John Vernon, who lives south of Anamosa was nearly burned to death, and its mother was severely burned, when the explosion of an oil stove caused the home and barn to burn to the ground. Mrs. Vernon and the child were alone in the house when the explosion happened.

The new periodical will be a monthly for the members of the Boone County Farm Bureau association, who will be the publishers of the paper. The editor of the new enterprise will be Orie W. Beeler, county agent.

Federal officers are combing Fort Dodge in search of some men who have solved the H. C. of L. problem by going into the business of manufacturing German silver dollars and raising federal bank notes. All of the banks in the city have been notified to be on the lookout for "phoney" money. A considerable sum already has been passed in Fort Dodge.

Mrs. August Foster, of Remsen, an old resident of Plymouth county, died at the age of 89 years. A coincidence was remarked that at the hour of her death, 2:40 o'clock in the afternoon, the clock which she had donated to St. Mary's church many years ago, stopped at the exact moment of her death. It was allowed to remain stopped until after her funeral.

An indictment has been returned by the grand jury of Benton county against William Peterson for alleged malicious destruction of public property. This charge is based on testimony given that connects him with the burning of the Rogerville school house some time ago, in a search for honey. It is claimed that he is one of the party who were speeding in a car and hit a load of hogs near Garrison, killing some.

The worm will turn. So, also, will the germ, it is borne out in two law suits which have been instituted in the district court at Marion, in which bacteria is the main point of contention. Guy M. Faith is suing Charles E. Green et al. for $1,000 damages, which Faith alleges is due for injuries his family and his stock received when they drank of contaminated water which, he asserts, is in a well on the Green farm. Faith is the renter of the farm.

It might be due to the war spirit that has not yet died, the high cost of living as the general unrest of the country following the war. At any rate when County Clerk S. J. Beckman, of Burlington, compiled the list of suits filed for hearing in the September term of the district court he found out of 102 suits filed a total of 51 were petitions asking freedom on the part of as many misfits in the marital game.

A number of Page county's citizens living in the vicinity of Yorktown are not at all pleased with the German school and German church continuing to use the German language. A public gathering was held at the opera house, at which there were nearly a thousand present, and a big representation of the A. E. F. boys. The matter was gone over very carefully and the German ministers and teachers, with one of their representatives from abroad were brought in and plainly told the sentiment of the community regarding the use of the German language in school and church. The German sign must come off the church and the use of the German language in school and church must stop.

Thieves raided the Sloan mercantile store and the hardware store of J. W. Murphy, of Sloan, recently. Several hundred dollars' worth of merchandise was secured by the robbers, who left no clue to their identity.

Warrants for arrest signed by Mayor R. S. McNutt of Muscatine, were served on President B. J. Denman and General Manager J. G. Huntoon of the Tri-City Railway company for failure to operate the Muscatine street cars which have been tied up since Aug. 1.

WILSON INVADES HOUSE OF FOES

CARRIES HIS BATTLE FOR LEAGUE OF NATIONS INTO HOME OF HIS ENEMIES.

GIVES COST OF GREAT WAR

Informs Them of Lives and Treasure Poured Out to Save Civilization.

(By Mt. Clemens News Bureau)

Aboard President Wilson's Special train—Carrying his war against those who oppose the adoption by the United States of the peace treaty and the covenant of the League of Nations into their households, President Wilson last week invaded California.

And there, where the question on which league opponents have hammered the hardest, that of Shan Tung—is of most interest, the president found the same enthusiasm among the people for peace and for insurance against future wars. The people want the long controversy ended. They want this country to be able to again turn its undivided attention to social, economic and industrial development. Their leaders may not feel this way, but judging from the expressions which met the president on every side. The leaders have overstepped the limits of the peoples patience in their stubborn determination to force a change in the great document.

Must Take This League.

"We must take this League of Nations," said the president, "for there is no way in which another can be obtained without compelling reconsideration by the powers. And it would sit very ill upon my stomach to take it back to Germany for consideration."

"All over the world people are looking to us with confidence our rivals along with the weaker nations. I pray God that the gentlemen who are delaying this thing may presently see it in a different light."

Germany, the president declared, is taking new courage from our delay in ratifying the treaty and her newspapers and public men were again becoming arrogantly out-spoken.

Deeply impressive were the figures of the cost of the late war, in lives and dollars. It was the first time that the official statistics have been made public and the tremendous totals shocked the president's audiences.

Shows Cost of World War.

"The war," said President Wilson, cost Great Britain and and her Domains $38,000,000,000; France $26,000,000,000; the United States $22,000,000,000; Russia $18,000,000,000; Italy $13,000,000,000 and a total, including the expenditures of Japan, Belgium and other small countries, of $123,000,000,000.

"It cost the Central Powers as follows: Germany $39,000,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $21,000,000,000; Turkey and Bulgaria $3,000,000,000.

"The United States," the president said, "spent one million dollars an hour night and day for two years in its struggle to save civilization. All this, however, fades into insignificance when the deaths by battle are considered," declared the president. Russia gave 1,700,000 men; Germany 1,600,000; France 1,380,000; Great Britain 900,000; Italy 364,000; the United States 50,300. In all, almost 7,500,000 men perished in the great struggle, or 1,500,000 more men than died in all of the wars of the previous 100 years.

Should Remember Recent Horrors.

"These are terrible facts, and we ought never to forget them. We went into this war to do a thing that was fundamental for the world and what I have come out on this journey for is to determine whether the country has forgotten or not. I have found out. The country has not forgotten and it will never permit any who stands in the way of the fulfillment of our great pledges, ever to forget the sorrowful day he made the attempt."

Arbitration and discussion, the president pointed out, must replace force of arms in the settlement of world controversies. Constantly he dwells upon the fact that all the nations in the League agree to do one of two things, first to submit their differences to arbitration, in which case they agree to abide by the decision rendered, or, if unwilling to arbitrate, to have their case discussed by the Council of the League, in which case six months is granted for discussion. Three months must elapse following the result of this last step in arbitration before the nation concerned can declare war.

Holds Out Hope for Ireland.

The president took advantage of questions propounded by the San Francisco Labor Council to give the inference that he believes Ireland can bring her case before the League of Nations for settlement when the League is actually in existence.

Shan Tung, he declared, will be returned to China. Japan, he said, had given her solemn pledge to that effect. And with the League of Nations in force, said the president, we can, if occasion arises, stand forth and say: "This shall be done."

Keep Calm.

Listen to controversies, but do not interfere in them. The Lord beware thee of vehemence and heat, if it be in minutest expressions even. Passion is out of place in any discussion and more than ever in a right cause, for it befogs and befuddles it.—Gogol.

Olives Valuable Food.

So far as value of heat unit is concerned, pound for pound, ripe olives contain almost as much food value as bread, and in the case of very large olives the value may be increases to approximately the same as that of bread.

European Literature.

It was not until the European mind cast away forever the fetters of Renaissance traditions that Shelley and Wordsworth became possible in England, that Goethe and Heine were possible in Germany, or Victor Hugo and Alfred de Musset in France.

Alarm Clock vs. Twins.

Dayton Airless Tires

Cannot Puncture or Blow-Out

Three items you must figure for this winter.

1st.—Dayton Airless tires cannot PUNCTURE or BLOW OUT. Absolutely trouble proof. Cannot rim cut and will take you Anyplace through ice, snow, glass, nails, over roughest of roads and will wear down to shreds

2nd.—Dayton Airless tires are easy riding. They will not jar your car like a pneumatic nor d-r-a-g like a loose pneumatic. The "pressure" is always "right" in these tires. We have positive proof they will not injure the car in the least.

3rd.—Dayton Airless Tires are most economical. Compare the cost of tires on a Ford. You must carry four tires, two sizes, also two extra tires both sizes. You must buy six tires and six innertubes. The average price of six pneumatic tires is more than the cost of a complete set of Dayton Airless Tires, and remember you don't need to carry extras with Dayton Airless on your wheel. Just think what that means.

Absolutely Guaranteed for 8,000 miles. Average run of these tires are 20,000 and 25,000 Miles. We can point you to first set of Dayton Airless Tires in this county, run 5 years at about 22,000 miles with no trouble and still going.

PREPARE NOW FOR YOUR WINTER'S TIRE TROUBLES. Phone or write for demonstration.

Soldiers.

When sovereigns began to hire soldiers, their funds were derived by commutation of the ancient feudal aids; by conversion of the spoils of war; by additional direct taxation. The soldier's interest in his trade was kept up by pay received from his sovereign, by loot, by the love of adventure.

HYPNOTISM CURES RELIGIOUS MANIA

Hysterical Young Woman Saved From Insane Asylum by Psychic Experiment.

IS TRANSFERRED TO ANOTHER

Young Artist Who Offers Self for Experiment Is Later Relieved of Transferred Malady by Means of Hypnotism.

Paris.—A strange cure, of a psychic nature, has just been achieved before a number of doctors and a few experimenters along the lines of psychiatry.

The patient was a young woman of hysterical tendency, who for seven years had been possessed with an anti-religious mania. During this time the sight of a priest, the act of passing near a church, the pronunciation of a religious formula all have brought on either attacks of violence or spells of dumbness. The association of ideas which precipitate these crises were of the most fantastic kind—a piece of white paper suggested the host, romaine salad turned her mind toward the Roman church, a glass of chartreuse the brotherhood of Carthusian monks. At these suggestions she would tremble and faint. To nourish a patient under these conditions daily became more and more of a problem.

Takes Extreme Measures.

In Paris last autumn the doctors whom her husband consulted advised him to incarcerate her. Deciding to try everything else before resorting to this extreme measure, her husband, on the advce of an eminent chemist, finally put her under the treatment of a well-known specialist in psycotherapy, M. Mangin. Six months of treatment, consisting in psychic re-education, either in a state of waking or by superficial hypnosis, gave only results of short duration. The Easter festivities exasperated the patient to the point of frenzy. This decided Mr. Mangin to go to extreme measures. He began a tireless search for a subject suitable for the experiment of a transference of the malady, with all its anguish and strange manifestations. This was a difficult task, for the subject must be of such a delicate and perfect suggestibility as to be able later to be freed in turn from these same miseries.

Mme. Georgette Abel, a charming young artist, offered herself for this delicate experiment with as much charity as disinterestedness. On being put to sleep the subject's hand was placed in the hand of the afflicted woman. In a few moments the subject underwent an indescribable transformation. She was seized with agonizing convulsions. The patient, however, grasped the hand of the doctor, declaring with emotion that she was "liberated."

Malady Is Transferred.

On the order of M. Mangin, the latter uttered a stream of words touching the church, words which for seven years she had refused to utter under all kinds of compulsion. In the meanwhile, the young artist threw herself on the floor and attempted to beat her head against the wall, crying out in the same manner in which the patient was wont to do. The latter, passing from words to acts, touched a holy medal, handled a crucifix and made a short prayer, all this quietly and without any hesitation, while the subject moaned and threw herself about more and more.

Being assured of the complete "liberation" of the former sufferer, M. Mangin let the subject sleep while he made suggestions of a soothing nature to her. Then he awakened her. Both women were in a perfectly tranquil state. Since this time the young wife goes every day to church. She had a long conversation with a friend of the writer who says that not a trace of her former malady was visible. It is two weeks since the cure was wrought and it has been perfectly maintained. As for Mme. Abel, she is happier and healthier than ever.

M. Mangin does not pretend to know by what force he has accomplished this marvelous cure. He does not attempt to interpret the facts, he only inquires into them carefully and impartially, which is a great deal.

One Legged Parrot Is Never Peg Leg Polly

Cleveland, O.—"Come on, Polly, one-two-three-jump. One-two-three-jump! One-two-three-jump!"

It is Dr. F. W. Shaffer, 7612 Carnegie avenue, S. E., teaching a parrot to navigate on one leg. The other leg was amputated after the bird caught its foot in the wire of the cage and twisted the bone into a compound fracture.

Polly squawks as he tries to walk, but he is progressing nicely, thank you, and his physician predicts 100 per cent navigation within the week.

In his practice Doctor Shaffer has recovered combs, nails, hatpins, button hooks, and—whisper! a diamond necklace from the inwards of household pets.

"But Polly probably is the most interesting patient I've ever had," the doctor added.

SCOUT PLANES TO PATROL THE AIR

Treasury Department Has Plan to Defeat Activities of Modern Smugglers.

CUSTOMS REVENUE MENACED

Rum-Running and Smuggling on Large Scale by Airplane and Submarine Looked for in Near Future by Revenue Chief.

Washington.—Smuggling and rum-running on a large scale by airplane and submarine is looked for in the very near future by Daniel C. Roper, commissioner of internal revenue, and by other government officials unless preparations are made in advance to defeat the twentieth century smugglers.

The attention of the treasury department was particularly directed to this new danger of employing modern methods in smuggling by the accidental capture of an airplane that came across the Canadian border into northern New York with several cases of contraband liquor. It was entirely owing to an accident, however, that this capture was made, and the officials of the government have no doubt that large quantities of contraband liquor have reached this country already over the same air route.

Planes to Patrol Air.

There is reason to believe that some venturesome pioneers of this new mode of smuggling through the air have already landed several thousands of dollars' worth of semiprecious stones from the topaz mines in Mexico, somewhere in the interior of the United States.

At any rate, the menace to the national revenues has become so immediate that Secretary Glass has decided that he will ask congress for transfer of 600 airplanes and hydro-airplanes from the army and navy to his department and funds enough to create an effective air patrol.

To Bilk Customs Revenue.

Later on he will ask also for the transfer from the navy of a large fleet of Eagles which were specially designed for chasing submarines, in order to protect the seacoasts and estuaries from the danger of smuggling by submarines.

Equipped with these two modern craft for navigating the sea and air, the secretary of the treasury believes that he will be able to interrupt any illicit commerce designed to defeat the national prohibition laws or to bilk the government out of customs revenues.

Fixed His Own Sentence.

Visalia, Cal.—Ernest Stevenson, who was arrested on a charge of driving his automobile while in a state of intoxication, fixed his own penalty when he appeared in Judge Clack's court. "What do you think I ought to do with you?" inquired the court. "I think six months in jail would be about right," replied Stevenson. "Well, then," rejoined the judge, "let that be the penalty." Stevenson was taken to jail.

SAILORS SWEAR LESS

As Term in Navy Extends Profanity Decreases.

Boys New in the Service Are Most Profane, Noted Chaplain Declares.

Santa Barbara, Cal.—The profanity of the average sailor—if he is profane at all—decreases as his service in the American navy lengthens, according to Capt. E. W. Scott, chaplain of the new Pacific fleet.

"The boys who have just entered the service are usually the most profane," according to Captain Scott, who has been in the naval service 15 years, and who is, besides Capt. M. C. Gleeson of the Atlantic fleet, the only fleet chaplain in the American navy.

"The boys try to make the older men already in the navy believe they, too, are old and experienced, and they think the use of profanity the surest way to accomplish the result."

The work of the chaplains in the navy, Captain Scott said, is along a "big brother" line. They deliver talks at the Sunday services aboard ship that might not be recognized by regular church attendants ashore. They speak to the men in the service in what they know are the terms of the men in the service. They try to solve their problems and to direct them to clean thinking, clean speaking and clean living.

They urge them to industry and to take advantage of the advantages offered for promotion.

Until three or four years ago, according to Captain Scott, there were only 24 chaplains in the navy. He was one of them, having some years before left the Yale divinity school for a naval post. In 1914, a ruling provided for a chaplain to every 1,200 men, so the number grew to 180 during the war. It is expected the new Pacific fleet when complete will have 20 or 25 chaplains of various religious denominations.

Captain Scott formerly was stationed at San Francisco.

Wow! Eggs 80 Years Old.

Fayette City, Fla.—Eggs believed to be more than eighty years old were discovered by workmen who were making alterations in an old homestead here. The eggs were found in a nest between the rafters on the second floor. It is thought they were laid while the house was being constructed. They were blackened from the dust of years.

Like a Looking Glass.

Toledo, O.—A clerk in an automobile sales place sat at the window all day. He noticed every woman who passed seemed to stare at him. Flirting, thought he, as he patted his cowlick down and stared back. His wife passed. She stared, too. Your window makes a perfect looking-glass, she said when she entered the store.

REASON FOR ACTION

STEEL WORKERS TELL WHY STRIKE NOT PUT OFF.

EXPRESS SORROW TO WILSON

Informed Chief Executive That Delay Meant Surrender—Demands of Men Made Known.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The steel workers' national committee made public here a letter it sent to President Wilson, giving eleven reasons why it could not comply with his request to postpone the steel workers' strike until after the industrial conference at Washington, October 6.

"We regret that for the first time your call upon organized labor cannot be met with favorable response," the latter states.

"If delay were no more than delay, even at the cost of loss of membership in our organization we would urge the same to the fullest of our ability notwithstanding the men are firmly set for an immediate strike. But delay here means the surrender of all hope."

Among reasons given why the strike was called in addition to refusal to grant conferences with the men, are listed: Systematical persecution of men recalling "the days of Homestead;" denial of assembly and free speech without warrant of law; alleged killing of union workers by "hired detectives of the steel industry" and intimidation of all showing sympathy with men.

During the steel workers' conference here last week speeches were made against any postponement. It was declared that neither President Wilson nor others who favored a postponement were cognizant of the actual conditions surrounding iron and steel mills. It was claimed that workers were eager for the strike; that they were discriminated against for union activities, and that the organized workers would lose confidence in their leaders if they turned back and deserted the men at this time.

The twelve demands of the steel workers are:

Right of collective bargaining.

Reinstatement of men discharged for union activities.

An eight-hour day.

One day's rest in seven.

Abolition of the twenty-four-hour shift.

Increase in wages sufficient to guarantee American standard of living.

Standard scales of wages in all trades and classification of workers.

Double rate of pay for all overtime, holiday and Sunday work.

Check-off system of collecting union dues and assessments.

Principles of seniority to apply in maintenance, reduction and increase of working forces.

Abolition of company unions.

Abolition of physical examination of applicants for employment.

Congress Thanks Pershing.

Washington.—Standing in the chamber of the house of representatives, with the full membership of the senate and house about him and with galleries crowded with admirers, Gen. John J. Pershing received the formal thanks of congress for the services he and the officers and men he commanded in France rendered during the great war. To few Americans has it fallen to be thus honored; to few soldiers of any nation has been given to hear leaders chosen of the people speak such high praises of their services for that people as General Pershing heard.

The formal resolution of thanks was presented to the general by former Speaker Clark.

Prices on the Decline.

Washington.—Reports to the Department of Justice from twelve states indicate that there has been a decline of 10 to 15 per cent in food prices since the time the fair price committees began their work.

From four states have come reports on wholesale prices indicating a decline of 2 to 5 per cent. Virtually no reductions in clothing prices have been noted.

Plan a Dry World.

Chicago, Ill. — The anti-Saloon League of America at a conference of its officers and state superintendents here announced a plan to raise a fund of $50,000,000 in the next five years, for support of a campaign for world prohibition, law enforcement and education and Americanization.

Irish Paper Suppressed.

HURRICANE TAKES MANY LIVES

Cities Along Texas Gulf Coast Suffer Enormous Damage as Result of Terrific Storm.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—This city is slowly recovering from the terrific hurricane, accompanied by a ten-foot tidal wave, that devastated a greater portion of the business district, caused the death of at least 100, the injury of many score and rendered thousands homeless.

An appeal for assistance was sent broadcast throughout the United States by the relief committees here and at other cities in the path of the storm. Refugees have been housed in tents and many are in pitiful condition.

The property loss in five counties visited by the storm is expected to amount to around $20,000,000 and the total deaths is likely to reach over 400. Cities which suffered the most severe damage and which reported fatalities are Corpus Christi, Portland, Aransas Pass, Rockford, White Point, Rosita, Odom, Port Aransas and Taft. Many were killed in the rural disiricts. Bodies of the victims washed upon the shores of Nueces bay were so mutilated that identification was impossible, in some cases it not being possible to tell whether the person was white or black.

Rockport and Port Aransas suffered tremendous damage and, need of outside assistance was immediately called for. The appeals srated that more than 75 per cent of the dwellings at Rockport were completely wrecked and Port Aransas was practically destroyed. Hundreds were made homeless in these two cities. Outside of Corpus Christi Rockport and Port Aransas were the most severely damaged.

All visitors and sightseers were urged to remain away from Corpus Christi because of the scarcity of food.

Hundreds of head of stock were drowned and many thousand acres of cotton inundated and virtually ruined by the high water. The storm raged for three days and is believed to have been one of the most destructive in the history of coast cities.

Wreckage Carried Miles.

Houston, Tex.—The storm which struck the west coast near Corpus Christi September 14 carried buildings and wreckage twenty miles inland. Near Corpus Christi, where the railroad tracks were washed away, they were twisted into the shape of a corkscrew one-half to two miles in length. Huge bridge timbers, weighing thousands of pounds; bales of cotton, parts of houses and their furnishings, cattle, rabbits, etc., were thrown into the tops of trees by the waves at this point and left there as the water went down. Practically the entire country between Odem and Corpus Christi was a raging sea for over twenty-four hours.

Noisy Crowd at 'Frisco.

San Francisco, Cal.—President Wilson addressed an uproarious crowd of 12,000 here in the interest of the league of nations. There was much disorder in the hall during the address and the president spoke with apparent difficulty against a hum of talk in the distant galleries. Once he stopped to ask for closer attention, but the crowd did not quiet down.

When he left the auditorium he was cheered by a crowd which had blocked the street for more than an hour. On the way he passed along in a continuous roar of applause and when he and Mrs. Wilson entered the auditorium the crowd stood up and shouted itself hoarse.

Johnson Talks to Nebraskans.

Lincoln, Neb.—Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California spoke to an enthusiastic audience here last Wednesday. He denounced the league of nations covenant as an "infamous document" and declared that its adoption would result in throwing the country into an international confederation and deprive the republic of its future independence. A number of prominent Nebraskans were in the audience, which applauded his remarks almost continuously.

COMFORT OF HOG MOST DESIRABLE

Well-Made Sanitary Wallow Is Like Coney Island Bathing Beach for Porkers.

CONCRETE TYPE IS POPULAR

Grower Faces Two Temperature Extremes in Many of Pork-Producing States—Many Farmers Neglect Proper Shelter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is as natural for the hog to want to wallow as it is for the small boy to scurry to the old swimming hole with the first breath of spring. Hot weather is hard on fat animals, the portly porker included. That is why a well-made, sanitary hog wallow is like a Coney Island bathing beach for the hogs. A popular and serviceable type of wallow advocated by the United States department of agriculture should be made of concrete about 12 inches in depth and large enough to accommodate the herd of hogs. The wallow should be supplied with a satisfactory intake and outlet so that it can be filled about two-thirds full of water and drained every few days, or as often as is necessary to keep the pool fresh and cleanly. At the present time a test is being made at the experimental farm of the department of agriculture at Beltsville, Md., to determine the value of the cement hog wallow as a comfort for hogs. The results of this investigation will be published upon completion early in the fall.

Temperature Extremes.

The hog grower in many of the leading pork-producing states faces two temperature extremes during the year. During the winter, unless he provides comfortable houses and warm quarters, his hogs are likely to suffer from the cold, while in the summer season he must handle the animals under conditions of extreme heat. Any animal as fat as the average hog which is to be marketed in the late summer or early fall suffers greatly during hot weather, and unfortunately many hog farmers neglect to provide shelter and protection for their hogs from the extreme heat. During hot weather hogs need an abundance of shade—natural shade, such as is furnished by trees and bushes being the best.

Some of Uncle Sam's Porkers at Beltsville, Md.

Temporary Shelter.

Where natural shade and shelter are not available, the hog owner should put up a temporary shelter by building a framework about 4 feet high and thoroughly covering the top with brush, straw, grass, or hay. This inexpensive sunshade should be of sufficient size to protect a herd of hogs in comfort as they lie under it. As a rule, the ordinary hog house should not be used for shade purposes during the summer. Each year hog mortality is comparatively heavy due to "porker sunstroke" induced by maintaining the hogs in the open without sufficient protection from the ruddy glow of Old Sol's furnace.

APPLY MANURE IN ORCHARDS

Failure of Many Trees to Produce Fruit Is Due to Lack of Necessary Plant Food.

Undoubtedly the failure, or partial failure, of many fruit trees to bring forth a crop is due to lack of plant food. Professional orchardists look after this matter, but the average farmer who has a few trees, which he dignifies by the name of "orchard," gives scant heed to providing them with fertility. He may turn the sheep or the calves in among them but such fertility as they add is apt to be of slight value, comparatively speaking.

YOUNG ANIMALS NEED CARE

They Should Be Given Such Attention as Will Insure Them Most Favorable Start.

The young animals should require such care and attention as will give them a favorable start. Every practical animal husbandman knows that unless he is in a position to give his young animals plenty of the right kind of feed and protect them from cool rains and other animals they will not thrive. This is where a good beginning means a favorable ending.

PURE SORGHUM SEED BY ROGUEING PLATS

Go Over Field and Carefully Remove Off-Type Plants.

Work Can Be Done Easily by Man on Foot With Dwarf Varieties, While With Taller Sorts It Is Practical to Use Horse.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In order to obtain pure sorghum seed it is usually necessary to go over the field carefully after it has headed out and remove the rogues or off-type plants. Every plant which does not conform to the type which is desired should be cut down, or, better, pulled up so that there will be no danger of the production of seed from tillers produced by the rogue.

In dwarf varieties the rogueing can be done easily by a man on foot, but in the taller growing sorts it is most practical to ride through the field on horseback so that the workers can see over the top of the field and thus more readily determine the position of the rogues which must be removed. The horse can be securely muzzled to prevent injury other than that occasioned by the tramping down of plants.

It is not profitable to rogue fields which are intended for the production of grain or forage, but in the producing of seed, either for home planting or the market, careful rougeing gives returns both in dollars and cents and in the satisfaction of growing pure seed. Sorghums being open-pollinated are subject to almost endless hybridization if stray plants of other varieties are allowed to mature in the field. This intermixing of varieties results in lack of uniformity in ripening as well as in the size of the plants, thus causing difficulty in harvesting and marketing the crop. The use of pure seed varieties which are known to be adapted to the farmers' climatic conditions will be rewarded in bigger and better crops.

EXAMINE LAND FOR ALFALFA

Frequent Borings Should Be Made With Auger to Determine Character of the Soil.

In examining a tract of land for alfalfa frequent borings should be made with a soil auger to determine the character of the soil and subsoil as well as the drainage conditions. This instrument usually will be of greater value in determining the adaptability of a particular tract to alfalfa than a chemical analysis of the soil. A common 1¼-inch auger with the shank lengthened and a suitable crossbar for a handle is practical for this use.

FULL-CROP YIELD OBTAINED

Sufficient Fertilization, Pure Seed and Careful Cultivation Are of Importance.

There are three agents that are sometimes neglected, but through which the full-crop yield can be obtained. They are, sufficient fertilization, pure seed and careful cultivation. The proper use of fertilizer will make the stalks and stems stronger and thus more impervious to the attacks of vegetable parasites or the spittel of insects. It will give weight, color and size to the fruit and materially hasten maturity.

GOOD STRAWBERRY TILLAGE

Always Run Cultivator or Rake Through Patch Same Way to Permit Runners to Set.

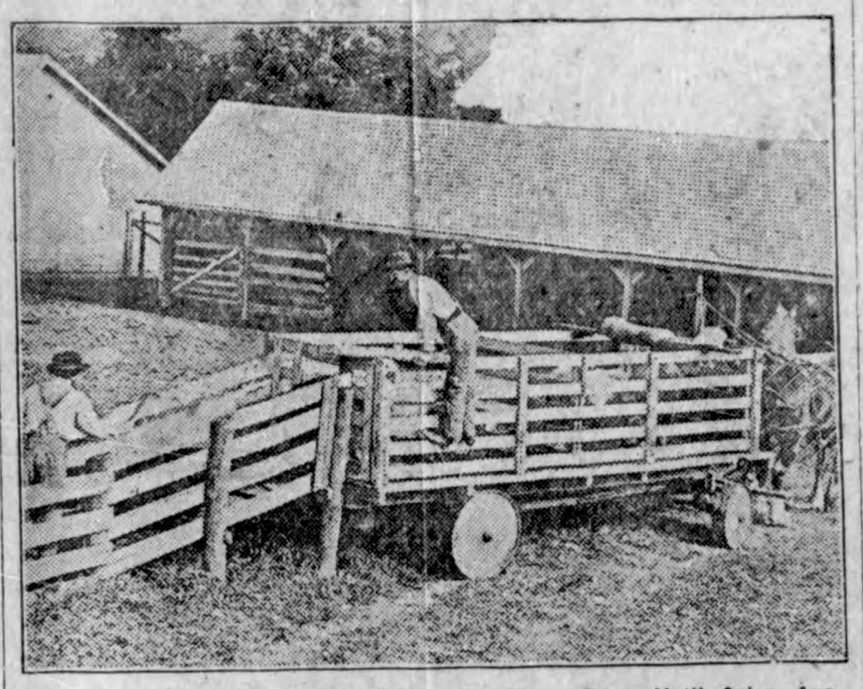
Let the strawberry runners set at will within the row. In tilling strawberries, always run the cultivator or rake through the same way each time. This allows runners to set which would be uprooted by a reverse tillage. But when a row is matted over two feet deep, stretch a line and chop off and hoe up all outsiders.

BURN DEAD WOOD IN ORCHARD

When Allowed to Lie in Heap It Furnishes Breeding Place for Insects and Rodents.

All dead wood should be burned at once, preferably in the orchard. If it is allowed to lie in a heap, it furnishes not only a breeding place for vegetable and insect pests, but a home for rabbits, mice and other animals.

MUTUAL SOCIETIES FURNISH GOOD LOANS AND SAVE FARMERS MILLIONS OF DOLLARS



Loans Are Frequently Needed to Carry the Farm Over Until Sales Are Made.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the greatest needs of farmers in the United States is short-time personal credit on reasonable terms. The federal loan banks are taking good care of the land-mortgage requirements in many cases, but they are not always available for new settlers and for farmers or planters who need personal loans to buy live stock, implements, or other equipment. The need for short-time personal credit is shown as a result of an investigation by the United States department of agriculture in the Southern states, where it was found 60 per cent of the farmers depend upon advances from merchants during the crop-producing season. Credit extended by merchants, commonly known as the advancing system, is usually exceedingly high. It is estimated by the department that hundreds of millions of dollars would be saved by the farmers each year if the means already adopted in a number of communities were put into general use. The means referred to is that of properly organized rural credit unions.

State Laws Help Credit Unions.

In nine states laws have been enacted under which farmers as well as wage earners in cities may organize credit unions. These laws, in so far as they affect rural credit, enable the farmers who are members to obtain loans on terms which compare favorably with those secured by the city business men. The movement of surplus funds of the individual farmers has in general been toward the city, but rural credit unions encourage the retention of money made on the farm where it is most needed. In addition, it tends to turn the current of urban capital toward rural districts, as outside credit is secured through regular credit channels—the banks.

It is impossible to formulate a method of procedure in the organization of credit unions that will apply to each of the states, but the plan followed in North Carolina, where 18 strictly farmers' organizations are now in operation, should be of interest. In North Carolina a branch of the state government, known as the Division of Markets, has been charged with the work of encouraging the organization of credit unions among the farmers, and a special official, known as Superintendent of Credit Unions, gives practical assistance in their organization and supervision of their activities.

North Carolina Plan.

In North Carolina 12 or more persons in the community may organize a credit union, the first step being to sign an application for assistance, which is addressed to the Superintendent of Credit Unions of the State. Under his direction a meeting is called for the purpose of arousing further interest and spreading information concerning the plans and purposes of the proposed organization. If the community is sufficiently interested, a second meeting is called, and an organization committee appointed. This committee is furnished with a suggested set of by-laws by the superintendent, which it decides to recommend either in their entirety or with such amendments as local conditions appear to require. At this meeting also five persons are selected to act as a board of directors. A credit committee and a supervisory committee, each composed of three members, are also named. At the third meeting the by-laws recommended by the organization committee are adopted by the entire organization with or without amendments. Necessary books and business forms are also provided for at this time.

Two copies of the by-laws and an organization certificate are acknowledged before a notary public and approved by the superintendent of credit unions. One copy of each of these documents is filed in the state division of markets, and a duplicate copy is sent for filing with the clerk of the county superior court. The work of incorporation is then complete, the cost being limited to the notary fees and $3 for the recording and filing of the papers. The members of the board of directors and the committees are then sworn in and a bond is provided for the treasurer.

Establishing Banking Connections.

The board of directors appoints a bank committee to select some local banking institution through which the union does its business. The credit union is accorded treatment similar to that which one bank gives another. As a rule it receives 4 per cent interest upon time deposits and 3 per cent on monthly balances, while it borrows from the bank at 5 per cent interest.

The business of the organization is formally begun at a fourth meeting at which time each member buys one or more shares of stock at $10 a share, and deposits with the union any idle cash that can be spared. The union also accepts deposits from nonmembers. Its operations are similar to a small-scale bank, but it is able to operate at a minimum of expense since most of the overhead expenses of a regular bank are eliminated. The officers, with the exception of the treasurer, receive no compensation. The treasurer, who is required to devote three or four hours a week to the business of the organization, usually receives a salary of about $50 a year. The credit union thus becomes primarily a mutual society of borrowers and depositors operating under state law.

HOUSTON IN FAVOR OF CREDIT UNIONS

"There should be provided a system of personal-credit unions, especially for the benefit of individuals whose financial circumstances and scale of operations make it difficult for them to secure accommodations through the ordinary channels. Organized commercial banks make short-term loans of a great aggregate volume to the farmers of the nation possessing the requisite individual credit, but there are many farmers who, because of their circumstances, are prevented from securing the accommodations they need. . . . The men I have especially in mind are those whose operations are on a small scale and who are not in most cases intimately in touch with banking machinery, who know too little about financial operations, and whose cases usually do not receive the affirmative attention and sympathy of the banker. Such farmers would be much benefited by membership in cooperative credit associations or unions."—David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture.

PIGEON EGGS ARE FERTILE

Especially True Where Birds Have Free Range, Are Healthy and Given Proper Feed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pigeon eggs are usually fertile if the pigeons are healthy and properly fed, especially when they have free range. One squab (usually the male) frequently hatches first, and where there are several cases where one squab outgrows its nest mate, it may be advisable to sort the squabs in the nests, making the pairs as uniform as possible in size and age. If the parent birds die, the squabs may sometimes be removed to a nest where there is only one squab, or they may be fed artificially, although this process takes considerable time.

DRY-MASH HOPPER MIXTURES

FARM STOCK

DO NOT NEGLECT HERD BOAR

Management Is Important Part in Raising Strong, Healthy Pigs—Deserves Best Care.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The management of the boar is a very important part in the raising of strong, healthy pigs, and one which is sometimes neglected. He should be the most valuable animal in the whole herd, and as such deserves the best of attention. The boar should be purchased from a breeder of pure-bred hogs when between eight months and one year of age. Many breeders, however, purchase a boar when a weanling pig, but to be successful in this choice requires a wide experience and sound judgment. Aged boars which have proved their worth can sometimes be purchased at a reasonable price. It is much safer for an inexperienced breeder to buy an old, active boar than a young untried boar. If possible, the farmer should visit the herd where the boar was raised and note the conditions under which he was bred. At any rate, it is always possible to obtain from the breeder notes on the health and kind and amount of feeds used, so as to serve as an index to his subsequent treatment.

Upon arriving at the farm the boar should be unloaded as soon as possible and placed in quarantine to guard against the introduction of disease into the herd. If he is lousy it is well to treat this condition at once. His feed should be a continuation of that to which he has been accustomed, feeding rather lightly the first few days until he recovers from the strain of shipping and becomes accustomed to his new surroundings. If it is not feasible to continue feeding as previously indicated, the change to a more convenient ration should be made very gradually in order not to disturb the appetite or health of the animal. As a rule, a pig 8 to 12 months old will be in proper breeding condition when received unless he has been very heavily overfed. In purchasing an older boar, particularly one which has been in the show circuit, it is often necessary to reduce his condition before attempting to breed. With some animals the breeding power is permanently impaired by too high condition at some time in their life. The boar should be well fed but not fat, as a too high condition makes him inactive, a slow breeder, and a rather uncertain sire.

After the breeding season the boar should not be fed so heavily, and should have a wider ration, that is, one containing less of the protein concentrates and relatively more corn. The ration at this time is practically the same as that fed the brood sow when she is not producing a litter of pigs. He should have the run of a pasture a quarter of an acre in area in connection with his paddock. Here he can exercise and obtain much of his feed from the forage, or in the winter when the forage is consumed he may be fed on alfalfa or clover hay in connection with the grain ration. Keep the boar healthy, give him exercise, plenty of rough feeds, and keep him in condition by varying his supply of grain. Under such conditions little trouble will be experienced in getting a normal boar to produce large litters of strong, healthy pigs.

PIG CLUB MEMBERS PROSPER

Some Have Been at Work Long Enough to Have Porkers for Sale and Make Money.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Pig club members in Florida are working up an industry among themselves. Some of the members who have been in club work long enough to have some pigs for sale are disposing of their stock to other club members. One club boy has sold $100 worth of pigs to club members this year. Another, who joined the pig club two years ago, is now furnishing pigs to other members, and says he is glad he went into the club work, and believes that every boy and girl who can do so should join.

Mrs. Alma Louden and family went to Fort Dodge last Friday for a few days' visit with relatives.

Sunday School at the English M. E. church next Sunday will be held at 11:00 o'clock instead of 12 o'clock. Keep this in mind or otherwise you may be quite late.

Holly Lewis came home from Mason City Sunday for a few days visit with his folks here and also to see his brother, Ernest, who has just returned from the navy.

Mrs. Schneider, mother of Mrs. Geo. Gruetzmacher, and Mrs. Beeler and son Donald, returned to Mason City Sunday after about six weeks' visit at the Gruetzmacher home.

Oscar Schuldt and Dick Bamman are taking a forced vacation and are both confined at the home of Mrs. Henry Schuldt. The cause seems to be an attack of La Grippe.

M. O. Hocum adn family enjoyed a visit from his brother Ed and wife of Washington, D. C., who came last Thursday and remained for several days. Mr. Hocum is in the Revenue Office at the Capitol.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the English M. E. church will serve a hot 25 cent lunch next Saturday afternoon, September 27th, in the park from 5 o'clock until all are served. Everybody are invited to come.

Ernest Lewis returned to Klemme Monday morning having received his discharge from the navy after about eighteen months service on land and sea. "Stub" says he is glad to be back in Klemme and we can say that his many friends welcome his return.

Mrs. Herb Stille returned to her home at Haswell, Colorado, after an extended visit with Klemme relatives and friends. She was accompanied to Colorado by Mrs. Ray Yeager and baby, who will visit there for some time. They left Monday evening.

Harry Gibbs went to Spencer last Saturday morning to get his car at that city where he had left it for some repairs on his way home from a trip into Dakota which he took a week or so ago, and was forced to come the rest of the way home via rail.

Herman and Albert Heppen left the latter part of last week in their car for points in Missouri where they will visit with relatives and friends for about a week. The boys formerly lved in Missouri and will no doubt have a good time visiting their old friends.

Dr. R. M. Thomas moved into town the fore part of this week and will occupy the rooms in the west half of the Schaeffer building. Doc will also have his office in his new location so anybody seeking the "horse doctor" for a sick "critter" will know just where to find Doc hereafter.

Harold Gruetzmacher left last Thursday for Ames where he will continue his study along electrical lines. Harold has been attending the college at Iowa Falls, but has completed the ocurse there and in order to get a finished course will complete his training at the State College.

Marvin Weigman, the young gentleman who has been working in the First National Bank this summer, closed up his books Saturday and went to Garner for a few days visit with his folks and friends before departing for Des Moines where he will take up a law course at the Drake College.

N. L. Palmer has fixed up his residence in the southwest part of the city in the way of doing some interior decorating, also the outside was bettered by a new coat of paint. In addition to this Nels has built on a side porch and also a sleeping porch. We doubt if Nels will use the latter very much this year, when the snow begins to fly he will most likeyl hit for a chair near the furnace.

Ben Schwichtenberg was in our office Monday afternoon and informed us that Albert Tanner, Alex Rasmussen and himself will drive to Becker, Minn., about next Monday in the Tanner car. The men are going up to attend some sales being held nea there in view of possibly buying some material for farm use. These men have all purchased land near Becker and will move up there some time this winter. They may also do some fall plowing this year.

Billie Werner, accompanied by his wife and baby, came to Klemme on Monday from Fort Dodge. Mrs. Werner and baby went to Fort Dodge a few days ago to accompany Billie home. He is much improved in health since going to the sanitarium at Fort Dodge and is here for a short time only and will then go back for further treatment. We are glad to see him back in Klemme again as are all his friends and neighbors.

There was an especially good crowd of Klemme folks at Garner last Friday afternoon to see the last game of the baseball tournament which was between Garner and Corwith. The game was very good from start to finish and both sides played close. The game finally resulted in the score of 1 to 0 in favor of Corwith, who carried off the prize purse and also all the honors of the tournament.

bituary Miss Esther Gruetzmacher

Miss Esther Gruetzmacher, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gruetzmacher, was born in Liberty township, Iowa, April 25th, 1883, and died at 5:00 p. m., September 26, 1919, at Colorado Springs, Colorado, the cause of her death being organic heart failure.

The deceased spent nearly all of her life in this community and is well known and loved by all. Born and reared by God-fearing parents, she was led into the right pathways of life from early childhood, thus having every opportunity to develop a strong Christian character which she did. She was a faithful member and worker in the Sunday School and Epworth League, as well as of the church and her place in the services was very seldom vacant. God had endowed her with a wonderful talent in music and a beautiful voice for song and these gifts she developed and used in every way possible to the glory of God and the upbuilding of the church. It can truly be said of her, that she loved to work in the church and devoted much of her time to the upbuilding of God's kingdom. Her beautiful messages in song will not be forgotten by the people of this community and will be a power for good.

For many years she sang at every funeral service that was conducted in the church of which she was a member. Esther had developed a noble character and always manifested a kind spirit and friendly disposition to everyone she came in contact with. She truly scattered sunshine wherever she went. She joined the church when a small girl and remained faithful and true all these years.

About eighteen months ago she began to fail and lost the use of her voice. She seemed not in the least to be alarmed, thinking it was only caused by a severe cold of which she would soon be relieved in a little while, but as the days and weeks went by and her condition not seeming to improve, she consulted a specialist and upon his advice that a change of climate might speed her recovery she moved with her parents and sister, in January, 1919, out to Colorado Springs, Colorado, where she seemed to improve for a while, until inflamatory rheumatism made inroads on her life and caused her early death. All that loving hands on the part of parents and sister could do was done to save her life, but on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 26th, placing her hands in the hands of her mother, she beautifully, peacefully and quietly responded to the Master's call, and stepped over into the great beyond where she will be forever with her Christ whom she loved and served while in this life, and where there is no pain sickness, sorrow, disappointments nor tears. A few days before she passed away she told her loved ones that if she should die tell all of my relatives good-bye for me and tell them to meet me in heaven. She leaves to mourn her death her father and mother, her only sister, Hulda, her brother-in-law, P. M. Grisemer, her only living grandfather, Father Schaefer, 10 uncles, 11 aunts, 15 cousins and many other relatives and friends who will miss her.

We the undersigned wish to thank all our relatives, neighbors and many friends, for their help, kind deeds, sympathetic words and beautiful floral tributes given during the illness and death of our beloved daughter and sister Esther.

COLLISION ON ROCK ISLAND

The two motor cars belonging to the Klemme and Goodell section gangs respectively collided on the curve thre miles north of town. The Goodell gang was patrolling the track and the Klemme gang was coming to Goodell. The cars were each running about eight miles per hour and neither saw the other until they were almost together. The brakes were set but the rails were wet and the cars came together with considerable force. Harvey Boller suffered a sprained wrist and Ernie Wilkins' foot was hurt. One of the Mexicans who works on the Klemme section and who knows perhaps a dozen words of English, is said to have remarked, "Oh hell, spilla da lunch." No damage was done to the cars.—Goodell Globe.

WHAT ARE THE CHIEF FORMS OF ACTIVITY OF THE SALVATION ARMY?

Slum Settlement—Officers visit the homes of the poor, become acquainted at first hand with, and provide for, their needs. All forms of temporal and spiritual help are given to the families of the district.

Rescue Homes—Reclaim wayward and fallen women and girls and prevent from falling those who are specially tempted. Eighty-five per cent of the girls who pass through these homes are permanently restored.

Maternity hospitals connected with rescue homes provide competent and sympathetic medical aid and nursing care at the time of confinement—and nurseries for the babies.

Industrial homes where homeless, incapacitated and jobless men are given work, meals and beds until they become self-supporting again. Discarded household material is collected and made over for use. The homes are maintained solely by the sale of these reclaimed articles.

Workingmen's hotels, where poor men find clean beds at nominal prices in surroundings which make for their moral and spiritual regeneration.

Children's homes for the care and training of dependent, orphaned and neglected children.

Young women's boarding homes, where working girls from factories and department stores find good living conditions at small cost. All the social amenities of the family are provided and the evils of the common boarding house avoided.

Christmas dinners furnished by tickets to poor families. Toys and clothing are also given to poor children.

Fresh air camps in the country or at the seaside, where poor mothers and children are taken for ten days in summer.

Free employment bureaus find work for hundreds of unemployed men and women.

Missing Friends' bureau locates missing friends and relatives in any part of the world.

Prison Work—Prisoners cared for i njails and penitentiaries. Their families also cared for. Released prisoners started out in useful employment and helpful associations.

Training colleges where young men and women are trained as officers in the Salvation Army.

Vast volume of temporary relief which includes: Distribution of free ice, wood, coal, medicine, etc. Free day outings for poor mothers and children. Cash disbursed to save families from eviction or prosecution, etc.

Soldiers' and Sailors' Aid—Comforting and cheering soldiers who are far from home—a great system of huts, hotels, restrooms and establishments for soldiers and sailors, their relatives and friends is now in existence, both overseas and from coast to coast at home. These must be maintained as long as there is need.

CREAM SEPARATOR SCALPS WOMAN

While in the milk house Monday morning starting the cream separator Mrs. J. W. Monroe, residing a few miles southwest of Webster City, caught her hair in the shafting of the machine and was scalped as cleanly and completely as though the operation had been performed with a knife. One ear was also partly torn off, as also were both eyebrows. She neither fainted nor screamed, but went calmly into the house where her husband was appraised of the accident and he rushed her to the hospital at Webster City, where she now lies in a very serious condition.

The scalp was put back in place, the ear which was partially torn off was sewed on and an attempt will be made at skin grafting just as soon as the wounds will stand it—Renwick Times

SHOWER ON MISS ELLA SCHULDT

The lady clerks of the Wellemeyer Department Store gathered at the Wm. Trafford home last Friday evening and gave a miscellaneous shower in honor of Miss Ella Schuldt. The rooms were tastefully decorated in yellow and white and the color scheme was successfully carried out in the delicious supper that was served. The evening was spent in pleaant converation. Miss Schuldt was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts.

NIGHT AND DAY CAMP IS LIFE SAVING STATION

Tuberculosis kills 150,000 persons in the United States every year. These two women escaped. They are shown in the Night and Day Camp conducted by the St. Louis Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis. They are among the fortunate ones because they knew how to take care of themselves when this great menace threatened them. They knew that the cure lies in plenty of fresh air, even if the temperature is away below freezing, sunlight, good food and rest under proper medical supervision. Tuberculosis is not only curable but is preventable as well.

The prevention lies largely in right living, in building up a strong bodily resistance. Eight out of ten persons are infected at some time in their lives, according to figures of the National Tuberculosis Association, the leading agency in the United States in the fight upon this disease. This organization is sponsor for the annual Red Cross Christmas Seal sale, from which the funds to carry on the work throughout the year are chiefly derived.

RURALITES HAVE BIG HEALTH ADVANTAGE

Abundance of Fresh Air and Sunlight Do Much to Check Ravages of Tuberculosis.

DANGER IN CLOSED WINDOWS.

National Tuberculosis Association, Which Sponsors the Annual Sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals, Reports 150,000 Deaths Each Year From the Disease.

People who live in the smaller towns and on farms have a great health advantage over the city dwellers in that they have ever an abundant supply of fresh air and sunlight.

These two gifts of nature, so lavishly bestowed, are not always appreciated to their fullest extent. They are two of the strongest weapons against the menace of tuberculosis, or consumption, as it is sometimes called.

But consumption is not unknown in the rural districts. The death rate is sometimes as great in these sections as in the more crowded localities, chiefly because of carelessness or indifference to laws of health.

Few, indeed, are the farm houses or the homes in the smaller cities and villages that cannot have an outdoor sleeping porch. On the contrary, we often find that the windows of sleeping rooms in the home are shut tight in the mistaken belief that night air is harmful.

This paves the way for disease, especially tuberculosis, which generally attacks the lungs.

White Plague Kills 150,000 a Year.

The white plague claimed 150,000 lives last year in the United States. More than 1,000,000 Americans are suffering from it today. These figures are compiled from reports of experts all over the country and sent to the National Tuberculosis Association, the leading agency in the country to combat this disease. This organization is sponsor for the Red Cross Christmas Seal sale, from which its financial support is chiefly derived.

As medical science has proved consumption is both preventable and curable, the suffering caused by this disease is largely unnecessary. Most tuberculosis victims are between the ages of eighteen and forty-five.

Causes Half Billion Loss Annually.

These are the years when people are most active, the years of their greatest production. The snuffing out of these lives just when they are at the height of their usefulness means an annual loss to the country of nearly half a billion dollars.

Fresh air is the cheapest of medicines. Outdoor sleeping porches are not only for the sick. They help well folks to keep well, and the country dweller can have this aid to healthy living at far less inconvenience than his city neighbor.

You can help directly by seeing that you and your family are living under the most healthful conditions possible.

DRAINAGE NOTICE

Hearing on Establishment of Drainage District No. 103

STATE OF IOWA, SS.
County of Hancock,

To A. D. White, William E. Smith, A. D. Gimer, Elmer Arnold, Amanda Tice, Valentine Josten and Peter Josten, Executors of Estate of Valentine Josten, Sr. Trustees of Avery Township and L. CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL MEETING TO BE HELD FRIDAY EVENING

Better Schools for the Boys and Girls of the town and country will be discussed at a public meeting at the Idle Hour Theatre Friday evening, October 3rd, at 8 P. M. Men and women of both country and town are invited to attend and ask any questions. Mr. A. M. Deyoe, Iowa's greatest educator, will be present to give us his experience with consolidated schools. J. R. Baggs, county superintendent will be here to give interesting facts on Hancock County consolidated schools. Prof. Neese, of the Meservey consoldated school will have facts and figures with him and can explain exactly the cost, taxes, and other items in connection with consolidated schools. Fred Katter will tell about the Hayfield consolidated schools and how they work out there. Frank Hoyt will tell how the pupils are transported to the Ventura Consolidated schools. Whether you are a believer in consolidated schools or not you should attend this meeting, ask any questions you want to and bring up any argument you have, the situation will be discussed from all angles. This meeting has been called by the Klemme School Board at the request of many parents who have children both in town and the country schools. Remember, tomorrow evening at the Idle Hour in Klemme.

RURAL LUTHERAN SCHOOL BURNED

Mystery Surrounds the Burning of the Lutheran School Northeast of Here

Last Saturday night about 1:00, it was discovered that the school house located just across the road from the German Lutheran church which is about five miles northeast of Garner, and of which Rev. Koch is pastor, was on fire. Jut how the blaze was started is still a mystery, but there appears to be a possibility of arrests being made of certain persons whom are suspected of having set the fire.

School had been in session during the day, but no fire of any character had been in or near the buidling. A gasoline can that was found nearby may furnish a clue by which the source of the fire may be ferreted. The school is owned and operated by St. John's congregation, and has an attendance upwards of thirty pupils. $500 insurance was carried which will fall short of meeting the loss.

If the burning of the building was the incindiary origin, we surely hope that the culprit will be caught.—Democrat.

INFANT SON OF MR. AND MRS. EDWIN JOSTEN DEAD

Last Saturday morning occurred the sudden death of the three months' old son of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Josten. The little one was apparently quite well until shortly after it had taken it's meal when it became very sick and died before the father could be notified at Iowa Falls where he and his father, Valentine Josten, had gone on business. The little one was laid to rest in the Klemme Cemetery Monday noon after a funeral service was held at the house. The bereaved parents and grandparents have the sympathy of the entire community in their sorrow. It was their first and only child.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank the many friends and neighbors for their kindness and help during our recent bereavement, and for the floral offerings.

KICKED BY PONY, RECEIVES BROKEN JAW

Jesse Goodrich The Victim While On Way To School

While riding to school on his bicycle Tuesday morning, Jesse, the 13-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Goodrich, residing northeast of town, was painfully injured by being kicked in the face by a pony which a son of Mr. and Mrs. Art Knoll was riding.

The boys were both bound for school and were riding along side by side when the accident occurred, but as the little sufferer is unable to talk the exact details cannot be learned. In addition to receiving a fractured jaw he was bruised quite badly but is getting along real well at this time considering the seriousness of his condition.—Kanawha Reporter.

WILL LET PAVING CONTRACT

Cerro Gordo County Supervisors Getting Early Start

Clear Lake Mirror: The board of county supervisors will not let contracts for paving until some time in January. By that time it is expected that the Federal board will have authorized the paving in Cerro Gordo county, which has been voted upon.

The Federal board has not as yet indicated that it has approved the plans of the supervisors as to paving the primary roads in the county. However, the highway commission is ready to do its part at any time. The supervisors are unable to tell definitely how large the contracts which will be let for paving will be. It is probable that they will cover the paving of the North Iowa Pike in the county and a part of the Jefferson highway.

FINANCING THE FARM ON THE BUDGET PLAN

War Savings Organization Gives Tiller of Soil System on Which to Increase Capital for Future.

Farming nowadays justly is recognized as a business and a profession. As a profession it is prepared for as carefully as any other branch of highly specialized endeavor; as a business it is conducted according to business methods and upon a businesslike basis. Old-time "hit or miss" farming methods fail utterly under the present economic regime.

The first step toward businesslike farm management consists of systematizing farm finances. Because farm moneys come in irregularly they have been handled too often in the past without any adequate accounts or record. This method, rendered impossible by income tax necessities, long has been scorned by the successful, progressive farmer who believes in modern machinery, modern comforts, modern efficiency practices and projects. Such a farmer employs a farm budget just as he employs grain, soil and weather statistics in the arrangement of his farm operations, takes a good farm journal and demands fine and well-tested seeds. Because not every farmer cares to spend time making out an individual farm budget governmental experts, working through the War Savings Stamps department of the War Loan Organization, Seventh Federal Reserve district, have provided for the use of every farmer who cares to employ them farm records, including account sheets, that render the keeping of farm accounts a simple task.

One page of the simple pamphlet containing the indicated records is devoted to receipts, its opposite to expenditures, each registered every day of the year. Milk, butter, poultry, eggs, cattle and hogs, sheep, oats, corn, hay, fruit, vegetables and miscellaneous—these are the headings under which the irregular or recurrent sources of income are listed.

Total income for each day is shown at the right of the page, monthly total, collective and for separate items, at the foot. The expenditures page, similarly arranged, shows headings of: Savings, including War Savings Stamps purchased, bank deposits, etc.; labor; food, including groceries and meat; clothing; repairs; blacksmith; machinery; rent, insurance and taxes; live stock and feed; buildings; literature, which includes books, magazines and newspapers; recreation; and miscellaneous. Again, daily totals are shown at the right of the page, monthly totals, itemized and general, at the foot. Companion pages, similarly arranged, show yearly summaries, almost instantaneously computed, of receipts and expenditures for the year.

War Savings Stamps make ideal investments for the farmer. Purchasable for sums ranging from $4 and a few odd pennies to $1,000, built up by means of Thrift Stamps, should this prove more convenient, they are nondepreciable, nonfluctuating, income-bearing and distinguished by high rate of maturity interest. Previous to maturity they may be redeemed, if necessary, at precise face value.

Self-Control.

If, taxed by obnoxious affairs, you feel like giving away to anger or revolt, then hasten to get away from your own self and do not yield to impressions that are liable to rob you of your self-possession. The more we exercise our will in maintaining our mental equipoise, the easier this control becomes for us.—Marcus Aurelius.

Savings Bank Depositors.

The countries which head the list in number of savings bank accounts are Switzerland, Norway, Denmark, Sweden, Japan, Tasmania—countries not of great national wealth; yet the average savings bank deposits per depositor of Switzerland, Denmark and Norway exceed that of this country.

Compelling Curiosity.

"What did you think of that movie star's acting?" "I didn't go to see the acting. I went to see what a person who can draw such an enormous salary looks like."

Tungsten Statistics.

The amount of standard tungsten ore used in the manufacture of incandescent lamps in the United States this year was in the neighborhood of 4½ tons.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

SPORT WRITER NEGOTIATES DELUGE

Ford never falters as it sails over water soaked roads on high

Will Gahagan, the famous sport writer—who is also a "walking encyclopedia" of information on titled horses and their doings for the last couple centuries—recently rode from Randall to Cleveland in a ———but here's his story as it appeared in "The Horseman" for August:—

"In company with Xen Scott, turf writer on the 'Plain Dealer,' and a couple of other scribes, I made the trip to the city in 'Scotty's' machine. Said machine is manufactured in Detroit by a gentleman by the name of Ford. Now, they make all sorts of fun of that Ford machine, but after that trip from Randall to Cleveland the other day, I'm convinced that the Ford cars are not only fast but that they have staying qualities as well. They should have been used in getting the soldiers across the ocean.

"In the low spots where the water has stopped many of the high priced 'boats', the little Ford didn't even Hesitate. One of the most amusing sights of the trip—I believe that it was the only one—was watching a gentleman astride the hood of a big machine which was standing in about two feet of water. He was attempting to crank the machine and yet keep out of the water. Now that was a hard job. Every time he gave the crank a twist, his arm went into the water, right up to the elbow. The good man was reciting the Lord's Prayer as we passed. At last we surmised that he was, from a few words that he uttered as our good little craft pulled for the shore."

Like "Pop" Gears who added a Ford Runabout to his string of thoroughbreds, Mr. Gahagan has discovered that as a "mud horse" he couldn't get away from the Ford.

WILSON'S WORDS CLEAR UP DOUBT

CALIFORNIA THROWS OVER ITS LEADER, JOHNSON, AND RALLIES TO LEAGUE.

WEST GIVES HIM OVATION

All Doubtful Features of Pact Are Explained Away By President, and Former Doubters Hasten to Give Him Their Support.

(By Independent News Bureau, formerly Mt. Clemens News Bureau.)

Aboard President Wilson's Special Train—A continuous ovation along the Pacific coast and then on his eastward way back toward the capital was given to President Wilson as he came toward the end of his month daylong speaking tour in behalf of the League of Nations. California, particularly the delightful city of Los Angeles, went wild in its enthusiasm for him and his advocacy of the League, and it was in that state, perhaps, that he did his most successful missionary work. Hiram Johnson, California's former governor, now her United States senator, and considered by her as the most likely Republican candidate for the presidency in 1920, had before the arrival of President Wilson, convinced a great number of citizens that the League as at present formulated was not a good thing. He had told them that the United States, because of it, would be drawn into every petty European quarrel; he argued that we would lose our sovereignty by joining with the European nations. He had blamed the president for assenting to the possession by Japan of the Peninsula of Shan Tung in China.

BUREAU CHANGES NAME

The Mount Clemens News Bureau, which has been furnishing reports on President Wilson's tour in behalf of the League of Nations to 5,500 papers, has adopted a new name and will hereafter be known as The Independent News Bureau.

But Mr. Wilson, with clear logic and with compelling eloquence, answered to the entire satisfaction of California's people every objection which Senator Johnson had made to the League. And thousands of the state's citizens deserted the Johnson standard immediately and rallied to the support of the president. More than that, they came forward and said, "We were against you, Mr. President, but you have cleared everything up and now we are with you heart and soul." Still more than that, they let Senator Johnson know that they were no longer with him and that they disapproved of the speaking tour which he himself was making in opposition to the League and so powerful was the volume of public opinion which reached him, that the senator almost immediately abandoned his tour. The Shan Tung question, because of the anti-Japanese feeling which undoubtedly exists along the Pacific coast was the most serious which the president had to answer. He explained to the people that he had been powerless to prevent the rich peninsula from being given to Japan. England and France, through a secret treaty, had promised it to Japan for entering the war and remaining in it. That treaty had to be carried out. Anyway it was not China that was losing Shan Tung, but Germany, which had seized the territory from China in 1898 and held it ever since. Japan had promised, the president explained, to return Shan Tung as soon as the peace treaty was ratified and it was only through the ratification of the treaty with the League of Nations inclusion, that China could ever expect to get her former property back. And she surely would get it back, he declared, through the ratification of the League. Therefore, through the same instrumentality no other nation could again prey upon the "Great, patient, diligent, but helpless kingdom." As to our being drawn into any European conflict. The president pointed out that no direct action such as the sending of troops to any part of the world to maintain or restore order could be taken by the Council of the League without a unanimous vote of the council members, therefore our vote could at once negative any such proposition as sending our soldiers where we did not want them sent. Besides, Mr. Wilson argued, "If you have to quench a fire in California you don't send for the fire department of Utah." But, he argued, there probably never will be another war, if the League is established, for the members promise either to arbitrate their difference and accept the decision of the arbitrator, lay the differences for discussion and publication before the Council of the League for a period of six months, and then, if possible, accept the council's advice. That failing, they agree to refrain from war for a further period of three months and nine months of "cooling off," the president contended, would prevent any armed conflict. These clear explanations satisfied every reasonable hearer and destroyed the "Bugaboos" which Senator Johnson and others had raised against the League. Through rugged Nevada into Utah, the land of Mormons, the president swept to find that those fine people were heartily with him for the League and a permanency of peace.

HOW A SCHOOL BANK WORKS

Savings System in Eastern Institution Results in $50,000 Deposits, Averaging Weekly More Than $140.

Twelve years ago a New England school principal called a meeting of the mothers and fathers in his district, and proposed that they help their youngsters and himself start a school savings bank. If children were to patronize such an institution, they would have to have money, and he suggested that parents help them earn money by their own labor. He told them that the bank was to be part of school training, teaching thrift, industry, prudence and wisdom.

Today this school savings bank, in the Henry Barnard school, Hartford, Conn., has deposits of more than $50,000. The average weekly deposit during twelve years has been more than $140. The largest deposit by any child since the opening of the bank is $1,480, and the smallest less than $1.

Operation of this bank is simple. Solon P. Davis, the school principal, describes it: Deposits are received every Monday morning during the first half-hour of school. The pupils of the eighth grade act as tellers, each being assigned to a given room. Each child is provided with a pass book in which his deposits are entered by the teller.

Deposits are made at the teacher's desk, in the presence of the teacher and the teller, who enters them in his roll book. The teacher and teller then verify all deposits and place them in an envelope, which the teller delivers to the school secretary, who compares roll book and envelope, verifying the items. The envelopes are then forwarded to the Hartford Society for Savings, where the accounts of the school are pledged.

At interest periods, December, March and June, the roll books are examined by the secretary, and a personal account is opened at the Society for Savings for each pupil who has $2 in the school bank. After this, at these periods, all amounts of $1 or more, standing to his credit on a pupil's school deposit book, are added to his personal account. If any pupil wishes to withdraw his money a written statement from the parent or the parent's personal application is required.

FOOLISH IDEAS SOME HAVE

Old Fellow Righteously Indignant at Fastidiousnes of the Guests of His Hotel.

Capt. Lindsey Polk, director of a number of hotels, said recently in New York:

"European hotels, even the best of them, are inferior to ours. While I was in Paris I saw an advertisement of a fashionable new hotel, and the boast the management made was that it was as good as the best American hotels. I was pleased with this tribute."

Captain Polk smiled.

"Well," he resumed, "our ideals are high. No more hotelkeepers like the old fellow who complained about his summer visitors:

"'You wouldn't believe the nonsense that is in them. They is always wantin' a clane tablecloth an' clane sheets to their beds. An' table napkins, no less! I'll tell you what, there's sure people in this world that think they can go into a hotel an' make a convainance of it.'"

Satisfied.

The gray-haired stranger bent over the desk.

"Are you the society editor?" he asked.

"I am."

"Are you the person who wrote up the account of last night's big reception?"

"Yes; anything wrong with it?"

"That's what I want to find out. Look here. I notice in speaking of my daughter you use the sentence: 'She swept about the room with an inherited grace that arrested every one's attention.' Now, what was your purpose in writing that?"

"Why, it struck me as a first-class opportunity for a neat compliment to her esteemed parents; that's all."

"You are sure that you didn't mean to insinuate that her father laid the foundation of his fortune by selling brooms!"

"Certainly not."

"Because I did, you know."

"I didn't know it.'

"Then that's all right. Good day."—Dallas News.

Home Town Helps

INDUSTRIAL VALUE OF HOME

Well Recognized That Ownership Makes for Highly Desired Stability of Character.

Man's greatest business in life is the business of living. And nothing contributes so much to the success of this business as does good housing. Civilization is built up on this idea. The most progressive and civilized nations have been best housed.

Today the industrial value of home ownership is well recognized. It develops a pride, a self-respect, a stability of character that makes the home owner the man to be desired.

The man who can save and achieve a real haven to house his business of living has something that differentiates him from those not so fortunate. His credit is better, he is more highly regarded by the community, and he is the desirable citizen.

Most homes must be built on loans. As handled in the past, the mortgage has been pictured a home wrecker, a dreaded something to harass a man's old age.

Today the tendency is toward amortization, which is a gradual paying off of the principal so that in time the home will be free and clear. Amortization removes the only drawback to the ownership of a home. Whereas it is hard to save $4,000 to pay off in a lump sum, it is easy to pay $33 a month for ten years, plus $20 interest charges, which latter decreases every month. How many of us have bought things on the partial payment plan, meeting the payments easily, and meanwhile enjoying the luxury of possession?

Just so it is with a home. And provided it is located right, one or two rooms can be rented that will cut the monthly payments in half. That feature alone has proved the deciding factor with many who desire to be a real success in the business of living.

But this home should be built to last, to be in as good condition when the payments are finished as when they are started. That means spending money where it doesn't show—for a year or so. It means good plumbing, good heating, good, sound timber framed by a builder worthy of trust, by a man whose bid may not be the lowest, but whose bid is based on the kind of construction that will cause the home to stand up bravely against the elements, a real haven for the business of living.

PLANT FLOWERS AND TREES

Now Is the Best Time to Plan and Work on the Improvement of the Home Grounds.

The appearance of the home has much to do with its utility as well as its beauty. A home where there are flowers, trees, lawn, etc., seems more comfortable than where these things are absent. Such a home is always more satisfying, and that of course is a quality of utility.

Fall is a good time to improve the yard, lawn and general appearance of the home. Late fall is a favorable time to transplant many biennials and perennials. Roses, "the queen of flowers," may be set; other shrubs may be transplanted; violets, bulbs of various kinds, sweet peas, etc., may be started for early spring blossoms.

A little time given to the yard and lawn now will be worth much to the appearance of your home next spring. Look over the yard and see what improvements can be made. Doubtless you will find that much can be done to make your home more attractive.

Demand for Better Homes.

The idea of good homes for wage earners as a matter of public policy was widely advertised during the war and gained strong support. The ablest architects, engineers and landscapers assisted the government in housing plans. This has brought about an increasing national consciousness that every family should be provided with a habitation meeting at least the minimum requirements of sanitation and decency. Many soldiers who were reared in city slums have returned with more personal dignity and no longer will stand for their former homes. They are persuading their families to remove to better neighborhoods.

Flowers as Barometers.

Many flowers are said to be excellent barometers. For instance, it is when the blooms of dandelions have seeded and are in the fluffy, feathery condition, that the weather-prophet faculties come to the fore. In fine weather the ball expands to the full, but when the rain approaches it shuts up like an umbrella. If the weather is inclined to be showery, it keeps shut all the time, only opening when the danger from the wet is passed.

Always Cure In Rest.

Sleep is the most perfect rest, of course, and sleep will "cure" most diseases. That is, the person who sleeps is going to recover, as a rule, for he is going to secure the rest that is essential to recovery. But the point is, the doctors ought to begin refusing to prescribe medicines for people unless they will agree to "take a rest," for the medicines are ineffective without rest.

"CARRY ON"!

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Feel grand! Be efficient! Don't stay sick, bilious, headachy, constipated. Remove the liver and bowel poison which is keeping your head dizzy, your tongue coated, your breath bad and your stomach sour. Why not get a small box of Cascarets and enjoy the nicest, gentlest laxative-cathartic you ever experienced? Cascarets never gripe, sicken or inconvenience one like Salts, Oil, Calomel or harsh pills. Cascarets bring sunshine to cloudy minds and half-sick bodies. They work while you sleep. Adv.

The Modern Family Doctors.

"Who is your family doctor?"

"I can't tell you."

"Why not? Don't you know his name?"

"Yes. Doctor Johnson used to be our family doctor, but nowadays mother goes to an eye specialist; father to a stomach specialist; sister goes to a throat specialist; my brother is in the care of a lung specialist and I'm taking treatments from an osteopath."

Sling Gives Relief.

Great relief from pain in neuritis of the arm has been gained from the use of a sling described by Dr. R. T. Williamson in the British Medical Journal. The sling passes over the shoulder of the unaffected arm and under the elbow of the painful arm in such a way that it slightly raises it. This, by raising the shoulder and collarbone, takes off the pressure upon the nerve roots and prevents the weight of the arm from dragging on these nerves.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

J. Clarke Tinsley of Polk county left a will in which he wrote: "In the event of a serious accident" certain disposition was to be made of his property. He died a natural death and his will was contested on the grounds that it was not a "serious accident." Judge George Wilson admitted the instrument to probate. He was sustained by the supreme court.

That the Atlantic & Northern railroad will be saved from the junk heap is indicated by the success of the drive for funds with which to refinance the line. Nearly one-half of the needed $100,000 has already been subscribed in Kimballton and Elk Horn alone. The allotment for the two towns was $35,000, and so far there has been subscribed $43,300. This will be increased to $50,000, say the soliciting committee.

Through an ordinance just passed by the city commissioners of Fort Dodge, and to go into effect immediately, public dances and dance halls must pay a license of $75 per year and submit to rigid inspection. According to the law "ladies" will no longer be "free." In the terms of the ordinance it shall be unlawful to discriminate between the sexes in charging admission. No one under 18 years of age will be admitted under any circumstance.

With numerous aspirants for governor already announced, candidates for other offices at the coming Iowa general election are beginning to "spring out of the bushes." Charles E. Picket, Waterloo, friends have declared, will run against Senator Cummins at the primaries next June. Pickett was a member of congress from 1909 to 1913. Lawyers are interested in the fact that terms of three supreme court judges expire. Three candidates already announced for this bench include Judge Charles Hutchinson, Des Moines; Judge Winfield S. Withrow, Mt. Pleasant, and William J. Springer, New Hampton.

Because her son left but $500 to relatives and the residue of an estate valued at $40,000 to the priest of a Roman Catholic church at Ottumwa, to be held in trust for the church, Mrs. Margaret Mullaly declares that her son was of unsound mind when he drew his will and and asks that it be set aside. The son, Edward Mullaly, was a well-to-do farmer of Wapello county, residing near Blakesburg. He died last June. By the terms of his will a niece gets $300 and a nephew $200, a 260-acre farm appraised at $40,000 is then left in trust for St. Patrick's church. The mother also claims that a later will trust for St. Patrick's church.

URGE SENATE TO HASTEN PEACE

Leaders in Forty States, Regardless of Party, Sign Ringing Appeal.

TREATY WITHOUT AMENDMENT

Say Every Day of Delay Puts World in Imminent Peril of New War—Point to National Unrest.

New York, (Special).—Two hundred and fifty leading Americans, Republicans and Democrats representing forty different states and every prominent activity have joined in a non-partisan efforts to bring about the ratification of the Peace Treaty "without amendment and without delay." Their names are attached to an address to the United States senate, which was made public today, through the League to Enforce Peace, after it had been sent to every member of the senate.

The signers, almost without exception, are men and women of national reputation. They include such prominent citizens as ex-President Taft, George W. Wickersham, Attorney General in the last Republican administration; A. Lawrence Lowell, president of Harvard; Charles C. Moore of San Francisco, president of the Panama Exposition; Judge George Gray of Wilmington, Del.; President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, Harry A. Wheeler of Chicago, retiring president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association; Cyrus H. K. Curtis, the Philadelphia publisher; President Heber J. Grant of the Mormon Church, and Spargo, leader of the Socialists who supported the war.

The signers declare that every day of delay in ratifying the treaty puts the world in "imminent peril of new war."

Their statement follows:

In the senate at Washington, now that the committee on foreign relations has reported the treaty, the lines are sharply drawn between the immediate ratification of the treaty of peace with Germany, and its amendment with a reassembling of the conference and a reopening of negotiations that would bring great delay and prolonged uncertainty in settling the great issues of the peace. No partisan plea can be made. Party lines are already broken.

Standing at a distance from the conflict in the senate chamber, we plead for immediate ratification without delay. Our land requires it. A state of nervous strain, tension and unrest exists manifesting itself in disturbances, which in some cases have no self evident connection with the war, but which are, in fact its aftermath. The world is put in imminent peril of new wars by the lapse of each day. Dissensions between us and our former allies are being sown. We firmly believe and solemnly declare that the states and cities in which we dwell desire immediate peace.

The waging of war steadied and united the American people. Peace will bring prosperity, and prosperity content. Delay in the senate postponing ratification in this uncertain period of neither peace nor war has resulted in indecision and doubt, bred strife and quickened the cupidity of those who sell the daily necessities of life and the fears of those whose daily wage no longer fills the daily market basket.

We beseech the senate to give the land peace and certainty by a ratification which will not keep us longer in the shadows of possible wars, but give the whole world the light of peace. Reservations in the nature of clarifications in the meaning of the treaty, not inconsistent with its terms, will not require the reopening of the negotiations with Germany and with our associates in the war, which we all and each united to win.

But there is no possibility of doubt that amendment of the treaty, as is now proposed in the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, would require negotiation and a reopening of all the questions decided at Paris. Months of delay would follow. The perils of the present would become the deadly dangers of the near future. All the doubt engendered would aid the plots for violent revolution in this and other lands. The issues here and elsewhere between capital and labor, the conspiracy of speculator and profiteer, would all grow and become more perilous.

This cannot be. The American people cannot, after a victorious war, permit its government to petition Germany, which has accepted the treaty, for its consent to changes in the treaty. Yet if the United States should amend the treaty for its own purpose and policy, Germany would have full right to ask for concessions. Germany has agreed to make no claim in regard to enemy property seized in this country to an amount of seven hundred million dollars. Our recent foe could ask for a reopening of this issue and of the Lusitania claims. It could raise every question open before hostilities in regard to submarine warfare and the treatment of its nationals in this country. All the provisions for our trade in Germany raised by the economic clauses of the treaty, many of them vital to our industries and our farms, as in dye patents, dye supplies and fertilizers, the working of the Reparation Commission, which superintends the trade of all with Germany, could all be brought up by Berlin for readjustment by our negotiators, acting for the United States alone and no longer associated with other victorious powers or supported by a victorious American army on the German border.

Peace itself, the peace of the world, is delayed until ratification comes. And any amendment postpones peace. Germany and England alone of the principal powers have ratified. The other principals necessarily await our action, influential and powerful as we are today in the world's affairs. The ravages of war on more than a score of fighting fronts are continued by any needless delay. Let the senate give the world peace by ratification without amendment.

Even the amendment for which most can be said, the provision in regard to Shantung, will secure nothing which cannot be gained if China, backed by the powerful advocacy of the United States, addresses itself to the machinery for righting international wrongs and meeting just claims created by the league between nations. China, after eighty years of oppressive treaties and despoiled rights, by which all the great powers have profited directly or indirectly, has for the first time, in this covenant and treaty, the means and method to secure justice and the removal of the oppressive economic interference of stronger nations whose citizens are within her gates, protected by a long succession of international agreements. Moreover, it should be remembered that the clause regarding Shantung was made upon the statement by Japan that she will return the territory to China and, therefore, upon that condition, compliance with which promise the league can require.

The peace of the present and the righteousness of the future can be best secured by the ratification of the covenant and treaty without amendment. Let the senate take no action that will give any party to the treaty, and especially Germany, ground for maintaining that the ratification of the United States is not complete and that changes requiring a resumption of conference and negotiations have been made in it.

Plan to Reclaim Disabled Yanks

Federal Board Estimates That 50,000 Will Have to Be Fitted for Vocations

7,356 ALREADY IN TRAINING

Government Works on Four Year Program, but Funds Are Needed to Complete Plans—Board Reviews 1,000 Cases a Day.

Washington.—Working to overcome the handicaps of men injured in the war the federal government is striving to place the vocationally disabled soldier back in the economic ranks of the country, able to compete with other "whole" men and to earn an independent income for himself. According to information just made public by the federal board for vocational education it is likely that as many as 50,000 men who served in the war will have to be re-educated, either vocationally or occupationally.

Under this plan the federal board is now working on what is practically a four-year program, although appropriations so far have been made only up to July, 1920. In another month, it is estimated, 17,000 men will be approved to go into immediate training with the opening for the fall terms of the professional and technical schools of the country. The 40,000 or 50,000 men disabled in the service of the country will all be placed in training for various lines of activity and nearly all of them will have completed rehabilitation by the summer of 1923. By far the majority of the men to be rehabilitated will have finished their retraining, it is expected, within a year or two years, some of them in less than six months, and will be back on their feet in that time in professional and industrial ranks.

May Extend Work.

So far no provision has been made by Congress for rehabilitating men whose disabilities do not amount to a vocational or occupational handicap. It is said by those best informed on reconstruction legislation that congress may yet be asked to provide some means of compensatory training, as well as the compensation already paid through the war risk bureau to men who have simply suffered physical disabilities, without economic loss to them, in their country's service. To carry out such a program, it is estimated that the federal government would have to expend upwards of half a billion dollars.

Up to the present time the vocational education board has got in touch with some 153,000 men and has actually surveyed and interviewed 110,135 soldiers, sailors and marines injured in service during the war. The majority of these will not be able to obtain retraining under the act of congress as it now stands, even with recent amendments.

All of the men more than 10 per cent disabled will receive money compensation to the extent to which they are disabled, but only those whose disabilities mean a handicap to them in the occupation or vocation they followed or in ordinary lines of work can be retrained and fitted for a new trade or profession. Of those already interviewed 14,876 have been approved for training, and 7,356 of these have actually been placed in training. Several thousand additional men will have been approved by October.

According to recent figures reported to the bureau of war risk insurance by the army, 149,433 men have been discharged from service with a disability.

"Only cases showing 10 per cent disability have been reported," the report states. "At this rate it seems probable that the total number of cases of disability resulting from the war and entitled to (monetary) compensation will be close to 200,000."

$350,000,000 Needed.

A central case board has been established in Washington to finally approve all cases sent in by the distant boards. This system, it is explained, is necessary because the board is operating under a budget system of expense from congress. This board reviews an average of 1,000 cases a day. The majority of these have to be rejected, though, if a more liberal law should be passed by congress in the future these cases would be reopened and it is supposed the majority of them would then be approved. The documents and evidence in each case are carefully preserved so that the expense of obtaining them again will be minimized.

Should a more liberal law be passed opening up possibilities for training for such a group of men it is now estimated it would take at least $350,000,000 to pay the support, tuition, and textbook cost alone. Further provision would have to be made for traveling expenses of the men, medical attention, and mechanical appliances and for equipment and administration of the broader law. At present the board is paying the tuition, traveling expenses, textbook cost, and other special expenses for the men it approves, in addition to paying $100 to men with dependents and $80 a month to men without dependents, and family allowances to the former class.

Cops Give Hermit His Annual Shave and Bath

Dallas, Tex.—John May, aged hermit who lives in a dilapidated shack in the river bottoms here, has been given his annual haircut, shave and bath. The police did the tonsorial act and also administered the scrubbing. It took several of the cops to do it, for John is a strong man and put up a determined struggle throughout the preformance. He went to the police station with grizzly hair and beard, which reached almost to his waist. He came away with a smooth face and head and smelling like high-priced toilet water.

John got his first haircut, shave and bath in twenty years last year when the cops ran him in and trimmed him up.

Gas Masks for Painters.

See Ship Which Routed Foe Subs

Thousands Pay to Get View of Great Britain's Mystery Craft.

DEVELOPS 23-KNOT SPEED

First of the "Hush" Craft the British Public Has Been Permitted to See at Close Range—Doughboys Inspect Ship.

London. — Thousands of persons waited for hours to get a close-up peep at the P-31, a British antisubmarine "mystery" ship, which was moored off Queen Victoria embankment for a two days' public inspection at the close of the official peace celebrations.

The P-31 was the first of the "hush" craft the public was permitted to see at close range.

It was only ten yards from the embankment to the quaint looking U-boat fighter, but the intervening distance had to be made in small boats. These each carried eight passengers, and the fare was one shilling, so the watermen's pockets soon were bulging, but there was no complaint about "profiteering."

Doughboys Inspect Ship.

Among the curious who swarmed over the vessel were a number of American soldiers. Some of them took a peculiar interest in the guides' explanations and comment on the boat's "trick" fittings—her geared turbines, gadgets, depth-charge throwers and paravenes.

It recalled to them a night of peril through which they passed from Southampton or Winchester across the submarine and mine-infested English channel, en route to Havre or some other French port—and the war. That night of fearful expectancy passed safely, they had marvelled at the efficiency of the convoying craft which they knew had been off in the darkness somewhere, plowing through rolling breakers, eager for an encounter—with its frequent aftermath of "oil and bubbles" from a vanquished undersea boat.

But as these doughboy spectators heard a member of the crew of the "hush" ship say: "She does everything but loop-the-loop," and saw others demonstrate parts of the ship's fighting equipment hitherto kept secret, they understood why they had been so secure.

Twenty-three-Knot Speed.

The "P-31" is 244 feet long, with narrow beam, seven-foot draft and equipped with independent engines, fore and aft, that can speed her through heavy seas at 23 knots an hour. Built high forward and low at the stern, the vessel has somewhat the appearance of a submarine—an effect that her designers intended.

"Fritz sometimes would think she was a 'sub' and would open fire on her—but when she slewed around in her own length and got into action Heine was sorry he had spoken," said a sailor who had been through eight engagements on the fighter.

There had been other brushes with enemy craft, he explained, adding, "but unless you can bring home a bit of the corpse, the admiralty say, 'not proven.' It's no use to tell them about the 'oil and bubbles,' they're no proof, because Fritz used to release oil and bubbles to make us waste ammunition."

WATERSPOUT WRECKS HOUSE

Debris Strewn Along Connecticut Coast for Distance of Two Miles.

New York.—Reports came from Norwalk, Conn., of damage done by a cyclone and waterspout which passed along Long Island sound.

After severe thunder storms from the east and west met, a waterspout was seen to form about a half mile off shore at Roton Point. It was at least 100 feet high.

The spout traveled a mile and a half, then at Betts Island, Norwalk, it struck the forty-five foot launch Anna and lifted the cabin off, leaving the rest of the launch undamaged.

Eight men who had come from New York in the launch were in a house near the shore. The house was moved several feet off its foundations by the waterspout and the second floor and attic were carried away and smashed to pieces. The debris was strewn along the coast for two miles.

Ten Million Are Coming

Europe Expects Greatest Exodus in History.

United States Warned to Take Steps to Guard Against Being Swamped.

London.—The greatest exodus in history is looked for as soon as Europe finds the necessary transportation facilities. Information gathered by the British government indicates 10,000,000 persons are eager to leave the continent. The situation is regarded as full of perils.

Britain, fully aware of all that this exodus will mean, will continue its immigration restrictions. A government official said:

"Britain cannot sustain any more than it has, and the emigrants will likely seek homes in the United States."

Officials here are inclined to warn the United States to take steps guarding against being swamped.

British officials hope some 2,000,000 Jews of eastern Europe will go to Palestine, but no one has any idea of how to sustain the rest of the would-be emigrants except by such aid as to make it possible for them to stay in their respective native countries.

Storage of food, lack of production, and unsettled political and social conditions are expected to last for a long time all over Europe. Passenger ships are booked months ahead, but there are not enough vessels for carrying even the most important and immediate traffic.

Italian provinces in which 70 per cent of the communes are without telephone service are authorized to issue bonds jointly with the communes to extend the wire facilities.

MINERS STRIKE DATE SET

Convention at Cleveland Voted to Quit Work Nov. 1 Unless Demands are Met by Operators.

Cleveland, O.—Demands for a 60 per cent increase in all mine wages, a limit of six hours a day underground, a five-day week, with time and a half for over-time and holidays and improvements in conditions of labor were adopted by the convention of the United Mine Workers of America.

The convention then adjourned to await the result of the joint wage scale conference with the operators of the central competitive district. Should a satisfactory new agreement be reached by the representatives of the miners and operators at this conference the convention will be reconvened at Indianapolis to accept or reject it. Should no agreement be reached in time to be ratified and come into effect by November 1, a general strike of all bituminous coal miners in the United States will automatically ensue on that date which may extendt to the Canadian coal fields if the international executive board and the representatives of the Canadian districts so determine.

Accept or Reject League.

Pueblo, Colo.—Reducing his fight for the peace treaty to a direct acceptance or rejection, President Wilson in an address invited the senate to take a definite and unmistakable stand one way or the other.

In two addresses in Colorado, one at Denver and the other here, Mr. Wilson reiterated again and again that the whole controversy had resolved itself into a clear-cut question of whether the United States should go into the League of Nations or stay out. It was time, he said, that the nation knew where it was to stand.

At every station the train passed in Colorado the people had gathered to see it and at Colorado Springs, where a short stop was made, he was given a tumultuous welcome by a crowd which jammed the station platform and overflowed into the adjoining streets. Before his speech here he drove through the State Fair grounds, where another crowd cheered him.

Johnson Goes West Again.

Washington.—The departure of Senator Johnson, republican, of California, for the Pacific coast to keep up his attack on the peace treaty, is accepted to mean finally that his proposed amendment to equalize the voting power of the United States and Great Britain would not be called for weeks hence.

Next in public interest in the capital is the action of Senator Ashurst, democrat, of Arizona, in wiring President Wilson that he would vote for ratification of the treaty, believing he could render the country and the world, he said, a great service by accepting it as it is, without amendment or reservation.

Storm Toll Close to 500.

Corpus Christi, Tex.—The list of dead and missing from the tropical storm and tidal wave which struck this vicinity Sept. 14, now stands at 498. Announcement has been made that there are now ample food supplies to meet all emergency needs for at least 15 days. Two thousand persons are being fed daily at soup kitchens established by the Red Cross. It was stated that 500 state guardsmen would be kept here indefinitely for patrol purposes. Bridges on all railroads leading into Corpus Christi, except the Texas National railway from Laredo have been wiped out by the flood.

Faith in League Not Shared.

Paris.—In explanation to the chamber of deputies, Premier Clemenceau, after declaring that the league of nations could exist even though rejected by the United States senate, asserted that it was precisely because the French felt that the league of nations was an insufficient guarantee for some years to come that the protective treaties of alliance between France, Great Britain and United States were drawn up. The treaties, he said, were not dependent upon the league, and without it France would be protected.

Americans Flee from Fiume.

Triest.—So strict are the regulations at Fiume that it is impossible for even the allied commanders to enter or leave the town. American headquarters has been established on board the cruiser Pittsburgh, under command of Rear Admiral Andrew, which is anchored at Abbasia on the bay of Fiume, five miles northwest of the town of Fiume. The American consul and all the American residents in Fiume have been taken aboard the flagship.

Plan World Aerial Derby.

New York.—Plans have been formulated for an aerial derby around the world, for which the prizes may total $1,000,000, it was anounced here by the Aero Club of America.

No General Strike.

Boston.—The Boston Central Labor union at a meeting here for the purpose of determining its attitude toward the police strike in this city decided against calling a general strike at this time.

Sinn Fien Papers Suppressed.

SCORES STEEL HEAD

GOMPERS DENOUNCES POLICY PURSUED BY JUDGE GARY.

STRIKE LABOR'S LAST RESORT

Tells Congress Cummins Bill Would Leave Workers at Mercy of Employers.—Describes Conditions.

Washington.—Declaring that Judge E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, had dealt "in a flippant and autocratic fashion" with labor representatives, Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, in summing up before the senate interstate commerce committee organized labor's opposition to the anti-strike section of the Cummins railroad bill, said the steel strike was an example of the necessity for the use of the strike by labor unions. Appearance of Mr. Gompers before the senate committee came at the end of the second day of continued attack by labor leaders against the provisions of the Cummins bill, which would make striking men conspirators against commerce and liable to fine and imprisonment.

"When employers say there is nothing to talk over," said the labor chief, "when they refuse to meet representatives of labor, when they say, these representatives represent nobody, how else is there to convince them but by a strike. Look at the steel strike now That was the position Mr. Gary took. A letter to him from me sent last June is still unanswered.

"A committee to see him was greeted with the word that he had nothing to discuss with them.

"But if you knew conditions in districts the United States Steel corporation controls you would understand. Murder, assault, arrest of men, prohibition of meetings on rented ground, workers dispersed by thugs, gangsters and detective crooks employed by the companies. A woman murdered in cold blood, and the detective who did it released on bond of $2,500 while men arrested in the meetings are held inu $3,000 bail."

"Where's that?" a committee member interrupted him.

"At McKeesport, Pa.," Mr. Gompers rejoined, "that's the sort of thing we have to meet in guiding labor organizations."

G. O. P. Wins First Test.

Washington.—The first test in the fight now being waged in the United States senate about the peace treaty with its league of nations covenant, came last Tuesday on a motion by Chairman Lodge, of the foreign relations committee, to postpone for one week consideration of some forty odd amendments which would relieve the United States from service on commissions created under the treaty. The formal motion, with a fixed date, was put before the senate after the vice-president had sustained a point of order by Senator Hitchcock, leader of the administration forces, for ratification against a motion for indefinite consideration and it was adopted, 43 to 40.

Bandits Steal $240,000.

Chicago.—Three men, one of them John Wejda, a clerk in the Chicago postoffice, who is said to have planned the robbery of an express messenger, were arrested here charged with stealing $240,000 of a shipment of $415,000 from the federal reserve bank here to the Standard Oil company of Indiana, at Whiting, Ind. Of the stolen funds, $93,620 was recovered. The remainder, according to an alleged confession of two of the men, was abandoned at the outskirts of Chicago when the automobile in which they were returning from Whiting broke down.

Robbers Held Up Bank.

Omaha, Neb.—The Citizens State bank at Ralston was held up and robbed of $4,300 at noon last Saturday by three bandits who made their escape in a high powered automobile. Ralston is eight miles west of here. Two of the robbers entered the bank, forced the officials of the institution to hand over the $4,300 in cash and locked them together with a customer in the vault, boarded their car and rode away toward Lincoln.

The men in the vault freed themselves within a few minutes after the robbery. The cashier found a screwdriver in the interior of the vault with which he managed to open the door. The robbers, in their haste, overlooked $30,000 in gold in the vault. No trace of the bandits has been found.

Dry Issue Up in Canada.

Toronto, Ont.—The Ontario legislature stands dissolved, and writs have been issued for a general election on October 20, when the referendum on prohibition will also be taken.

Appeals to Allies.

London.—The Italian government has appealed to the allied powers to send an allied force, exclusive of Italians, to drive D'Annuncio out of Fiume, according to a report here, which is considered reliable.

Urges Industrial Armistice.

Freeport, Pa.—An absolute industrial armistice for six months was urged by Attorney General Palmer here to permit the solution of economic problems arising out of the changes wrought by the war.

Mrs. F. J. Wenck left Sunday evening for Chicago, returning Tuesday noon. Mrs. Joe Wenck, of Garner, who has been visiting realtives in Chicago, returned to Garner with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Schnugg, of El Reno, Oklahoma, left Tuesday after a few days' visit at the Ed. Schaeffer home and visiting other relatives and friends.

Mrs. Thompson, of Waterloo, came Tuesday afternoon to look after her hotel interests here. She has leased the hotel to Wm. Howad who will be the new proprietor.

The Oscar Franzen family, who have been occupying the hotel this year have moved their household goods to Wesley where they formerly resided. They left Klemme Tuesday.

The State Savings Bank are nearly through with their improvements in the way of remodeling and painting. They are now waiting to install a new vault door on their safety deposit vault.

H. J. Thieman shipped a monster of a hog to the sale at Goldfield which was held last Friday. The pig is a Poland China, Big Type, and weighs 720 pounds crated. "Iowa King," as he is called, is 36 inches in height and is 72 inches long. He sure is some fine pig.

M. O. Hocum left for Des Moines Tuesday noon to be present for the big Shriners' doings which were held there yesterday. There were a number of Shriners from Garner and other points up the line who also attended the big doings.

Chas. Busch left last week for the wild and wooly west headed for his ranch at Cody, Nebraska. We presume Charlie is riding bucking bronchos and whooping like a wild Indian. Also we suppose he went out there for the annual round-up.

"Nick" Ell decided that as everybody else in town seemed to be daubing paint he also would daub a little on his own building. The Ford Garage now shines like a new dollar with a coat of new paint applied to places where needed.

Mrs. Wm. Werner was up from Klemme yesterday to make arrangements to again occupy their home here. Will came home from the sanitarium at Fort Dodge Monday. He is somewhat improved in health but is still very weak. They will move here as soon as their house is vacated.—Garner Signal.

C. H. Tompkins of Klemme, has bought one of Dwight Smith's houses in Sunset View and will move here soon. He is agent for the American Life Insurance Co. He was formerly superintendent of schools at Klemme, and is a hustling, wide-awake fellow, and we are glad to see him come to Garner.—Garner Signal.

Rev. Wm. Suckow and daughter, Ruth, were here the past week visiting at the Ed. Schaeffer home and also other relatives and friends. They left for Alabama where they will spend the winter.

Last week the First National Bank was brightened up a bit in the way of having a nice coat of paint applied to the interior. The roof was also touched up some to prevent any leaks during the fall rains.

J. N. Day likes to have things nice and bright and with this idea he looked about for dull spots to brighten. The result being that the front of his store building now looms up with a bright new coat of paint administered by Painter Musfelt the past week.

Livermore and Kanawha are going to construct sewage systems. Livermore has started work while Kanawha has published the resolution of necessity for the first time. Garner is completing such an improvement and Corwith is discussing the matter of installing a sewage system. There seems to be great activity in northern Iowa. A big majority of counties that have voted to pave the primary roads are located in the two northern tiers of counties. When we hear people complaining about northern Iowa we love to call their attention to these facts and to point to towns like Corwith and Kanawha that are under a thousand population, but are constructing substantial improvements such as sewage disposal plants. Let's get in the habit of calling the attention of outiders to the advantage of our progressive state. When we do we will begin calling attention to further and better improvements.—News-Tribune.

TAKE TWENTY STEPS TO START HOME OF OWN

War Savings Stamps Will Do the Trick and Help You to Independence in Life.

The man or woman owning a home rather than renting, is on the way to truest happiness and prosperity. The home owner is a solid and substantial citizen, not a national, economic "floater." He is like a tree that has taken firm root.

The man or the woman not now owning a home should lose no time in beginning to work for the home-owning goal. Saving for a home should begin immediately, since comparatively few are financially able to build on the instant. "The first hundred is the hardest," but the "first hundred" needn't come hard at all, if proper saving methods are put into use.

War Savings stamps, with Thrift stamps as builders, and the new Treasury Savings certificates are admirable friends of the American citizen with laudable home-owning ambitions. It's comparatively easy to save $5, albeit the War Savings stamp which in 1924 will mature at $5 in September, 1919 costs but $4.20. The first $5 saved means the first step, the step that counts, toward the home-owning achievement. Take twenty such steps—buy twenty War Savings stamps—within the current year and your filled 1919 War Savings stamps card may be exchanged for a Treasury Savings certificate maturing, in 1924, for $100. If your "first hundred" already approaches realization, take the twenty steps at a leap by purchasing a $100 Treasury Savings certificate which costs, in September, 1919, only $84, with monthly price and value increase of 20 cents. In September, 1919, a $1,000 Treasury Savings certificate maturing in 1924 costs but $840, with $2 monthly increase. With a building lot and from $1,000 to $1,500 capital, it has been estimated, actual home building, under one of several partial-payment plans, may safely begin.

The business or professional woman with home-owning aspirations pins her faith to War Savings stamps and Treasury Savings certificates. They bear 4 per cent interest, compounded quarterly, they mature in five years, they may be redeemed at any time, at any post office, at face value.

PUT FAMILY ON "SAFETY LANE."

Two hundred War Savings stamps bought this year will be $1,000 in 1924 for that new office equipment, new car, post-graduate course in a specialty, payment toward a home, for the youngsters' education, or against a rainy day.

One hundred stamps now will be $500 then, for advancement or protection; and 50 will be $250.

Fix your own mark of your needs or desires and get there via the W. S. S. route. W. S. S. pay more than 4¼ per cent and are absolutely safe and convenient investments for the busy man or woman.

Ray Yeager left last Thursday evening for Haswell, Colorado, to visit relatives and friends. His wife and little child left a few days before for the same place.

We haven't oue price for bait and another for business.

To our minds, it's better to give all we could.

A Fall Suit or Overcoat bearing our $40 stamp is worth $40 of any man's money and so it goes for everything else in this store.

We have one set of prices one set purpose -- to give the best possible values-your full money's worth without asking.

The Fall Suits for men and boys are ready. You can sure please yourself here.

Soldiers and Sailors To Be Honored

EMME SOLDIERS AND SAIL-ORS TO BE HONORED WITH A GRAND CELEBRATION

URSDAY, OCTOBER 16TH, HAS BEEN SET ASIDE FOR THE GREAT EVENT

ABORATE PREPARATIONS BE-ING COMPLETED

Through the combined efforts of local Red Cross and the assistance the business men and citizens of mme, plans were laid out and ried through to make a big Home ing Day for Klemme Soldiers, lors and Marines, as well as the g men who make this vicinity r home.

The plans as laid out by the various mittees in charge are beng elab-tely worked out to make this the est event in the history of Klem- and vicinity. War is over now and of the Klemme boys are again e. The people of Klemme want to r their heroes by giving them a of celebration and merry making invite all soldiers and sailors to present at the big doings. Klemme ts to welcome her Heroes home n. They have done their part well we want to express to them our ings of thankfulness that they been delivered home again.

t this time it is impossible to give exact program of the events for day, but what we can learn of various committees who are still at work, we have found that the es of the Red Cross will have ds erected about the streets and serve out free of charge to every-y hot home made hamberger and r sandwiches, hot coffee, pickles, to everybody as long as they an empty feeling in their solar s. There will be street enter-ments galore in the form of deville acts of the very latest s, stunts, moving pictures and deville at the Idle Hour all after-n and evening, big dance after-n and evening at the opera house d music and concerts all afternoon evening by the popular Garner ert band, parades, contests, etc. rything is free to the soldiers who g their credentials and register, n they will receive a ribbon or e which admits them to every-g all day and evening. The city Klemme will be thrown wide open he soldiers and sailors that they have the time of their life. In nection with the above there will ubtedly be an airplane present to up the sky, at any rate there will plenty going on right on the nd which will keep you busy.

hursday, October 16th, has been aside especially for the boys of mme who served with Uncle Sam, all soldiers and sailors are in-d, no matter where you are from will receive a welcome in Klem-he promoters of the entertain-t would also like to have as many r in uniform who will as it will ly add to the spirit of the oc-on, but come anyway, the main is that every soldier and sailor Klemme and vicinity are wanted for that day. Fathers and moth-brothers and sisters are also in-d to come with their soldier or r hero. Everybody invited to the doings at Klemme, the best little n in the state of Iowa. We wel-e you.

KETTLE TO SPEAK HERE

ev. Kettle, of the Garner English thodist Church, will preach in the eme English Methodist church on day morning at 11:00 o'clock. Kettle is a very good speaker all are invited to come out and him.

Earl Hubert Hampel, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hampel, was born November 14, 1916, in Ell township, Hancock county, Iowa, and died at the parental home, October 4th, 1919, the cause of his death being cholera infantum.

Earl was a bright little fellow and was enjoying good health up until Friday morning when he seemed to fail and complain of pains. No one thought that it was anything very serious, until Saturday morning when the doctor was called. All that medical skill and kind parents could do was done to save his life, but all efforts proved of no avail. Gdo had planned it different and took him home to heaven to be forever with the angels. He leaves to mourn his early death, his father and mother, three sisters, one brother, 2 grandmothers, 5 aunts, 8 uncles, 20 cousins and many other relatives and friends. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. A. H. Meyer of the First Methodist church on Monday. Interment was made in Calvary cemetery.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors for their kind words and assistance in our recent bereavement, also for the beautiful floral offerings presented in memory of our loving son.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hampel and family

ENGLISH METHODISTS MAKE EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS

Both the English Methodist church and the parsonage are undergoing a period of reconstruction. A large gang of workmen are busy every day at the church grounds and nearly every day we see a new gang at work so presume the men folks of the church each put in some time at the job and that way reduce the expense of remodeling. As we observe it we will begin at the bottom. The dirt has been excavated from beneath both the church building and the parsonage. The basement under the church has heretofore been too small and so by enlarging the basement now there will be ample room for the new furnace which is being installed and also a good big room for coal. Likewise at the parsonage; the cellar has been enlarged and now the entire house underneath is excavated and will be cemented up both floor and walls. A pipeless furnace is also being installed here. A new chimney was built to the ground so that the furnace connections could be made. A porch has been built on in front and the whole exterior is being repainted. The church will also be repainted and decorated both exterior and interior. When completed they will have quite a modern and up-to-date church and parsonage.

We want to call the attention of our readers to the Salvation Army Drive, mention of which has been made in these columns previously. We are sure that Hancock County does not want to fall below its allotment for this worthy wrok, while other counties all around us are going over the top. We are advised that up to date only about $400 has been paid in of the $2,000 asked. This shortage is no doubt caused by the fact that we are occupied with other things, and is in no way intentional on the part of the people. What is needed is that every one give the matter just a little time and step into your bank and subscribe something to help in the work. The banks are ready to give the matter attention and will receive your contribution and forward it to the officers. The Salvation Army has done a wonderful work and is an organization that is of real and permanent value to any country and we are sure that if a moment's thought is given to the matter, everyone will want to help. Let everybody boost.

COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The county Sunday School convention this year will be held at Goodell, on Friday and Saturday, October 17 and 18.

PARSONS SELLS IDLE HOUR

Last Thursday Dr. Parsons came from Belmond, his mission here being that he came for the purpose of disposing of his interests in the Idle Hour Theatre to a company of local men. Mr. Pavey was appointed as manager of the new theatre company and through his able management the company will no duobt make a success in the business. They have many plans in view for bettering the show business in Klemme and the people of Klemme and vicinity will be given the best shows obtainable both in the line of picture shows, vaudeville and plays. The new company will try to give a variety of entertainments as soon as they can get bookings on good clean up-to-date shows. Their first big feature of the season is the picture, "Hearts of Humanity." They are to be given considerable credit for procuring this great picture as it is a picture that is seldom seen in towns any smaller than our larger cities. It is a great opportunity for the people of Klemme and vicinity to witness one of the world's finest pictures right in our own home town. We wish the new company all kinds of good luck and a prosperous business.

THE FLU IS WITH US

Last spring the doctors warned us that very ikely we would have a recurrence of the flu this year, but in a less virulent form. Already it seems to have appeared in isolated cases in the cities and towns, and no doubt it will be appearing in the country here and there. There is no occasion for widespread alarm over the matter, but people should exercise caution.

The trouble generally starts with what seems to be a cold, sometimes quite severe. If the patient is careless serious complications may result, usually taking the form of pneumonia. It is not wise to take chances. The safe thing to do when a severe cold appears is to go to bed and stay there until the symptoms subside, and then be careful until entirely recovered. This reduces the danger of complications to the minimum. In the meantime, try to keep yourself in as good physical condition as possible.

HAND CAUGHT IN CORN BINDER

Last Thursday Chas. Medaus met with rather a painful accident and one which might have resulted in his loosing the right hand. Mr. Medaus was cutting corn with his corn binder when a large ear clogged the machinery and thinking he could make a quick grab could loosen the ear without stopping the machine, he miscalculated and the fork caught his wrist, he gave a sudden jerk to free his hand but the fork was caught in the flesh and he tore loose the upper part of his right hand. He went immediately to the doctor who closed the wound with eight stitches. At this writing he is getting along fine and the hand is healing nicely. Charlie is congratulating himself that he did not loose his hand in the machine.

POST OFFICE GOING UP FAST

Every day now makes a big difference in the looks of the new brick post office building that J. W. Waterman is putting up. The work is being pushed right along now and it won't be long before John will be behind the windows selling stamps in a new location. Not very many towns the size of Klemme or much larger can boast of a post office building. Klemme is one of the best little towns in the state and is booming right along at top speed.

BAND BOYS ATTENTION

There are quite a number of boys and young men in Klemme who are eager to join a band here this winter. We have had quite a number of boys ask us about the band and when we would start, they also want to know about instruments, etc. We have ordered some band instrument catalogs of both new and used instruments. We will call a meetin gsome time in the near future and if the prospects are good for a band for the coming year then we will assign the players and instruments at once and get started on the band. It will also be necessary to get a line on a capable instructor to teach the band thru the winter. Boys watch for further announcements in regard to the band meeting.

AIRPLANE HERE SATURDAY TAKES UP THREE PASSENGERS

Last Saturday mornng about ten o'clock an airplane was heard over head, but it was above the clouds and could not be seen. Soon it landed and came to earth on the east outskirts of town in the Barz stubble field. Soon a large crowd had gathered to see the plane which belonged to McWhorter Bros. at Algona. Howard Doyle was the first to sign the "death warrant" and take a chance about the clouds, he was followed by Burr Church and then the next in line was Ruddy Baack. That seemed to end the list for that day and the aviators flew over to Clear Lake in the afternoon from here. The first time they wre above Klemme they were flying at an altitude of over three thousand feet and were up above the clouds where the sun was shining brightly. They had a little sport chasing a flock of ducks which flew by them and gave them a good chase for a while.

CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Derk Mossel celebrated their Twentieth Wedding Anniversary last Sunday, October 5th. Over thirty relatives and their children were there to help them celebrate the event. At 2 o'clock a fine dinner was served to the guests after which music and singing, led by Mrs. Hans Willer, furnished entertainment for a while. Mr. and Mrs. Mossel were presented with a number of beautiful silver gifts in remembrance of the day.

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS HAVE PICNIC

Tuesday evening after school the students of the High School left in cars for the woods to enjoy a picnic supper. There were several car loads of boys and girls, chaperoned by the high school teachers, Prof. Collins and Frank Gruetzmacher. Frank is a lucky guy as this is the second school picnic he has gotten in on, we suppose he likes to be a "kid" himself once in a while. The high schoolers report that they had a big time and are looking forward to another such event.

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Lewis, and Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Ell left yesterday for Garden City, Minn., in Mr. Ell's car for a visit with relatives. However, Tuesday morning Lew Lewis could be seen industriously digging in his garden. At first one would think he was looking for a buried treasure, but upon close investigation it was discovered that he was digging angle worms. Now we know where Lew intends to do most of his visiting when he gets to Minnesota. You will see him out along a certain creek pulling in the big ones. Ernest Lewis and George Hoppe also went to Garden City for a visit the same day.

Deyoe Speaks on Consolidaiion of Schools At Meeting Held Friday Eve.

Consolidation Recomended

DEYOE GIVES INTERESTING TALK ON CONSOLIDATION OF SCHOOLS

RECOMMENDS CONSOLIDATION FOR KLEMME

Last Friday evening a meeting was called at the Idle Hour Theatre for the purpose of discussing the proposed consolidation school project for Klemme and country territory taken in on the 58 sections for a consolidated school district. There was a fairly good crowd in attendance, many others had planned to come but on account of the threatening condition of the weather some of the country people did not get in to hear the talks and for their benefit the Editor of this sheet will endeavor in a way to put before them the most important points that were brought before the meeting by the varoius speakers. Right here we will say that the men who spoke at this meeting are all experienced men in consolidated school work and what they tell us and what we here repeat can be relied on as the rock bottom facts. The meeting was opened by some good singing by the Klemme male quartet who were brought back for an encore.

A. Wellemeyer introduced the chief speaker of the evening and the foremost educator in the State of Iowa, Mr. A. M. Deyoe, ex-state superintendent of schools, who has been very active in consolidated school work for several years and who has watched the success or the failure of such work. What Mr. Deyoe tells us of consolidated schools is spoken with authority for if there is any man in this state who knows what he is talking about when it comes to consolidated schools or other eduactional matters, it is A. M. Deyoe as he has made the subject and study of education his life work, and being retired from state work or holding state office does not yet stop him doing educational "missionary work."

Mr. Deyoe stated that he would be fair and candid and "would not try to put anything across that is not the best for the boys and girls of this community." Also "I will not recommend anything which is not best for our boys and girls." He further goes to state that consolidated and other schools are the foundation for democracy and it is our duty to make our schools the best, just as we would make our churches and our homes the best and be loyal to each of these.

There are about 230 Consolidated Schools in the State of Iowa at this time and any one of these schools is as good as any large school that can be found in the larger cities. Consolidation of schools makes it possible to give the children of the rural communities the same educational advantages as the child who attends the school in the larger city. All pupils in a consolidated school are placed on the same level for they have the same opportunities, it creates harmony between the boys and girls of the country and the boys and girls of the town, which leads to harmony between the country people and those in the smaller towns as they have something in common, they have a consolidated school toward which they look up proudly.

Mr. Deyoe points out that there will be a lot of objections to a consolidated school but he says that it has been his experience that the man who objects to a consolidated school right down deep in his heart worships the round dollar more than he does his children. He would rather let them cntinue going to the old time one-room, one teacher building than to spend a few extra dollars more a year and let his child attend a consolidated school where he or she can complete a high school education and have all the advantages of a big school. You may think you have a wonderful fine school in your little district. Perhaps you have a fine new school building, you have a basement in it, you have it heated with a furnace, you have nice new desks in it, you have it all fixed up fine and dandy, which is all very good, but did you ever stop to think what you really do have in that fine new little country school? It amounts to only this—You still have the old pioneer days school house, one room, one teacher, yes and that teacher perhaps just barely passed thru high school and don't even hold a third grade certificate, just teaching on a permit because teachers are so scarce for the country schools, as a good teacher can get her job in the city or consolidated school. Of course your taxes are going to be some higher, that is natural. With a consolidated school we will have twelve grades to take care of, which is four grades more than you have in your one room school and high school costs a little above the grades also. But the difference in taxes makes very little difference in what you are paying now for the up-keep of your country school and what it would cost to conduct a consolidated school. Figured out we believe it amounts to somewhere near $25 for a quarter section. At Meservey they levy 1 mill for school house fund and 33 mills for general fund. Compare this with what you are now paying, also remember Meservey has only 22 sections to draw from. We have 58 in our proposed district, which will make it much less on the whole. The chief objections to a proposed consolidated school for Klemme and surrounding territory seems to be that of transportation. Now there were men there from Meservey and Hayfield and they told about tansportation. They said they had no trouble at all, that the children never got cold in the winter for the wagons were warm and dry and that they were certainly a happy bunch of youngsters, so there can be no objection there. "Well," says the farmer, "My children only need an eight grade education, that is enough for them, I'm going to make them farmers anyway." That is another argument brought up so often. Now if anyone needs a good education these days it is the farmer. With land at $250 to $300 an acre it is going to take brains to come out ahead. It will require more scientific farming and that is one of the things that will be taught in a consolidated school. A farm is just as big a business proposition as a bank, a store, or any other business concern. And as Mr. Deyoe says they will find all kinds of excuses against consolidation, but they won't hold water. Mr. Deyoe stated that if he could have found a better way than consolidated schools he would have recommended that, but he says he will not recommend anything that will hinder the education of the Iowa boy and girl . Deyoe stands for consolidation. He says it is the best thing that Klemme and vicinity can do to better their schools. The other gentlemen who were present told of the success they have had with their consolidated schools and that they would not go back to the old method of schooling for any price.

Now peple, think over the situation seriously, don't rush at conclusions. Give it ftir thought and don't take the words of the "knockers," but find out from some good authority; ask the county superintendent, ask any director of consolidated schools, and look up the taxes, costs, etc., and we believe you will find that consolidated schools are the best and that you will vote for it. You want your children educated right here at home—consolidation solves the problem. Think it over.

PUBLIC SALES

We call your attention to the sale ads in this issue; one for John Heginger who tells the people about his sale in a quarter page ad. which you will find elsewhere in this issue. A half page ad tells the story of the sale which W. A. ("Abe") Scott will pull off the 15th. Look both the ads over carefully, they are both good big sales. While you are reading the ads bear in mind that the Klemme Times will handle your advertising in a most capable manner. We print sale bills that have class to them and we will advise you on any matters pertaining to advertising a sale and can figure for you what amount of advertising it is advisable to carry according to the size of your sale, etc. Let us take care of your sales advertising in such a way that it will bring you only the best results.

BERMUDAS HAVE STORY LIKE U.S.

But Revolution Failed to Gain for Them Their Independence.

PEOPLE HELPED WASHINGTON

Supplied Ammunition With Which Continental Army Forced British to Evacuate Boston—Islands Discovered as Result of Shipwreck.

Washington, D. C.—"The Bermuda Islands suggest the adventures of Robinson Crusoe in their colonization and present in their later chronology a curious parallel to United States history, with the events consistently predated by a number of years."

With this statement the National Geographic society prefaces a bulletin on the Bermudas, a principal group of the British West Indies, which some Englishmen suggest should be ceded to the United States in part payment of the American war loans to Great Britain.

"The Robinson Crusoe comparison obtrudes because the islands were discovered and later settled as the direct result of shipwrecks, and the settlers had to build themselves a bark to set sail again," the bulletin continues.

"As for the anticipation of American history, on a miniature scale, it may be noted that the colonization took place seven years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Mass.; that witches were burned, Quakers were persecuted and miscreants were ducked before similar occurrences are recorded in New England, and that slavery was abolished in 1834. The Bermudians protested long before 1776 against the mother country's rule, until the island prisons were over full, but relief came, in their case, not through a declaration of freedom but by the accession of Cromwell.

Helped to Start Revolution.

"But the essential point of contact of the American with the Bermudian arises from the all-but-forgotten fact that while the immortal Lafayette gallantly helped the colonies conclude their war of independence, the Bermudians supplied the ammunition to begin it.

"So acute was the need for powder in 1775 that George Washington wrote to the governor of Rhode Island that 'no quantity of powder, however small, is beneath notice.' Learning that there was a store in Bermuda, and that the islanders were anxious to have the embargo lifted upon shipment of food supplies from the colonies, Washington addressed a letter to the people of the island, who had shown themselves fered during the war by the cessation sympathetic with the American Revolution, promising them ample supply of provisions and 'every other mark of affection and friendship which the grateful citizens of a free country can bestow upon its brethren and benefactors if they would make this ammunition available for the Continental army.

"It so happened that the powder had been procured before the letter was delivered, and with it the Continental army compelled the British to evacuate Boston.

"Not only the sale of powder but the fact that Bermuda allowed the colonies to have salt, so incensed the governor of Bermuda that he upbraided the citizens for treason, and feeling ran so high that he was removed. His successor was a native of Salem, Mass., whose loyalty to the mother country was such that he gave up large estates in the colonies rather than join the revolutionists. He was connected, both by blood and by marriage, with the Winthrop family. Under his rule the island's full allegiance to England was restored.

"Browne was succeeded by Henry Hamilton, during whose adminstration the town of Hamilton was founded and named for him. This town today is the seat of the island government. It has a population of less than 3,000.

"Hamilton is on Main island, or Bermuda, while St. George, the former capital, is on the island of the same name. There are more than 300 small islands in the Bermuda group, of which only a score are inhabited. The total population of the islands in 1916 was little over 20,000, of whom about one-third were white.

"Juan Bermudez, sailing from Spain to Cuba in 1515 with a cargo of hogs, discovered the islands when a storm blew him to their shores. Apparently he left some of the hogs there, for later visitors found the animals on the island. From him the islands were named, and thus originated the 'hog money,' coins stamped with a hog on one side and a ship on the other, which still are preserved in various collections.

"The islands were settled through the efforts of Sir George Somers, who became impressed with their fertility and beauty during a sojourn enforced by the wrecking of the ship which was carrying him to Virginia."

This Poker Player Was Thoroughly Cleaned Out

Cobalt, Kan.—So completely cleaned out was Jean Paul Asselin after a poker game on Third St. here that when he came to R. L. O'Gorman, J. P., to swear out a warrant against a fellow player whom he suspected of stealing his roll, he could not produce the dollar fee demanded. He had to borrow ten cents from Chief of Police Bonnville to make up the required sum. Asselin charges that $190 disappeared during his temporary absence from the scene of operations, and he swore a warrant for the arrest of Sam Borlich, known to the police as "Minnesota," accusing him of stealing the money.

MARKS SPOT OF YANKS' LANDING

France Lays Cornerstone of Monument at the Pointe de Grave.

WALLACE PRAISES FRENCH

President Poincare Urges Both Nations to Guard Against Estrangement—Lafayette Sailed for America From Same Port.

Pointe de Grave, France.—France paid lasting tribute to American active entry into the great war by laying the cornerstone of a monument here commemorating the landing on the spot of the first contingent of American troops in 1917. Speeches by President Poincare and Hugh C. Wallace, the American ambassador, were the features of the exercises, appropriately held on the birthday of Lafayette, who sailed for America from this same port in 1777.

The scene was a brilliant one, numerous detachments of French and American soldiers, sailors and marines assembled among the sandy dunes of the Pointe giving color to the picture. The guard of honor, for instance, was composed of United States marines, many of whom were veterans of the fighting on the Marne in 1918.

Distinguished Gathering.

In addition to Premier Clemenceau, Marshal Foch and other distinguished Frenchmen, numbers of prominent Americans assisted in the ceremony, among them Frank L. Polk, under secretary of state; Gen. Tasker H. Bliss and Brig. Gen. W. D. Connor, now commander of the American forces in France.

A crowd of some 3,000 witnessed the ceremony.

President Poincare in his speech called to America to continue that close relationship which caused the United States to come to the aid of France.

"In the plains of Picardy, Lorraine and Champagne by the side of 1,400,000 whom the war has mown down," said he, "sleep your Americans whose mothers do not know their tombs. They all sacrificed to the same ideal the French died for.

"Let us bend down over these tombs and listen. It is the same voice which everywhere arises from the depths of the earth. 'We have suffered,' they say, 'in order that the world should become free.' To you now falls the duty to watch that never again may leap up this danger which we have removed. Do not allow France and America to estrange themselves one from the other. Do not draw apart those hands which are now joined. Be on your guard that there shall never be kept between you misunderstandings which sooner or later might be transformed into disagreements.

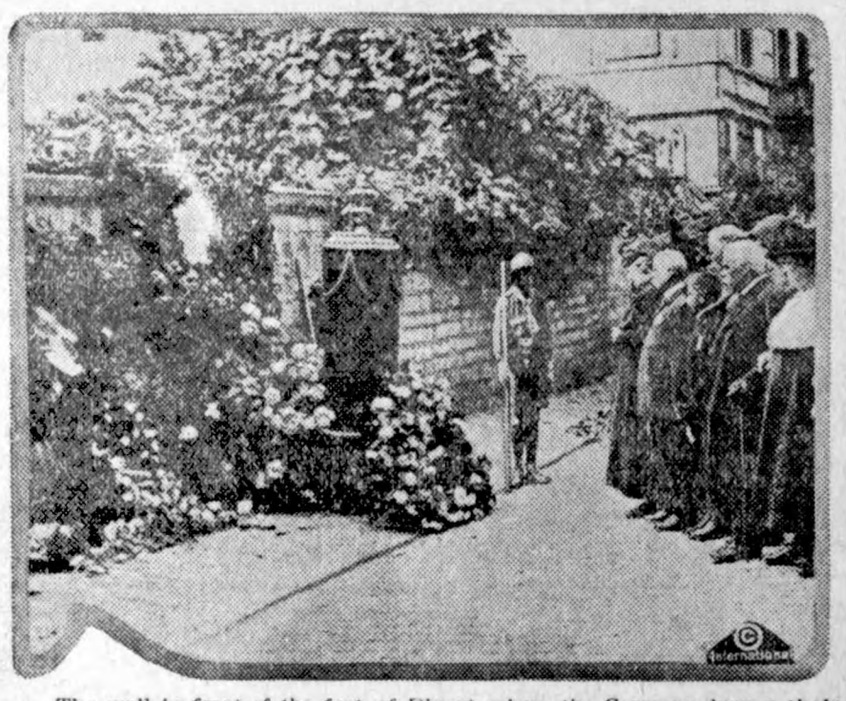
"'Tomorrow no more than yesterday can you dispense with each other. Separated you will quickly be exposed to the offensive return of violence. Side by side the peoples who have won the war will be strong enough to make such war impossible.'"

Praises Spirit of France.

American Ambassador Wallace said the monument would be to "victory and liberty."

The speaker praised the spirit of France and said that while "many and great are the glories of France there is none that compares with the glory of the Marne."

THE WALL OF DEATH AT DINANT



The wall in front of the fort of Dinant, where the Germans during their occupation of the city summarily executed 166 Belgian civilians. This photograph was made on the fifth anniversary of the massacre when relatives of the martyrs placed flowers on the spot in their memory.

Offered His Friend Choice of Nice Jails.

Kansas City.—A certain saloonkeeper entered the office of Sam Hargus, assistant United States district attorney, here, and explained that he wanted to know if he could sell some liquor with his 2.75 per cent beer. Others were getting away with it, he declared, and he wanted to know if he could.

"How far would I get?" he asked.

"Well," replied Mr. Hargus, "seeing that you are an old friend I think I can fix you up—so you could get your choice of any jail in the Western district of Missouri. We have some pretty fine ones; some say they have never seen better."

"I'll stick to my near per cent beer," replied the saloonkeeper as he hurriedly left.

KILLS MORE THAN WAR

Tuberculosis Claims 150,000 Victims a Year.

Survey Indicates 2,000,000 Unsuspected Sufferers From Disease in Nation.

New York.—A survey of the country shows the United States is face to face with a condition more menacing to its people than actual warfare, according to the report of the executive committee of the National Tuberculosis association.

The survey shows an annual death rate from tuberculosis in the United States of 150,000, and more than 1,000,000 active cases of the disease in the nation.

To combat and prevent the spread of the disease, an intensive national campaign is necessary, it was asserted. Funds for the campaign will be sought by a ten-day sale of Red Cross seals, beginning December 1. The total of the several state budgets will be more than $6,500,000.

During the discussions, attention was called to the revelations of the war-time medical examination boards, made up largely of members of the association. Official figures were cited, showing that of the men called to the colors, nearly 100,000 were tuberculous.

It was pointed out that the death rate of 150,000 a year from one preventable disease means the sacrifice of more lives than the United States army lost in the year it was actively engaged in the war.

A South African government board will award research scholarships and make grants toward the expenses of scientific research.

MANY DIE IN RIOTS

WHITES AND BLACKS IN SOUTH FIGHT DEADLY BATTLE.

TWENTY-TWO REPORTED KILLED

Negroes Incited to Revolt by Propagandists—Troops Rushed to Scene of the Disturbance.

Helena, Ark.—The death toll in two days of race war at Elaine, Ark., near here, stands at twenty-two, five whites and seventeen negroes.

The rioting situation, although intensified by the murder of Alderman O. R. Lilly by four negroes whom he was guarding in an automobile, is well in hand. More than 500 soldiers are patrolling the riot districts.

Besides the known dead several negroes were reported to have been killed during the rioting.

The posse, which had ridden to the scene of Lilly's death, shot and killed the four negroes.

Governor Brough, at whose request 500 soldiers were sent to the district, is confident that the military forces and the civil officers were enough to control the rioters.

According to the information given to officials, negroes have been organizing for the past few weeks by holding secret meetings, drills and forming mystic organizations.

They are said to have purchased high-powered rifles and were preparing to force their demands on the whites in this section and on the government that they be paid 50 cents a pound for their cotton.

A large amount of literature tending to show that the outbreak was due to propaganda circulated among negro tenant farmers, making roseate promises if the negroes would band together and arm themselves, has been taken possession of by military and civil authorities. The agitators, the literature indicates, represented themselves as agents of the federal government and gave promise of 50 cents a pound to be paid for cotton direct to the small farmer to replace the method of settlement now in force between the landowner and tenant.

One report said to have been circulated among the negroes was that a strike of cotton pickers was to be declared in a few days and tenant farmers would be expected to remain idle until after the coming meeting of the world cotton congress in New Orleans, when a delegation was to come to the cotton belt to adjust matters with the negro cotton raisers.

England Faces Serious Crisis.

London.—The railroad strike situation has become the gravest in the history of any labor crisis of the British empire in the present generation. All efforts of the transport workers' federation to find a bridge to enable renewal of negotiations between the government and the national union of railway men failed.

The government's proposal for a seven-day truce for the railroad men to return to work and permit resumption of negotiations on the disputed points, coupled with the offer by the government to resort to arbitration in the event of failure to reach an agreement has been rejected by the railway men's union and the whole possibility of mediation for the moment seems to have completely collapsed.

An appeal has been made by the government for a citizen army to protect peaceable citizens and to aid in the work of maintaining the supply of food.

Royal Pair Cancel Dates.

New York.—Because of the illness of President Wilson, King Albert of Belgium has decided to cancel all his engagements in connection with his tour of the United States after those in Boston and Buffalo up to October 14.

From Buffalo the royal visitor will go to some point in California and will remain there until he is scheduled to visit San Francisco on October 14. His schedule after that date stands tentatively.

The announcement of the change in the plans was made by Breckenridge Long, third assistant secretary of state, who has charge of the Belgian party's tour of the country.

Auto Thieves Busy in Dakota.

Lead, S. D.—During the past few days auto thieves have been busy in the Black Hills and four automobiles have disappeared. Indications are that an auto stealing syndicate is operating in this part of the country and is getting the cars to other parts of the United States.

Bank Robbers Kill Sheriff.

Smith Center, Kan.—Sheriff O. H. Munger was shot and killed and another man was wounded in a fight with bandits who robbed a bank at this place.

Balloon Travels Long Distance.

St. Louis, Mo.—The Ohio, the smallest balloon entered in the national championship balloon race, landed at Perry Sound, Ontario, several hundred miles north of Sincoe county, Ontario.

Another Assault at Omaha.

Omaha, Neb.—With no less than eight hundred federal troops patrolling and surrounding the "black belt" in Omaha, another assault upon a white woman was committed by a negro in the very heart of the district patrolled by the soldiers.

BIG PERIODICALS SUSPEND

Strike in Printing Industry at New York Causes Some of Largest Magazines to Quit Business.

New York.—Ten thousand members of local printing trades unions employed in 250 local plants, which publish virtually all the trade journals and magazines issued here and a large percentage of the books, were forced out of work by a simultaneous "lockout" and "strike." This action follows the refusal of the employers to grant a 44-hour week and a weekly increase of $14 in all wage scales.

The most important development was the strike of 450 compositors in support of the striking printers and in defiance of the International Typographical Union, which, with the other international bodies, has denounced the strike and "outlawed" the striking pressmen.

John Adams Thayer, executive secretary of the Periodical Publishers' association, announced the list of periodicals of national circulation which have suspended publication to join in the lockout. They include Collier's, Christian Herald, Metropolitan, Current Opinion, Good Housekeeping, Harper's Bazar, Hearst's, House and Garden, Independent, McCall's, McClure's, Cosmopolitan, Outlook, People's Home Journal, Pictorial Review, Theater, Today's Housewife, Vanity Fair, Vogue, Woman's World, Delineator, Everybody's, Home Sector and Designer, as well as many publications issued by the Frank A. Munsey company.

President a Sick Man.

Washington.—President Wilson is a "very sick man" and "his condition is less favorable," it was said by Dr. Cary T. Grayson, the president's physician, in a statement issued from the White house. The president's condition has become so serious since his return from touring the country in the interest of the peace treaty, that Dr. Grayson, his private physician, has called in Dr. F. X. Dercum, a Philadelphia neurologist, and has consulted two naval doctors. Rear Admiral Stitt, head of the naval medical school, and Captain J. B. Dennis, director of the naval dispensary in Washington, regarding the president. There is much speculation in the capital as to the president's real condition and concern is generally expressed.

Unable to Locate Wife.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Desertion, it is understood, will be the grounds on which David Eugene Thompson, former United States ambassador to Brazil and Mexico, founder of the Lincoln Star, railroad magnate, hotel owner and capitalist, hopes to obtain divorce from his young wife, Florence Cook Thompson, said to be fifty years his junior.

In his magnificent home at 1809 Wellington Drive here, Mr. Thompson refused to discuss his marital troubles. However, he said he is unaware of the whereabouts of his wife, from whom he has lived separate for the last six months, it is said. His son, David Eugene Thompson, Jr., is with him.

Says Steel Strike Success.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—A printed statement signed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and William Z. Foster, secretary of the national committee, made public here, declared:

"The steel strike is a tremendous success. Over 370,000 steel workers are on strike."

The statement asserts the union ranks are being augmented daily by many more strikers. The signers criticized the press and declared corporations were using it to discredit the strike.

To Bring Dead Yanks Home.

Washington, D. C.—Bodies of all American soldiers interred in Germany, Belgium, Italy, Great Britain, Luxemburg and northern Russia will be returned to the United States as soon as necessary transportation can be arranged. Secretary Baker announced he had issued instructions for the purchase, storage and traffic division of the general staff to take charge of the matter and to hasten it as much as possible.

Luxembourg and Belgium Break.

Brussels.—Economic negotiations between Luxembourg and Belgium have been broken off by Belgium as a result of the referendum in Luxembourg under which France became Luxembourg's financial ally. The Belgian minister in Luxembourg has been recalled.

Nebraska Furnishes Sugar.

Chicago, Ill. — District Attorney Clyne announced that enough beet sugar should arrive in a few days to provide Chicago and Illinois with 12-cent sugar during the present critical period. The supplies will come from Colorado, Utah and Nebraska.

To Look Into Sugar Prices.

Washington—Investigation of wholesale and retail prices of sugar by the federal trade commission was ordered by the house through adoption of a resolution introduced by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts.

Famous Cowboy Succumbs.

Topeka, Kan.—Charles Jesse Jones, known throughout America as "Buffalo" Jones, famous cowboy and big game hunter and friend of the late former President Theodore Roosevelt, died here.

TELLS SENATORS ABOUT BEEF COSTS

This May Throw Some Light on the Price You Pay for Beefsteak.

Testifying recently before a body of senators in Washington, a vice-president of one of the large packing concerns (F. Edson White of Armour and Company) made the astounding statement that so far in their fiscal year, which would cover the past eight or nine months, his company had "made no money whatever on beef."

This statement is doubtless well nigh incredible to the average man. Yet it was made in full knowledge that the senators had access to the company's books.

Recovering from the first shock, this same average man will say, "Yes, but the packers are shrewd; what they do not make on the beef they more than make up on the hides."

But even this illusion was destined to be shattered. Mr. White explained that his statement included everything that was derived from the steer as purchased—the hide, fat, even the intestines which are used largely for sausage casings.

Make Money, Nevertheless.

Well the packers make money—how do they do it? Mr. White admitted that they did, quoting figures secured by auditors of the Food Administration, to the effect that packers' profits on food commodities of all kind last year were 1 6/10 cents on each dollar taken in. These would include such things as sausage, shortening, canned meats, etc., in addition to fresh meats, hams and bacon. On all the products of his company, Mr. White explained, comprising both foods and inedible commodities, the profits during the same period were 1 8/10 cents on each dollar sale.

All of which would lead many to say that the packing business is not well understood. It isn't. Yet as one of the leading industries of the country, its workings and, above all, its profits, should be familiar matters to us. It is quite useless to orate against the high cost of living without digging into some of these fundamentals.

By-Products at Market Values.

One of the most enlightening bits of Mr. White's testimony was his explanation of the way in which cost price of beef is arrived at. If a steer is bought at $125.00 and hides are bringing $16.00 in the open market, then $16.00 is credited to the cost of the steer. If hides are selling at $23.00 that amount is credited. The visceral fat, offal and everything else that comes from the steer are likewise credited at their prevailing market values. What remains is taken as the cost price of the meat. The beef carcass is then shipped to one of the local distributing branch houses, and the manager there is given the cost price with instructions to sell the beef at a profit if he can. But in any event, whether the local market be lively or dull, he must sell for what he can get, for the commodity is a perishable one and must be sold.

Manufacturer's Profit on By-Products.

However, there is another hitch to the packing business, quite as little understood apparently, that goes to show how a loss on fresh meats may be accompanied by a profit on the total amount of business done. Take, for example, the banjo strings aforementioned, which are made from the intestines of sheep. The department that makes banjo strings (and likewise surgical ligatures, tennis strings, etc.,) "buys" the intestines from the sheep-killing department, paying exactly the same price that these bring when sold to the outside market. On this basis the string department manufactures its strings and sells them, bringing a profit into the business.

In like manner the fertilizer department buys blood and tankage; the soap department buys fats; the glue department buys hoofs, horns, bones and sinews; and so on through the list of "by-products." The fertilizer, the soap and the glue, just as the music strings, bring in a manufacturer's profit.

In all cases these by-products, whether they be sold to outside manufacturers or to one of the manufacturing departments in the business (at the same prevailing market price), are credited to the cost of the meat portion of the animals, just as in the instance of the hides mentioned above. Thus the "utilization of by-products" system of which we have heard much, and the method by which it is conducted, show the packers' manufacturing profit on a great variety of commodities ranging all the way from pharmaceuticals to glue, do, in reality, bear the burden of fresh meat prices.

Senator Kellogg, of Minnesota, in discussing maladministration of railroads by the Government, said:

"There never was a Government operation that was not wasteful and inefficient. It is inevitable under our organization that it should be so. It is not the province or the prerogative of a Democracy like ours, instituted for the best Government on the face of the earth, to manage the business of the country."

—Congressional Record, Aug. 5.

big factory for the manufacture of the Greimann Ditching Machine is assured, thing for Garner. Last day evening in answer to an- cement that a meeting would be held to talk over the Greimann propo- ition, a crowd of farmers and busi- n men that filled the room gather- in the Zeiger hall. A proposition s put up to those present, and Mr. mann explained a number of de- s of the manufacture of this ma- e. He gave a number of reasons y his machine is superior to others he market, and told of the great demand for such machines. His prop- on was that he sell the new com- , which will be known as the mann Ditcher Company, all his t stock for $85,000 and he d take stock in a $100,000 cor- ion to the amount of $20,000. effort was not forth that evening the next day, and the $100,000 subscribed with the exception of w thousand which Mr. Greimann d them to hold as some of his ds had as they wanted stock they had not been solicited. This s that Garner will have a large tory for the manufacture of this chinery and it will employ a large e of high class mechanics. Just where it will be located or what kind of a building will be erected has not yet been determined.—Garner Signal

Origin of Coal.

The very useful article known as coal is fundamentally vegetable—the product of chemical and other action upon the base vegetable growths of the carboniferous age. The same thing may be said of the diamond, which is nothing more than chemically treated carbon or vegetable. Any half decent book on geology will tell you all about what coal is.

Natural Result.

Green—So young Swift has gone broke, eh? What was the trouble?

Brown—He was on pleasure bent, and overdid the thing.

What Is America?

What is America? It is not a territory, it is not a set of institutions. It is a body of ideals and ideas. It is not a geographic boundary. It is a thought, a concept.

Proof of Poverty.

Seeing a tramp hurrying away from a large house a fellow professional asked him what luck he had had. "It ain't no use askin' there," was the reply. "I just had a peep through the winder. It's a poverty-stricken house. There was actually two ladies playin' on one pianner."

Insidious Malice.

Malice, in its false witness, promotes its tale with so cunning a confusion, so mingles truths with falsehoods, surmises with certainties, causes of no moment with matters capital, that the accused can absolutely neither grant nor deny, plead nor confess guilt.—Sir Philip Sidney.

In Alaska.

The stand of timber on the two great national forests in Alaska is estimated by the forest service as more than seventy billion board feet, while the annual growth will, it is said, produce pulp wood enough for the manufacture of 3,000 tons of wood pulp a day.

Sunshine Destroys Germs.

The clothing we wear harbors myriads of disease germs. This is especially true of woolen garments. Cotton and silk do not retain germs so readily as wool, and are therefore more suitable for clothing to be worn during exposure to illness. Nurses are obliged to wear cotton garments when in attendance upon the sick. To destroy germs in clothing there is nothing more potent than bright sunlight and air. Hang clothing and blankets, quilts, etc., outdoors where the sun and wind may beat upon them for several hours, and disease germs lurking in their meshes will be destroyed.

Quantitive Analysis.

Although a half-loaf is better than no bread, one is traditionally opposed to paying a whole jitney for it.

Blindest of All.

No man is so blind to his own faults as a man who has the habit of detecting the faults of others.—Faver.

Avalon Farms HOG-TONE

Two of These Shoats Gained 36 Lbs. More Than The Other Two in 90 Days

Listen to a fellow Indiana farmer—H. Vandolah, of English, down in Crawford County, says to you:

"I used Avalon Farms' HOG-TONE on two shoats taken from the sow in good shape. Fed them with two others of the same litter. Gave each the same amount of feed.

"I got 36 pounds more gain on the two treated with HOG-TONE over the two not treated. In 90 days' feeding! And got the nicest meat I ever saw on the treated ones. Could tell the difference at sight on the pole as we fed up. Did no find a worm, either stomach nor kidney worm in the treated ones."

And—figured roughly—treating those two shoats for 90 days cost less than 25 cents! For you can treat one hog from the time it is 6 weeks young until it is 8 months old and keep it free—absolutely and entirely free—from all worms with HOG-TONE for 20 cents! That means 31 weeks' (217 days') treatment at a total expense of two dimes. Figure it out for yourself.

Then come in and talk to us about this great, new vermifuge and hog conditioner that is death to all worms—worms of the stomach, bowels, lungs, liver, kidneys.

GETTING IT STRAIGHT

Last week we clipped an article from the Goodell Globe about the hand car smash up between here and Goodell some time ago. Mr. Tom Blank, local section foreman, requests that the editor of the Times print the following as the article from the Globe did not contain the entire facts of the matter. Mr. Blank's letter follows:

Klemme, Iowa, 10-3-'19.

Mr. Jorgenson.

"Dear Sir: I read in your paper today about the collision of the two motor cars, Klemme and Goodell, this is misrepresented and I wish you would correct it in the next paper. The way it did happen—

"Klemme car was going south running about 15 miles per hour when we saw the Goodell car coming and we stopped our car at once and came to a full stop before the Goodell car came within 500 feet, but seeing them coming too fast and did not think that they would stop their car on time I ordered the Klemme car to back pu but failed to get up speed enough to get out of their (Goodell car's) way. I ordered the men to jump and then the Goodell car crashed into the Klemme car, doing some damage to our car, but not so bad but what we were able to proceed to Belmond where we were going to work."

Yours truly,
(Signed) T. Blank

The road leading to the summit of Pilot Knob has been fenced securely with a heavy wire fence and reinforced with a stockade of posts set in the former roadway and it is now impossible to get to the top with a car or buggy. The fence is about a hundred yards above the point where the east and west roads that lead to the base of the mound unite. When fenced it was intended to stop even pedestrians but the fence to the right of the former roadway has been stretched until a person is able to get under it using a few gymnastics. The only way to reach the summit of the knob is to leave the car at the union of the east and west roads and to climb the rest of the way on foot. Fall plowing is well under way throughout the county, owing to the recent rains, which have softened up the ground so that it is in excellent condition. Farmers and agriculturists over Worth county are generally in favor of early fall plowing as a method of eradicating weeds.

In keeping with the high prices of land, what is believed to be a record breaking price for corn in the field was paid by Ezra Roland to B R. McGirr and H. M. Stafford, all of West Union. Thirty acres of standing corn has been sold by Roland at $75 an acre or a total of $2,250.

Reports from all over the state indicate that the Salvation Army home service campaign in Iowa is meeting with general success, and that despite unfavorable weather conditions which have prevailed during the drive the state will measure up to the standard in war campaigns.

A new distinction has recently been given to automobilists who successfully make the trip to the summit and down Pikes Peak, thus making them a life member of the Pikes Peak Auto club. Corning's postmaster, Ed Granther, has secured the honor while on his vacation trip.

Small towns in the state are writing E. H. Sands, state housing commissioner of Des Moines, for information as to how they may make the housing law effective by the adoption of ordinances. Without village enactments the law does not operate in cities and towns smaller than first class.

How would you like to have 800 acres of corn that would yield 90 bushels to the acre? That is exactly what A. C. Davidson, in Appanoose county, claims to have on his farm. Davidson says that every day the frost holds off he is $100 richer. A. D. O'Dell, formerly an attorney in Des Moines, has 400 acres of corn in Boone county, that produces a million dollar smile on his countenance.

Mrs. William Peck, the wife of a prominent farmer 5 miles north and east of Creston, died very suddenly. She was 43 years old at the time of her death and leaves three children.

The poultry men of Iowa at a meeting appointed committees for the coming poultry show in January. The premium list committee was instructed to get out the list as soon as possible and send them to points in Iowa. The members are highly elated over the prospects of the show and will work hard to make it a big success.

The educational board of Tama county at its last meeting recommended the employment by the schools of the county a trained nurse to the scholars of the schools and work in connection with school authorities safeguarding the health and averting the possible spread of contagious diseases among students during the coming school year.

After several months of preparation, the plant of the Burlington Caset company commenced operations. Fifteen employes entered service in different departments of the factory, most of them being in the wood working shop of the plant. The "cloth shop" of the factory, where the covering is placed on caskets, has been started in full operation.

The Traer city council at a special meeting closed the deal for the purchase of a new engine and generator for the municipal electric plant at a cost of nearly $9,000. Delivery in sixty days is guaranteed. A small brick addition will be necessary to make room for the new machinery. Work on a foundation for the engine will begin immediately.

The Tama county fair closed with a deficit which will probably reach $1,500 and possibly more. Altho the opening was the most favorable in the association's history, the rain and the muddy track eliminated all possibility of a successful fair from a financial standpoint. The attendance was good, but not sufficient to overcome the losses.

Farmers north and east of Kanawha have just recently taken steps to build electric lines from Kanawha to their farm homes which will give them all the electrical conveniences of the city. This certainly is a great step forward in farm progress and one that will be more widely followed in the near future as in these days of high costs, farm conveniences of every nature are considered wise investments.

Eight cents will probably be the maximum price paid for corn husking this autumn. It is probable that the average price will be about 6 or 7 cents a bushel. Effort is being made through the farm bureaus of Iowa and the farmers' associations to stabilize the price to avoid profiteering of the huskers. An average day's work for Iowa corn huskers ranges from 70 to 100 bushels.

Iowa's pastures are saving the lives of thousands of Montana and western North Dakota cattle. Due to the great drouth cattle on the Montana and Dakota ranges are facing starvation. If feed cannot be brought to them or they are taken to corn belt feed lots, death is certain. The latter is being done this month on a scale that means the conservation of an enormous beef supply to the nation.

For the first time in many years, the Pella fair had a week uninterrupted by rain. Crowds were large, the attractions fine, and the directors are planning to enlarge the grounds, erect new buildings, and having next year's fair on a much larger scale.

Johnson county is preparing to welcome all homecomers from the great war. Iowa City is planning to hold a grand celebration and homecoming for the entire county at an early date.

Detective Con McCarthy was shot and instantly killed by a negro burglar whom he had under arrest on ther steps of the Flynn Dairy company's plant. The murderer is the negro house prowler who has robbed a score of homes in Des Moines in the last three weeks, and who has evaded every trap the police have laid to catch him. Chief of Police Ab Day, and safety superintendent Ben Woolgar have offered a reward of $900 for information leading to the arrest of the murderer.

The Shannon City Farmers' Cooperative company incorporated for $20,000. They expect to raise this money within the next three or four weeks and start doing business in a big way in Shannon City. There are now 65 farmers belonging to this organization and they are all very enthusiasti over this organization and there is no question but what this organization will have wonderful success from the start. They are planning on handling their own grain, coal, farm products and mill feeds.

A comparison of the prices agreed to be paid producers of fluid milk dealers for milk delivered during the month of September in the different markets the prevailing prices for August in the same markets show that for the U. S. as a whole "producers prices" increased approximately eight tenths of one cent per quart, or 39 cents per hundred weight. A comparison of milk dealers selling prices for August and September show that out of a total of 101 cities the retail prices were increased in only 18 cities. In mist cases the increase in the price of bottled milk delivered to family trade amounted to either ½ or 1 cent per quart. In only one or two cities did the increase amount to as much as 2 cents or more per quart.

The recent sale of $750,000 bridge and sewer bonds by the city of Cedar Rapids was the largest amount sold in recent years by any municipality in the state, and the bonds were also the first bearing 4½ per cent interest since the war. One of the surprising things in connection with the sale is the fact that the two bond companies which were the highest bidders were from this state and outbid the big bond companies from the east. There were nine bids submitted and fifteen bond houses were interested.

VOTE DOWN CHANGES

FIRST TEST VOTE ON TREATY AMENDMENTS IS TAKEN.

BUT FOUR REQUIRED ROLL CALL

Thirty-two Rejected By Unanimous Consent — Advocates of Pact Elated Over the Victory.

Washington, D. C.—At last reaching the stage of action in its consideration of the peace treaty, the senate swept aside in quick succession thirty-six of the forty-five amendments which had been written into the document by the foreign relations committee.

The smallest majority as recorded against any of the committee proposals was fifteen and the largest was twenty-eight. All of the amendments considered had been introduced by Senator Fall, republican, New Mexico, and were designed to curtail American participation in European settlements resulting from the war.

Of the nine amendments yet to be acted on, six relate to the Shantung section, two propose to equalize voting power in the league of nations and one would limit American representation on the reparations commission. In the absence of a definite agreement for disposition of these proposals, senate leaders thought that the debate might run on for several days before another roll call is taken.

The democrats presented a solid front against the amendments, except for Senators Gore of Oklahoma and Thomas of Colorado.

Seventeen republicans, on the other hand, lined up against the first committee proposal to be considered and most of them stood with the democrats on all succeeding roll calls. Many of them announced they were for reservations which they believed would cover the same ground without endangering the treaty.

Following the senate's action treaty advocates declared themselves elated and the opposition leaders also were claiming a victory on the showing made for their amendments.

There were only four roll calls, the other amendments, three in all, being vote ... down by acclamation.

Belgian Royalty Reaches U. S.

New York.—The king and queen of the Belgians, with Prince Leopold, heir apparent to the throne, arrived here from Europe aboard ... liner George Washington. They have come, as his majesty expressed it, shortly after the steamer docked, to voice their gratitude and that of their people for the generous aid given them by this country in years of direst need when their nation was threatened by Germany. The Belgian royal pair were given the official freedom of the United States by Vice President Marshall.

Non-Partisan League Bank Closed.

Fargo, N. D.—The Scandinavian-American bank of Fargo, cornerstone of the financial fabric of the National Nonpartisan league, was declared insolvent by the North Dakota banking board, and ordered closed. Charges that violations of the state banking law have occurred are made by the banking board, but responsibility is not placed in the official report of the examination of the bank, made public simultaneously with the closing of the institution.

Sugar Sent to Nebraska.

Washington, D. C.—A total of 3,472,000 pounds of sugar has been shipped into Nebraska in the three weeks prior to September 25, according to figures furnished to Senator Hitchcock by the U. S. sugar equalization board of New York. The shipments were made by four western companies, but do not include California beet sugar. The board believes that this shipment has vastly improved the sugar shortage situation in Nebraska.

Bank's Liabilities Large.

Fargo, N. D.—Assistant Attorney General A. E. Sheets, jr., of North Dakota, who carried into effect the order of the state banking board to close the Scandinavian American bank of Fargo, announced that the examination made under his direction disclose the aggregate liabilities of the bank to be $1,606,847.

France Ratifies Treaty.

ONCE A TERM OF REPROACH

"Grass Widow" Used by Teutons to Indicate an Unmarried Mother—Other Possible Origins.

The term "grass widow" very likely originated from the wording of a canon law of the eleventh century, which ordained that a widow should remain "under God's protection and grace" for a full year after her husband's death, and then marry if she pleased. Such women were "widows of grace," and in later parish registers they are described as "grasse widowes." In the time of Sir Thomas More the term "grass widow" was applied to unmarried mothers, and in this sense it was used in most of the Teutonic languages. In modern times the term lost that reproach, and has been applied to the wives of men long absent from home. Another explanation of its origin is found here in the United States. During the days of gold rushes it was common for men to board out their wives until they had made enough to start a home in the West, and this, in the picturesque speech of the time, was termed "putting one's widow out to grass."

A Mystery.

"I was peroozing along down in the holler, taking the short cut to the cross roads store," related Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark., when—whang!— went a gun, and filled me full of fine shot. Took me yur in the back, and there, and yonder, and one or two places in the legs, with a few shot lingering around permiscuss. I gave a yell, and I sorter recken the feller, whoever he was, sorter seen what he'd done, and lit out. 'Tennywhat he'd done, and lit out. 'Tennyrate, I never caught sight of him, and so I don't know no more than the man in the moon what sort of a varmint he mistook me for."—Kansas City Star.

Too Ill to Work

Scores of Women

in homes, stores, offices and factories are not fit to be at work. They toil on day after day and year after year suffering with distressing weaknesses and derangements, hoping against hope that they will soon feel better, but how can they hope to do good work or escape permanent invalidism?

Such women are in danger of derangement of women's functions. They owe it to themselves to try that good old fashioned root and herb remedy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which for more than forty years has been restoring American Women to health and strength.

Here is a Notable Example

Joplin, Missouri.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to see if it really would do as it was advertised and it sure did, and more. I was weak and could not do much work, had bearing down pains and had to go to bed. I learned about the Vegetable Compound from my mother and my husband told me to get it. After taking one bottle I was able to be on my feet most of the time and do my work again. I have a baby eleven months old and I have done all my own work, even the washing and ironing since she was three weeks old. I certainly recommend your great medicine to everyone who complains of female trouble and I am more than willing for you to use my testimonial."
—Mrs. TIMOTHY GRANEY, 426 Connor Ave., Joplin, Mo.

And Another

Chicago, Illinois.—"I suffered for four years with pains in my sides, hips and legs and a terrible backache. I could not do any work at all. I was treated by many physicians but they did not help me. I read in one of your books where other women have been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I tried it and it helped me very much so that now I can do everything in the house. I have told my friends about Vegetable Compound and you have my permission to use this letter."— Mrs. I. OVENSTEIN, 902 S. Marshfield Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

A Vanished Fragrance.

We've noticed this since the high cost of living got out of almost everybody's reach: The neighborhood does not have that fragrant, spicy, smell which used to proclaim the arrival of canning time in the good old days. And we hazard the guess right now that mighty few folks this year will be seen tripping across the street carrying a quart jar of mustard pickles or green tomato relish or crab apple jelly just for their friends to try. When one has to choose between a ton of coal for a long hard winter or a bushel of tomatoes, coal is likely to get the preference.

Chas. Busch returned last Friday from Cody, Nebraska, where he went to look after his ranch interests at that place. He informs us that he has three hundred head of steers on the place and about seventeen head of horses also. He states that the cattle have made wonderful gains this summer and are looking fine. Crops are good around there and everybody is busy. He also told us the cowboys around Cody are having their annual round-up celebration October 14, 15 and 16, at which time they will have bucking broncho exhibitions, shooting, rope throwing both plain and fancy, steer throwing and bull-dogging and various other cowboy sports for three big days. Soldiers and Sailors Home Coming at Klemme, Iowa, Thursday, Oct. 16.

After about nineteen months' service in the U. S. Navy, George Hoppe has returned to Klemme again. For the last eight months or more George has been with a mine sweeping outfit clearing the sea of the dangerous mines and other explosives laid during the war. Before peace was declared he was doing service as a gun pointer and had a number of thrilling encounters with the Hun and their submarines. We welcome him back to Klemme again.

Much Iron in New Zealand.

Great deposits of iron exist in New Zealand, the iron sand at Taranaki, near New Plymouth, being particularly noted. There attempts were made as early as 1848 to produce pigiron in commercial quantities, but none met with success until recently, when a plant constructed upon advanced ideas turned out a few tons of excellent quality.

Some Form of Work Imperative.

There must be work done by the arms or none of us would live; and work done by the brains, or the life would not be worth having.—Ruskin.

SOLDIERS STRONG FOR THE SALVATION ARMY

"The Salvation Army was able to render full, heartfelt, intelligent, effective service in France because it had long rendered service of the same quality here at home.

"The boys who have come back from the fighting and the hardships of camp and trench life overseas are strong for the Salvation Army.

"It is not difficult to understand why the Salvation Army workers overseas have earned such a splendid reputation for devoted, effective work for the fighting men in the war area. There is not a man or woman of them who had not enlisted for service to humanity long before they took up the work of relief behind the battle lines of France. They were trained to the task they undertook, in more than one sense of the word.

There is no other organization that will undertake so much and endure so much to render service where it is most needed. There was never, in all the history of human endeavor of its kind, an organization that would follow a man to the last ditch in war or in peace so faithfully as the Salvation Army has done."

For the last six months the Salvation Army has continued in the state of Iowa they have held 1,103 street meetings, 2,335 meetings in their halls and churches, 42 meetings in jails, and they have also spent 10,436½ hours visiting the poor and sick. They have confirmed 587 people in their church meetings and 19 converts in jail meetings.

A portion of the money they are raising in the Home Service campaign will be used for carrying on this work.

America's gratitude for the work of the Salvation Army in France and in Belgium was voiced in a resolution introduced in the senate by Senator Watson of Indiana, conferring upon Miss Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army in America, the rank of brevet colonel in the United States army, and further recommending that a gold medal be awarded her and that, through her, the thanks of congress be extended to the Salvation Army.

8 pounds more gain on the two with HOG-TONE over the two ed. In 90 days' feeding! And nicest meat I ever saw on the ines. Could tell the difference on the pole or cut up. Did no' erm, neither stomach nor kidney the treated ones."

And—figured roughly—treating those two shoats for 90 days cost less than 25 cents! For you can treat one hog from the time it is 6 weeks young until it is 8 months old and keep it free—absolutely and entirely free—from all worms with HOG-TONE for 20 cents! That means 31 weeks' (217 days') treatment at a total expense of two dimes. Figure it out for yourself.

Then come in and talk to us about this great, new vermifuge and hog conditioner that is death to all worms—worms of the stomach, bowels, lungs, liver, kidneys.

39 YEARS AGO AND NOW

It was in the sunny state of Kansas 39 years ago, that I purchased my first self binder, in fact it was one of the first self binders ever brought to that county. I was proud of my binder—it did such nice work, tied the bundles so quick and neat with a smooth wire band. But one day when I was about half through with my first harvest, I came to the field after dinner to hitch to my binder as usual and continue cutting, when low and behold, where the binder had stood was a pile of ashes still hot and smoking. At that time I ddi not know how my binder could have burned in so strange a manner. I was almost sick with disappointment at the loss of my machine. I had mortgaged my farm for the few hundred dollars required to pay for it. It was a hard blow to me, financially.

The next day three harvest hands were caught burning another binder some 20 miles west of me. They had piled a few shocks of grain around and over the machine and set it afire.

In court these men told the judge what a great calamity it was to have self binders which would throw thousands of harvest hands out of employment. They were sure that hard times were coming.

But, in spite of the knockers the self binder came and has come to stay until something better is invented to take its place. What would we do today without the self binder?

Just so it is today in regard to the matter of consolidated schools. The knockers are at work trying to hinder the good cause. Some are alarmed about the taxes, others are afraid of the hauling—the horses might run away, the train might run over the school bus, and many other complaints. Let's keep in mind the main idea and that is we must have better schools. More will be required from the boy and girl of tomorrow and unless we at least keep up with other communities in the matter of education our children will have to take a back seat in the struggle for a place when they are grown.

Right here let me remind you of what Mr. Deyoe said: "Consolidation is the best solution for the school problem of the small town and the country," and he further said, "I don't know of a more favorable location in Iowa for consolidation of schols than the Klemme territory."

Therefore, let's join the Boosters in everything and see the world move and prosper, and especially right now let's Boost and work for Better Schools.—Contributed.

Wesley News-World: Miss Carmon Braley is a patient at the Park hospital in Mason City as a result of a fall into an open cellar at Garner. She had visited at the Carl O. Roe home over Sunday and on Monday morning was hurrying to the train and just opposite this seven foot cellar the wind blew her hat up and she reached to catch it. She leaned against the frail railing which gave away, throwing her head first onto the cement floor seven feet below. As a consequence of the fall she sustained a double fractured arm with a splinter of the bone protruding thru the flesh resulting in the loss of considerable blood, before it was finally stopped at the Mason City hospital. A severe bruise on the right kneecap; the skin peeled off the ends of the fingers of the right hand and her nose badly bruised, which was thought at first to be broken.

Mrs. Wm. H. C. Mantie returned Saturday from a few days visit at Albert Lea. While there she attended the barbeque which was held Soldiers Home Coming Day, September 29th. Mrs. Mantie told how a shack was built in which eight head of cattle were cooked for the occasion. A large engine was placed beside the building and steam forced into it to cook the beef. Serving was done from 11:00 a. m. to 11:00 p. m. Everything was free. 12,000 gallons of coffee were served that day. On account of the rain a large roof was built over the grounds so that everyone would be out of the rain.—Britt News.

MORE SUGAR SOON

Waterloo.—If the public will possess itself in patience for another week, sugar will be coming more regularly and in more plenteous quantities, according to local jobbers.

The Colorado beet sugar factories will begin operations October 6th and the factory at Mason City, Iowa, will start about October 20th. This latter date is later than usual, the delay being due to the wet weather.

There seems to be little fear of a sugar famine in this country as Louisiana and the beet sugar crop became available at a time when supplies from other sources have about petered out, says John Mehlhop, secretary of the Iowa-Nebraska Wholesale Grocers' Association. The bulk of the year-end shortage, however, will have to come from the beet crop.

Jobbers advise the public to continue its practice of conservation of sugar and to buy in only two pound lots, making this go as far as possible for family uses.

Within the next month at least sugar should be fairly plentiful in northeastern Iowa, as the factory at Mason City will be then well underway. Most of the sugar for this section of the state will be supplied by the Mason City plant because the freight rates will be lowre in northeastern Iowa than elsewhere.

If everyone will conserve and not go shopping from store to store buying the maximum at each place the sugar situation will be easier in the next two weeks.—Marshalltown Times-Republican.

IOWA AND NEBRASKA LEAD IN NUMBER OF CARS TO POPULATION

America has one automobile to every 17 persons, according to figures compiled by the Goodrich Rubber Company. Iowa and Nebraska, with an average of one car to every 7 persons, stand in the lead. South Dakota has one car to 9, Kansas 10, North Dakota 11, Michigan 12. Indiana, Ohio and Wisconsin each have one car to every 15 persons. Illinois has one to 17, New York one to 23 and Pennsylvania one to 24. Figures show that the rural fields are the most fertile ones for the automobile salesman and that the motor vehicle is so general in use on the farms as to be considered almost a practical necessity for the farmer.

BOYS BRING ALIGATOR FROM PASTURE A MILE FROM TOWN

Perry, Iowa.—What's the use going to Florida and Egypt to hunt big game when you can come to Perry and find real sport?

Harold Raber and Burton Thomas know.

They bagged an aligator on Jack Bruce's farm a mile from town yesterday, using a club and a shot gun and it didn't have a pink tail or walk on crutches either, for the lads who brought it down are only 13 years old and strangers to the varied animal forms that reside in red likker.

They found the aligator sunning himself on top a muskrat house.

It was four feet long and put up a vicious fight.

A number from here attended the dance at Garner Tuesday evening. Music was furnished by Gardner Bros. Royal Hawaiian Orchestra.

In their electin last week Tuesday on hard surfacing of the primary roads Wright County voted it down flat. They voted 2061 against and only 1432 for paved roads. Only four precincts carried out of the nineteen. Those which carried were Clarion, Pleasant, Eagle Grove and Eagle Grove Township. This means the county on the south of us will stay in the mud for at least two years while we, in this county, will joy ride around on paved roads.

They are having a Home Coming at Thompson, Iowa, today also and along the same lines as Klemme. However, we have a lot more entertainments on our list than the town of Thompson.

Mr. Geo. Griggs, of Goodell, was a business caller in Klemme Tuesday.

J. T. Griggs and W. S. Sherwood returned last Thursday from a few days' business trip to Steel, N. Dak., where Mr. Sherwood purchased 200 acres of land. J. T. Griggs purchased a quarter section when he was there in August. J. T. was also out there in the middle of September where the hunting season opened up and he said he never saw so many ducks and geese in his life. Needless to say J. T. had his automatic shot gun with him and got his share of the shooting while he was there, even if he did have to pay $25 for a non-resident hunting license, but he said the sport was well worth the price of the license.

Oskaloosa, Iowa.—"For years I was simply in misery from a weakness and awful pains—and nothing seemed to do me any good. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and got relief right away. I can certainly recommend this valuable medicine to other women who suffer, for it has done such good work for me and I know it will help others if they will give it a fair trial."—Mrs. LIZZIE COURTNEY, 108 8th Ave., West, Oskaloosa, Iowa.

The cultured young lady from Boston who was visiting in Richmond had mentioned so often that she spoke half a dozen languages that the company was getting decidedly bored, as no one present was able to prove her powers as a linguist. Finally, she turned to a tall, lank gentleman and asked: "And how many languages do you speak, Mr. Blank?"

"Three, ma'am," drawled the Southerner: "poor English, fair Virginian, and perfect nigger."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

The Namur of Rotterdam—Ship of Mystery.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle.

In the intensity of my feelings I must have unconsciously spoken aloud, for a shaggy head suddenly popped out from the berth beneath where I lay, and Haley's interested voice asked solicitously:

"Hy, thar; whut's up, mate? Ye was mutterin' 'way thar an' not disturbin' me none, till ye got ter talkin' 'bout sum feller called Sanchez. Then I sorter got a bit interested. I know'd thet cuss onct," and he spat, as though to thus better express his feelings. "The d——d ornary pirate."

I laughed, my whole mental mood changed by this remark.

"Do you refer to 'Black Sanchez?' I've heard of him; were you ever in his hands?"

"Wus I!" he laughed grimly. "I hed eight months of it, mate, and a greater demon never sailed. The things I saw done ye'd never believe no human bein' could do. If ever thar wus two people in one skin, sir, it's thet Black Sanchez. When he's playin' off fer good he's as soft an' sweet as a dandy in Piccadilly, an' when he's real he's like a devil in hell."

"Were you a prisoner—or did you sail under him?"

"Both, fer the matter o' thet. He give me the choice ter serve er walk the plank. I wus eighteen, an' hed an o' mother at Deal."

"I see; but later got away?"

"Ay, I did thet," chuckling over the recollection. "But I hed ter wait eight months fer the luck."

"I had a shipmate once," I observed, interested in his story, "who claimed to have seen the fellow; he described him as being a very large man, with intensely black, hawklike eyes and a heavy black beard almost hiding his face."

"Maybe he looked like that when he saw him, but he ain't no bigger man than I am; he won't weigh as much by fifteen pound. Fact is he mighty seldom looks the same, fer thet's part o' his game. I've seen him in all sorts o' disguises. It's only his eyes he can't hide, an' thar's been times when I thought they wus the ugliest eyes ever I saw. He's sure an ornary devil, an' when he gits mad, I'd rather be afront of a tiger. Besides fightin's his trade, an' no weaklin' ain't goin' ter control the sort o' chaps he's got ter handle. Most of 'em would murder him in a minute if they dared. Oh, he's bad all right, but yer wouldn't exactly think so, just ter look at him."

"What, then, does he really look like?"

"Oh, a sorter swashbucklin' Spanish don—the kind whut likes ter dress up an' play the dandy. He's got a pink an' white complexion, the Castilian kind, yer know, an' wears a little mustache, waxed up at the ends. I heard he wus about forty-five; I reckon he must be thet, but he didn't look older than thirty."

Haley dropped off to sleep, but my mind continued to wander until it conjured up once again this West Indian pirate. His name and the story of his exploits had been familiar to me ever since I first went to sea. While only one among many operating in those haunted waters his resourcefulness, daring and cruelty had won him an infamous reputation, a name of horror. In those days, when the curse of piracy made the sea a terror, no ordinary man could ever have succeeded in attaining such supremacy in crime.

Black Sanchez—and Haley pictured him as a dandified, ordinary appearing individual, with white and red complexion, a small mustache and flashing dark eyes—a mere Spanish gallant, without special distinction. Why, that description, strangely enough, fitted almost exactly this fellow on board, this other Sanchez.

The suspicion which had crept into my mind was so absurd, so unspeakably silly and impossible that I laughed at myself and dismissed the crazy thought. Chuckling over it I finally fell asleep.

CHAPTER V.

The Namur of Rotterdam.

The brig, with all sails set and favored by a strong wind, drew rapidly in toward the point of landing. The great majority of the prisoners remained on deck, chained together and helpless, yet surrounded by armed guards, while the few who had already been purchased by passengers humbly followed their new masters ashore the moment the gangplank touched the soil of Virginia. There were five of us altogether thus favored, but I was the only one owing allegiance to Roger Fairfax. The rude landing wharf along which we lay was already densely crowded. Altogether it was a bustling scene, full of change and color, the air noisy with shouting voices, the line of wharves filled with a number of vessels, either newly arrived or preparing to depart. It was with no small difficulty we succeeded in forcing our way through this jostling throng until we attained to an open space ashore. I followed closely behind the three composing our party, Roger Fairfax and Sanchez, with the laughing girl between them for protection. Fairfax was evidently well known to a number present, for he was being greeted on all sides with hearty handshakes and words of welcome.

We boarded the Fairfax sloop. The baggage was transferred. I worked with the Fairfax servants and it cut my pride to the quick. Out in the bay I was sent to the wheel.

Not another sail appeared across that surface of waters, not even a fisherman's boat, the only other vessel visible along our course being a dim outline close in against that far-away headland toward which I had been instructed to steer. I stared at this object, at first believing it a wreck, but finally distinguishing the bare masts of a medium-sized bark, evidently riding at anchor only a few hundred yards off shore.

The Spaniard presently pointed out to Fairfax the position of the bark.

"Surely a strange place in which to anchor, Lieutenant," said Fairfax. "Bark rigged and very heavily sparred. Seems to be all right. What do you make of the vessel?"

The Spaniard twisted his mustache but exhibited little interest, although his gaze was upon the craft.

"Decidedly Dutch, I should say," he answered slowly. "The beggars seem quite at home there, with all their washing out. Not a usual anchorage?"

"No, nor a particularly safe one. Travers' place is beyond the bend.

"I Had Eight Months of It, Mate."

We'll put up with him tonight. D——n me, Sanchez, I believe I'll hail the fellow and find out what he is doing in there."

Sanchez nodded, carelessly striking flint and steel in an effort to relight a cheroot.

We came about slowly. The distance to be covered was not great, and in less than ten minutes we were drawing in toward the high stern of the anchored vessel.

No evidence of life appeared on board, although everything looked shipshape alow and aloft, and a rather extensive wash flapped in the wind forward, bespeaking a generous crew. A moment later my eyes made out the name painted across the stern—Namur of Rotterdam.

Fairfax leaned far out across the rail as we swept in closer, but the Spaniard exhibited no particular interest in the proceedings. A hundred feet distant I held the dancing sloop to mere steerage-way, while Fairfax hailed.

A red-faced man with a black beard thrust his head up above the after rail and answered, using English, yet with a faint accent which was not Dutch.

"We ran down to see if you were in any trouble. This is a strange place to anchor. What are you—Dutch?"

The fellow waved his hands in a gesture indicating disgust.

"Dat's eet. Ve're ov Rotterdam—you see ze name ov ze sheep. But ve not sail frum thar dis time—no. Ve cum here from ze Barbadoes," he explained brokenly, "wiz cane sugar an' hides. Ve vait here for our agent."

"But why anchor in a place like this? Why not go on up to the wharves?"

"Vye not? For ziz—I no trust my crew ashore. Zay Vest Indy niggers, an' vud run avay ven ze chance cum. I know vat zay do."

In spite of my efforts the two vessels were drifting rapidly apart. Dorothy appeared at the door of the cabin and stood there gazing in surprise at the bark, while the moment he caught sight of her Sanchez went hastily forward, removing his hat with so peculiar a flourish as he approached as to cause me to notice the gesture.

Fairfax waved his hand to me to resume our course. Shortly after he crossed the deck to the wheel. There he stood watching the bark for some time.

"What do you make of her, Carlyle?" he asked finally. "I believe that fellow lied."

"So do I, sir," I answered promptly. "Whatever else he may be, he's no peaceful Dutch trader. That fellow got his accent from south Europe. If he was loaded with cane sugar and hides for market he wouldn't be nearly so high out of water. That bark was in ballast or I miss my guess. Besides if he was a trader where was his crew? I tell you the men on board that hooker had orders to keep down."

"I believe you are right," he admitted frankly. "There is something wrong there. I'll tell Travers and have him send a runner overland to give warning below."

CHAPTER VI.

The Mysterious Sail.

Where I leaned alone against the rail my eyes followed the Spaniard in doubt and questioning, nor could I entirely banish from mind Haley's description of that buccaneer bearing a similar name. Yet, in spite of my unconscious desire to connect these two together, I found it simply impossible to associate this rather soft-spoken, effeminate dandy with that bloody villain.

It was already quite dusk when we finally drew in beside Travers' wharf and made fast. Our approach had been noted and Travers himself—a white-haired, white-bearded man, yet still hearty and vigorous, attired in white duck—was on the end of the dock to greet us, together with numerous servants of every shade of color, who immediately busied themselves toting luggage up the steep path leading toward the house, standing conspicuous amid a grove of trees on the summit of the bank. The others followed, four fellows lugging with difficulty an iron-bound chest, the two older men engaged in earnest conversation, thus leaving Sanchez apparently well satisfied with the opportunity alone to assist the girl.

Except to render the sloop completely secure for the night, there remained little work for us to perform on board. The four of us passed the early evening undisturbed smoking and talking together. So the time passed quickly, and it must have been nearly midnight before we brought out blankets from the forecastle and lay down in any spot we chose on deck.

It was a fair, calm night, but moonless, with but little wind stirring, and a slight haze in the air, obscuring the vision. The others must have fallen asleep immediately. At last, despairing of slumber, and perchance urged by some premonition of danger, I arose to my feet and moved silently aft.

My startled eyes caught a glimpse of a speck of white emerging from the black shadows—the spectral glimmer of a small sail. The strange craft swept past, so far out that those on board no doubt believed themselves beyond sight from the shore, heading apparently for a point of land, which I vaguely remembered as jutting out to the northward.

Alone in the darkness, Carlyle battles against tremendous odds. He gains the upper hand, victory seems assured, and then—but read about it for yourself in the next installment of this unusual story.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"I understand there's a tendency to drop 'Aye, aye, sir,' in the navy." "That would never do." "Of course not. It's one of the traditions of the service. If that sort of thing were encouraged it wouldn't be long before a 'gob' would be saying 'Yep' to an admiral."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

BETTER FITTED FOR WORK

Testimony Shows That Service in the Army Has Made the Average Man More Efficient.

Evidence that returned soldiers, particularly those who saw service overseas, are going back into civil pursuits more efficient and better fitted for their work is furnished by one of the largest employers of labor in the country, a firm which has requested that its name be not disclosed.

Of more than six hundred returned soldiers who have been employed by this corporation 43 per cent have proved more efficient than they were before their military experience; 58 per cent are put down as just about the same as before in efficiency and the remaining 5 per cent are rated as having less efficiency.

According to the letter giving these figures: "The analysis indicates that the men are more orderly in their routine work, more punctual, and a few who were rather difficult to handle are now amenable to discipline."

Bright Colors.

The new baby was still very tiny and very red. Six-year-old James didn't like it—nor did he make any pretense of hiding his dislike. So when his eighteen-year-old auntie came out to see it and rejoiced over its coming, as had his father and mother, his disgust was still more pronounced. Mother called auntie's attention to it.

"If James doesn't want the baby, why don't you sell it to me?" began auntie.

"Or we might sell you James," offered father. "You see mother and I like babies ourselves."

"She wouldn't want me," interrupted James, stolidly. "She said she wouldn't get anything unless it was bright colored."

SERIOUS DAMAGE BY CLOVER WORM

Alfalfa Crop Suffers Much Injury in Eastern Part of the United States.

BEST MEASURES OF CONTROL

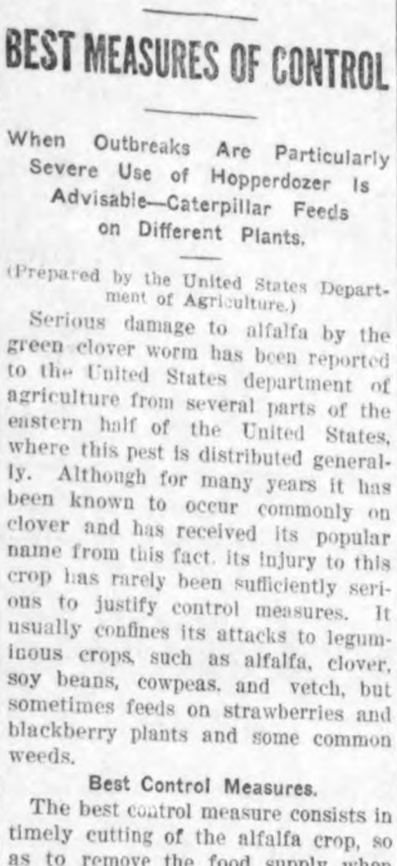
When Outbreaks Are Particularly Severe Use of Hopperdozer Is Advisable—Caterpillar Feeds on Different Plants.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Serious damage to alfalfa by the green clover worm has been reported to the United States department of agriculture from several parts of the eastern half of the United States, where this pest is distributed generally. Although for many years it has been known to occur commonly on clover and has received its popular name from this fact, its injury to this crop has rarely been sufficiently serious to justify control measures. It usually confines its attacks to leguminous crops, such as alfalfa, clover, soy beans, cowpeas, and vetch, but sometimes feeds on strawberries and blackberry plants and some common weeds.

Best Control Measures.

The best control measure consists in timely cutting of the alfalfa crop, so as to remove the food supply when the caterpillars of this insect are most abundant. Clean culture is also recommended, and when outbreaks are particularly bad the use of the hopperdozer is advisable.



Alfalfa Is Highly Regarded as a Forage Crop.

There are three or four generations of the green clover worm a season, according to the bulletin, which allows ample time for the insect to increase greatly in a summer. The caterpillars are killed in considerable numbers by natural insect enemies, but this method of control can not be relied upon for protection of the alfalfa crop. The alfalfa should be mowed when the insect is in the caterpillar or worm stage—from ten days to three weeks after the time of the appearance of the moths in great abundance. To insure success the field should be left as clean and bare as possible in order to remove the food supply and any shelter protecting them from the direct rays of the sun, which hastens their destruction.

Clear Fields of Insects.

If these measures can not be carried out without injury to the alfalfa, either from premature cutting or too prolonged delay, wait until the alfalfa is ready for another cutting. It ought to be possible, however, before the summer is passed, to clear the fields of this insect in this manner.

In the eastern states premature cutting often results in permanent injury to alfalfa, especially while it is young, and for this reason the cutting of this crop much in advance of the normal period is not recommended.

As the caterpillar feeds on many different plants, ditch banks and fence rows should be kept free from weeds.

The caterpillars have been caught readily by dragging a field with a hopperdozer, such as is used for grasshopper outbreaks. It does not hurt the alfalfa when not used to excess, and will catch many injurious insects.

EARLY FRUITS MOST DESIRED

Light Soils With Southern Exposure Are Best Adapted for Purpose—Liable to Injury.

Early fruits are usually most desirable, and light soils, with southern exposure, are best adapted for that purpose. Light soils, however, require heavy fertilizing and more mulch in summer. They are also more liable to injury to drought. As a rule, they produce lighter crops. If clay soil is used for early berries, it must be well drained, is more difficult to prepare, matures later crops, and is not so favorable for winter protection. If earliness is not a consideration, then one should not hesitate to use any soil, provided it can be made rich.

GOVERNMENT SHEEP FARM EXPERIMENTS

Several Important Results Obtained on Idaho Ranch.

Flock Handled in Same Manner as Are All Similar Bands in Hands of Wyoming Stockmen—Work to Be Extended.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Several results of importance to western sheep men have been ascertained by experiments at the government sheep ranch near Dubois, Idaho, which has been in operation two years. Formerly it was customary for range sheep men to discard ewes which did not bear lambs when two years old. Extensive investigations by the department of agriculture have developed that such ewes are just as valuable for future breeding as those which bear lambs as two-year-olds.

Individual records are kept on the government sheep ranch relative to the weight of fleece, length of fleece, character of fleece, fineness of fiber and mutton quality of each animal, while detailed account is maintained of the offspring of each ewe. The particular utility of the results obtained arises from the fact that the flock is handled just as are all similar bands of sheep in the hands of Wyoming stockmen.

Experiments are being conducted to develop a type of sheep more suitable to the western range conditions than the types now prevalent. It is hoped to extend this work in both mutton conformation and length and weight of fleece.

There are at present about 1,500 head of purebred Rambouillets, Lincoln Rambouillets, Cotswold Rambouillets, Leister Rambouillets and Romney Rambouillets on the government ranch. Crossbreeding experiments are being conducted with all these breeds and crosses, as well as the use of purebred Corriedales, which have been mated with crossbred ewes.

RAISE MORE BREEDING SOWS

Remarkable Evidence of Expansive Power of Swine Numbers in Practical Farming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Even greater than the record number of breeding sows on farms in the United States a year ago, the number on April 1 this year reached the unprecedented total of 9,970,000, according to the bureau of crop estimates, United States department of agriculture. While the average gain for the whole country over last year is only 0.3 per cent there were gains greater than this in most of the states and as high as 8 per cent in California. Diminished numbers in the great swine states of Iowa, Missouri, Nebraska, Louisiana and Oklahoma are sufficient to leave barely a gain to the United States as a whole.

Under the pressure of the necessities of the war the breeding sows on farms April 1, 1918, had been raised 9.5 per cent over 1917, a remarkable evidence of the expansive power of swine numbers in practical farming operations; and that this extraordinary increase in one year should have been held the next, and even a little exceeded, is a notable fact in swine history.

KEEP MANURE UNDER COVER

Amount of Moisture in Pile Can Be Regulated Much Without Danger of Leaching.

The advantage of keeping manure under cover, whether piled on the ground or in pit, is that the amount of moisture in the pile can be artificially regulated and with less danger of leaching than if it lies on the ground. In the open pit, surplus of moisture can not result in loss through leaching, but unless water or liquid manure is pumped frequently over the pile it will fire fang through heating. With both leaching and heating guarded against, manure can be kept for considerable periods without serious deterioration in fertility. However, it is always best to get manure onto the fields and under the surface as soon as practical. The best place for manure to rot is in the soil.

RYE IS READILY PRESERVED

Resulting Silage Is Not Satisfactory Because Plant Is Not Highly Palatable.

Rye may be preserved readily in the silo, but the resulting silage is not very satisfactory on account of its not being palatable. For best results it should be put into the silo in the blossoming stage or even earlier. In feeding value it is somewhat below that of corn silage.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PREPARING PRODUCTS FOR BEST EXHIBITION AT ANNUAL FAIRS

A Thoroughly Typical American Boy Watching a Prize Winner Getting Its Growth.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The fair.

What does it mean to you?

"Fair" is a very old noun. With variations in spelling it exists in many languages.

"Fair" is akin to the ancient "festus" and therefore cousin in some degree of the more modern "feast" and "festival" and the like.

Always and everywhere it has carried the away-from-work idea. It has always been pretty much what we mean nowadays by "holiday," though not what that word meant originally. "Holiday" was "holy day," and sacred. "Fair" has always been secular—a wholly human sort of thing.

Fair time is playtime. That it always was, that it always meant to most people, that it always will be. But for every play there must be players, and two kinds of them, too—players who play playfully and players who play laboriously, more or less, for the entertainment of the others.

And "the fair" has a very different meaning for the two classes. The big bunch goes to have a good time, to be carefree, to drink red lemonade and throw confetti and toot tinsel horns; to get the glint of twinkling horse heels on a saffron track; to see the broad-backed cattle, the prettily packed jellies and jams, the big pumpkins, the intricate needlework, the full-filled ears of corn and to mill around, going nowhere in particular and not caring especially if they never get there.

But with it all they are getting a sugar-coated education. The fair is a university in which the festive students soak up science unawares.

Then there must be the other kind of players—the ones who "put on the show"—the professors and instructors and tutors in this most accommodating of academies. And there has to be somewhere a sort of teachers' college for those people. There are, in fact, lots of normal schools for fair professors, but the United States department of agriculture is the graduate college. And one of the queer things is that any boy or girl still in the grammar grades of the public school may be doing postgraduate work in getting things ready for the fair.

Much in Getting Ready.

Too many people, the department experts say, do not know how much depends on preparing exhibits in the right way, on getting the pig or calf or corn or canned stuff in just the right shape to show to the best advantage. One of the boys' club workers tells a story in point.

"One of our club boys in Mississippi," he says, "grew an acre of mighty good corn and entered an exhibit in the county fair. There were four prizes, but he couldn't even get the fourth one. The judge simply tied on the ribbons and made no explanations. The boy was disappointed—not rebellious, but he wanted to know why his good corn couldn't get a prize. I went over it with him, showed him that some of his biggest ears had crooked rows and how others had other defects. Picking out the best ear I said, 'If you had ten like this you could win a prize.'

"Well, that boy went back home and carefully examined every ear of his corn. He found only nine that he thought were as good as the one I had pointed out. He went back through the whole pile again and finally found the tenth ear. He sent those ten ears to the state fair—and won first prize. Do you see? Knowing a little of how to prepare the exhibit made a state winner out of a corn crop that was an 'also ran' at the county fair."

Manicuring the Pig.

Now the boy who is preparing a pig or a calf for the fair has a more complicated task than the one who enters some corn. With the corn boy the whole problem is selecting the right ears. With the others it is not only selecting the right individual but doing a great many things to put that individual in the best possible form, and to keep it so.

Weeks or even months in advance of the fair the boy must start getting his calf or pig tame. At a particular time it may be necessary to pare the pig's toenails so that he will stand up straight without too much bend at the pasterns. But he must be careful not to pare them too close. A limping pig is not likely to be a prize winner. Several weeks before the fair he should trim the hair out of the pig's ears, being careful to do it in such a way that the ears will not be irregular in outline. He should provide a clean wallow for the pig to keep the hair and skin soft and pliable—and he ought to know the trick of the trade that a little oil on the surface of the water helps a great deal; also that a little linseed meal, properly fed to the pig, puts a peculiar gloss on the hair.

He must remember to have the right kind of crate ready in plenty of time. Many boys have failed to get their pigs to the fair because, when the time came to ship, there was no crate. The department has special sets of specifications for pig crates, calf crates and others. A very important thing to remember in connection with the crate is that the pig grows at a pretty rapid clip. The crate must be built big enough for the pig, not when the crate is made but allowing for growth between then and fair time. And it must not be big enough to permit the pig to turn around. The boy must remember that the pig should not be fed just before shipping. No matter how much the little rascal cries for corn he must not be indulged. If he is fed he is very likely to get sick on the train and go through the whole fair in a droopy, drowsy, unprizelike-looking way.

Prizes Are Not All.

These are just a few of the things that must be remembered in preparing a pig for the fair. And there are equally many with regard to the calf, or the dairy cow, or the poultry, or any of the things, practically, that the boy or girl, man or woman wants to exhibit at the fair.

Even with all the care possible the animal or other product may not be a prize winner. There can't be prizes for every exhibitor. The fair that tries to arrange things so that everybody can get a prize does not amount to much usually. It does not mean anything to win a prize when you are the only exhibitor in your class. And, as the experts in the department of agriculture point out, the prize is not the main thing after all. To be sure the boys and girls and men and women who get things ready for the fair are contributing to an education for the public—but the main thing for them is the education they get themselves.

"Take part in the contest," say the experts, "for your own sake. You will have a better pig, a better calf, a better pound of butter, a better can of peaches next year by reason of having exhibited this year, whether you win or not. And, with proper attention to preparation, the prizes are sure to come, too, sooner or later."

SUCCESS IN SHEEP BUSINESS

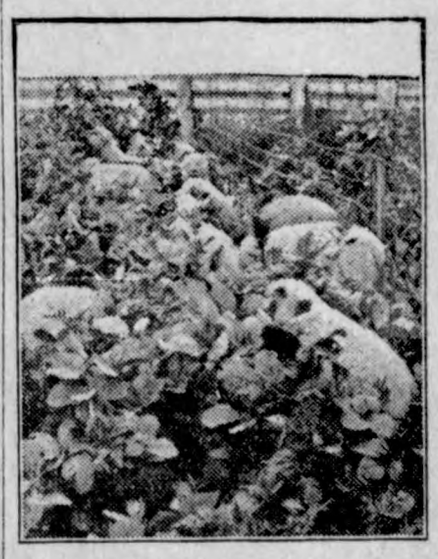
Health Is of Primary Importance and Internal Parasites Should Be Guarded Against.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In any system of continuous farm sheep raising the health question is of primary importance. This question is chiefly one of internal parasites, and of these the stomach worm is the most widely distributed and the most serious. Fortunately, the trouble is entirely susceptible of practical control, and the methods of prevention are exactly in line with the practices that result in most economical production. It is possible, though doubtful, that the permanent farm flock can be maintained in maximum health when grazed entirely on permanent grass pastures. A system of division of grass land into sufficient parts to allow frequent long periods without sheep and use of longer grass for cattle will assist materially. Such a plan, combined with occasional use of medicine to prevent too serious infection, may prove to be practical.

The basis of success in the farm sheep business is in the frequency of changing to pastures which have not had any opportunity to become infested with stomach worms by older sheep. These frequent changes are particularly necessary during the stay of the young lambs upon the farm. The older sheep are less susceptible to the effects of the infection, though danger of their being injured thereby is not to be overlooked. The plan of frequent changes to fresh feed can be adapted advantageously to the most economical systems of using high-priced land in the rotation of crops to produce feed and forage for other kinds of live stock.

The principles of flock management for maximum health and for adaptation to other lines of farm production are illustrated in the following outline of a plan of crop production and feeding:



Sheep Relish Frequent Changes of Fresh Green Forage.

Under a Three-Year Rotation of Corn, Clover, and Small Grains on 160 Acres.

25 acres corn: To finish 20 yearling cattle and 40 hogs.

15 a. silage corn, 40 a. wheat & oats, 20 a. clover hay: Roughage for 20 cows, 20 yearlings, 80 ewes, and 20 ewe lambs, work stock. Grain for sale or exchange for other feed.

20 acres clover pasture: Season's grazing for 20 breeding cows.

20 acres permanent grass pasture: Grazing for 20 yearling cattle on feed for December shipment.

In the above, sheep would be grazed as follows:

Ten acres forage crops.

1. On winter wheat.
2. On grass pasture with yearling cattle.
3. With cows on clover pasture.
4. On clover meadow after hay cut.
5. On grain stubble.
6. In cornfields after silage cut or corn harvested.
7. On winter wheat.

At other times on rape, soy beans, or other grazing crops on 10-acre field. Unused forage harvested for winter feed.

Such a plan as this allows sufficiently frequent change of pasture without any part of the flock going upon land that has previously carried sheep in the same year. The forage crop land is a safety measure for reliance in case of shortage of other feeds and could regularly be used for carrying the reserved ewe lambs from weaning time until winter.

SALT POISONING OF SWINE

Whenever Used for Pigs It Should Be Mixed With Feed or Used in a Conditioner.

Salt poisoning of hogs is not of rare occurrence, according to an article by H. C. H. Kernkamp, University Farm, St. Paul, reprinted from the Cornell Veterinarian. Pigs, says Mr. Kernkamp, should not be given salt as other farm animals are. Whenever salt is used for pigs it should be mixed with the feed or used as one of the ingredients of a tonic or conditioner. It should never be placed in a container alone where the hogs have free access to it.

An annual one week firemen's school for Iowa is under consideration by J. E. Tracy, state fire marshal. His plan would be to call fire chiefs from throughout the state for a week's session every year, for an exchange of methods and instructions in efficient fire fighting. Experts would be in charge of the short course. The first school will be held next year.

The Cromwell Colt and Corn show was again a big success in every way, and had it not been for the unsettled condition of the weather a record breaking crowd would have been in attendance. Previous to this year only one day was given to this show but owing to its growth and popularity the committee decided on two days and undoubtedly this will be the future arrangment.

The state board of education will let the contract for the new cattle barn at the state fair grounds in Des Moines in October. The barn will be furnace heated in the large portion of it and will have hot and cold water. It can be used in the winter time for auction sales of cattle. Ten of the old cattle sheds on the grounds have been torn away and the new building will be located in the area where these sheds stood to the south of the livestock pavilion.

Self-feeding is the big "hobby" of Professor John M. Evvard, Iowa Experiment station. It was he who originated the idea and it is to him that we owe a great deal for giving a feeding method which makes it possible for the average farmer, and not only the expert, to feed hogs profitably and economically. The self-feeder consists of a hopper-shaped bin, into which feed is placed and from which the feed empties automatically into a trough beneath the hopper as fast as the animals using the feeder consume the feed. The self-feeder is used both in the dry feed lot and in the pasture, under cover and exposed to weather.

You may not know that Iowa is the greatest state of all. Nevertheless, she is and here are the facts and figures to prove it. These statistics were read at the recent Methodist conference by Sherman Powell: Iowa has the greatest hydro-electric plant on earth at Keokuk. Largest basket factory in the United States at Burlington. Largest broom factory in the world at Davenport. Largest cereal factory in the world at Cedar Rapids. Largest calendar factory in the world at Red Oak. Largest sash and door factory in the United States at Dubuque. Largest macaroni factory in the world at Davenport. Largest furniture factory in the United States at Burlington. Largest cream separator factory in the United States at Waterloo.

The country's enormous corn crop has "run unharmed the dangers that faced it during the doubtful days and nights of September and lays into the lap of mellow October 43,000,000 bushels more of ripened ears than it could promise at the beginning of that month," the department of agriculture commented in issuing the October crop report forecasting a yield of 2,900,511,000 bushels. Practically all of the crop has, or will, mature without frost damage, assuring high feeding value. Husking and cribbing has begun.

AS THEY COME MARCHING HOME

The two armies are marching home —Uncle Sam's army, and the Salvation Army. The boys in khaki are being demobilized—the Salvation Army is staying right with the boys till they find their places again in civilian life. Uncle Sam's job is ending, but the Salvation Army will "carry on" its warfare against poverty, disease and degradation. And it needs your help.

We have the men and women. We have a smooth-running, economical organization; we have the will and ability to serve. We need one thing more —money.

You could not go "over there" to carry comfort and friendliness to the boys in billets and trenches, but your support made it possible for us to go. Ask the boys what they think of the Salvation Army—its service and doughnuts. You may not be able to go into the slums and tenements to carry cheer and hope and food and fuel. We can. We will—if you will send us.

The war has taught the whole world new methods of business efficiency. It has taught us. We have learned that the tambourine lassie, instead of begging for pennies, must be put to more important tasks. She is to be relieved of her begging. We are going to have a national drive for the $13,000,000 we need to carry on our work for the coming year.

Think of the demobilized soldiers who need our help—and give. Think of the city slums broiling under the summer's sun—and give. Think of the thousands of men who are "down" (but never "out" to us)—and give. Think of the wretched, the friendless and forlorn whom we succor. Think of the barren hopelessness of dreary tenements with bitter winter rattling the broken window frames. Think of the outcasts and wayward—the prodigal sons and daughters whom we rescue and restore. Think of us doing your work as your agents.

GOVERNORS TO HELP THE SALVATION ARMY IN HOME SERVICE DRIVE

Governors of 22 states have pledged to help the Salvation Army's national drive for $13,000,000 to carry on their good and needy work here in the United States. Governor Harding of Iowa is a member of the national committee.

Governor Harding says:

"I have learned of the campaign of the Salvation Army to raise money for their home service work. The work of the Salvation Army is at all times commendable and deserving, but particularly so after the great work they have rendered our country during the great war. I wish the Salvation Army Godspeed and am sure that their campaign will be a success."

SALVATION ARMY PLANS BUREAU FOR FARM HELP

Responding to an appeal from farmers, the Salvation Army has agreed to open a free employment bureau in Chicago to supply farm help for the Western states. A portion of the $2,250,000 the Army will seek to raise in Illinois September 22 to 29 will be devoted to this bureau.

Kiddies Enjoy Sprinkler.

One of the daily social events in the lives of the youngsters on Ash street is the passing of the street sprinkler. The boys and girls look forward to the hour when the sprinkler comes up the street, and when it finally appears they run out, barefooted, to take advantage of the cooling waters it flushes to the side of the street. Here they get all the advantage of Atlantic surf bathing right on their home street. The number of children following the wagon increases with each block, until, when it reaches Trumbull avenue, there are usually a score of boys and girls trailing along in the water.—Detroit News.

Given a Lift.

I went for a walk with a girl friend one day, and, being attired in one of the latest skirts—extremely narrow—felt quite classy. During the course of our walk we came to a high curb, and, while I stood debating whether I could make it, a man came up behind us, and, lifting me up on to the sidewalk, said, "I am pleased to have been of assistance," raised his hat, and passed on. That surely was an embarrassing moment for me, and, what's more, I've never worn that skirt since.—Chicago Tribune.

Mesopotamia Profits by War.

It has been of very great advantage to Mesopotamia that much, if not the most, of the engineering work which had to be performed for the prosecution of the war was to a great extent such work as will be enormously valuable for the country's peaceful internal development.

Wealthy Chinese Has Novel Trip From This Life To Next

There was a pretty custom among some of the ancients when a prominent citizen died, to send his valet along with him on the road to Paradise, and it was oftentimes necessary to resort to extreme methods to insure this company for the departed. But in the territory of the China-American Trading Company, Ford dealers in Tientsin, China, they have discovered a much better aid to the deceased over the rough places on the trip to the Promised Land.

It is a custom of the Chinese to burn various kinds of effigies at the funeral ceremonies of the rich, the more wealthy the departed the more elaborate the figures burned over his grave. These effigies represent every manner of thing such as human figures, horses, sedan chairs, tables loaded with money, etc. The figures usually conform to some of these stereotyped fashions, but at the funeral of a Mr. Li, who died a short time ago in Tientsin, and who was a very wealthy man, the bereaved family outdid themselves and made an imitation of the deceased gentleman's Ford car to be burned at his grave.

This Ford effigy was made entirely of strong Chinese paper stretched on bamboo and reed frames. The car was complete in every detail, the pedals accurately placed, and all made of paper and bamboo. The interior of the car was also accurate in detail, being carefully upholstered in paper. The effigy of the driver as shown in the photograph, was a work of art. The car was carried about three miles through crowded streets to the graveside where a match was applied and it was consumed in a few minutes.

This is the first time a motor car has been burned at the grave of a Chinese, and there ise very reason to believe that the deceased went up "On High."

Eat Less and Take Bitro-Phosphate To Put on Flesh

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well; if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin; go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less; chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

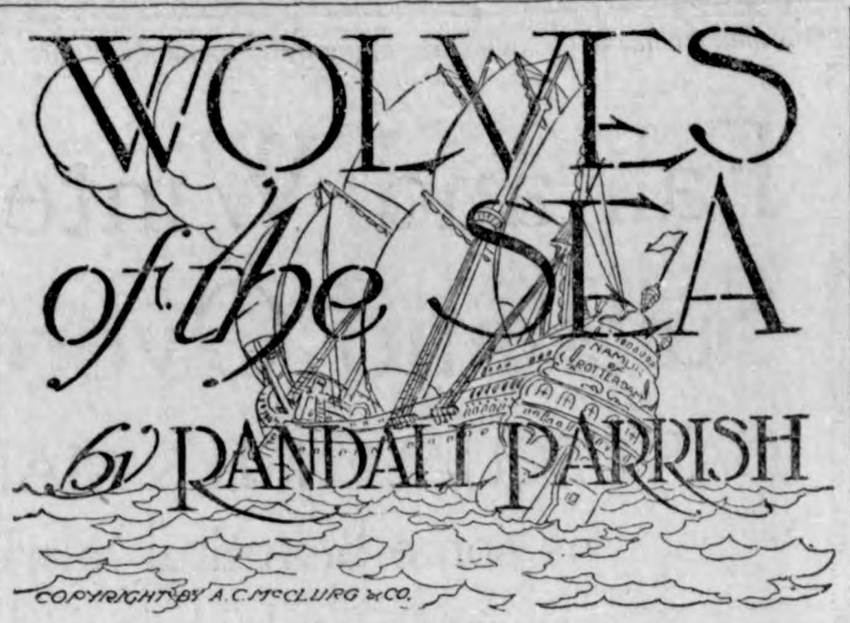
WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH



COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

Geoffry Finds a Friend—and an Enemy.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London.

"Why especially with me?"

"Rather a hard question to answer at the very beginning," I smiled back at her. "Yet not so difficult as the one I shall ask you. I am only one of fifty prisoners, scarcely cleaner or more reputable looking than any of my mates. Yet surely you have not sought speech with these others? Then why especially with me?"

Even in the growing dusk I could mark a red flush mount into the clear cheeks at this insistent question, and for an instant her eyes wavered. But she possessed the courage of pride, and her hesitancy was short.

"You imagine I cannot answer. Oh, but I can; I know who you are; my uncle pointed you out to me. I am traveling home with him to Maryland. I am Dorothy Fairfax. He was present at your trial before Lord Jeffries. You are Geoffry Carlyle, in command of the ship that brought Monmouth to England. I heard it all."

"All? What else, pray?"

Her eyes opened widely in sudden surprise and she clasped and unclasped her hands nervously.

"Do you really not know? Have you never been told what happened?"

"Only that I was roughly forbidden to speak, called every foul name the learned judge could think of, and then sentenced to twenty years penal servitude beyond seas," I answered soberly. "Following that I was dragged from the dock, and flung into a cell. Was there anything else?"

"Why you should have known. Lord Jeffries sentenced you to death; the decree was signed, to be executed immediately. Then influence was brought to bear—some nobleman in Northumberland made direct appeal to the king. That was what angered Jeffries so."

"An appeal! For me? Good God! not Bucclough—was it he, the duke?"

"Yes; it was whispered about that the king was in his debt—some word of honor, and dare not refuse. The word of mercy came just in time, ordering Jeffries to commute your sentence. At first he swore he'd hang you, king or no king, but his nerve failed. My uncle said he roared like a bull. This Bucclough; is he not your friend?"

I hesitated for an instant of indecision, looking into her face, but the truth would not be denied.

"Scarcely that," I said soberly. "Nor can I solve entirely his purpose. He is my brother, and I am the next in line. We are not even on speaking terms; yet he is childless, and may feel some measure of dislike to have the family end in a hangman's knot. I can think of no other reason for his interference. I knew nothing of his action."

"I am glad it became my privilege to tell you. Besides, Captain Carlyle," simply, "it may also help you to understand my interest. If you are of the Carlyles of Bucclough, how happened it that you went to sea?"

"Largely necessity, and to some extent no doubt sheer love of adventure. I was a younger son, with very little income. There were then two lives between me and the estate, and the old duke, my father, treated me like a servant. I always loved the sea, and at fourteen—to get out of his sight, I think largely—was apprenticed to the navy, but lost my grade in the service by a mere boyish prank. His influence then would have saved me, but he refused to even read my letter of explanation. I dared not return home in such disgrace, and consequently drifted into the merchant service. It is a story quickly told."

"Yet not so quickly lived."

"No, it meant many hard years, on all the oceans of the world. This is the first message reaching me from the old home."

"I have seen that home," she said quietly, "and shall never forget the impression it made on me. A beautiful place. I was there on a coaching party, the first summer I was in England. I was a mere girl then, and everything seemed wonderful. I have been away from Maryland now for three years. Nothing else would satisfy father. Maryland is only a colony, you know."

"Your home is at Saint Mary's?"

"Lower down the Potomac. Have you ever been there?"

"Twice; once as mate, and the last time as master of a ship. My latest voyage in these waters was made nearly two years ago."

"It is not so strange then, is it, that I should have felt interested in you?" she asked suddenly, as though justifying herself. "When Uncle Roger first told me who you were, and then explained what had occurred at your trial, naturally you became to me something entirely different from the others. Were you actually with Monmouth?"

"In sympathy, yes; but I had no hand in the actual fighting. I was not even ashore until it was all over with. Still I shall pay my share of the bill."

"And you know what that means, do you not? What will happen when we reach Virginia?"

"Perfectly; I have no illusions. I have seen just such ships as this come in. We are to be advertised, and sold to the highest bidder. A week from now I shall probably be out in the tobacco fields, under the whip of an overseer, who will call me Jeff. All I can hope for is a kind-hearted master, and an early opportunity to escape."

"Oh, no!" and in her eagerness her hands actually clasped mine. "It is not going to be quite so bad as that. That is what I wanted to tell you. That is what gave me boldness to come across here to you tonight. It has all been arranged. You are not going to be sold on the block with those others. Uncle Roger has already contracted with the captain for your services. You are going north with us to Maryland."

I drew a deep breath, and in the sudden impulse of relief which swept over me my own fingers closed tightly about her hands.

"I owe this to you; I am sure I must owe this to you—tell me?"

Her eyes dropped, and in the dim light I could mark the heaving of her bosom as she caught her breath.

"Only—only the suggestion," she managed to say in a whisper. "He—he was glad of that. You see I—I knew he needed someone to take charge of his sloop, and—and so I brought you to his mind. So please don't thank me."

"I shall never cease to thank you," I returned warmly, conscious suddenly that I was holding her hands, and as instantly releasing them. "It will save me the degradation which I dreaded most of all—the toiling in the fields beside negro slaves, and the sting of the lash. Ay, it means even more—"

I hesitated, instantly realizing that I must not utter those impetuous words leaping to my lips.

"More!" she exclaimed. "What more?"

"This," I went on, my thought shifting into a new channel. "A longer servitude. Up to this moment my one dream has been to escape, but I must give that up now. You have placed me under obligations to serve. Between us this has become a debt of honor."

"But wait," she said earnestly, "for I had even thought of that. I was sure you would feel that way—any gentleman would. Still there is a way out. You were sentenced as an indentured servant. I saw the entry myself. It read: 'Geoffry Carlyle, Master Mariner, indentured to the Colonies for the term of twenty years, unless sooner released; crime, high treason.' Any indentured man, under our Maryland laws, can buy his freedom, after serving a certain proportion of his sentence. Did you not know that?"

I did know it, yet somehow had never connected the fact before directly with my own case. God! what a relief; I stood up straight once more in the stature of a man. I hardly know what wild words I might have spoken had the opportunity been mine; but at that instant the figure of a man crossed the deck toward us, emerging from the open cabin door. Against the gleam of yellow light I recognized the trim form advancing, and as instantly stepped back into shadow. My quick movement caused her to turn and face him.

"What!" he exclaimed, and evidently surprised at his discovery. "It is indeed Mistress Dorothy—out here alone? 'Twas my thought you were safely in your cabin long since. But—prithee—I mistake; you are not alone."

"I was preparing to go in," she answered, ignoring his latter words. "The night already looks stormy."

"But your friend?"

The tone in which he spoke was insistent, almost insolent in its demand, and she hesitated no longer in meeting the challenge.

"Your pardon, I am sure—Lieutenant Sanchez, this gentleman is Captain Geoffry Carlyle."

He stood there stiff and straight against the background of light, one hand in affected carelessness caressing the end of a waxed mustache. His face was in shadow, yet I was quite aware of the flash of his eyes.

"Ah, indeed—some passenger I have not chanced to observe before?"

"A prisoner," she returned distinctly. "You may perhaps remember my uncle pointed him out to us when he first came aboard."

"And you have been out here alone, talking with the fellow?"

"Certainly—why not?"

"Why the man is a felon, convicted of crime, sentenced to deportation."

"It is not necessary that we discuss this, sir," she interposed, rather proudly, "as my personal conduct is not a matter for your criticism. I shall retire now. No, thank you, you need not come."

He stopped still, staring blankly after her as she vanished; then wheeled about to vent his anger on me.

"Carlyle, hey!" he exclaimed sneeringly. "A familiar sound that name in my ears. One of the brood out of Bucclough?"

"A cadet of that line," I managed to admit, wonderingly. "You know of them?"

"Quite as much as I care to," his tone ugly and insulting. Then an idea suddenly occurred to his mind. "Saint Guise, but that would even up the score nicely. You are, as I understand it, sent to Virginia for sale?"

"Yes."

"For how long a term?"

"The sentence was twenty years."

"Hela! and you go to the highest bidder. I'll do it, fellow! To actually own a Carlyle of Bucclough will be a sweet revenge. 'Twill count for more than were I to tweak the duke's nose."

"A very noble plan for revenge," I admitted. "And one which I am not likely to forget. Unfortunately you come too late. It happens, senor, that I am already safely indentured to Roger Fairfax."

I turned away, but he called angrily after me:

"Do not feel so sure of that Carlyle! I am in the game yet."

CHAPTER IV.

Black Sanchez, Pirate.

I rested in my berth for a long time, staring blankly up at the dark deck above, unable to sleep, and endeavoring to figure out the true meaning of all these occurrences. I felt that I could understand the interest exhibited by Dorothy Fairfax, and, greatly as I already admired her, I was not egotist enough to even imagine that her effort to serve me had basis in any personal attraction. But what about Lieutenant Sanchez? Why was this unknown Spaniard already so openly my enemy? Could it be because of Dorothy Fairfax? I felt finally that I had the clue—jealousy, the mad, unreasoning jealousy of his race.

I had no false conception as to this; no vagrant thought that her interest in me was any more than a passing fancy, born of sympathy and a desire to aid. Nevertheless, as she had thus already served me, I now owed her service in return, and here was the first call. If conditions made it possible it was my plain duty to place myself between these two.

What mystery is back of the Namur of Rotterdam, the strange ship which the Fairfax party encounters as it sails up the bay? Sanchez shows little interest, but Fairfax and Carlyle are worried. What can the strange craft be doing in this spot?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Greedy for Wasps.

The common green frog has been discovered to possess an insatiable greed for wasps. This extraordinary appetite does not seem to be in the least checked by an occasional sting. The protecting color of the frog, which sits motionless upon leaves, no doubt deludes the most wary of insects into sense of security.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Experts or Theorists—Which?

The packing industry is intricate, complex—far more so than the railroads or the telegraph.

Every day multiplying needs of society increase its problems and multiplying responsibilities demand more of it.

Highly trained experts, specialists of years' experience, thinkers and creative men, devote their lives, their energies, their activities, to solving the problems of the packing industry and meeting its widening duties.

Swift & Company is not a few dozen packing plants, a few hundred branch houses, a few thousand refrigerator cars, and a few million dollars of capital, but an organization of such men. It is the experience, intelligence, initiative and activity which operates this physical equipment.

Can this intelligence, this experience, this initiative and creative effort which handles this business at a profit of only a fraction of a cent per pound from all sources, be fostered through the intervention of political theorists, however pure their purposes? Or be replaced by legislation? Does Congress really think that it can?

Let us send you a Swift "Dollar". It will interest you. Address Swift & Company, Union Stock Yards, Chicago, Ill.

Had a Reason.

"I stopped in at the drug store to buy a cigar," said a College avenue man. "Behind me rushed in a lad about five years old. Right up to the clerk he went, yelling: 'Mister, you gave me a penny too much change a while ago!'

"The clerk looked at him a minute and said: 'That's your good luck, and for being honest enough to tell me, you may keep the penny.'

"The lad still had a troubled look on his face and soon explained it by saying: 'But I bought a penny balloon with it and I wanted to know if you would take it back. They are selling larger ones down at the next drug store for a penny.'"—Indianapolis News.

Descriptive Power.

"Now," asked a teacher, "who can tell me what an oyster is?" There was silence for a moment. Then little Billy raised his hand. "I know!" he triumphantly announced. "An oyster is a fish built like a nut!"

Back Given Out?

Housework is too hard for a woman who is half sick, nervous and always tired. But it keeps piling up, and gives weak kidneys no time to recover. If your back is lame and achy and your kidneys irregular; if you have "blue spells," sick headaches, nervousness, dizziness and rheumatic pains, use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have done wonders for thousands of worn out women.

An Iowa Case

Mrs. Henry Witt, Sixth and Michigan Sts., Storm Lake, Iowa, says: "My kidneys and bladder both caused me much suffering. My limbs were swollen and there were puffy sacs under my eyes. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and they relieved me from the first and soon restored me to good health. I can't say enough in praise of this medicine."

Heads of late cabbage may be cut and stored in conical pits in the same manner as beets. Another common and very satisfactory method is to pull the plants, roots and all, and place them in a long pit with the heads down. A few heads may be removed from time to time without disturbing the remainder of the pit. As slight freezing does not injure the cabbage, the covering of the pit need not be as thick as for other vegetables.

Another good method of storing cabbage is illustrated in figure 1. The plants are pulled, roots and all, and set side by side with the roots down in a shallow trench, the length of which corresponds to the width of the bed. The bed may be any width up to 8 or 10 feet and as long as necessary to hold the number of cabbages to be stored. Cover the roots with earth. Around the bed erect a frame of rails, boards or poles, or by driving a row of stakes into the ground so that an inclosure about two feet in height is formed. Bank the outside of this frame with dirt and place poles across the top, covering them with straw, hay or corn fodder. Make provision for removing portions of the stored product from one end of the pit. This type of storage is inexpensive and gives good results. When the heads are cut, leave the roots in position, and in the spring these roots will sprout and supply the family with an abundance of greens. A large percentage of the cabbage sprouts found on the market are produced in this way.

Heads of cabbage may be laid in rows on shelves in an outdoor storage cellar, but not in a storage room in the basement of a dwelling, as the odor is likely to penetrate through the house.

WHEN HONEY BEE WILL STING

Persons Dressed in Black Garments Should Exercise Caution in Handling Insects.

Dark colors seem to be more offensive to bees than light, and the person dressed in dark garments should show more caution when handling these useful insects. Offensive odors are also objectionable to them, and the person recently returning from working in the stable or whose perspiration has a distinct odor should show some discretion in making himself familiar around the beehive.

MUCH SOIL FERTILITY LOST

Prevent Erosion or Washing by Keeping Lands in Sod and by Filling Gullies.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much soil fertility is lost every winter by soil washing or erosion. Put a stop to it by keeping the hilly lands in sod, planting a cover crop, underdrainage, filling the gullies with brush, etc.

KEEP HERD FREE OF DISEASE

Procedure Is Wholly Practical and Within Power of Large Percentage of Owners.

Experience covering a period of several years has proved beyond a doubt that a herd of cattle can be freed of tuberculosis, and kept free, and that the procedure is entirely practical and within the power of a large percentage of owners.

SELF-FEEDERS VERY USEFUL

Feed Saved in Proportion to Gain Made in Weight—Hogs Ready for Market Sooner.

Fatten hogs on self-feeders as far as possible. Hogs fed in this way save labor, save feed in proportion to the gain in weight made, and are ready for market sooner than those which are hand fed.

USEFULNESS OF GARDEN CAN BE EXTENDED INTO WINTER BY HOME STORAGE METHODS

A Splendid Way to Store Vegetables.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When the United States department of agriculture, through the weather bureau, tells you that frost is coming, get the garden crops under cover. Listen to the warning of the weather bureau—but heed, also the admonition of the horticultural experts of the department and put the tomatoes under cover where they will be kept at a temperature of about 50 degrees to 60 degrees to ripen. Tomatoes are late bearers, and as a rule many are still green or only partly ripe when frost comes.

The best way is to pull up the vines with the green tomatoes on them and hang them in the cellar or other sheltered place or pick the tomatoes and place them in a sash-covered cold frame, and cover them with straw or leaves, to ripen. Even tomatoes that appear to be perfectly green will, if of good size and the seed mature, ripen sufficiently for use as fresh tomatoes.

Better Quality of Tomatoes.

The quality of the tomatoes will probably be better if they are left on the vines and they will continue in usable condition for a much longer time, but they may be ripened successfully by plucking them from the vines and placing them in a single layer on a shelf in the cellar. This may be the better plan for some back-yard gardeners who have not sufficient space to hang up the vines.

The late corn patch, also, is likely to have a week or ten days of table service in it when the frost warning comes. It is not necessary to lose the green corn. Pluck the ears, leaving the husks on, and place them on the cellar floor with no two ears touching. The corn will remain in good condition for ten days or longer. Even if you have no cellar or other place where the ears can be spread, it is not necessary to lose the corn. Cut the stalks, leaving the ears on, and shock them in the garden. The corn will probably not remain in good condition so long as if properly stored on the cellar floor and it becomes toughened, but the season for using it can be extended several days.

Cover Beans and Peas.

There may be beans and peas not quite fully matured. If you have space in which to keep them under cover, pull up the vines by the roots, hang them up and let the pods dry out. Then shell the beans or peas, put them in bags, hang in a well-ventilated dry place, and keep them for winter use. This, of course, cannot be done if the beans or peas are too immature. Canning is the only means of saving them under that condition. The curing on the vine method, however, is the best plan for curing navy and other bush beans even when they are fully mature.

Care for Other Vegetables.

The cellar, if there is one, otherwise a pit in the garden, may be made to care for most of the other vegetables well into, if not through, the winter. Onions that are mature and thoroughly dried may be kept in the attic or in any dry, well-ventilated place where they will not freeze. A pit in the garden may be made to serve as a storage for potatoes, late beets, carrots, turnips, late cabbage, celery, and salsify. If there is no cellar available the earth mound in the garden can be made to serve admirably, saving a lot of money by keeping certain of the late garden vegetables for winter eating.

All that is necessary in making a vegetable storage pit is to place some straw, hay, dry grass, or fodder on the ground, place the vegetables on it in a conical pile, cover them with the same material used at the bottom, and then cover with two or three inches of earth. The hay, or whatever material is used, should be allowed to extend through the dirt at the apex of the cone, thus providing the necessary ventilation to keep the vegetables in good condition. Place a board or piece of tin over the hay at the apex of the cone and weight it down to keep it in place. If the earth over the entire surface of the mound is firmed down with the back of the shovel and a shallow trench dug around the base of the mound with an outlet so that the water will drain away, the vegetables may be kept practically dry for any length of time. As the weather becomes colder, it will be necessary to put on more earth, increasing the thickness of the earth covering to six or eight inches. In very cold weather it is advisable to put on an additional covering of straw, fodder, manure, or other litter.

Earth Mound Is Best.

For cabbages and turnips the earth mound is a better storage place than the cellar. Both turnips and cabbages give off odors that, if stored in the cellar, will permeate the house and become very disagreeable. The method of storing cabbages may vary somewhat from the regular pit or mound. A very satisfactory method is to pull the plants, roots and all, and place them in a long pit, either on their sides or with the heads down, then cover lightly with straw and a layer of earth. A few heads may be removed from time to time without disturbing the remainder of the pit. Another good method is to pull the heads, roots and all, and set them side by side, with the roots down, in shallow trenches, making a bed of whatever size may be necessary. Around the bed erect a frame of rails, boards, or poles, or by driving down a row of stakes so that an inclosure about two feet in height is formed. Bank the outside of this frame with dirt and place poles across the top, covering them with straw, hay, corn fodder, or pine boughs. Make provision for cutting off the cabbage heads from one end of the pit as needed. When the heads are cut, leave the roots in position, and in the spring these roots will sprout and supply an abundance of greens.

Pit for Celery.

A similar pit may be made for celery, though the dirt should be excavated to a depth of about 14 inches. However, celery may be kept until extreme cold weather in the position where it grew by banking enough earth about the plants to hold the stems in a compact bunch. Just before freezing occurs bank the earth up to the very tops of the plants, almost covering them. As the weather becomes colder, cover the ridge with straw, corn fodder, or pine boughs held in place by stakes or boards.

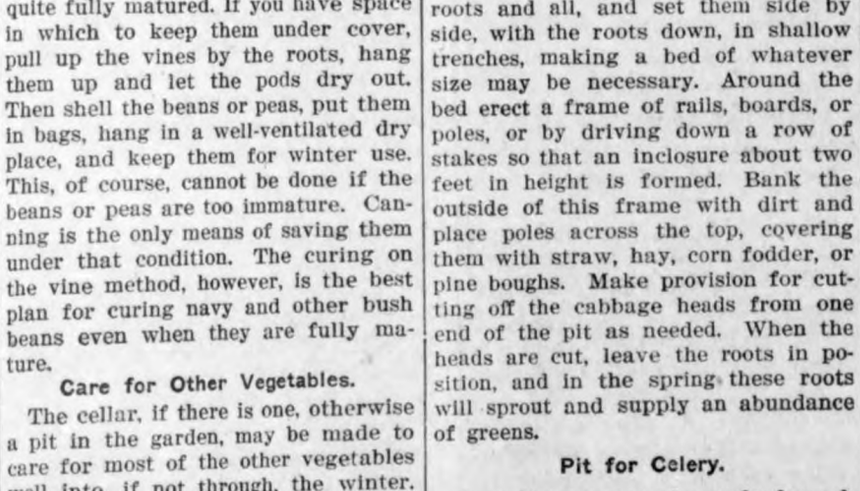
Pumpkins and squashes may be kept for winter use in a dry storage room in the basement, placing them in rows on shelves, so that they are not in contact with each other.

The United States department of agriculture discusses all phases of the subject in Farmers' Bulletin 879, "Home Storage of Vegetables." There are other bulletins on storage houses of various kinds.

GET AHEAD OF JACK FROST.

Jack Frost is a kill-joy, but can be thwarted, to some extent at least.

You have gone to a lot of trouble and some expense, all spring, summer and fall, growing a garden. It has paid for itself, of course—probably many times over. But some of the crops are almost sure to be just at their best when frost comes. With a little care, the summer season can be prolonged, possibly several weeks. The supply of fresh vegetables from the garden need not be cut off the day Jack Frost arrives.



For Cabbages and Turnips the Earth Mound Is a Better Place Than the Cellar.

DAIRY

MILK VERY HEALTHFUL FOOD

Educational Campaign Being Conducted by Dairy Division of Department of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Drink more milk—a healthful food as well as drink—is the slogan advocated in an educational campaign now being conducted by the dairy division of the United States department of agriculture. Lectures, demonstrations, charts and moving pictures are being used to teach the food value of milk, and the work is carried to all classes and nationalities of people in all parts of the country. Recently in Bridgeport, Conn., two milk specialists in one day spoke before five meetings; two audiences were colored, one was Lithuanian, one Slavonic, and one Greek and American mixed—1,600 people in all.

In a certain town in Illinois a factory employing 1,400 men has recently introduced the plan of permitting milk venders to go through the plant at ten and three o'clock each day with sweet milk and buttermilk. Most of the men buy a pint each time. The foreman stated that since the drinking of milk has become so popular with the men not only is their efficiency improved but they are more contented and even tempered.

Specialists are giving lectures in many large department stores, and explain that a glass of cool milk is not only refreshing on a hot day but also furnishes a definite amount of nourishment.

In New Haven, Conn., the manager of one department store had posters made entitled, "Why We Should Drink Milk," and sold six milk tickets for 25 cents to the employees, no attempt being made to show a profit on the sales. Half-pint bottles of milk were distributed to the clerks in the middle of forenoon and afternoon. Straws were furnished with each bottle of milk, as the manager believes that too often people drink milk too fast, causing bodily discomfort.

BEST DAIRY BARN LOCATION

It Is of Importance That Building Be Comfortable, Durable and Sanitary.

It is not necessary that the dairy barn be elaborately built out of expensive materials, suggest the dairy husbandrymen at the Illinois experiment station, but it is of importance that it be comfortable, durable and sanitary and that it be well located and arranged. It is essential that the roof be waterproof, the sides windproof and the stable floor substantial and easily cleaned.

It is of some importance that the site for the dairy barn shall have good drainage. The yards should never slope toward the barn. It is also well to locate the yards to the south of the barn, if possible, to protect the stock when they are turned out in the winter.

DAIRY NOTES

Screen your dairy rooms against flies.

* * *

Wheat bran is eaten readily by young calves.

* * *

Clean milk is impossible if cows are not kept clean.

* * *

Perfect circulation of air in the stable means more milk.

* * *

The dairyman who is too saving of feed cheats himself as well as the herd.

* * *

Cleanliness is the beginning and the end of the gospel of pure milk production.

* * *

Much attention should be given to feeding calves if they are to become good dairy animals.

* * *

The darkened stable by day and pasture by night for the dairy cows help boost the cream check.

BITRO-PHOSPHATE IS GOOD FOR THIN NERVOUS PEOPLE

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE.

Frederick S. Kolle, M. D., Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says that weak, nervous people who want increased weight, strength and nerve-force, should take a 5-grain tablet of Bitro-Phosphate just before or during each meal.

This particular phosphate is the discovery of a famous French scientist, and reports of remarkable results from its use have recently appeared in many medical journals.

If you do not feel well; if you tire easily; do not sleep well, or are too thin; go to any good druggist and get enough Bitro-Phosphate for a two weeks' supply—it costs only fifty cents a week.

Eat less; chew your food thoroughly, and if at the end of a few weeks you do not feel stronger and better than you have for months; if your nerves are not steadier; if you do not sleep better and have more vim, endurance and vitality, your money will be returned, and the Bitro-Phosphate will cost you nothing.

MILLIONS

Suffer from

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people suffer year after year from ailments affecting practically every part of the body, never dreaming that their ill health can be traced directly to acid-stomach. Here is the reason: poor digestion means poor nourishment of the different organs and tissues of the body. The blood is impoverished—becomes weak, thin, sluggish. Ailments of many kinds spring from such conditions. Biliousness, rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica, general weakness, loss of power and energy, headache, insomnia, nervousness, mental depression—even more serious ailments such as catarrh and cancer of the stomach, intestinal ulcers, cirrhosis of the liver, heart trouble—all of these can often be traced directly to acid-stomach.

Keep a sharp lookout for the first symptoms of acid-stomach—indigestion, heartburn, belching, food repeating, that awful painful bloat after eating, and sour, gassy stomach. EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy for acid-stomach, is guaranteed to bring quick relief from these stomach miseries. Thousands say they never dreamed that anything could bring such speedy relief—and make them feel so much better in every way. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise. Make your life worth living—no aches or pains—no blues or melancholy—no more of that tired, listless feeling. Be well and strong. Get back your physical and mental punch; your vim, vigor and vitality. You will always be weak and ailing as long as you have acid-stomach. So get rid of it now. Take EATONIC Tablets—they taste good—you eat them like a bit of candy. Your druggist has EATONIC—50 cents for a big box. Get a box from him today and if you are not satisfied he will refund your money.

More Than He Could Stand.

A naval aviation cadet at Miami, Fla., was assigned to a seaplane with orders to stay in the air for an hour.

After a flight of 30 minutes, the cadet landed and taxied onto the beach.

The division commander, with fire in his eye, descended upon the luckless student. "What's the matter with you?" he demanded. "I told you to stay out an hour. You've only been gone half that time."

"Really, sir," replied the student, "the air is awful rough. I never saw anything like it! Why, I looked up the road toward Miami, and it was full of blackbirds walking into town!"

Gruetzmacher Bros. have disposed of their implement business to Wm. Baack. The deal was transacted the latter part of last week. We have not learned when Mr. Baack takes over the business but presume it will be in about a month, or the middle of November. With the selling out of their implement business the Gruetzmacher Bros. will be entirely retired from the business world after many years of business career. Mr. Baack is at present engaged in the farming business and with his knowledge of machinery will no doubt make a good live wire implement dealer. We welcome him to our business circle and wish him the best of good luck.

According to the above line up of old papers Henry Medaus is awarded the first prize of $1, Mrs. Anna Fuller the second prize of 75 cents and the third prize of 50 cents is awarded to Will Wenz. If the above parties will call at this office we will award the prizes, otherwise if it is not convenient to call, send us a card and we will mail you a check.

It may be of some interest to our readers to take a few items and facts from the oldest paper submitted, that of Mar. 31, 1898, from which we find the following: We find that Fred Katter advertises Clothing at the lowest prices;; E. P. Schaeffer handles pianos at "plain figures and easy payments;" F. Gruetzmacher was then in the shoe business as he is now; Lau Bros. were running a general store; J. P. Larsen was the contractor and builder; instead of the Rock Island time table being inserted in the issue of that date we find the B. C. R. & N. with F. L. Bush as the agent; F. J. Mundt takes orders for wagons and buggies and also handles bicycles; H. J. Klemme offers "cheap lots in one of the best towns in Northern Iowa;" C. A. Pfund was manager of the J. H. Queal Lbr. Co.; Carlson & Weline were running the livery stable; John Baumgartner the barber; W. G. Elder the drayman; H. E. Peitzke the blacksmith; A. L. Spooner the doctor; Lawrence & Suckow, painters; Miss E. Renzienhausen conducted a millinery store; Geo. Gates was the brick and stone mason; J. L. Harr was evidently running the drug store; G. W. Kluckhohn advertises "There is no need to have war with your wife if you buy your flour, groceries, fruits, candies, etc. at G. W. Kluckhohn's;" new calico can be bought of Shafer & Dow; H. W. Schoper sold farm machinery; Gruetzmacher Bros. sold everything from tooth picks to farm machinery; Chas. Krouse advertised blacksmithing; the market report in 1898 was as follows: Hogs $3.30, Barley .25, Wheat .80, Corn .25, Oats .22, Butter .14 and Eggs .08. HOME COMING A BIG SUCCESS

The home coming for the soldiers and sailors which was held in Klemme last Thursday was a grand success from every stand point. Although the morning was clowdy and cold the sun came out in the afternoon and brightened things pu considerably.

The day started off with music by the Garner Band and a free vaudeville performance on the street. The Red Cross ladies served a very fine dinner to everybody which was highly complimented and everybody said the sandwiches were the best they ever tasted. The ladies also served hot coffee and pickles with the sandwiches and there were several helpings of each for everybody.

In the afternoon Rev. Suckow delivered an address of Welcome to the Soldiers and Sailors. Rev. Suckow is a very able speaker, wel lread on up-to-the-minute topics and presented a speech that was the equal of any ever given in Klemme. During the remainder of the afternoon there was more street attractions, band music, movies at the Idle Hour and a big balloon ascension. The baloonist made a very good parachute drop and landed about a mile and a half southeast of town. An aeroplane from Webb, Iowa, flew here in the afternoon and took up a number of passengers. In the evening there was more vaudeville, movies, band concert and a big dance at the old opera house, music being furnished by the Hawkeye orchestra from Britt. It was later found necessary to start a dance at the Idle oHur after the picture show as the other place was too crowded and an orchestra was rounded up of local talent who furnished music.

That which attracted a great deal of attention was the massive arch which spanned main street between the Idle Hour and Baumgartner's shop. The arch is put up to last and is built of heavy material. At night the arch looms up from a great dis-

BITRO-PHOSPHATE IS GOOD FOR THIN NERVOUS PEOPLE

A French scientist has discovered an organic phosphate which should be a very effective remedy for weak nerves, sleeplessness, thinness and lack of strength, energy and vigor.

Its substance is described by specialists as identical in composition with certain vital elements naturally found in brain and nerve cells and one which when taken into the human system is quickly converted into healthy living tissue.

This phosphate is already widely known among druggists in this country as Bitro-Phosphate and some physicians claim that through its use strength, energy, vigor and nerve force are frequently increased in two weeks' time.

Dr. Frederick Kolle, Editor of New York Physicians' "Who's Who," says it should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital in the United States. As there are a great variety of so-called phosphates, those who wish to test this substance should be sure to get the genuine Bitro-Phosphate.

Acid-Stomach

Makes 9 Out of 10

People Suffer

Doctors declare that more than 70 non-organic diseases can be traced to Acid-Stomach. Starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-repeating, bloat, sour, gassy stomach, the entire system eventually becomes affected, every vital organ suffering in some degree or other. You see these victims of Acid-Stomach everywhere—people who are subject to nervousness, headache, insomnia, biliousness—people who suffer from rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and aches and pains all over the body. It is safe to say that about 9 people out of 10 suffer to some extent from Acid-Stomach.

If you suffer from stomach trouble or, even if you do not feel any stomach distress, yet are weak and ailing, feel tired and dragged out, lack "pep" and enthusiasm and know that something is wrong although you cannot locate the exact cause of your trouble—you naturally want to get back your grip on health as quickly as possible. Then take EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy that brings quick relief from pains of indigestion, belching, gassy bloat, etc. Keep your stomach strong, clean and sweet. See how your general health improves—how quickly the old-time vim, vigor and vitality comes back!

Get a big 50c box of EATONIC from your druggist today. It is guaranteed to please you. If you are not satisfied your druggist will refund your money.

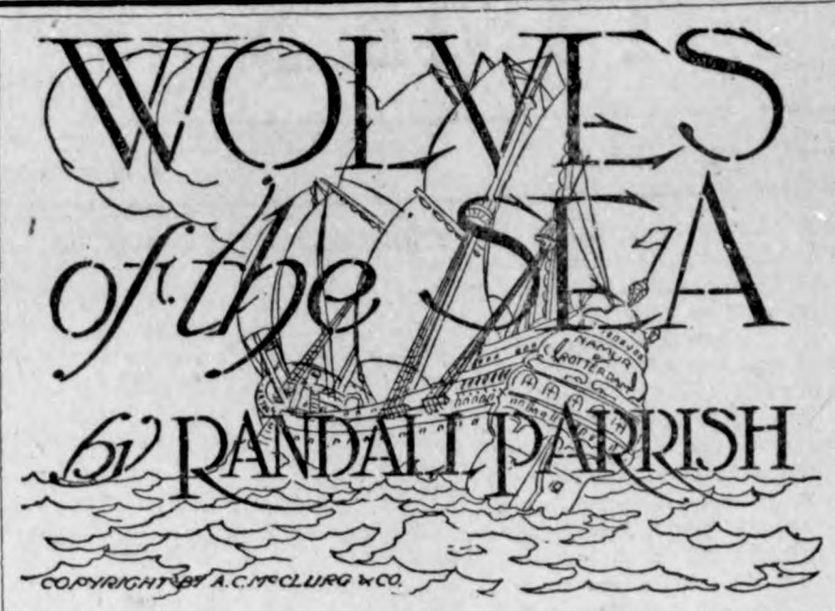
WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH



COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

A Battle to Death in Darkness of Night.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam.

CHAPTER VII.

The Lieutenant Unmasked.

Where the craft could be bound; for what secret purpose it was afloat; who were aboard, were but so many unanswerable questions arising in my mind. Where could it have come from, unless from that strange Dutch bark? If it really came from the Namur of Rotterdam had it been sent in answer to some signal by Sanchez? I could think of nothing else. I determined to assure myself as to the identity of these strangers. If they had actually landed it would require only a few moments to ascertain the truth. The distance proved somewhat greater than anticipated, because of the deep curve in the shore and I had nearly reached the conclusion that the boat must have rounded the point and gone on when suddenly I was brought to a halt by a voice speaking in Spanish—one of those harsh croaking voices never to be reduced to a whisper.

"Not the spot Manuel? Of course it is; do you not suppose I know? This is the place and now there is nothing to do but wait. The senor—he will be here presently."

"Ay, unless you misread the signal," a somewhat more discreet but piping voice replied doubtfully. "I saw nothing of all you tell about, Estada."

The two men went on to discuss plans evidently communicated to Estada by Sanchez from England. I was about to creep nearer, when a newcomer moved past me scarcely a yard distant, along the narrow strip of sand. Directly opposite my covert he paused.

"Estada." He spoke the name cautiously.

"Ay, captain," and another figure emerged noiselessly from the gloom. "We await you."

"Good. I rather questioned if you caught my signal. I was watched and obliged to exercise care. How many have you here?"

"Four, senor, with Manuel Estevan."

"Quite sufficient. How is it here? Are there suspicions?"

"None, senor. We have cruised outside most of the time. There is no warships in these waters. You said you were being watched on the sloop. Are you known?"

"A dog of a servant who came over with us—one of Monmouth's brood. The fellow watches me like a hawk. We had some words aboard and there is hate between us."

"May I ask your plans, senor?"

"Yes, I am here to explain. This planter, Fairfax, has returned from England with a large sum. It is in gold and notes. It represents the proceeds of the tobacco crop of himself and a number of his neighbors. Without doubt it will be upward of fifty thousand pounds. This still remains in his possession, but a part will be dispersed tomorrow; so if we hope to gain the whole we must do so now. Everything is ready, and there is not the slightest suspicion of danger—not even a guard set over the treasure."

"Then it is at the house?"

"In an iron-bound chest, in the room assigned to Fairfax for the night. Only two servants sleep in the main house, the cook and a maid, both women. Fairfax is vigorous and will put up a fight if he has any chance. He must be taken care of before he does have any. Travers is an old man, to be knocked out with a blow. All we have to fear are those fellows on the sloop, and they will have to be attended to quietly without any alarm reaching the house. I am going to leave that job to you—it's not your first."

"The old sea orders, captain?"

"Ay, that will be quicker and surer." The voice hardened to sudden ferocity. "But, mark you, with one exception—the Englishman is not to be killed, if he can be taken alive. I would deal with him."

"Then after that," Sanchez went on deliberately, as though murder was of small account, "you will follow me up the bluff. Who are the others with you?"

"Carl Anderson, Pedro Mendez and Cochose."

"Well chosen; Mendez is the least valuable, and we will leave him with the prisoner at the boat. The big negro, Cochose, together with Manuel, can attend to Travers and the two negresses—they sleep below. That will leave you and the Swede to get the chest. No firearms if they can be avoided. I have been over the house and drawn a diagram. You can look it over in the cabin of the sloop. The stairs lead up from the front hall. I will go with you to the door of Fairfax's room."

"And you, senor—the girl?"

"What know you of any girl?"

"That there was one on the deck of the sloop—an English beauty. It was when you turned to greet her that you gave me the signal. I merely thought that perhaps—"

"Then stop thinking," burst forth Sanchez enraged. "Thinking has nothing to do with your work. If there is a girl I attend to her. Let that suffice. Dios! am I chief here, or are you? You have my orders; now obey them and hold your tongue. Bring the men up here."

The little band of men emerged from the concealment of the fog noiselessly. I could distinguish no faces, scarcely indeed the outlines of their separate forms in the gloom, but one was an unusually big fellow—Cochose.

"Lads," he said incisively, a sharper note of leadership in the tone, "it has been a bit quiet for you lately; but now I am back again, and we'll try our luck at sea once more."

There was a savage growl of response, a sudden leaning forward of dark figures.

"We'll begin on a job tonight. There are fifty thousand pounds for us in that house yonder, and I waive my share. Estada will explain to you the work I want done. By daylight we shall be on blue water, with our course set for Porto Grande. How is it, bullies, do you sniff at the salt sea?"

"Ay, ay, captain."

"And see the pretty girls waiting—and hear the chink of gold?"

"Ay, senor."

"Then do not fail me tonight—and remember it is to be the knife. Estada, I have forgotten one thing—scuttle the sloop before joining me. 'Tis better to make all safe; and now, strong arms, and good luck. Go to your task, and if one fails me it will mean the lash at the mast-butt."

They moved off one by one, Estada leading, along the narrow strip of sand, five of them, on their mission of murder. The leader remained alone, his back toward where I crouched, his eyes following their vanishing figures until the night had swallowed them.

CHAPTER VIII.

A Victory and a Defeat.

I arose silently to my feet, fully aware that all hope of thwarting this villainy lay in immediate action. Sanchez had turned slightly and stood with his face toward the bay. I ventured a cautious step forward and stood on the open sand, scarcely a yard to his rear. Some vague sense of my presence must have influenced the man, for he swung suddenly about, uttering a stifled cry of startled surprise, as we met face to face. For an instant we were locked so closely within each other's desperate grip, his head bent beneath my arm, with my fingers clutching at his throat to block any call for help, that he possessed no knowledge of his assailant's identity. But the man was like a tiger. The surprise of attack was to my advantage, yet almost before I realized what was being done he had rallied, broken my first hold, and his eyes were glaring straight into mine. Then he knew me, his free hand instantly grasping at his knife. Even as he jerked it forth I crushed his wrist within my fingers, forcing his forearm back. There was no outcry, no noise, except that of our heavy breathing and trampling feet. Personal hatred had ascendency in both our hearts—I doubt if he ever thought of aught else but the desire to kill me there with his own hands. Only once did he even utter a word, hissing out the sentence as though it were a poison:

"To hell with you, you sneaking English cur!"

What followed has to me no clearness, no consistency. Never have I fought with deeper realization that I needed every ounce of strength and every trick of wit and skill. Now I knew the fellow possessed greater knowledge of the game than I and a quicker movement; I excelled in weight of body and coolness of brain. Twice he pricked me deep enough to draw blood, before I succeeded in twisting backward the arm with which he held the blade. He met the game too late, falling half back upon one knee, hoping thus to foil my purpose. There was the sharp crack of a bone, as his useless fingers let the knife drop, a snarled curse of pain, and then, with the rage of a mad dog, Sanchez struck his teeth deep into my cheek. With a thrill of exultation I gripped the knife, driving instantly the keen blade to its hilt into the man's side. He made no cry, no struggle—the set teeth unlocked, and he fell limply back on the sand, his head lapped by the waves.

The fellow lay motionless, his face upturned to the sky, but invisible except in dim outline. I rested my ear over his heart, detecting no murmur of response; touched the veins of his wrist, but found there no answering throb of life.

With the death-dealing knife still gripped in my hand I raced forward along the narrow strip of sand, reckless of what I might encounter. I ran on until I reached the sloop. Through the gloom concealing the deck I could perceive only dim figures, a riot of men, battling furiously hand to hand, yet out of the ruck loomed through the darkness in larger outlines than the others—Cochose, the negro. I leaped at the fellow and struck with the keen knife, missing the heart but plunging the blade deep into the flesh of the shoulder. The next instant I was in a bear's grip, the very breath crushed out of me, yet, by some chance, my one arm remained free, and I drove the sharp steel into him twice before he forced the weapon from my fingers. I thrust an elbow beneath the brute's chin, and thus forced his head back until the neck cracked.

He was too strong, too immense of stature. Apparently unweakened by his wounds, the giant negro, thoroughly aroused, exerted his mighty muscles, and, despite my utmost effort at resistance, thrust me back against the stern rail, where the weight of his body pinned me helplessly. With a roar of rage he drove his huge fist into my face, but happily was too close to give much force to the blow. My own hands, gripping the neckband of his coarse shirt, twisted it tight about the great throat until, in desperation, panting for breath, the huge brute actually lifted me in his arms and hurled me backward headlong over the rail. I struck something as I fell, yet rebounding from this splashed into the deep water and went down so nearly unconscious as to make not even the slightest struggle. And yet I came up once more to the surface, arising by sheer chance directly beneath the small dory—which my body must have struck as I fell—towing by a painter astern of the sloop, and fortunately retained sense enough to cling desperately to this first thing my hands touched, and thus remained concealed.

Made No Cry, No Struggle.

The dory caught in some current, floated at the very extremity of its slender towline, and in consequence the sloop appeared little more than a mere smudge, when my eyes endeavored to discover its outlines. Evidently the bloody work had been completed, for now all was silent on board. Then came the voice of Estada in a gruff inquiry:

"So you are hiding here, Cochose! What are you looking for in the sea?"

"What? Why that d——d Englishman. Mon Dieu! He fought me like a mad rat."

"The Englishman, you say? He was here then? It was he you battled with? What became of the fellow?"

"He went down there, senor. The dog stabbed me three times. It was either he or I to go."

"You mean you threw him overboard?"

"Ay, with his ribs crushed in, and not a breath left in his d——d body. He's never come up even—I've watched and there has not been so much as a ripple where he sank."

Too late to save Dorothy from the hands of Sanchez' villainous crew, Carlyle sees but one desperate chance of going to her aid. Shall he take it?

GOOD STALLIONS TO IMPROVE COLT CROP

Harvest Aid, Animal of Highest Type, Is Purchased.

Work at New Breeding Station at Buffalo, Wyo., Carried on by Government in Co-operation With State Officials.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A standard-bred stallion, Harvest Aid, 63908, an animal of the very highest breeding type, has recently been purchased by the United States department of agriculture and placed at the government's new horse-breeding station at Buffalo, Wyo. Work at this station is being carried on in co-operation with the state of Wyoming, the object being to develop utility horses especially adapted to western range and farm conditions. Harvest Aid is by the champion trotting stallion The Harvester, and his dam is Santos Maid, a mare which holds the trotting record of 2:08¾, and a daughter of A Sire That Insures an Improved Colt Crop.

Peter the Great, the leading sire of speed in America. Harvest Aid is an animal of great stamina, good size and conformation, and while he was selected on his merits as an individual, the horsemen of the department say they are extremely fortunate in getting such a well-bred animal. It is not the purpose at the horse-breeding station to develop speed animals, but it is well understood that a good stallion from a family noted for its speed is highly desirable for the production of active utility horses.

MAKE MONEY RAISING BARLEY

Experiments Show It Will Surpass Corn as Ration for Fattening Hogs If Properly Fed.

Experiments at the Wisconsin experiment station show that barley will surpass corn as a ration for fattening hogs if it is properly fed. Twelve lots of pigs were fed, using with some a corn ration, while the others were given barley. The return for each pig over the cost of feed was $14.38 for the barley-fed pigs, and $12.38 for the corn-fed porkers.

One of the most interesting facts brought out was the value of a barley and whey combination, which netted a handsome return, and the gains made with this ration were very rapid.

If you are in a region which is suited for the production of barley, or if you have been using it as a nurse crop for alfalfa, do not be discouraged by the prospect of a lower price, due to the curtailing of the use of barley in the brewing industry. Perhaps it will pay you more than ever as a feed for your hogs and your other live stock.

LIMESTONE INCREASES YIELD

Demonstrations Carried On for Two Years in Indiana to Show Value of Ground Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

For two years the county agent in Jefferson county, Ind., has been carrying on demonstrations to show the value of ground limestone on acid soils. In one demonstration this year an average of 25½ bushels of wheat were produced to the acre. Neighbors who helped thrash this wheat, and who have land that is just as good, except that they did not make applications of ground limestone, obtained only 15 bushels to the acre. This high yield is hardly an exception, reports the agent, for similar results were obtained by other farmers in the section who used limestone.

ADVANTAGES OF SAME BREED

Better Prices Secured From Uniform Product and Breeding Stock Secured Near Home.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are many advantages to be gained when the stock raisers of one community raise the same breed. Better prices may be secured from the sale of a uniform product and suitable breeding stock can be secured near home.

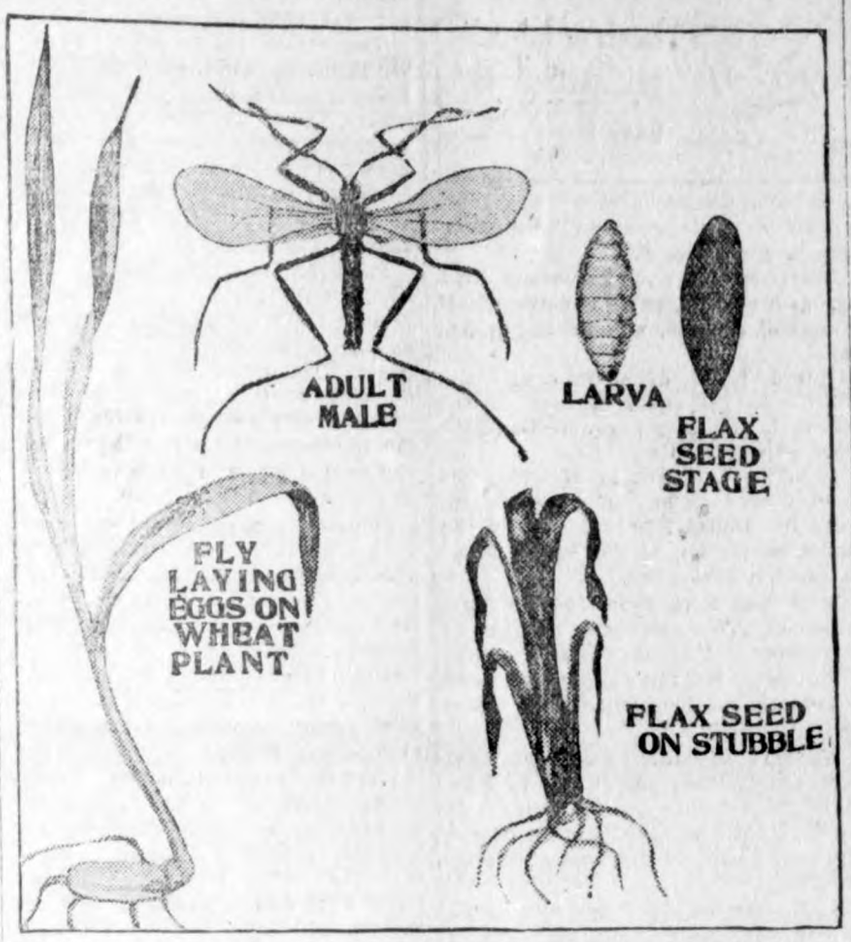
FARMER WHO AIDS FERTILITY

Dairyman Who Studies Feed for Land Is Not Soil Robber—Something Must Be Put Back.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The dairy farmer not only studies how to feed his cow, but how to feed his land. He is not a soil robber, as he realizes that the farmer who reduces the fertility of his land robs without reason, since he steals from himself.

SAFE SEEDING DATES RECOMMENDED FOR SAVING WHEAT CROP FROM HESSIAN FLY



Important Stages in the Life Cycle of the Hessian Fly.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Hessian fly, a minute wheat parasite, less than knee-high to a grasshopper, but gigantic as a fierce lion in its destructiveness, collects $50,000,000 a year from American wheat growers. This mosquito-like fly lays its eggs upon the leaves of wheat, and after the eggs hatch the little maggots live upon the plants' sap which they obtain by gnawing into the soft portion of the stem. Ordinarily two, or sometimes three or more, generations of the insect occur during a year. The main army of flies arrives in the fall and conducts a carnival of despoliation among the newly seeded grain. After the Hessian fly has once thoroughly infested a crop of wheat there is no known means of saving the grain, and the only known method of preventing damage from the fly is to keep such invaders out of the wheat.

Safe Dates for Seeding.

One of the most effective means of escaping fly damage is to defer fall seeding until danger of molestation from the fly is over. Safety dates for seeding wheat in different sections of the country are as follows:

Northern Michigan, soon after September 1; in southern Michigan, and northern Ohio, about September 20; in southern Ohio, after the first week in October; in Kentucky and Tennessee, October 10 to 20; in Georgia and South Carolina, October 25 to November 16; in extreme southern Kansas and northern Oklahoma, as well as in Virginia, after the first week in October. October-sown wheat always enjoys the greatest freedom from the fly in Missouri. Practically the same corresponding delay in wheat sowing in the fall should be followed to the southward.

These safety dates are only approximate and serve to show in a general way about the time when the fall brood of the fly will have largely disappeared from the wheat belt east of the Mississippi river. As the larger part of the fall brood appears and is gone within a week, it is possible for a farmer to time his seeding operations so as to avoid the fly.

Rotating Crops Is Effective.

Crop rotation is an efficient control as during the season of migration, unless new unaffected fields are near by, most of the insects succumb. Rotating the crops decreases the available supply of new host plants.

Destruction of volunteer grain plants by plowing, disking, or other tillage operations must begin before the larvae have matured in order to be effective, as volunteer wheat ordinarily is a prolific distributer of fly infection. Enriching the soil by plowing under the green cover crops and by applying stable manure also aid indirectly in combating the fly because a fertile soil will produce plants that soon attain vigorous, healthy growth and are better able to resist diseases than those grown on thin soils where it is hard to develop sufficient growth to withstand the winter if the wheat is sown late.

Good seed is a perequisite in securing healthy vigorous growth. Ordinarily the fly is avoided where good seed is sown in a thoroughly prepared fertile soil after the majority of the fall brood has disappeared. It is preferable to sow on ground not devoted to wheat the preceding year. In the case of spring wheat, the earlier the grain is sown the less it will suffer from the Hessian fly, but good seed and a well prepared, fertile soil are as essential in this case as elsewhere.

EFFICIENT MEANS OF PREPARING SEED BED

Use Disk to Prevent Growth of Grass and Weeds.

Plow Land to Depth of 6 or 7 Inches Where Wheat Follows Other Than Cultivated Crop—Keep Topsoil Well Broken Up.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When wheat follows a cultivated crop that is removed sufficiently early, such as corn or tobacco, the soil can usually be prepared for seeding by the use of a disk and ordinary harrows. As soon as the crop is harvested the land should be gone over with the disk to prevent the growth of grass and weeds. A second disking, followed by harrowing, is given just before the grain is sown. A better seed bed can be prepared in this way than by plowing, and it takes much less time and work. If weeds are plentiful, plowing three or four inches deep may be necessary. Harrowing with an ordinary harrow should follow the plowing.

When wheat follows cotton the stalks should be plowed under as soon as the bolls are all open and picked. Plowing in this case should be deep enough to bury the stalks completely in order to destroy the boll weevil. The land should then be firmed with a roller and the wheat sown with a disk drill. Disking or harrowing is not advisable, as it unearths the buried stalks.

When wheat follows other than a cultivated crop, the seed bed should be prepared by plowing the land to a depth of six or seven inches several weeks before seeding. It should then be harrowed at once and afterwards worked down with a harrow, disk, drag, or roller in such a manner as to kill all weeds that start to grow after the topsoil is well broken up. When it is necessary to plow just before seeding, as when a catch crop of cowpeas is plowed under, the soil should be compacted by rolling and harrowing several times before seeding.

BETTER SWINE AND PROFITS

Farmers Learning to Be More Careful in Selection of Their Breeding Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers throughout the country are using improved hog-breeding stock more generally than ever before, report specialists of the United States department of agriculture, as they are learning that the best stock yields the most profits, and hence are more careful in their selection of breeding animals. Farmers, as a rule, seem to be pleased with the outlook for the hog raiser, and the indications point to a large increase in the number of litters to be farrowed this fall. Much trouble was experienced with the early spring litters because of cold weather at farrowing time and on account of feed shortage and the high price of protein feeds, causing many stockmen to allow their brood sows to get into poor condition, with the result that small and weak litters were farrowed. In the main, these farmers have learned a costly lesson, and henceforward it is presumed that they will provide better housing and farrowing conditions as well as ample food of the right mixture for their porker.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Order clover seed now.

Dig potatoes on a dry day.

* * *

Sprouts, briars, and bushes cut now are not likely to come out again.

* * *

As soon as the kernels have fairly hardened it will do to cut corn for grain and fodder.

* * *

Many farmers are pooling their interests and purchasing fertilizers together in carload lots.

* * *

There are two ways to can corn. One is in cans and the other is in the silo. Can all you can both ways.

DAIRY

PREVENT MOTTLES IN BUTTER

Primarily Caused by an Uneven Distribution of Salt or by Insufficient Working.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Mottled butter is frequently found on the market, and, even though it may be of very good flavor, it is strongly discriminated against by the purchaser. As this defect is one of workmanship, it can be overcome by the application of proper methods on the part of the buttermaker.

Mottles are caused primarily by an uneven distribution of salt in the butter. This may be produced by insufficient working of the butter or by churning, washing, and working it at a very low temperature, or by washing or working it at a temperature several degrees higher or lower than the churning temperature.

When the quantity of butter made in one churning is much less than usual it is necessary to work it a greater number of revolutions of the churn than usual in order to produce the same results on the butter.

Extremely low temperatures of churning, washing, and working should be avoided, because they produce so firm a butter that it is only with great difficulty that the salt can be worked uniformly into it. High temperatures of churning, washing, and working must also be avoided to prevent an abnormal loss of fat in the buttermilk and also the making of a greasy, leaky butter.

Working the Butter.

Great variations in temperature during the manufacturing process should always be avoided. Under normal conditions the temperature of the wash water should be the same as or within two degrees of that of the buttermilk.

FLY REPELLENT IS USEFUL

Spraying Should Not Be Done Just Before Milking, as Milk Absorbs Odors Very Rapidly.

The following homemade fly repellents to ease old Brindle at milking time are recommended by Horace Jones, instructor in dairy husbandry at South Daktoa State college: (1) 100 parts fish oil, 50 parts oil of tar, and 1 part crude carbolic acid. Apply with a sprayer. (2) One pound common laundry soap, 4 gallons water, 1 gallon crude petroleum, and 4 ounces powdered naphthalin. Dissolve the soap in the water and the naphthalin in the crude petroleum.

Care should be taken that the spraying is not done immediately before milking as milk absorbs odors very readily. If the cows are milked in the stable the milk should be removed immediately after milking to a cool place where no odor of the fly repellent exists.

DAIRY NOTES

The pig and cow pasture should be separate.

* * *

Give the young calf an early chance to nibble at grass.

* * *

Spray religiously all stalls and whitewash all parts of the stable.

* * *

Dairy cows, or all milk cows for that matter, require large quantities of water.

* * *

Take good care of the calves, for more of them are needed on many farms.

* * *

There isn't much play about dairying but no other job pays better for hard work.

* * *

The heifer bred too early always remains stunted in growth and her milk flow is shortened for all time.

* * *

Keep dirt out of the milk. Strain through cotton or filter cloth. Use only clean, sterile strainer cloths.

FARM STOCK

STOCK MAINTENANCE RATION

Silage, Corn Stover, Straw and Unmarketable Hay Should Be Given Cattle to Be Grazed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The greatest obstacle in developing the grazing industry in many eastern and central sections is the cost of wintering the stock. It is impossible to buy young cattle or sheep in the spring in sufficient quantities and at a price to yield a satisfactory profit from the summer grazing.

One of two plans must be followed. A breeding herd may be kept to produce the stock, as is practiced on the ranges of the West, or young stock may be purchased in the fall—the plan followed by the grazers in the bluegrass region of the Virginias and Kentucky. Either method necessitates the wintering of animals.

Right here should be laid down a hard-and-fast rule. Cattle which are to be grazed the following summer should be carried through the winter on a strictly maintenance ration. Silage, corn stover, straw, and unmarketable hay should form its basis. The silo is almost indispensable for economical feeding of such stock. No grain should be fed if it can be avoided. It has been the experience of grazers in the bluegrass region that steers which have lost 50 pounds in weight during the winter finish the grazing period weighing the same as those which made a gain of that amount.

KEEP LARGER SHEEP FLOCKS

High Prices of Wool and Mutton Induce Western Growers to Increase Number of Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As a result of high prices of wool and mutton and the value of sheep as weed and waste utilizers, western irrigation farmers are keeping more and larger flocks. As a rule these farm flocks are of good breeding, many consisting of purebred animals, their owners making a specialty of selling purebred ram lambs to range-country stockmen, who do not reserve breeding stock from year to year. Several projects are now operating wool pools, the main function of which is to concentrate the wool in large quantities and develop keener competition among buyers. Combination also favors grading and better classifying of wool and allows a small producer to realize greater profits from his sheep-farming operations.

CALCULATIONS OF HOG FEEDS

Light Thrown on Proper Combinations for Different Purposes—Big Aid to Grower.

The calculation of rations with the aid of feeding standards and tables will prove both interesting and profitable, for it will throw much light on the proper combinations of food for different purposes. At the same time it promotes a spirit of inquiry and close observation on the part of the farmer, which is one of the first requisites of a successful feeder.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Lambs feeding in corn should never be short on roughage.

* * *

Salt placed where the sheep may have it when they want it is essential.

* * *

For wintering cows or stock steers, stover silage seems to be of decided value.

* * *

Stock hogs can be kept thrifty largely on pastures; however, they will grow slowly without some grain.

When it is necessary to have the mare do harvest work the colt should be weaned, even if he is not more than

Iowa's 1919 corn crop may yet fall behind the crop of 1918, on account of the heavy recent rains. Fields are soggy and the corn contains 23 per cent water. Some new corn has been husked and sold, but elevators over the state have refused to buy more, on account of its condition due to the moisture. Iowa is the only state in the corn growing belt which has a bumper crop. Other corn states are way below normal.

The completition of the deal whereby the state takes over 700 acres of land in Van Buren county bordering the Des Moines river for a state park will be made when a committee from that county will meet with the state board of conservation and deliver deeds, abstracts and pledges of landowners whose property has not yet been acquired. Some $7,000 in cash has been contributed by residents of the county to the fund to purchase the park.

The Forest City post of the American Legion has adopted a resolution urging the Iowa delegation in congress to use its influence to enact a law authorizing a payment of $30 per month for each month of service to every person serving in the military service for the United States from April 6, 1917, to November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive (being honorably discharged from the service), and to prorate the extra "days" of such service.

DO NOT WANT LICENSING BILLS

Farmers, Stockmen and Merchants Oppose Packer Legislation at Washington.

Representing a diversity of interests and including farmers, feeders, retail butchers and produce dealers, fully a thousand individuals have made their way to Washington to enter their protests against the packer licensing plan now in hearing before the senate agriculture committee.

Far from solving in any measure the high cost of living, the proposed legislation if passed would be a dangerous experiment for everyone, is the consensus of opinion held by these witnesses.

"We've had government control of railroads and telephones and telegraphs until we're plumb worn out, and we don't want any more," W. P. Carpenter, stock feeder of Tarkio, Mo., told the committee. "I'm in favor of the man who can produce the cheapest going ahead as far as he can. That's the way to cut down the cost of living."

That the packers dominated the stock markets was an idea scouted by testifying stock feeders, who said they found the stock yards places of keen competition.

Taking away the packers' refrigerator cars was as reasonable as taking away their butcher knives, was the conviction expressed by J. P. Lynch, another feeder from Tarkio.

The concern of stockmen and butchers who fear that hampering the packers will only result in disrupting the meat industry without benefit to anyone, was not the sole interest displayed at the hearing. Business men throughout the country are strongly against the licensing feature which would establish a precedent for bringing government control and politics into the conduct of all manner of business.

Many business organizations have expressed themselves formally, through resolutions, as against the principle of bringing business under government interference of the kind proposed in the Kenyon and Kendrick bills.

In speaking for the chamber of commerce of Moultrie, Ga., C. T. Caldwell said: "We've got Swift & Co. down there, and they've helped more than anything else to get our farmers to diversify. The live stock business needs their national distribution."

THE PACKERS AND REFRIGERATOR CARS

Whether refrigerator cars should be owned by the railroads or by the packers—a point to be determined by legislation now pending in Washington—may seem to be a question rather remote from the interests of the average person. But, inasmuch as these "ice boxes on wheels," as one of the packers terms them, are the conveyances which bring our beefsteak to town, we may assume that we have a certain concern about them. If they have anything to do with the price of the beefsteak our concern is a deep one.

It is maintained by some that these cars give the packers who now own them an unfair advantage over competitors. This is stoutly denied by the packers, who offer as proof the fact that they pay the same freight rates as any shipper; and they assert that the only advantage they enjoy is in being able to get enough cars for their needs by furnishing them themselves instead of depending upon the railroads to do so. In this they are backed up by a report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, made after an investigation of all privately owned cars, to the effect that there were no unfair practices and that a radical change would adversely affect both shippers and the public.

While not opposing, in principle, railroad ownership of refrigerator cars, the packers maintain that there are not enough of these cars to go around and that the legislation in question makes no provision for insuring that the railroads shall furnish them in sufficient number. On the other hand, to pool their cars and take chances of getting what happened to be available, would seriously handicap the distribution of their perishable meat products. The stream of shipments from the packing plants would be blocked, which in turn would block the buying of live stock, and the industry, which is founded on a basis of rapid distribution, would be badly muddled.

In these contentions pro and con, there are three parties whose interests are at stake—the packers, their competitors and the public. Only one of these parties could gain a possible advantage if the packers', cars were taken away from them, viz, the packers' competitors. The cars are now admittedly handled on an economic and efficient basis, and no change is justified unless unfairness is definitely and absolutely proved—which would be in absolute contradiction to the report that the Interstate Commerce Commission has already rendered on the subject. The public would pay the bill for inefficiency in the packing industry, and it has no desire to pay this bill in order to help a few of the packers' competitors.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

SEVENTY YEARS OLD, DRIVES 22,000 MILES

Mrs. Wm. Upton on Cross County Tour Makes Own Adjustments

On her return trip, Mrs. William Upton, the seventy year old woman, who alone drove a Ford runabout from San Francisco to New York City, visited the Ford Motor Company's main office. She was introduced to the officials of the company, was photographed, held in her hand a Ford check worth two figures of millions, recounted the experiences she had encountered on her trip, and before leaving made arrangements for securing a new Ford car immediately upon her return to her home in Bakerfield, California.

Mrs. Upton has already driven her present Ford more than 22,000 miles, 7,000 of which were driven since she left San Francisco May 11th, the longest day's drive being 160 miles. At Springfield, Illinois, Mrs. Upton's birth place, she plans to dispose of the car and after visiting her many friends there, will return home via rail.

When commenting on her trip, she said that in making the drive from the Atlantic to the Pacific, it had not been her purpose to follow a direct line of travel, but to visit the most cities and places of interest. She visited the Petrified Forest, spent several days in the National Capitol, drove to Mount Vernon, visited the site of the Battle of Gettysburg, and then after touring to some of the Atlantic Coast Cities, made her way to New York.

She experienced practically no trouble with her car, although she pointed out the fact that she understands the Ford motor and made her own adjustments. Before leaving the Ford Company, Mrs. Upton expressed the hope that her next Ford, probably another runabout, will be equipped with a Ford starter.

MRS. VOGT.

"My bladder was inflamed and the kidney secretions caused terrible pain. My back was in such bad shape that when I moved the pains were like a knife-thrust. I got so dizzy I couldn't stoop and my head just throbbed with pain. Beads of perspiration would stand on my temples, then I would become cold and numb. My heart action was affected and I felt as if I couldn't take another breath. I got so nervous and run down, I felt life wasn't worth living and often wished that I might die so my suffering would be ended. Medicine failed to help me and I was discouraged.

"Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended to me and I could tell I was being helped after the first few doses. I kept getting better every day and continued use cured me. THE "BLUES"

Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people who worry, are despondent, have spells of mental depression, feel blue and are often melancholy, believe that these conditions are due to outside influences over which they have little or no control. Nearly always, however, they can be traced to an internal source—acid-stomach. Nor is it to be wondered at. Acid-stomach, beginning with such well defined symptoms as indigestion, belching, heartburn, bloat, etc., will, if not checked, in time affect to some degree or other all the vital organs. The nervous system becomes deranged. Digestion suffers. The blood is impoverished. Health and strength are undermined. The victim of acid-stomach, although he may not know the cause of his ailments, feels his hope, courage, ambition and energy slipping. And truly life is dark—not worth much to the man or woman who has acid-stomach!

Get rid of it! Don't let acid-stomach hold you back, wreck your health, make your days miserable, make you a victim of the "blues" and gloomy thoughts! There is a marvelous modern remedy called EATONIC that brings, oh! such quick relief from your stomach miseries—sets your stomach to rights—makes it strong, cool, sweet and comfortable. Helps you get back your strength, vigor, vitality, enthusiasm and good cheer. So many thousands upon thousands of sufferers have used EATONIC with such marvelously helpful results that we are sure you will feel the same way if you will just give it a trial. Get a big 50 cent box of EATONIC—the good tasting tablets that you eat like a bit of candy—from your druggist today. He will return your money if results are not even more than you expect.

Carlyle Sees One Chance—and Takes It.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay.

The two must have hung in silence over the rail staring down. I dared not advance my head to look, nor even move a muscle of my body in the water.

"How came you aft here?"

"Because that fellow leaped the rail from the wharf. I saw him, and we met at the wheel."

"From the wharf, you say? He was not aboard, then? Santa Maria! I know not what that may mean. Yet what difference, so he be dead. Anderson, Mendez, throw that carrion overboard—no, bullies, never mind; let them lie where they are, and sink an auger in the sloop's bottom. What is that out yonder, Cochose?"

"A small boat, senor—a dory, I make it."

"Cut the rope and send it adrift. Now come along with me."

The darker loom of the sloop vanished slowly, as the slight current sweeping about the end of the wharf drifted the released boat to which I clung outward into the bay. There was scarcely a ripple to the sea, and yet I felt that the boat was steadily drifting out into deep water. I was still strangely weak, barely able to retain my grasp. Finally I mustered every ounce of remaining energy in one supreme effort and succeeded in dragging my body up out of water over the boat's stern, sinking helplessly forward into the bottom. The moment this was accomplished every sense deserted me, and I lay there motionless, totally unconscious.

Devising Some Means for Attaining the Deck.

I shall never know how long I remained thus. Yet this time could not have been great. As though awakening from sleep a faint consciousness returned. Then the sharp pain of my wounds, accented by the sting of salt water, brought me swift realization of where I was and the circumstances bringing me there. I had evidently lost considerable blood, yet this had already ceased to flow, and a very slight examination served to convince me that the knife slashes were none of them serious. My other injuries were merely bruises to add to my discomfort—the result of blows dealt me by Sanchez and Cochose, aggravated by the bearlike hug of the giant negro. Indeed, I awoke to the discovery that I was far from being a dead man; and, inspired by this knowledge, the various incidents of the night dashed swiftly back into my mind.

No gleam of light appeared in any direction; no sound echoed across the dark waste of water. It was clearly impossible for me to attempt any return to the wharf through the impenetrable black curtain which shut me in. What, then, could I do? What might I still hope to accomplish? Those fellows had swept the sloop clean, and had doubtless long ago scuttled it. They would suddenly find themselves leaderless, unguided. Would that suffice to stop them? Would the discovery of his body halt his followers and send them rushing back to their boat, eager to get safely away? This did not seem likely. Estada knew of my boarding the sloop from the wharf, and would at once connect the fact of my being ashore with the killing of Sanchez. This would satisfy him there was no further danger. Besides, these were not men to flee in panic. Surely not with that ruffian Estada yet alive to lead them, and the knowledge that fifty thousand pounds was yonder in that unguarded house, with no one to protect the treasure but two old men asleep, and the women. The women!—Dorothy! What would become of her? Into whose hands would she fall in that foul division of spoils? Estada's? And I, afloat and helpless in this boat, what could I do?

CHAPTER IX.

A Swim to the Namur.

All was black, hopeless; with head buried in my hands I sat on a thwart, dazed. Before me, pleading, expressive of agonized despair, arose the sweet face of Dorothy Fairfax. No doubt by this time all was over—the dead body of Sanchez discovered, the projected attack on the house carried out, the two old men left behind, either dead or severely wounded, and the girl borne off a helpless prisoner. Ay, but this I knew; there was only one place to which the villains might flee with their booty—the Namur of Rotterdam. Only on those decks and well at sea would they be safe or able to enjoy their spoils. The thought came to me in sudden revelation—why not? Was not here a chance even yet to foil them? With Sanchez dead no man aboard that pirate craft could recognize me. I felt assured of this. I had fought the giant negro in the dark; he could not, during that fierce encounter, have distinguished my features any more clearly than I had his own. There was no one else to fear. If only I might once succeed in getting safely aboard, slightly disguised, perhaps, and mingle unnoticed among the crew, the chances were not bad for me to pass undetected. Such ships carried large crews and were constantly changing in personnel. A strange face appearing among them need not arouse undue suspicion. And I felt convinced I could locate the Namur. But could I hope to attain the ship in advance of the returning party of raiders? God helping me, I would try! My brain throbbed with fresh resolution—the call to action.

There were oars in the boat. I shipped the useless rudder inboard and chose my course from the stars. My boat had drifted considerably farther out into the bay than I had supposed, and it required a good half hour of steady toil at the oars before I sighted ahead of me the darker outlines of the shore. At first I could identify nothing, but finally there suddenly arose, clearly defined, the gaunt limbs of a dead tree, bearing a faint resemblance to a gigantic cross, that had been pointed out on the sloop. This peculiar mark was at the extremity of the first headland lying north of the point itself, and consequently a straight course across the bay would land me within five hundred yards of where the Namur had last been at anchor.

To a degree my immediate plan of action had been definitely mapped out within my own mind while toiling at the oars. I would beach my dory and strike out on foot directly across the narrow neck of land. The Namur was not so far out from shore as to make swimming to her a dangerous feat, and I could approach and board her with far less chance of discovery in that manner than by the use of a boat. The greater danger would come after I had attained the deck, wet to the skin. The sharp bow of the dory ran up on the soft sand of the beach, and I stepped ashore.

Then there came to me the first real consciousness of the reckless nature of this adventure. As I faced then the probabilities there scarcely seemed one chance in a hundred. And yet I must admit there was the one chance; and in no other action could I perceive even that much encouragement. If Dorothy Fairfax was already in the hands of these men, then my only opportunity for serving her lay in my being close at hand. No alternative presented itself; no other effort could be effective. It was already too late to attempt the organization of a rescue party. No, the only choice left was for me either to accompany the girl or else abandon her entirely to her captors. I must either face the possibility of discovery and capture which as surely meant torture and death, or otherwise play the coward and remain impotently behind. So I drove the temptation to falter away and strode on up the bank into the black shadow of the trees.

I found extremely hard walking as I advanced through tangled underbrush. Fortunately the distance was even shorter than I had anticipated. It was not until after I had advanced cautiously into the water and then stooped low to thus gain clearer vision along the surface that I succeeded in locating the vessel sought. Even then the Namur appeared only as a mere shadow, without so much as a light showing aboard, yet apparently anchored in the same position as when we had swept past the previous afternoon. I waded straight out through the lines of surf, until all excepting the head became completely submerged. If I were to reach the bark at all this was the one opportunity.

I stood there, resisting the undertow tugging at my limbs and barely able to retain my footing, intent upon my purpose. Full strength had come back to my muscles and my head was again clear. With strong, silent strokes I swam forward, directly breasting the force of the incoming sea, yet making fair progress. Some unconsidered current must have swept me to the right, for, when the outlines of the bark again became dimly visible through the night I found myself well to starboard of the vessel. Stroking well under water and with only my eyes exposed above the surface, I changed my course to the left and slowly and cautiously drew in toward the starboard bow. A few moments later, unperceived from above, and protected from observation by the bulge of the overhang and density of the shadow, my hands clung to the anchor hawser, my mind busy in devising some means for attaining the deck.

CHAPTER X.

On the Deck of the Namur.

It was here that fortune favored me, strengthening my decision and yielding a fresh courage to persevere. Forking out directly over where I clung desperately to the wet hawser, my eyes were able to trace the bowsprit, the rather loosely furled up jib flapping ragged edges in the gusts of wind. Suddenly, as I stared upward, I became aware that two men were working their way out along the footropes, and, as they reached a point almost directly over my head, became busily engaged in tightening the gaskets to better secure the loosening sail. The foot of one slipped, and he hung dangling, giving vent to a stiff English oath before he succeeded in hauling himself back to safety. The other indulged in a chuckling laugh, yet he was careful not to speak loudly.

"Had one drink too many, Tom?" he asked. "That will pay yer fer finishin' the bottle an' never givin' me another sup."

"You, h—l! Yer hed the fu'st ov it. Thar's no sorter luck yer don't git yer fair share of, Bill Haines—trust yer fer thet. What I ain't got straight yet is whar thet stuff cum from so easy."

"That wus part o' the luck, Tom. Did yer git eyes on thet new feller Manuel Estevan brought back with him in the boat?"

"The one you and Jose carried aboard?"

"He's the lad. Thar wa'n't nuthin' the matter with the cove, 'cept he wus dead drunk. We wus waitin' on the beach fer Estevan, an' three fellers he hed taken along with him inter town ter cum back—the nigger, Jose an' me—when this yere chap hove 'longside. He never hailed us, ner nuthin'; just clim over into the boat, an' lay down. I shook him, an' kicked him, but it wa'n't no use; so we just left him lie thar fer Manuel ter say whut wus ter be done with him. Only Jose he went through his pockets an' found three bottles o' rum. We took a few drinks an' hid whut wus left in the boat locker."

"So thet's how yer got it! Who wus the party?"

"Thet's more'n I'll ever tell yer. I never got no sight o' him, 'cept in the dark. 'Bout all I know is he wus white, an' likely a sailor. Enyhow, when Manuel got back he told us to haul the lad forrard out o' the way an' fetch him along. So we pulled out with the feller cuddled up in the bow."

"I never seed nuthin' more of him after he was hauled aboard. Whut become o' the lad?"

Once on board the Namur, Carlyle knows he may have a chance to aid Dorothy. It is a desperate chance, but he is willing to take it. But how to get aboard without being seen? Can he avoid detection which will mean certain death?

A SUMMER COLD

A cold in the summer time, as everybody knows, is the hardest kind of a cold to get rid of. The best and quickest way is to go to bed and stay there if you can, with a bottle of "Boschee's Syrup" handy to insure a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning.

But if you can't stay in bed you must keep out of draughts, avoid sudden changes, eat sparingly of simple food and take occasional doses of Boschee's Syrup, which you can buy at any store where medicine is sold, a safe and efficient remedy, made in America for more than fifty years. Keep it handy.—Adv.

The size of the storage room should be determined by the space available and the amount of material to be stored. Natural earth makes a better floor than concrete or brick, as a certain amount of moisture is desirable. The walls of the storage room should be parallel to the walls of the cellar. Lay 2 by 4-inch scantling flat on the floor and secure them with pegs driven into the floor or by nailing them to the top of short posts set in the ground. Set 2 by 4-inch studding from this sill to the ceiling, spacing them 16 inches apart from center to center. Locate the door of the storage room at the most convenient point, making it large enough to admit barrels, boxes, etc., a good size being 2½ feet wide by 6½ feet high. Set the studs on either side of the door 32 inches apart, which will allow for the door and the frame. Put a header over the door, allowing one inch for the frame and seven-eighths of an inch for the sill at the bottom. Set the studs against the walls where the cellar walls and storage room walls meet. Care exercised in making the frame square and plumb will enable the builder to get the structure tight with a minimum of labor. A good room is made by covering the studding on the outside with tongue-and-groove material, but a better way is to sheathe the outside with plain lumber, tack building paper on this, and side with tongue-and-groove material. This construction in connection with lath and plaster or wall board on the inside makes an excellent room.

HOG GOOD LABOR EQUALIZER

Animal Can Harvest Various Crops in More Efficient Manner Than Transient Farm Hand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Practically every farmer can plant and cultivate a larger acreage than he can harvest.

When the harvest season comes he is overworked.

Also, he has to depend on transient labor which, many times, is bothersome and unreliable.

And, after all, a considerable portion of the crop may have to go to waste because it cannot be gathered in time.

The hog, helped out by cattle and sheep, when practicable, is an excellent labor equalizer.

He harvests the corn crop more efficiently than the transient farm hand can be expected to do it—and does not have to be superintended by the owner of the farm.

He is equally efficient in harvesting rye, or clover, or alfalfa, or soy beans, or cow peas.

When the farmer makes use of the co-operative quality of the hog he has more time for essential tasks, more time to look out for his own health and happiness and that of his family, makes more money on the year's operations, and has better ground for the next year's crops.

The farm that depends on transient laborers as harvesters is likely to grow poorer year by year. The farm that uses hogs as harvesters is certain to grow more fertile with every crop.

STRAW AS WINTER ROUGHAGE

Also Advisable to Use It Liberally for Bedding as It Absorbs Liquid Manure.

Straw is too valuable to be allowed to remain unused. Fresh oat straw, as well as wheat straw, can be used as a roughage in wintering stock. It is also advisable to use it liberally as bedding for farm animals as it adds to their comfort and absorbs the liquid part of the manure, which is the most valuable portion.

CURING ALFALFA AND CLOVER

When Rain Washes Over Dried Crop Hay Loses More Than One-Half of Its Value.

Tests conducted at the Ohio experiment station in curing alfalfa and clover hay show that when rain washes over the dried crop the hay loses more than one-half of its value, due to the leaching of the rain water.

IT IS OF UTMOST IMPORTANCE TO USE CARE IN CUTTING SKINS FROM ANIMALS

Skin Drawn Tight Helps Work With Knife.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers who devote the little extra time necessary in skinning animals carefully—possibly only three to five minutes in taking off the skin of a calf, or 15 minutes in the case of a beef hide—can increase the value of the hide several times, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture. This is of utmost importance in view of the present urgent demand for leather, and the increase in price which unscored hides bring on the market. It is essential and even necessary to exercise the utmost care in removing skins from farm animals.

Country hides and skins make up more than one-third of all the hides and skins produced in the country, but too often the value of country hides for leather making is less than that of packer hides. The tanner pays more for packer hides than for those obtained from farmers or country slaughterers. This is due in part to better facilities in the large packing houses for curing and storing the hides, but principally to the fact that such hides have been taken off properly. The tanner knows that country hides are frequently removed by unskilled workmen and are often cut and scored. When such hides come from a tanner, scores show very plainly and in many cases one-half of the thickness of the leather is lost by such defects. Imperfections can be avoided and the farmer can make more money by careful use of the skinning knife, by keeping the hides clean and free from blood and by proper storage and packing.

How to Skin Animals.

When animals are skinned on the farm, the operation should be performed on a clean, hard spot under a tree, if possible, or, if done indoors, in a room with a concrete floor. The limb of a tree may be used for suspending the carcass, but when the hides are removed indoors a block and tackle must be provided.

The animals should be cleaned off, curried and brushed thoroughly, in order to remove all dirt. The skinning knife should be sharp, though it should not be used any more than is absolutely necessary. The use of the knife may be avoided in taking off calf skins, except on the head, neck, legs and flanks, as the body skin may be drawn or fisted off. Where it is necessary to use the knife, the skin should be drawn taut with one hand, while the knife is used with the other, special care being taken to hold the back of the blade close to the skin. If this is done there is less danger of cutting or scoring the skins. In lieu of the knife, some butchers use a sharpened wooden stick shaped like a man's thumb, and employ a knife only on the portions of the body mentioned.

The first operation in removing a hide is to skin the animal's head, cheeks and face. This should be done while the animal is still suspended. Always keep the hide free from meat, as one of the common faults of country hides is the presence of more or less meat, usually cheek meat. The next step in the operation is to lower the animal on its back and remove the skin from the legs. Following this, the hide should be ripped down the belly from the sticking cut to the tail, making a neat, straight rip, free from jagged edges. The sides are then skinned, working forward to the brisket and then back to the inside of the hind leg. Lift away the hide with the free hand and stretch it tightly by pulling outward and upward against the knife or wooden stick.

Injury Done By Blood.

Blood is objectionable on hides, particularly in the summer, as it is likely to cause the hair to slip from rotting or decomposition when the hides are packed. This may result in having otherwise good hides placed in the No. 2 grade on the market. Care should be taken to avoid placing any hides in the pack until they are free from animal heat. Allow them to lie folded from three to five hours or sufficiently long to allow the animal heat to get out of them. If this is not done, patches of decomposition may result, and such hides, though carefully removed, may be reduced in market value at least one cent or more a pound.

Preparing Hides for Market.

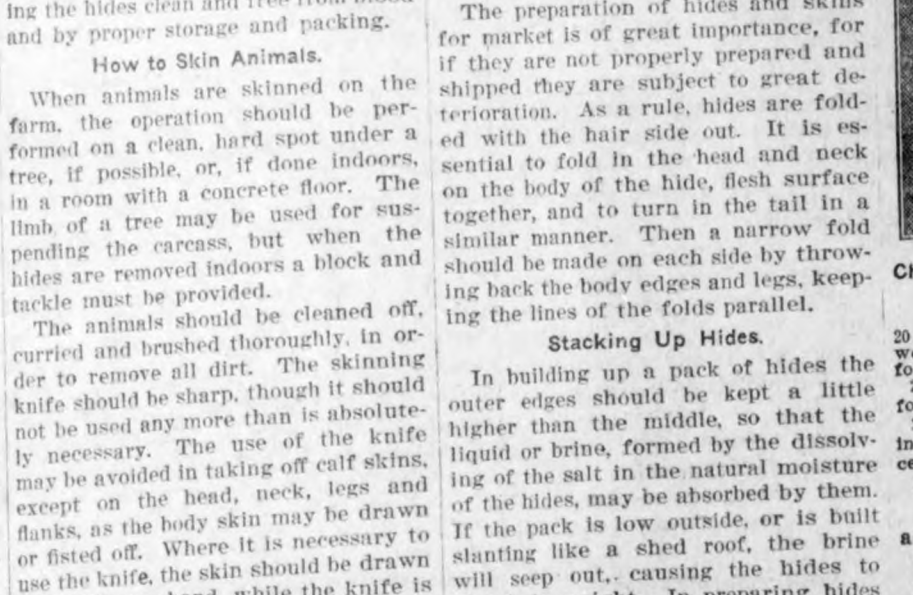
The preparation of hides and skins for market is of great importance, for if they are not properly prepared and shipped they are subject to great deterioration. As a rule, hides are folded with the hair side out. It is essential to fold in the head and neck on the body of the hide, flesh surface together, and to turn in the tail in a similar manner. Then a narrow fold should be made on each side by throwing back the body edges and legs, keeping the lines of the folds parallel.

Stacking Up Hides.

In building up a pack of hides the outer edges should be kept a little higher than the middle, so that the liquid or brine, formed by the dissolving of the salt in the natural moisture of the hides, may be absorbed by them. If the pack is low outside, or is built slanting like a shed roof, the brine will seep out, causing the hides to shrink in weight. In preparing hides for market use salt that is free from large lumps or dirt. Dirty salt will stain the flesh side of the hides. One pound of salt to each pound of the hide is the rule.

If the hides are to be stored, they should be placed in cool (60 to 65 degrees Fahrenheit) cellars, from which the outside air is excluded.

DIVERSIFIED ACTIVITIES IN ONE MONTH



The County Agent Will Take a Chance at Anything.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A county agent in one of the eastern states believes in diversified activities. He reports as follows for one month's work: Burned up 90 gallons of gasoline, five quarts of oil, had six punctures and one blow-out. Trailer broke away and upset load; pig fell out of the car and was caught with difficulty, afterward jumped from sty and was run over by an auto. Buried three pigs with all the profits and lost $28 besides. Tore best trousers getting over pasture fence; broke watch crystal loading corn planter; but outside of a few minor troubles had a very satisfactory month's work."

FARM STOCK

SUCCESS IN SHEEP BUSINESS

Stomach Worm Is Most Widely Distributed and Serious Trouble With Average Flock.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In any system of continuous farm sheep raising, the health question is of primary importance. This question is chiefly one of internal parasites, and of these the stomach worm is the most widely distributed and the most serious. Fortunately, the trouble is entirely susceptible of practical control, and the methods of prevention are exactly in line with the practices that result in most economical production. It is possible, though doubtful, that the permanent farm flock can be maintained in maximum health when grazed entirely on permanent grass pastures. A system of division of grass land into sufficient parts to allow frequent long periods without sheep and use of longer grass for cattle will assist materially. Such a plan, combined with occasional use of medicine to prevent too serious infection, may prove to be practical.

The basis of success in the farm sheep business is in the frequency of changing to pastures which have not had any opportunity to become infected with stomach worms by older sheep. These frequent changes are particularly necessary during the stay of the young lambs upon the farm. The older sheep are less susceptible to the effects of the infection, though danger of their being injured thereby is not to be overlooked. The plan of frequent changes to fresh feed can be adapted advantageously to the most economical systems of using high-priced land in the rotation of crops to produce feed and forage for other kinds of livestock.

The principles of flock management for maximum health and for adaption to other lines of farm production are illustrated in the following outline of a plan of crop production and feeding.

Under a 3-Year Rotation of Corn, Clover and Small Grains, on 160 Acres.

25 acres corn—To finish 20 yearling cattle and 40 hogs.

15 acres silage corn, 40 acres wheat, 20 acres clover hay—Roughage for 20 cows, 20 yearlings, 80 ewes, 20 ewe lambs and work stock; grain for sale or exchange for other feed.

Change Pasture to Keep Sheep Flock Healthy.

20 acres clover pasture—Season's grazing for 20 breeding cows.

20 acres permanent grass pasture—Grazing for 20 yearling cattle on feed for December shipment.

10 acres forage crops.

In the above, sheep would be grazed as follows:

First—On winter wheat.
Second—On grass pasture with yearling cattle.
Third—With cows on clover pasture.
Fourth—On clover hay after hay cut.
Fifth—On grain stubble.
Sixth—In corn fields after silage cut or corn harvested.
Seventh—On winter wheat.
At other times on rape, soy beans, or other grazing crops on ten-acre field. Unused forage harvested for winter feed.

Such a plan as this allows sufficiently frequent change of pasture without any part of the flock going upon land that has previously carried sheep in the same year. The forage crop land is a safety measure for reliance in case of shortage of other feeds, and could regularly be used for carrying the reserved ewe lambs from weaning time until winter.

HEAVY HORSES STILL SCARCE

Large Number of Mares Bred Last Spring Expected to Meet Demand for Draft Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While there is a surplus of light horses on the farms of the United States, there is still a notable deficiency in heavy, desirable draft horses, say horsemen of the United States department of agriculture. Last year, they say, there was a tremendous decrease in mares bred, but during the spring of 1919 a very large percentage of good mares were bred, which is expected largely to meet the future demand for horses of the better type.

FORMATION OF BEEF CATTLE

Disposition Should Be Quiet, Bordering on Loginess—Small Udders Best for Cows.

Beef cattle should have a quiet disposition, bordering on loginess. They should be large, with heavy bones, should take on weight easily, and the cows should have small udders and give only milk enough to raise a calf.

DAIRY FACTS

BETTER LIVE STOCK DESIRED

Authentic Incidents Related Showing What May Be Expected From Improved Methods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

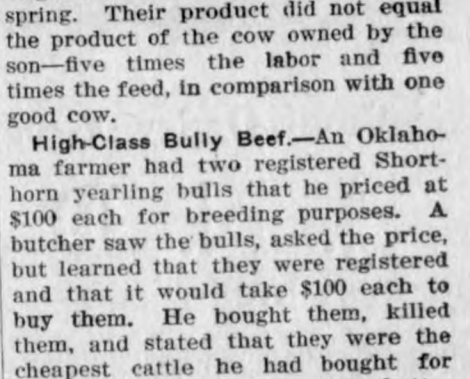
The following authenticated incidents are cited by the United States department of agriculture in its "Better Sires—Better Stock" campaign to show what American farmers and stockmen may expect through improved methods of breeding and handling animals.

One Cow Equals Five.—A New Jersey boy was influenced to buy a high-grade cow for $155. The cow on freshening gave 24 quarts of milk and kept it up for a long period. The father owned five cows, the average for the neighborhood. They were fresh in the spring. Their product did not equal the product of the cow owned by the son—five times the labor and five times the feed, in comparison with one good cow.

High-Class Bully Beef.—An Oklahoma farmer had two registered Shorthorn yearling bulls that he priced at $100 each for breeding purposes. A butcher saw the bulls, asked the price, but learned that they were registered and that it would take $100 each to buy them. He bought them, killed them, and stated that they were the cheapest cattle he had bought for some time, because they cut the better kinds of beef and more of it.

Valuable Stock—Valuable Offspring.—In several counties of North Carolina more purebred live stock has been purchased during the past year at the higher prices which have prevailed than in any other year. Hogs were never so high, and yet hundreds of boys bought purebred pigs at high prices with the expectation of selling their offspring. Through the county agents many hundreds of pigs bred by the boys have been sold at good prices and this is stimulating the extension of purebred hogs.

Better Poultry—More Meat.—In a southern community, following the introduction of well-bred poultry for breeding, there was noticeable improvement in the size of the next generation of the fowls. The average weight of the birds marketed was 25 per cent greater than previously, according to the observation of an experienced poultry buyer.



Only Good Bulls Should Head a Herd.

CHEAP FLY PAINT FOR COWS

Formula Given by Expert of Kansas Agricultural College—Apply It With Brush When Cool.

It is often cheaper and easier to buy the mixture rather than make it for a few cows, but if you want to make it yourself here is the formula as given by George A. Dean, professor of entomology in the Kansas Agricultural college:

For cattle use two parts of pulverized resin, one part of soap shavings, one-half part of water, one part of kerosene, one part oil of tar, one part fish oil, three parts water.

In making this boil the resin, soap and one-half part of water until the resin is dissolved and then add the three parts water, oil of tar, kerosene and fish oil, and boil well for 15 minutes, being careful to keep the mixture well stirred. Put it on with a brush when cool. In using this mixture it will be necessary to make an application every day for two or three days, and after this once every three or five days is sufficient.

ADVISABLE TO SKIM CREAM

Saving Can Be Accomplished by Turn of Screw and Is Well Worth Effort Required.

In skimming a hundred pounds of 35 per cent cream 15 more pounds of skim milk is kept on the farm than when the same amount of 20 per cent cream is taken. This saving can be accomplished by a turn of the cream screw, and at present feed prices is well worth the effort required. More skim milk on the farms also means more calves raised to furnish meat and milk for all. Milk producers are paid for the butterfat in cream, not for the water and other constituents. This makes it advisable to skim a rich cream, so that as much valuable skim milk as possible may be saved for feeding purposes.

The Home Coming last week attracted quite a number of people to Klemme. Although the weather looked bad all day the crowd was better than could be expected and all enjoyed a good time.

The brick work has been completed on the new post office building and the other work is being pushed as rapidly as possible that the building may be completed before cold weather sets in.

Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Rice, of Clarion, were over Sunday visitors at the home of Mrs. Rice's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Musfelt. Dewey and Oscar Musfelt are in the cigar store business at Clarion and report that they are doing a good business.

Garner is progressing somewhat as they contemplate on erecting a large implement store on the sight of the old Arlington Hotel. A nice gasoline filling station will be built on the lot south of the new garage building now under construction by the Garner Auto Company.

Farmers are busy picking corn now and we hear many reports on the prices paid for picking, they say they pay all the way from seven to twelve cents a bushel; that is very few at seven cents and far less at twelve cents, the average is probably eight or nine. Likewise we hear about the champion pickers; some say they can pick as high as 135 bushels a day. Who claims the championship?

Mr. and Mrs. Lew Lewis returned Tuesday from their visit at Garden City, Minn. They were visiting their daughter, Mrs. Henry Yahnke, and other relatives, but incidentally Lew got in the greater part of his time there fishing and as proof of the pudding Lew brought us a fine cat fish that when caught weighed in the neighborhod of five pounds. The fish he caught weighed between five pounds and seven and a half pounds each and he caught plenty of them.

Nels Palmer took Paul Grange to Garner Sunday afternoon in his car where Paul was to meet his brother and sister from Ruthven, Iowa. Paul's mother was at the hospital at Rochester, Minn., where she was operated on for cancer and they drove up there, being called on account of her serious condition, but before they arrived at Rochester she had passed away. The funeral services were held Wednesday of this week at Ruthven. Paul has the sympathy of the entire community in his sorrow.

Now an ordinary man would try to chop out or burn an old tree stump from the ground, but Wallace Pavey has a better idea. He had a couple old tree stumps in his garden that he decided would look better if they were not there. Wallace has been somewhat shy of hard labor for some time and he did not like to have to chop those stumps out so he sat down on and for a half a day thought over the problem of how he could get the stumps out without working. A bright idea struck him and he got out his tractor, hitched a chain around the stumps, tied it to the tractor and way went the stump, very simple and no work at all.

Regarding The Sugar Beet Industry

A NEW INDUSTRY FOR FARMERS NEAR KLEMME

A Number Of Farmers In This Community Will Farm Beets Next Year

A Few Facts On Sugar Beets From Our Own Observation

Mr. Milligan, labor man for the Iowa Valley Sugar Company, of Belmond, has been in this territory for the past week or ten days securing contracts from the farmers here to raise sugar beets this coming year. Mr. Milligan wa in the Times Office the othe day and informed us that had seen every farmer within three miles of Klemme and that the land near here is the best beet land he has seen for some time and that it should easily raise twelve tons of beets to the acre. Mr. Milligan is the man who sees to it that the proper labor is brought to the beet fields to take care of the beet crop. The beet workers arrive about the first of April to get ready to take up their work. They remain until about the first of November. However, during this time the beet workers have only about three months of work on the beets. This gives the farmers a chance to get the beet workers to help them during the time between they work on the beets for other work in the various fields.

We will give a few facts we have learned about beets and in the last part of this writeup we will give you some actual facts on beets which we absolutely know to be true and have observed the facts ourself for the last three seasons.

Most everybody in this vicinity knows htat a large sugar factory is under way of construction at Belmond, so we need not go into detail as that only we might mention that the factory are now getting their acreage lined up to furnish beets to the factory for next year so that they can start right in to make sugar. It is for this reason that we are writing this article as the factory should be of just as much interest to Klemme farmers as to the farmers of Belmond for there are many stock holders here and near Klemme, so we can feel that we have a part in this new industry brought to our doors.

The factory will employ eight field men who have had wide experience in this work. The factory also employs an agriculturist, one of the best men in the country. These men will visit the beet fields once or more each week and will give assistance and suggestions to the farmers and help them in growing the beets properly to secure the best results. Mr. Milligan contracts the labor for the growers at $28 per acre. The seed is furnished by the factory to the grower for 8c per pound and it requires fifteen pounds to the acre, this is taken out of the beets when delivered so the farmer invests no money there. The fertilizer will cost about $3.50 per acre. Besides this the farmer requires a drill. Several farmers usually club together and buy a drill because in this way they can easily handle 150 acres with one drill by taking turns using it as the whole crop is never put in one field at once. Each farmer will also need a beet cultivator and a beet lifter but these machines are not high priced. That is about the extent of the machinery needed to take care of the beets.

The company guarantee to pay the farmers $9 per ton for the beets at the dump, but in addition to this they have a clause in their contract that says they will pay more when the price of sugar is higher. For instance sugar is quoted by Willet & Gray, of New York, at 11c, then the company pay the grower $12 per ton. They take the average prices quoted for October, November, December and January, average these prices and pay the farmers the extra difference on the fifteenth of February following these months, which means that they pay one dollar more per ton for beets than the price quoted on the New York market on sugar per hundred pounds. According to the price of sugar now beets would sell for about $12 per ton. It is expected that beets next year will sell for $12 to $15 per ton. They pay for beets the fifteenth of each month following delivery of same.

Now to give a little more personal observation on beets. We know it to be a fact that where beets have been grwn on land that larger crops of corn or grain can be grown. We base our claims on facts which we have observed at Garner where beets have been grown for three seasons now. A certain farmer living in Garner (and we can give you his name if necessary) who has conducted some experiments in beets, was told that beets would "run down the land" and being skeptical he decided the best way to find out woulr be to try nt. He planted beets two years on a nine acre tract. The first year he grew 10 tons to the acre, the second year he grew 11 ton to the acre. Now this year he planted corn on eight acres to see what it would do. Before beets were planted on this tract the corn averaged about 42 or 43 bushels to the acre. This year (after beets had been grown two years on the land) the corn averages about seventy-two bushels to the acre, an increase of thirty bushels. To further conduct the experiment he planted the other acre to beets this year and he says they are much better than the other two crops planted on the same tract. We merely mention these facts for they will be of interest to the farmers here who are going to put in beets next year. Some think that beets will harm the land and it is for this reason that we have written on the above subject, to remove any doubt that beets are not a benefit to the land. The above applies to wheat, corn, oats, barley, potatoes, hay and beans, of which we have read government reports.

We might add further that farmers growing beets are furnished with what sugar they need from the company at wholesale prices.

Married Last Week

MR. RICHARD BAMMAN AND MISS ELLA SCHULDT MARRIED

Last Wednesday afternoon occurred the marriage of Miss Ella Schuldt of this city to Mr. Richard Bamman of Garner, at the home of the Bride's mother, Mrs. Henry Schuldt. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Deppling of the Reform Church. A number of invited relatives and friends were present to witness the ceremony and also to help eat the big wedding dinner prepared by Mrs. Schuldt.

Both of the young people are well and favorably known in Klemme and have a large host of friends here. The bride has resided here practically all of her life and for the past few years has been one of the clerks in the Wellemeyer store. Mrs. Bamman is one of Klemme's best from the social circle of young people. Mr. Bamman, better known as "Dick" to his many friends, is well known here, as he has been employed in the Wiles Garage of this city, and only a few months ago going into business with his brother, Harold, at Garner, where the young men are conducting a fine garage business.

After a honeymoon trip the newlyweds will make their home in the George Schafer house in the west part of Garner.

The Times extends congratulations and wish them the best in life.

The first question that will arise is:

"Why does the Red Cross need money? The war is over."

National headquarters of the American Red Cross has answered this question, and has outlined graphically the reasons why it is necessary to raise $15,000,000 for its international, national and local work.

In brief the answer is as follows:

Because: The actual war work is not completed. The Red Cross cannot lay down its responsibilities to the American soldiers, sailors or marines until everyone of them has been released from service, recovered from illness or wounds or receiving proper care, or back in the place in the world from which the war snatched them.

Because: The American Red Cross is planning to launch a comprehensive program for peace times, designed to prevent the needless waste of human lives through preventable diseases and accidents in America; continue and broaden its home service work and public nursing, first aid, home hygiene and Junior Red Cross activities.

Because: By a recent act of Congress medical, surgical and dietary food supplies valued at $35,000,000 were turned over to the Red Cross by the government, the supplies having been purchased for use with the American forces. These supplies are scattered throughout Europe, many of them far from the places where they are most needed. The prompt and efficient distribution and handling of these supplies means the maintenance of a force of trained workers where the supplies are and where they are most needed.

Because: Pestilence and starvation have gripped many European countries because of the war. These countries are unable to cope with their own difficulties, and the only force organized with facilities capable of stepping into the breach and bringing order from chaos is the Red Cross. Typhus is sapping the man strength of many countries, and the American Red Cross is using every available power to check it.

Because: The Red Cross must be prepared to meet emergencies arising from disasters at home and abroad.

The Red Cross membership must be maintained at its present high standard. Every enrollment is a vote of confidence in the past performances of the American Red Cross and a reaffirmation of the belief in the principles for which it has stood in the past and its plans for the future.

The Red Cross, having committed itself to a definite and comprehensive program, cannot turn back, and to go forward it must have as general a membership as possible and ample funds to provide for any contingency.

LOCATES MOTHER AFTER FOUR DAYS IN DESERT SANDS

Four days by camel from Damascus, in a little desert village nestled in the blazing sands, lived the Syrian mother of an American soldier, waiting, yearning for word from her son who had gone to far-off America.

George Hamway, the son, enlisted with the American colors when this country went to war, and fell fighting in the Argonne, leaving to the mother a $5,000 government insurance policy. The address of the mother was vague. She lived in the heart of the desert, four days from Damascus—that was the only address George knew.

The task of finding the mother was given to the Red Cross mission in Palestine, and the search was started immediately. Strange by-paths of that land of mystery—the great desert—were visited by Red Cross workers, and at length the mother was found.

She was taken to Damascus by camel, accompanied by witnesses establishing her identity, and after much palaver it was explained that the American government would make remittances to her which meant comparative affluence for her declining days.

CLUBS TO AID RED CROSS.

A series of club days are being arranged by the Red Cross as a forerunner of the Third Roll Call to be conducted from November 2 to 11. Business, commercial, rotary, Kiwanis, advertising, fraternal, woman's and other clubs are being invited to set aside one meeting day to be devoted to the Red Cross.

Consolidation Receives Severe Blow Here

Both Town and Country Are Against Consolidation

Yesterday the question of Consolidation was again voted on and for the second time it "to the mat on a knock-out count." When the smoke of battle had cleared away the decision of the voters stood as follows;—

Klemme Ind. District
53 For Consol.	51 Against
Outside School Dist.
24 For Consol.	149 Against
Total—77 For	200 Against

The above figures clearly show that Consolidated school are not popular here, either in town or country.

BACK TO THE GOOD OLD TIME

"Turn back old Time in your flight." Sunday morning at two o'clock was the hour set for everybody to turn back the clock one hour to the "old time," or sun time, where it will now remain forever unless a few pumpkin headed men at the head of the government try to revise the time again. The change of time caused a little confusion Monday morning, but most everybdoy are now regulated with the change.

IT WAS A GOOD SHOW

Last Friday and Saturday "The Heart of Humanity" was shown at the Idle Hour theatre to a large crowd each night. It is one of the best pictures ever shown on the screen and not often shown in the smaller towns. The management of the Idle Hour are trying to give the people of Klemme and vicinity the very best kind of entertainment and they should be well patronized by all. They plan to have a number of big pictures here thru-out the winter.

RAILROADS IN CAMPAIGN FOR "SAFETY FIRST"

The Safety Section United States Railroad Administration have instituted a National Railroad Accident Prevention Drive to begin at 12:01 A. M., October 18th and end at midnight October 31st, and during this period two million men, employees of 187 railroads covering approximately 231,000 miles will concentrate their every effort to go through the period mentioned without having an injury among them while on duty. This "National Drive" follows a Regional Drive, recently closed and in which a most remarkable record was made in the reduction of casualties and fatalities on railroads under federal control. The Central Western Region in which the Rock Island Lines are located shows a decrease in 1919 over the same period of 1918 of 76.96 per cent and it is anticipated that on the entire seven regions who will take part in the "National Drive" this already high percentage will be increased by a noticeable margin.

The "National Drive" enters primarily among railroad men but it is the desire of the employes of the Rock Island Lines to go further in their efforts to conserve life and limb and enlist the support and co-operatin of the various authoritive and civic bodies, automobile clubs, business men, citizens and school children in the cities and towns through which the Rock Island Lines run.

When Baths Became Fashionable.

Baths first came into fashion in the '50s, according to some recollections in the "Cornhill" of George Pollock, who died last year at the age of ninety-four. They caused much annoyance to an old colonel because they incumbered officers' luggage. "These young men," he complained, "keep washing themselves till there is not a bit of natural smell about them." The only unpardonable smell was, of course, tobacco. Even onions were preferable.—London Globe.

RED CROSS GIVES FULL ACCOUNTING

War Council Tells How Millions Contributed by Public Were Used For Relief.

BIG TASK IS DESCRIBED

In Twenty Months $154,000,000 Was Spent Overseas and $119,000,000,000 In the United States.

Washington. (Special.)—Through a complete report of the work of the American Red Cross in the war by Chairman Henry P. Davison, on behalf of the war council, the organization on the eve of its annual enrollment of members during the Third Red Cross Roll Call, November 2 to 11, has rendered an accounting of the many millions given it by the American people to help our fighting men and our allies. The statement is, in part, as follows:

"The war council of the American Red Cross is now prepared to make a complete accounting to the American people of money contributed and expended, as well as the work done by the American Red Cross during the period in which the war council was in control of its affairs. The war council was appointed May 19, 1919, and went out of existence February 28, 1919.

"It was the practice of the war council to give complete publicity to its policies and finances, but it is only now that a picture of the war period as a whole can be presented. It is the feeling of the war council that a report in this summarized form should be made directly to the public which provided the money and gave the effort which made the American Red Cross a success.

"A statement of the American Red Cross effort and finances since the war council relinquished its control will be made to the public through the executive committee, and it is important, therefore, that the fact that this report covers the period only until March 1, should be carefully noted."

Following are certain round figures covering American Red Cross participation in the war, as revealed by the war council's report:

Some Outstanding Figures.

Contributions received (material and money).	$400,000,000
Red Cross members: Adults, 20,000,000; Children, 11,000,000 ...	31,000,000
Red Cross workers.....	8,100,000
Relief articles produced by volunteer workers..	371,577,000
Families of soldiers aided by Home Service in U.S.	500,000
Refreshments served by canteen workers in U.S.	40,000,000
Nurses enrolled for service with army, navy or Red Cross	23,822
Kinds of comfort articles distributed to soldiers and sailors in U. S....	2,700
Knitted articles given to soldiers and sailors in U. S.	10,900,000
Tons of relief supplies shipped overseas	101,000
Foreign countries in which Red Cross operated	23
Patient days in Red Cross hospital in France.....	1,155,000
French hospitals given material aid	3,780
Splints supplied for American soldiers	294,000
Gallons of nitrous oxide and oxygen furnished French hospitals	4,340,000
Men served by Red Cross canteens in France....	15,376,000
Refugees aided in France	1,726,000
American convalescent soldiers attending Red Cross movies in France	3,110,000
Soldiers carried by Red Cross ambulances in Italy	148,000
Children cared for by Red Cross in Italy.....	155,000

Of the $400,000,000 in money and supplies, contributed to the American Red Cross during the twenty months the war council was in existence, $263,000,000 was alloted to national headquarters, while $137,000,000 went to the chapters to finance their activities. Expenditures in the twenty months totalled $273,000,000, divided as follows: By national headquarters in France, $57,000,000; elsewhere overseas, $64,000,000; in the United States, $48,000,000; by chapters in the United States, $43,000,000; cost of chapter-produced articles distributed in France, $25,000,000, elsewhere overseas, $8,000,000; in the United States, $28,000,000, making total expenditures in France, $82,000,000, elsewhere overseas, $72,000,000; in the United States, $119,000,000.

RED CROSS AIDS AILING SOLDIERS

Organization Asked by Government to Seek Out Disabled Ex-Service Men.

FREE HOSPITAL CARE GIVEN

United States Pays Compensation While Treatments Are Administered in Public Health Institutions.

The American Red Cross has been asked by the United States government to use its efficient organization to seek out disabled and ill ex-service men, and to try to induce them to accept the government's offer to provide free treatment in public service hospitals, and compensation while the treatment is being administered.

The government estimates that there are fully 50,000 men in this country who are unable to work at full capacity because of wounds or disease contracted in the line of duty who should be receiving this treatment. So far only about 4,000 men have applied for such service.

A statement issued from the national headquarters of the Red Cross in Washington shows that a great misapprehension exists among the discharged men regarding the government's plan.

"Due to misunderstandings and misapprehension a surprising number of disabled service men are scattered throughout the country not knowing the benefits which are still theirs," the statement read.

"'Back to the hospital' after he has donned 'civvies' and tried to keep going at civilian occupation is about the hardest order a soldier wants to hear. Acceptance of the government offer does not mean a return to service. The hospitals are civilian institutions. They are separate institutions, and are not connected in any way with the army or navy.

"The Red Cross is constantly discovering men who, through ignorance or prejudice, are losing the advantages of this wonderful service. So effective has this work become that the government has asked the Red Cross to make this a part of its regular relief work. All that is necessary is for the ex-service man to apply to the nearest Red Cross chapter. Arrangements will be made there for him to enter one of these hospitals after examination by a district public health officer, and if his trouble is the result of service with the army or navy he will be given transportation and admittance to a public service hospital.

"The Red Cross is now engaged in maintaining a program of recreation, occupational therapy, meeting the problems arising in the homes of disabled men, household and legal difficulties and affording many miscellaneous services to keep the men who are in the hospitals contented with their lot."

This work of the Red Cross is one of the important branches outlined for its post war work and a part of the funds raised in the Third Red Cross Roll Call, November 2 to 11, will be devoted to this purpose.

LOANS $50,000 TO SOLDIERS.

Loans totaling approximately $50,000 have been advanced to about 4,000 disabled soldiers by the American Red Cross for personal uses while these war veterans were adjusting their affairs with the federal board for vocational training. These loan are in no sense looked upon as charity either by the soldiers or the Red Cross, the latter considering this bit of financial assistance a part of its war obligation.

Red Cross liaison officers are in touch with all the district officers of the vocational board and the public health service. These Red Cross men are able to help the soldiers when the government check miscarries, during the interval between approval for schools and placement in school, when subsistence and transportation are needed by those denied training, and under various other conditions.

HUGE OVERSEA SHIPMENTS MADE BY RED CROSS.

Two million crates, bundles or barrels, weighing 218,310,000 pounds were shipped by the American Red Cross to twenty-one countries from ten ports in the United States between April 1, 1917 and July 1, 1919, according to reports sent to national headquarters in Washington. This tremendous volume of business was shipped across the Atlantic and Pacific oceans during the war and after the signing of the armistice from New York, Baltimore, Boston, Montreal, Newport News, New Orleans, Philadelphia, San Francisco and Seattle. In addition to this great store of supplies, the Red Cross purchased supplies in the countries where it operated, both for the soldiers and afflicted civilians.

"Our patriotism should stand the test of peace as well as war. There is a necessary work to be performed before the American Red Cross can withdraw from Europe."—President Wilson.

BULWARK AGAINST WINTER SHORTAGE

Some Facts About Cold Storage and the Charges of Manipulation and Exorbitant Prices.

Once again the subject of cold storage has come into the limelight of public attention; and this time in connection with the nation-wide search after the cause for the high cost of living.

There can be no argument in behalf of hoarding and holding back food supplies for speculative profits. But this is a matter quite apart from the true and legitimate purpose of cold storage; and, unfortunately, because of the much agitation and damaging publicity that have centered about the subject from time to time, the real service performing function of cold storage has been largely obscured.

Laying In Winter Stocks.

City-wise people, and even country-wise people, have long since forgotten, amidst the conveniences of modern life, that there was a time in the history of our country when "laying in a winter's stock" devolved upon each household individually. Today, one does not even need to remember that eggs are not an all-year-around product; that butter is produced in scant amount in the winter, and cheese likewise. Not a few would be completely surprised to know that even meat production has its seasons of scarcity. The buyer for the household in these days simply goes to the store, any day in the year, expecting to find these and similar commodities on the market.

Are Storages Overstocked?

However, we are told that storage stocks of certain commodities are at the present above the normal as compared with this time last year. It has been computed that the combined excess of a number of important foods in cold and dry storage amount to 19 per cent. While on the face of it this looks like undue hoarding of reserves, yet it must be remembered that comparisons with last year are altogether misleading. Demands for a great number of commodities have increased tremendously. Our exports for June were double what they were a year ago, and 40 per cent of these exports were foodstuffs.

Moreover, our reserves last year were inadequate. Those who recall some of the extraordinary prices of certain foods last winter and spring know precisely what it means to have too small holdings in storage. That we are better prepared for next winter than we were for last should not be used as the basis of a wholesale condemnation of our methods of providing for our future wants.

How Prices Are Determined.

Cold storage has been criticised severely as an instrumentality that lends itself easily to the taking of unfair profits. Without a question its ability to extort has been grossly exaggerated. Storage warehouses are scattered throughout all portions of the United States and their contents are owned by thousands of competing firms and individuals. About half the storage space in the country consists of public warehouses that rent space to whoever wants it, either for small lots or big ones. Tabulated figures of the amounts in storage are gathered and disseminated by the government monthly; and the amounts in holding from month to month figured against what should normally be in storage during those months (or the estimated demand) form the basis for prices.

Some Figures on Profits.

But the best information as to profits in the cold storage business consists of actual figures, and such are published regularly by the federal Department of Agriculture. These show, for instance, that in the season of 1915-1916 butter stored in June and July at an average of 26.64 cents a pound, sold from November to March at an average of 27.45 cents a pound, giving a gross profit of 0.81 cents a pound, or scarcely enough to pay for storage and nothing for net profit or interest on investment. In 1916-1917 the gross profit was 7.79 cents a pound, and in 1917-1918 it was 5.86 cents. These gross amounts must cover storage charges and interest on the money tied up for several months before the net profits are arrived at. It is apparent from these figures that storing of foods is an uphill and downhill business with its fat and lean years, and affords an average profit which is not excessive in view of the risks that are run. Figures on storage eggs for 1915-1916 show a net loss of 2.2 cents a dozen; for 1916-1917, an unusually prosperous year, the net profits were 5.54 cents a dozen; and for 1917-1918 there was a net loss of 1.42 cents a dozen.

Extravagant charges of manipulation and control of prices are preposterously absurd in view of these seasons of losses. The ups and down of profits simply indicate the hazards of the game; for the best laid plans of men can not foresee when a warm spell may come which will start the hens to laying, nor, on the other hand, a cold snap that will shut off current production entirely. Year in and year out, as the figures would indicate, the consumer pays but a modest sum for the blessing of cold storage, which takes upon itself, with all risks involved, the task of laying in his winter stores for him.

WOULD LOCALIZING MEAT TRADE PAY?

Senator Currie, Stock Raiser of Nebraska, Makes Experiment.

Meat is high; the packers admit it, though they say that other foods are higher in proportion. The farmer says he is not getting too much for his cattle, in fact not enough, he says. How about numerous local slaughtering plants scattered throughout the communities of our country, or a more direct-from-farmer-to-consumer relationship?

There is almost a sentimental attractiveness about the thought, like dreams of one's boyhood home. It looks so simple. Indeed, it is simple after a fashion, and is the way most meat was handled before the industry grew to national and international proportions. But would it pay?

Tried to Build Up Local Market.

Experimentation and testing is doubtless the best teacher. And inquiring minds have not hesitated to dig into the matter. Senator F. M. Currie of Broken Bow, Neb., himself a stock raiser, relates a bit of experience of his own along this line.

He tried for years, he tells us, to establish a market for fat cattle with local butchers, invariably finding that he could not meet the price made to them by the packers.

"In other words," he says, "the packers could pay us more for our cattle on foot, and sell the product to our local butchers for less money than they (the butchers) could pay us for our cattle and slaughter the beef themselves."

During the fore part of the present year he carried his inquiry further. He shipped two carloads of cows to Omaha, and they were sold to Armour and Company for $7.90 per hundredweight. Among these was one cow which he wished to have himself for beef. This cow weighed 840 pounds and therefore brought him $66.36. The animal was tagged and the identical carcass was shipped to him by express to Thedford, Neb., and charged to him at the prevailing wholesale price of such meat on that day in Kansas City, Omaha and Minneapolis. The carcass included carrying charges of about $6.00, cost him $60.11, or $6.25 less than he sold the animal for in Omaha.

What Cow Would Cost Consumer.

"Now," continues the Senator, "suppose a consumer in Omaha had ordered this meat direct from me, and I had slaughtered the beef at the ranch and sent the meat direct to the consumer. Taking as a basis the price received for this cow in Omaha, $66.36, less the freight of 17½ cents per hundred, it would make the cow worth on the ranch $65.00."

To this $65.00 he adds $3.00 for slaughtering at home and $6.00 for express from Thedford to Omaha, and he deducts $7.00 credit for the hide.

According to these figures the dressed carcass of his cow would be worth $67.00 in Omaha, as against the packers' price of approximately $54.00 (which is derived by deducting the express charges to Thedford, $6.00, from the price the carcass was sold to him, $60.11).

Cheaper to Buy Than Kill.

"After thorough investigation," the Senator says, "I am convinced that it does not pay for us to slaughter our own meat at the ranch; that we would better ship our cattle to Omaha, and buy our beef from the packer. I have been engaged in the cattle producing business all my life; there is no particular reason why I should be friendly to the packers, but I am thoroughly convinced I am receiving, and always have received more for my cattle on foot, than if I had been able to sell direct to the consumer, and consequently the consumer has been able to buy my product for less money through the packer than under any other system which is known to business up to the present time."

SENATOR KENYON'S CONTRASTING VIEWS.

Just what is the purpose of the Kenyon bill now in hearing at Washington would be hard to deduce from Senator Kenyon's own statements. In the bill itself the purpose is set forth as follows: "To stimulate the production, sale, and distribution of live stock and live stock products, and for other purposes." This stimulation of live stock production may be well taken as a bid to the consumer to hope for lower meat prices.

But he has a different thought to present to producers. In a letter addressed recently to the Wallace Farmer he says: "I do not believe myself that the situation as to restricted consumption is going to be changed very much, and there will be the necessity of less production." Of course less production would supposedly mean higher prices for live stock, but also higher prices for meat.

Are either the general public or the farmer going to be fooled by this method of playing up the one against the other? It is not likely. Farmers and consumers are both coming to the realization that hampering the packers is not going to bring higher prices for live stock nor lower prices for meat, but quite the opposite.

Ford

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Still in the Ring

After fifteen years of strenuous battling and hard usage, Model "F" Ford shows up smiling and sturdy

In the salesroom of the Denk-Thompson Company, Ford dealer in Detroit, is Ford Touring car number 604, looking wonderfully youthful and sturdy despite its sixteen years of daily service. The car was accepted as $50.00 on the purchase of a new Ford. Apart from style the old timer is worth more than that—it "goes" and the motor is quite some years this side of being a pensioner, but vogue in motordom has changed since 1904.

Engines are no longer wound up from the side; steering wheels no longer stick straight up into the air; and then too, eight horse power and five gallon gas tanks aren't quite sufficient for the modern motorist. The faithful Ford has not outworn its usefulness—it has merely outlived itself. It is as though an old Indian Chieftain would sport himself adorned in earrings, feathers and moccasins among his college-bred, stylishly clad offspring. Noblest among them but of a different age.

And so with this Model "F" Ford. What stories it might tell of following worn, rutted wagon roads, over strange country perhaps, running through creeks, where bridges had not been built, making its owners happy. Detroit wasn't so much of a town fifteen years ago. It was Henry Ford's second year manufacturing Fords in a factory; his company had just been organized.

It is not known who the original purchaser of this dependable old Ford was, or where he lived, whether in New York or California, Michigan or Florida. Six-O-Four may have traveled all of the States in the Union. But no wit has returned to the place of its birth, there to enjoy a quiet, respectable old age, while it keeps on running and running and running, and cheating the junk man.

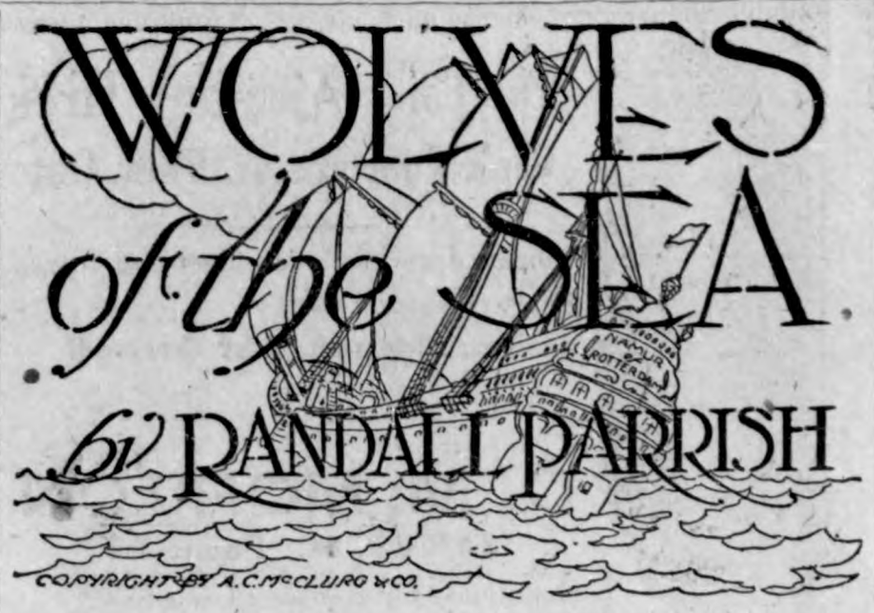
WOLVES of the SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH



COPYRIGHT BY A. C. McCLURG & CO.

Safe—for a Time—on the Deck of the Namur.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur.

"Him? Oh, Jose an' me carried him inter the for'cassel, an' shoved him inter a berth ter sleep off his liquor. Thet wus the last I ever see er hear o' him fer 'bout six hours, when this yere feller must a woke up in the for'cassel sum crazy. He cum a chargin' out on deck, whoopin' like an Indian, wavin' a knife in his hand, intendin' fer ter raise h—l. Well, it happened thet the fu'st feller he run up against wus LeVere, who wus cumin' forrard fer sumthin', an' fer about a minute thar was one h—l ov a fight. It was so dark I couldn't tell whut did happen, but it wus fists mostly, till the mate drove the poor devil, cussin' like mad, over agin the rail, an' then heaved him out inter the water 'longside. I heerd the feller splash when he struck, but he never let out no yell."

"What did LeVere do?"

"Him? He didn't do nuthin'. Just stared down over the rail a bit, an' then cum back, rubbin' his hands. Never even asked who the feller wus. Thar ain't nuthin' kin skeer that black brute."

"He ain't got no human in him. It's h—l when English sailormen hes got ter take orders from a d——d nigger, an' be knocked 'round if they don't jump when he barks. He's goin' ter get a knife in his ribs sum day."

"Maybe he is; but yer better hold yer tongue, Tom. Sanchez don't stand fer thet talk, an' he's back o' LeVere. Let's go in; them gaskets will hold all right now—cum 'long."

I could now perceive now clearly the character I was destined to assume when once safely aboard the Namur. Such an assumption would involve but slight danger of discovery. It was as though a miracle had opened the way, revealed to me by the unconscious lips of these two half-drunken, gossiping sailors. The story told fitted my necessities exactly. Had I planned the circumstances myself nothing could have been better prearranged. No one on board had seen the missing man by daylight; he was believed to have sunk without a struggle. Yet no one knew positively that this was so, because no one cared. The death of the lad had simply been taken for granted when LeVere had failed to see his body rise again to the surface. Yet it was quite within the realm of possibility for the fellow to come up once more in that darkness, beyond LeVere's range of vision, and even to have remained afloat, buoyed up by clinging to the anchor hawser, until strong enough to return on board. At least there was no one aboard the Namur able to deny that this had been done.

Satisfied by this reasoning of being able to pass myself off as the dead man, I began slowly and cautiously to drag myself up the taut hawser. I had chosen a fortunate moment for my effort; no one heeded the little noise I made, and, when I finally topped the rail and was able to look inboard it was to discover a deserted fore deck, with the watch all engaged at some task amidships. I crept down the forecastle ladder and worked my way aft beneath the black shadow of the port rail, until able thus to drift unnoticed into a group tailing onto a mainsail halyard. The fellow next to me, without releasing his grip, turned his head and stared, but without discerning my features.

"Whar did yer cum frum?" he growled, and I as instantly recognized Bill Haines. "Been sojerin', have yer? Well, now, lay to an' pull."

Before I could attempt an answer a tall figure loomed up before us, the same high-pitched voice I had noticed previously calling out sharply:

"There, that's enough, men! Now make fast. We can head the old girl out from here in a jiffy, if it really begins to blow. Jose, you stand by at the wheel, in case you're needed; some of the rest ship the capstan bars, and remain near for a call."

"What are ye swingin' the yards fur, anyhow. LeVere?" asked Haines insolently. "Just fer exercise?"

"Because I am a sailor, Haines," he replied angrily. "Anyhow it is none of your business; I was left in command here. Those clouds don't look good to me; there is going to be a blow before morning."

Haines growled something and LeVere wheeled sharply about to go forward. This movement placed him face to face with me.

"What are you loafing here fer? Who are you?"

"Joe Gates, sir," I answered quickly, mouthing the first name which came to my lips.

"Gates—Joe Gates?" peering savagely into my face but unable to distinguish the features. "I never heard of anybody on board by that name. Who is the fellow, Haines?"

The Englishman gripped me by the sleeve to whirl me about, but as his fingers touched the soaked cloth of my jacket he burst forth with an oath.

"He's wet enough to be the same lad you chucked overboard an hour ago. I believe he is. Say, mate, are you the gay buck we hauled aboard drunk, and dumped into the for'cassel?"

"I dunno, sir," I answered dumbly, believing it best not to remember too much. "I couldn't even tell yer whut

"What Are You Loafing Here For?"

ship this is, ner how I signed on. Last I seem ter remember I wus ashore frum the schooner Caroline; but this yere is a bark."

Haines laughed, already convinced of my identity, and considering it a good joke. Then he proceeded to tell me all about it.

LeVere broke in with a savage snarl.

"What's all that? Do you mean, Haines, that this is the same d——d scamp who tried to stick me?"

"No doubt of it. But he never knew what he was doin'—he wus crazy as a loon. There's nuthin' fer yer ter fuss over now. Tell us about it, Gates—the bath must have sobered yer up."

I watched LeVere, but he remained motionless, a mere shadow.

"I suppose it must have been that, sir," I confessed respectfully, "if things happened as you say they did. I haven't any memory o' tryin' ter slash nobody. Leastwise I seemed ter know whut I wus about when I cum up. I don't remember how I got ther; furst I knew I wus slushin' 'round in the water, a tryin' ter keep afloat. It wus so blame dark I cudn't see nuthin', but sumhow I got grip on a hawser, an' hung on till I got back 'nough strength ter clime on board. I knew this wa'n't my ship, so I just lay quiet awhile, figurin' out whar I wus."

"Yer English?"

"Born in Bristol, sir, but I wus workin' on the Caroline—she's a Colony schooner, in the fish trade. At sea since I wus twelve. What's this yere bark—Dutch, ain't she?"

"Once upon a time; just now we are flying whatever flag comes handy. We ain't got no prejudice in flags."

"Is thet a gun forrard, covered with tarpaulin?"

"Yes, an' yer might find another aft, if yer looked fer it. Mor'n thet, we know how ter use 'em. Now see here, Gates; thar's no reason why we should beat about the bush—fact is we're sea rovers."

"Sea rovers—pirates, sir?"

"Bah! what's a name! We take what we want; it's our trade, that's all. No worse than many another. The question is, are yer goin' ter take a chance 'long with us? It's the only life, lad—plenty of fun, the best of liquor and pretty girls, with a share in all the swag."

"What is the name of this bark?"

"The Namur—out o' Rotterdam till we took her."

"Who's the captain?"

"Silva Sanchez."

"Gawd! Sanchez—not—not 'Black Sanchez?'

"That's him; so yer've heerd of 'Black Sanchez?' Well, we're sailin' 'long with him, all right, mate, an' yer ought ter know whut thet means fer a good man."

I hesitated, yet only long enough to leave the impression I sought to make on them both.

"Likely thar ain't no sailor but what has heerd o' him," I said slowly. "It don't look like thar wus much choice, does it?"

LeVere appeared amused in his way, which was not a pleasant one.

"Oh, yes, friend, there is choice enough. Bill, here, had exactly the same choice when he first came—hey, Bill? Remember how you signed on, after we took you off the Albatross? This is how it stands, Gates—either go forrard quietly yerself, er the both of us will kick you there. That will be enough talk. Go on, now."

It was a curt dismissal, coupled with a plain threat, easy to understand. I obeyed the order gladly enough, slinking away into the black shadows forward, realizing my good fortune, and seeking some spot where I could be alone.

The crew had disappeared, lying down no doubt in corners out of the wind. And this wind was certainly rising. I wondered that LeVere hung on so long in his perilous position, although, in spite of the increased strain, the anchor still clung firmly. It seemed to me that no hawser ever made could long withstand the terrific strain of our tugging, as the struggling bark rose and fell in the grip of the sea. To him must have come the same conviction, for suddenly his high-pitched voice sang out from the poop:

"Stand by, forrard, to lower the starboard anchor; move lively, men. Everything ready, Haines?"

"All clear, sir. Come on the jump, bullies!"

"Then let go smartly. Watch that you don't get the line fouled. Aloft there! Anything in sight, Cavere?"

From high up on the fore-top yard, the answer, blown by the wind, came down in broken English:

"Non, m'sieur; I see nottings."

I joined the watch forward. The number of men on deck was evidence of a large crew, there being many more than were necessary for the work to be done. Most of them appeared to be able seamen, and Haines drove them mercilessly, cursing them for lubbers, and twice kicking viciously at a stooping form. Then the great rope began to slip swiftly through the hawse hole, and we heard the sharp splash as the iron flukes struck the water, and sank. Almost at that same instant the voice of Cavere rang out from the masthead:

"A sail, m'sieur—a sail!"

"Where away?"

"Off ze port quarter. I make eet to be ze leetle boat—she just round ze point."

CHAPTER XI.

The Return of the Boat.

The crew hurried over to the port rail. Beyond doubt most of those aboard realized that this had been an expedition of some importance, the culmination of their long wait on the coast, part of some scheme of their chief, in the spoils of which they expected to share. Moreover this boat approaching through the darkness was bringing back their leader, and however else they might feel toward him, the reckless daring, and audacious resourcefulness of Sanchez meant success.

I was made to comprehend all this by the low, muttered utterances of those crowding near me, spoken in nearly every language of the world. Much I could not translate, yet enough reached my ears to convince me of the temper of the crew—their feverish eagerness to be again at sea, under command of a captain whom they both hated and feared—a cruel, cold-blooded monster, yet a genius in crime, and a natural leader of such men as these. Black Sanchez! I listened to their comments, their expectations, with swiftly beating heart. I alone knew what that boat was bringing. What would be the result when the dead body of their leader came up over the rail?

With dangers threatening from every hand, Carlyle faces a problem. Shall he save himself while there is yet time, or shall he face the danger, kill and perhaps be killed? Shall he take the one desperate chance of aiding the girl who fills his thoughts or shall he play the craven coward?

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

HEAVY HOG LOSS CAN BE LARGELY AVOIDED

Greater Care Should Be Used in Shipping Live Animals.

Cars Ought to Be Thoroughly Cleaned Before Loading and Not Overcrowded—Spraying While in Transit Is Helpful.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Last May 651 hogs, weighing approximately 157,000 pounds, were unloaded dead, or died in the stockyards at the South St. Paul market. Of this number, 359 hogs, weighing approximately 102,000 pounds, died in transit or in yards during the last six days of the month. This was the week of the first real warm weather, and as is usually the case during the first hot spell in the summer season, the loss of hogs in transit was extremely heavy. The difference in price between dead or live hogs during this week was approximately 18 cents a pound, which would mean a total loss of about $18,360. This loss might have been largely avoided if the shippers had taken proper care in loading, seeing that all cars were properly cleaned before loading, and that cars were not loaded as heavily as is the custom in cooler weather. If these hogs had been loaded in clean cars the losses could have been further decreased by having them sprayed often in transit by the carrier, especially upon arrival at transfer points, and also upon delivery to the terminal. One of the largest buyers of hogs at the South St. Paul market, who reships to other markets for slaughter, states that the losses of his firm during the last week in May were no heavier than usual, but that they were extremely careful to have their cars thoroughly cleaned and sanded before loading, in addition to loading lighter than usual and taking the adequate precaution of requesting the railroad officials to issue instructions to have the hogs sprayed as often as possible in transit.

WATER HELPS LAYING FOWLS

Plentiful Supply Should Always Be Available for Hens—Stock-Feed-Rack Idea Is Good.

A plentiful supply of clean, fresh water must always be available to hens. The fowls drink freely, especially when laying heavily, and should not be stinted of such a necessary and cheap material as water. The water pan or dish should be kept clean.

The stock-feed-rack idea has been successfully applied to the watering of poultry. One successful poultry raiser uses a contrivance such as the one illustrated on this page, the chickens being forced to hop upon an elevated platform in order to reach the water, and being prevented from standing on the edge of the dish or contaminating the water, because of the necessity of reaching between the slats to drink.

REASONS FOR FALL PLOWING

Longer Period Given for Decomposition of Stubble and Other Pieces of Vegetable Matter.

Fall plowing is a bank balance booster because it returns the best crops. It does this for several reasons, says Andrew Boss, vice director of the Minnesota experiment station, University farm, St. Paul:

It gives a longer period for the decomposition of the stubble and other particles of vegetable matter turned under in plowing.

It opens the soil to the fall rains.

It helps to dispose of weeds which interfere with growth of crops.

It lessens the amount of spring work and thereby allows the prompt sowing of the crops in the spring.

It enables one to avoid crowding at any time, and, therefore, is beneficial both to men and horses.

GIVE HARNESS PROPER CARE

First Wash With Warm Water and Soap, and While Still Moist Oil It Thoroughly.

To oil harness correctly, first wash the harness thoroughly with warm water and soap. Then hang the harness up to dry. Do not let it get dry, but when it is still moist, rub it thoroughly with some animal or vegetable oil. Pure neats-foot oil is the best oil known. This renews the softness of the leather and its flexibility. Do not use mineral oils on harness, for it has a destructive effect, say the farm engineering authorities at Iowa State college who make the foregoing recommendations.

HOT BATH TREATMENT FOR SEED WHEAT EFFECTIVE IN KEEPING DISEASE AWAY

Giving Seed Wheat a Bath to Rid It of Smut Infection.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A firebrand applied to inflammable tinder is no more destructive than are the smuts which annually ravage and pillage the grain crops of the United States. Last year 25,500,000 bushels of wheat, 110,000,000 bushels of oats, and 6,000,000 bushels of barley were the tribute paid to smut.

There are two smuts which attack wheat, the loose and covered smut. Loose smut is most serious in the southern winter wheat section, which includes southern Illinois, southern Indiana, southern Ohio, southern Pennsylvania, southern Missouri, Maryland, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee, where it causes yearly losses ranging from 5 to 20 per cent of the entire crop. Loose smut shows, conspicuously when the wheat comes into head. At this time it reduces the grain to dusty black refuse, consisting largely of spores of the fungus which are spread broadcast by the wind and rain. The dissemination of the disease is furthered by the fact that the blooming period of the healthy plants and the shedding of the spores in the diseased plants are simultaneous. Some of these spores reach the flowers and infect the developing seed. The seed shows no external evidence of the presence of the smut fungus, but when planted gives rise to the black heads in the next crop.

Loose Smut Difficult to Control.

Loose smut is hard to control because the fungus exists inside the seed, and hence cannot be reached by ordinary chemicals without killing the wheat embryo. Fortunately, the disease can be controlled by the hot-water treatment, which consists of soaking the seed in cold water from 8 to 6 hours and then dipping it in hot water at a temperature of 132 degrees Fahrenheit for ten minutes. Subsequently the seed should be spread out to dry. Great care must be exercised not to have the water too hot nor to allow the seed to remain in the water too long. An advisable system is to treat four or five bushels of seed and to sow it in a special plot, isolated from the wheat fields proper, in order that the seed from the plot may be used for seeding operations the following year. Farmers who treat their seed in this manner fortify their fields against invasion by loose smut.

Bunt or stinking smut ranges at large over the entire wheat-growing section and generally causes a crop damage of from 1 to 5 per cent, although frequent individual fields show losses which range from 20 to 40 and even as high as 50 and 75 per cent. Bunt is sporadic in distribution, occurring here and there and everywhere in irregular sequence. One field may be seriously infested while the neighboring field on the right may be free from the disease. The disease shows up a few days before the wheat is ripe. If one carefully examines the diseased head at this time he will note that the glumes are pushed slightly apart, while the developing kernel is of dark color. If he crushes open the kernel, really a smut ball, a mass of ill-smelling, brownish black spores is released. In thrashing, these smut balls are knocked out and more or less broken apart so that the spores are scattered over the sound seed. On account of its bad smell, millers discount and penalize wheat covered with bunt dust.

Formaldehyde Bath Kills Bunt.

Stinking smut or bunt is easily controlled by use of formaldehyde, one pint or one pound of commercial formalin being dissolved in 40 gallons of water. The seed to be treated should be freed as much as possible from smut balls and other foreign matter and then should be placed in a loose gunny sack, filling the sack about two-thirds full, and then the sack should be dipped in the formalin solution and kept there about ten minutes. By raising and lowering the sack the grain will be mixed thoroughly and brought into complete contact with the solution. After treatment the grain must be dried and carefully protected from further contamination either in the sack or in the planting machinery. One pint of commercial formaldehyde solution dissolved in 40 gallons of water is usually sufficient for the treatment of 40 bushels of seed grain.

In the far West and on the Pacific coast, because of the occurrence of soil infestation by smut in that region, the copper-sulphate treatment is preferable to the formaldehyle method on controlling bunt. The former treatment consists in dipping the seed in a solution of one pound of copper sulphate dissolved in five gallons of water. When the seed is removed from the copper-sulphate solution it should be dipped in a mixture of one pound of quicklime to ten gallons of water, this latter measure being necessary to prevent the continued injurious action of the copper sulphate on the grain after the smut spores have been killed. At thrashing time the smut spores are spread broadcast over the fallowed land by the wind, as fallowing for wheat is a common practice in the Pacific Northwest. Subsequently, when the fall rains occur, these spores germinate and infect the young wheat plants as they develop. Hence seed treatment is not entirely effective, but generally the copper-sulphate control gives the better results because some of the chemical adheres to the seed and prevents infection from the soil.

BEAUTY BATH HELPS APPEARANCE OF HEN

White Fowls Must Be Washed Before Put on Exhibition.

Birds of Various Colors Can Be Improved by Fluffing and Grooming—Soft or Rain Water at Right Temperature Is Best.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

All white fowls must be washed, and most fowls of other colors can be improved in appearance by washing, fluffing and grooming before the show.

For white birds have three tubs, one filled with warm, soft or rain water, another with warm, soft or rain water, and the third with warm, soft or rain water colored the proper shade to rinse and blue white goods. Use a bar of good white or castile soap, a large sponge and a nail brush. Have the temperature of the room 80 or 85 degrees and bring the birds in clean exhibition coops, the floors of which should be covered with fresh, dry shavings.

Wash the males first. Clean the shanks and feet with the nail brush, soap and water. Insert the bird in the first tub and push it down under the water several times until the plumage is wet through; make a heavy lather with the sponge and soap and thoroughly wash the plumage with the sponge; open the wings and sponge them in the direction of the feathers. Always wash the length of the feather, from the quill to the tip and not across it.

Keep the bird's head out of the soapy water if possible; sponge the soap off the bird and remove to the second tub. Press it under the water several times, allow it to stand and drip for a few seconds, and then dip it twice in the tub containing the bluing water. Remove the bird from the water, hold its legs firmly and raise it up and down quickly, so that it will flap and expand its wings and tail, and shake out the water.

Do not use a towel to dry a white bird. Move the exhibition coop near the fire or some heat so that the bird will dry. Lifting up the plumage of the breast and opening the feathers of the fluff while drying has a tendency to increase the apparent size of these sections. It is necessary to examine the white birds frequently if the coops are near a stove to guard against overheating them or scorching or curling their feathers.

GIVE HELP TO FALLEN HORSE

First Unhitch Him and Allay Fears by Talking to Him—Provide Suitable Footing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When a horse falls in harness he almost immediately struggles to regain his feet. A strong, healthy horse will not remain down voluntarily, but in his efforts to rise he may become frightened. If the driver will give the right kind of first aid he can prevent serious injury to the animal.

Held down by the harness the horse seldom has sufficient freedom to rise to his feet, though enough to struggle and injure himself by pounding his head on the ground. Accordingly the driver should calm the horse first by speaking in a reassuring tone and, by placing his knees upon the animal's neck just back of the ears, endeavor to prevent injury from struggling or from bruising his head. An intelligent horse quickly learns to place great confidence in the voice of a good driver.

The traces and breeching straps should be unfastened and the vehicle rolled back from the fallen animal. If the horse is in double hitch, the traces and yoke strap should be unfastened and the pole, vehicle, and working mate moved a short distance away. An injured horse will then regain his feet readily if he has suitable footing. In case the ground is icy, scatter some fine sand, sawdust, or straw under and in front of him. If nothing of this kind is available, spread a blanket or burlap bagging on the pavement to give him better footing as he attempts to stand.

In case the horse needs more help and encouragement, and especially if he lies broadside, roll him on to his chest, with the hind legs under the belly. Then work both front legs forward until the feet are firmly on the ground and knees flexed. If after repeated efforts and good footing he continues to fall back upon the ground there is possibly some injury to the hind parts, such as a fracture of the hip or leg, which should be examined by a qualified veterinarian.

In all efforts to assist a fallen horse do not forget that in rising to his feet he raises the head and fore parts first. This is directly opposite to the habit of the cow, which elevates the hind parts first.

Injuries to horses are common during the winter months in cities where snow becomes packed and forms an icy coating on the pavement. In most cities above the frost belt there are times when pavements are slippery.

Asphalt is especially troublesome and when covered by a very light sleet or snow makes a very treacherous footing for horses. The milkman or baker, who drove upon a clean pavement the night before, may find the streets at 4 a. m. so nearly impassable from a coat of smooth ice as to delay his deliveries very greatly or even prevent them entirely.

In country districts horses remain sharp or rough shod for a considerable time. But if they are driven much on city streets paved with stone, cement, or asphalt, from which the snow has been removed, their shoes quickly become smooth and it is difficult for the horses to keep their feet.

When the front feet slip backward a horse is likely to fall and injure his knees, while side slipping generally causes him to come down broadside. Shoeing with rubber pads, or the use of emergency appliances may lessen the chance of slipping, but as there is always the possibility of a horse falling, even when well shod, careful driving and precautions against overloading are important additional means for reducing these accidents and injuries to a minimum.

HOW TO AVOID BACKACHE AND NERVOUSNESS

Told by Mrs. Lynch From Own Experience.

Providence, R. I.—"I was all run down in health, was nervous, had headaches, my back ached all the time. I was tired and had no ambition for anything. I had taken a number of medicines which did me no good. One day I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for women, so I tried it. My nervousness and backache and headaches disappeared. I gained in weight and feel fine, so I can honestly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is suffering as I was."—Mrs. ADELINE B. LYNCH, 100 Plain St., Providence, R. I.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Lynch's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.

Bad Sickness Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people only realized the health-destroying power of an acid-stomach—of the many kinds of sickness and misery it causes—of the lives it literally wrecks—they would guard against it as carefully as they do against a deadly plague. You know in an instant the first symptoms of acid-stomach—pains of indigestion; distressing, painful bloat; sour, gassy stomach; belching; food repeating; heartburn, etc. Whenever your stomach feels this way you should lose no time in putting it to rights. If you don't, serious consequences are almost sure to follow, such as intestinal fermentation, auto-intoxication, impairment of the entire nervous system, headache, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver; sometimes even catarrh of the stomach and intestinal ulcers and cancer.

If you are not feeling right, see if it isn't acid-stomach that is the cause of your ill health. Take EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy. EATONIC Tablets quickly and surely relieve the pain, bloat, belching, and heartburn that indicate acid-stomach. Make the stomach strong, clean and sweet. By keeping the stomach in healthy condition so that you can get full strength from your food, your general health steadily improves. Results are marvelously quick. Just try EATONIC and you will be as enthusiastic as the thousands who have used it and who say they never dreamed anything could bring such marvelous relief.

So get a big 50-cent box of EATONIC from your druggist today. If not satisfactory return it and he will refund your money.

If Constipated, Bilious or Headachy, take "Cascarets"

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, or sour, gassy stomach—always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissues it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep.—Adv.

No student may enter the law college without two years of college preparation, but this year seventy-one freshmen, are registered.

Student self-government for the University of Iowa has been warmly advocated by the two university senior honorary societies, Staff and Circle and A. F. I. Although the movement is not new, interest taken by the two senior organizations is significant as it is the outgrowth of undergraduate sentiment developed after three years of life at the university.

Iowa Central Stock farm of 320 acres has been purchased by Mrs. S. Weiland at $300 an acre, $96,000 being the total involved. The farm is one of the best in Butler county and is well improved.

The 1919 fall wheat acreage in Jefferson county is only about 40 or 45 per cent as great as it was last year. This data is taken from twenty reports of the district co-operators of the farm bureau. Only one of the twenty reports showed that there would be as much wheat sown in this district this year as last.

Acting Chief of Police Lee Wiltse of Waterloo, has issued an order to patrolmen to stop all motor cars running with the temporary city paper license numbers or dealers' permits. The cards are to be destroyed and the drivers advised to report to the county attorneys' office to have the matter of license numbers settled.

Land appraised at $140 an acre by a jury appointed by district court to settle a partition suit was sold to one of the contestants in the suit at $225 per acre, so keen was the rivalry to secure possession of the tract, which is located near New Hartford. This is the greatest advance over appraisal price for any real estate sold under order of court in Butler county.

The University Church of Christ, Des Moines, has organized a "Big Brothers' club." Bible studies, and recreational features, including the organization of quartets, an orchestra and several basketball teams are expected to attract a large number of the young people in the church. Members must be over sixteen years of age.

Receipts of the 1919 Clay county fair totaled $26,167.42, while the expenses amounted to $12,290.05. This year's exhibition and celebration realized a net profit of $13,877.37, over double the expenses, and of this amount an indebtedness of $5,078.00 and $1,017.68 for maintenance was paid, leaving $7,781.69 in the fair association treasury.

A sale of Aberdeen-Angus thoroughbred cattle held on the farm of A. G. Messer, seven miles southwest of Grundy Center, resulted in sale of forty-two head at prices ranging all the way from $200 up to $2,800, a 4-year-old cow bringing the higher figure. There were buyers from Missouri but most of the cattle were sold to Iowa bidders.

A warning has been issued to the boys of Iowa to beware of flying kites near the high tension electric lines that traverse so many sections of the state. If a string supporting a kite were to come in contact with a high tension wire the electric current would run down the string in sufficient volume to kill the boy holding it. This is especially true if the string should be damp.

Parsons college at Fairfield is the first institution to be chosen by the Presbyterian board of education to share in the $2,000,000 to be raised annually during the next five years. The college will raise $410,000 before March 31, 1921, and the general church board will give 5 per cent of the funds coming into its hands through the New Era movement in 1920-21, estimated at $100,000.

Gravel road maintenance, for a stretch of five and one-half miles north of Mason City on the Jefferson highway in Cerro Gordo county, cost an average of $1,232.60 per mile for the two years, 1917-1918. Concrete roads maintenance, in striking comparison to this, on the Mason City-Clear Lake road, cost the county an average of $1,232.60 in 1913, when the first mile of concrete was laid, an average for six miles of $31.50.

A novel idea in road construction is being worked out between Fertile and Forest City, where a large force of county graders are at work. Beginning one mile west of Fertile, the Scenic Route runs parallel with the state drainage canal a distance of twelve miles into Forest City. The high earth embankments on both sides of the canal are now being converted into roadbed, the Scenic Route on the right hand side and the Pershing Way on the left, with the open waterway between.

One of the last official acts of the Evangelical association general conference at Cedar Falls before adjourning sine die to meet in the fall of 1923 at Detroit was to apportion among the several annual conferences their apportionment for the $2,500,000 which the church will raise during the next five years for home and foreign missions, church extension, education and benevolences. Iowa's share is $71,000. The Western Old People's home of Cedar Falls gets a new $100,000,000 building.

Iowa still has a number of woolen mills. In an early day such places as Knoxville, Pella, Marengo, Fairfield, Clarinda, and various other towns afforded a home market for the wool clip of the state and some high grade cloth for that day was furnished. At the beginning of the war the mill at Dale City on the Raccoon river near Panora, Guthrie county, manufacturers of the famous Lonsdale woolens, closed down because it was impossible to obtain dyes. The Amana society in Iowa county conducts a large woolen mill and furnishes blankets for the trade all over the country. In Des Moines the Scheureman mills have just finished large government contracts. At Nashua, Chickasaw county, the wollen mills furnished the navy with 200,000 blankets. The mill bought twenty pounds of pink dye just before the beginning of the war. It cost 45 cents a pound. A little later the mill refused $75 a pound for it, or a profit of $1,492.

Forest City Post No. 21, of the American Legion, has passed resolutions favoring the bonus legislation now before congress and calling for other posts of the legion in Iowa to adopt similar resolutions.

COULDN'T MATCH THAT STORY

Senator Set Altogether Too Fast a Pace for Even Veteran Bore to Follow.

A senator was entertaining some friends with stories about the Arizona desert, when a bore joined the party.

This bore was the kind of a chap that always laughs in the wrong place and spoils a story by trying to guess its climax. The senator undertook to silence him.

"Poor Ferguson!" he said. "That was a close shave he had in the desert last August."

"Sunstroke, of course," said the bore.

"No, not exactly," said the senator. "You see, Ferguson stumbled accidentally on the Cauldron—our famous spring, you know, that gushes out of the rock at freezing point and immediately begins to boil from the fierce heat of the sun."

"Of course, of course," said the bore. "And what happened to Ferguson? Did he fall in the cauldron and boil to death? Get on with your story, man."

"Ferguson fell in," said the senator, "but he managed to scramble out again. The peril, however, was not yet over for him. Our Arizona air, you see, is so dry that it absorbs moisture with astonishing rapidity. Well, the boiling water in Ferguson's clothes evaporated so fast that the poor fellow instantly froze stiff."

"I see," said the bore. "He died of cold. Well, that reminds me—"

"No, he didn't die," said the senator. "He almost died, but he had a miraculous escape. In his stiff-frozen state, you understand, he began to shiver with chill, and he shivered so hard that in a few moments he became overheated and would have succumbed to sunstroke if he hadn't providentially broken into a cold sweat."

Hiding a King's Statue.

The fine equestrian statue of King Charles I, which was hidden in London for protection during the war, has been brought to light again. The statue, which was cast during the reign of the monarch, according to reports has not enjoyed the uneventful career permitted to most works of its kind. It was executed for Sir Richard Weston, afterward earl of Portland, who intended to place it as an ornament in his garden at Rochampton. But this function it never fulfilled, for it was seized by parliament during the Civil war and sold to one John Rivett, a brazier, to be broken up. John, however, being a royalist, hid the statue and, by selling hundreds of bronze knife handles purporting to be made from it, disarmed any parliamentary suspicions in the matter. On the restoration of Charles II in 1660 Rivett produced the statue, which was claimed by Sir Richard's son. The brazier refused to yield it, and after years of dispute it was eventually presented to King Charles II and erected on the spot formerly covered by the original Charing cross.

Antarctic "Shelf Ice."

From the work of recent explorations, Sir Douglas Mawson concludes that the rock foundation on which the Antarctic ice cap rests is very irregular, partly above sea level and partly below, and that its thickness, which is very variable, may reach a maximum of several thousand feet. Under the thickest portions the static pressure at the base may be as great as one ton per square inch. Under such a covering there may be a considerable accumulation of ground heat, and it is assumed that the under portion of the ice mass is undoubtedly soft and plastic. Where the sea breaks up the ice at a rate faster than the flow, the sea front is substantially the coast line. But elsewhere, as in the Great Ross barrier and the Shackleton shelf, the supply of ice exceeds the rate of erosion at the sea front, and the overflow from the land maintains a thick sheet of "shelf ice" extending far out to sea. The sea front of the ice cap, at the present rate of advance or flowing out, is estimated to have left the center in the seventh century of our era.

Fireproofing Concrete Columns.

We have been wont to look upon concrete as capable of resisting a great deal of heat, and it may seem strange to think of coating it with a fireproof material. However, there are conditions under which this is necessary. The bureau of standards has been investigating the condition of concrete which has passed through conflagrations, and has found that if the concrete is made with gravel, particularly siliceous gravel, there is a tendency for the stones to burst in extreme heat, which disintegrates the concrete. Accordingly it is recommended that gravel be avoided wherever possible, but if impossible the gravel concrete may be protected from extreme heat by coating it with an inch of cement held in place by a wire mesh. Plasters may also be used in which asbestos is the principal constituent.—Scientific American.

Closed Chapter of History.

The French newspaper L'Eclair, which, in one of its recent issues, published a note on the seal used by Jules Favre at Versailles in 1871, has received a letter bearing the signature "Louis, prince de Bourbon." The writer protests against the expression, used by L'Eclair, "faux Louis XVII," as applied to his father, Naundorff; and the writer incloses a certificate in which Naundorff is described as duke of Normandy, Louis XVII. It has not sufficed of over 100 years completely to silence that particular chapter of French history. As L'Eclair remarks, "Ever since the 8th of June, 1795, the case was settled for us."

DO STOCK YARDS HAVE A STRANGLE HOLD ON OUR MEAT SUPPLY?

Buying and selling cattle in Union Stock Yards, Chicago. The men in the pens are the ones who must judge each steer and determine what he is worth.

Are the great stock yards of Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha and elsewhere hotbeds of monopolistic control which succeeds in mulcting the farmer on the one hand, and the consumer who buys meat, on the other hand? This will be one of the questions threshing over in the discussion of the Kenyon bill now before a committee of the Senate.

If these big markets, where millions upon millions of dollars change hands, have any sort of a strangle-hold on our food resources, few there would be who would not say, rout them. Yet equally few, perhaps, could give you any sort of a vivid word-picture of what takes place in these markets through which flows much of our farm wealth.

Separate From Packing Plants.

The "stock yards" are synonymous in the minds of many people with all packingdom. This is error number one. They are operated as corporations wholly distinct from the packing plant companies that cluster around them.

The stock yards perform two functions: they are unloading, feeding and resting stations for live stock; and markets for buying and selling. As buying and selling places, they are among the most interesting spots in the world—places where one may see a nation at its bartering. Huge auction stations where a fraction of a point counts, and counts big.

The Chicago stock yards, as the most notable example, will receive in a day anywhere from 10,000 to 30,000 cattle, not to mention hogs and sheep. These would represent shipments by many farmers. Each farmer puts his cattle into the hands of a commission firm who acts as his agent. The "stock in trade" of the commission firm is a satisfied clientele among the farmers—the better bargainers they are for a long price, the more the farmer is disposed to patronize them.

A Game for Experts.

It is a titanic game, and one for experts. On the one side are arrayed the commission men, and on the other the buyers representing packing concerns, brokers and others. Both sides know their business, which is to say that they know full well what the receipts of the day are and their relation to the requirements, and they know cattle.

The big auction begins. Not from a block, but an auction for all that. Buyers, mounted on ponies, scurry hither and thither, making a bid on one lot here and on another lot there. The commission man will hold the bid in abeyance, dickering for a few points higher price and awaiting the arrival of another man on a pony who may make him a better offer. Every commission man is a competitor of all the other commission men; and every buyer is a competitor of all the other buyers.

We say that all of these men know cattle. A steer is not a standardized commodity. Nature makes him what he is. The contour of his haunches, the build of his body and his make-up in general have everything to do with what he is worth as a beef animal. No one can determine his value but the men in the pens,—the commission men and the buyers.

Buyers Represent Many Firms.

Many think that these cattle are all purchased by the big packers, which is far from being the case. Besides the buyers for the big packers there are always in the Chicago yards from a hundred to a hundred and fifty other buyers on the scene, many of them representing firms that are not located near the stock yards or even in the same city. All told, the large packers do only 44 per cent of the meat animal slaughtering of the entire comtry.

The penalty which awaits the buyer who will not bid up to true values is that the other buyers take the cattle away from him and his firm will be without its requirements. On the other hand the commission men cannot stick it out for an exorbitant price; for the buyers would cut down on the amounts of their purchases. There are some people who will buy meat at any price, but the majority of people reduce their meat purchases precisely as the prices mount upward. The buyers in the stock yards reflect this attitude of the general public almost as accurately as a thermometer indicates the temperature.

The Arena of Supply and Demand.

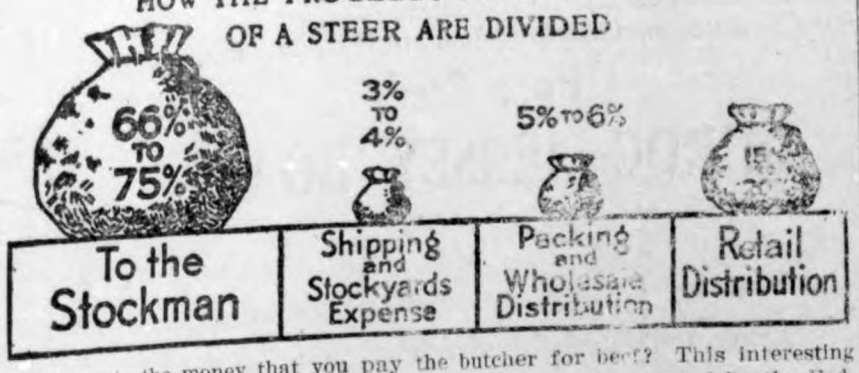
In other words, the stock yards are the meeting places of two tremendous powers of the economic world,—Supply and Demand. Any one who visits one of these places, even as the most casual observer, and watches what occurs there, will give up any illusion he may have about monopoly or control. Too many buyers and sellers are involved, and judging the value of an individual steer or a pen full of steers is altogether too complicated a matter to cover by any sort of agreement in advance.

The Kenyon bill would make it illegal for any packers to have financial holdings in stock yards corporations. Common sense rightly asks, "Why?" How such holdings, which, where they exist, are nothing more than financial backing of a worthy enterprise, can control the men in the pens who are hired to use their judgment, is too deep to be seen at a glance. The advocates of the bill should be forced to explain. And how a lack of such holdings would prevent control or monopoly, if such things were possible, is another thing which the proponents of the bill should be able to elucidate.

SMALL PACKERS OPPOSE LICENSE

Cincinnati meat packers in drawing resolutions against the licensing of all packers doing interstate business, brought attention to the fact that the proposed legislation embodied in the Kenyon and Kendrick bills, if enacted, would have a tendency to drive hundreds of small packing firms out of the field of interstate operations. This would be the preference forced upon them as against operating under a licensing system which would be a continued menace of interference.

HOW THE PROCEEDS FROM THE SALE OF A STEER ARE DIVIDED



Who gets the money that you pay the butcher for beef? This interesting diagram will help you to see. It is made up from figures secured by the Federal Department of Agriculture who followed a number of groups of steers through the packing plant and through the retail market up to the time the meat was in the hands of the ultimate consumer. The live animals were bought from the farmer; in addition to the meat there was, of course, the hide, visceral fat and other by-products. These were sold by the packer and this sum added to what the retail market man received for the meat gives the total proceeds. Out of this total amount the farmer received 66 to 75 per cent for the live animals. Three to 4 per cent were required to ship the live animals to market and to feed and care for them in the stock yards before they were slaughtered. The packer received 5 to 6 per cent of the total proceeds, and this covered the cost of slaughtering, refrigerating, shipping in refrigerator cars to the local branch houses, selling to the local butcher, and also profits. Fifteen to 20 per cent was received by the butcher, which comprised his selling cost plus his profits. The illustration indicates the proportions of these amounts by the relative sizes of the money bags.

PURPLE AND GOLD

Adorned Armies Which Persian Kings Led to War.

Spectacular Indeed Must Have Been the March of Mighty Hosts Before the Days of Business-like Fighting.

Warfare was a spectacular, as well as a bloody enterprise, in the days of antiquity. Plain khaki and simple businesslike accoutrements would never have suited the ancient Persian soldiers.

Silver altars, surrounded by priests chanting sacred songs, were first in line of march. They were followed by 365 youths dressed in purple garments. A chariot dedicated to the sun was drawn by snow-white horses, led by grooms wearing white garments and carrying golden wands.

Ten chariots embossed with gold and silver preceded the cavalry of 12 nations, dressed in their various costumes and carrying their peculiar arms.

Then came the Persian immortals, 10,000 in number, wearing golden chains and robes embroidered with gold and glittering with precious stones. Following at a short distance came 15,000 nobles, relatives of the king, dressed in garments wonderfully wrought.

A company of spearmen preceded the king. He rode in an imposing chariot, and wore robes of surpassing magnificence, and a costly miter on his head. By his side walked 200 of his most noble kinsmen. Ten thousand warriors, bearing spears with staffs of silver tipped by heads of gold, followed the royal chariot of Xerxes. The king's horses, 40 in number, with 30,000 footmen, ended the procession.

At some distance followed the mother and wife of the king in chariots, accompanied by their ladies on horseback. Fifteen cars carried the king's children, their tutors and nurses, and 600 camels, guarded by archers, bore the royal treasury. The friends and relatives of the ladies followed with the cooks and servants. Light-armed troops brought up the rear.

When a king in those days looked upon his troops and saw their strength and splendor, it is no wonder he felt proud and wished to lead them to battle. Such an army was not meant to stay at home, where only their countrymen could see them. Other nations would know how powerful a king he was. So he and his followers marched away, and wars for conquest began.

Peoples were forced to give themselves up to a life of war, either for conquest or defense, and the great highways, which peace would have dedicated to commerce and prosperity, became military roads over which war took its cruel way.

Details Carried to Absurdity.

Trivial details not infrequently become the pivot of momentous decisions, in which cases an element of absurdity is supplied by the breadth of the contrast. A case in point arises in the discussion among English litterateurs concerning Shakespeare's alleged "hand" in the play of "Sir Thomas More," in which one expert occupies almost a column of small type in the literary supplement of the Times of London in describing the construction of the letter B as found in one of Shakespeare's autographic documents. The imposing array of warlike and nautical terms in the modest letter, such as keel, baseline, ram, forelimb and boundary line, may astonish many who have been accustomed to form it with comparative ease, while the division of the letter into sections and subsections by this savant for purposes of discussion endows the old scrivener's art with unexpected dignity.

Matter of Priority.

While the people of Denmark are glorying in the antiquity of their national flag, the "Dannebrog," which claims the honor of seniority among all the national flags, and are commemorating its origin in the thirteenth century, Belgian and German patriots are scouring the Middle Ages on a mission of vital import to their respective flags. The new German state has given indications of adopting for its colors black, yellow and red, disposed horizontally. This has aroused protests in Belgium, which claims priority in precisely the same colors, similarly disposed, and patriotic societies are said to be forming to take action to prevent Germany's adoption of them. The Belgian claims are based on the colors of the princes of Flanders and Brabant in the thirteenth century, while the German case is said to rest on the use of the colors in question by the ancient Germanic empire.

What's in A Name.

Naming a plant or flower after a celebrity is a delicate compliment, and one that no doubt at times adds something to the market value. But there are exceptions. That beautiful variety of the lobelia, for instance, known as "Emperor William," would perhaps hold up its imperial head a little more proudly just now if it had had a more fortunate christening.

Stray thoughts on these lines may have been flickering in the mind of a coster in a London market-place as a seedy looking buyer, while examining a box of the old favorite, asked what variety it was. Without deranging the muscle of an eyelid the coster (and he was a "lydy," too) replied: "Douglas Aig! Four-and-a-tanner a box."

ANSWER "HERE" AT THIRD ROLL CALL SAYS E. K. HARDY

Manager of Central Division Tells Hopes and Needs of American Red Cross.

ASKS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

War Work Not Entirely Completed and Broad Peace Program Outlined Require Members and Funds.

By E. K. HARDY,
Manager Central Division American Red Cross.

The varied forms of war activity, in which the American Red Cross has devoted almost its entire energy and gradually diminishing. Much thought, patience and care have been required to change this organization from a war footing to a peace footing, but a general program has been mapped out, to be adjusted and readjusted as need require, for chapter, division and national organizations.

Between Nov. 2 and 11 the Red Cross will call its roll for the third time and ask the people to give a vote of confidence in the past performance, and a reaffirmation of the principles which will guide its progress in the future.

The war activities have not all been stopped, and will not be stopped until the last American soldier is home and able once again to take his place in the business or industrial world. The soldier's family also must be cheered and comforted and assisted until he is able to care for them. No program can be laid down by the Red Cross that does not include this unfinished war work as first obligation.

Ever since the organization of the Red Cross there have been responsibilities which now have become traditional. These include service to the standing army and naval forces, mitigation of suffering either at home or abroad from famine, fire, floods or great disasters. The Red Cross also must continue and broaden its work in the field of nursing, maintain its courses in first aid, dietetics and home care of the sick.

New responsibilities have come with the war. Higher standards have been set up by individuals and nations in regard to human life saving, and preventing needless suffering. In connection with the new tasks these responsibilities entail, the Red Cross will assist, stimulate and supplement, but not supplant, local agencies engaged in the same lines of endeavor.

The volunteer spirit which brought such a measure of success during the war, will be carefully nurtured. We will need volunteers to conduct the Third Roll Call and when emergencies arise we will call for volunteers to assist if necessary.

The Third Roll Call in the Central Division will be held to enroll 4,000,000 annual dollar members for 1920 and to raise $3,000,000 in the five states in the division. Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin and Nebraska.

Every membership is a vote of confidence in the Red Cross, each dollar means the lifting of some burden.

The Red Cross needs universal cooperation in carrying out its peace program. It needs the hearts of the millions who enrolled during the second roll call.

It needs YOU.

PLAN WORLD WAR ON PLAGUE.

Twenty-six national Red Cross societies forming the League of Red Cross societies, have opened a united war on disease, famine and disaster in all parts of the world. The league has started its work in Poland, where typhus is raging and threatening to spread over western Europe. A medical commission has been sent to handle the situation there and to report on methods of checking the plague. The roster of the league includes Argentina, Australia, Belgium, Brazil, Canada, China, Cuba, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Greece, Holland, India, Italy, Japan, New Zealand, Norway, Peru, Portugal, Roumania, Serbia, South Africa, Spain, Sweden, the United States and Venezuela.

WANTED

One million volunteers to enlist with the American Red Cross for the Third Roll Call, November 2-11, and enroll annual members.

The Red Cross needs $15,000,000 to complete its remaining war work and for a comprehensive peace program.

The Red Cross needs 20,000,000 members to maintain its present high standard of organization.

The Red Cross needs YOU.

FARMERS MUST ORGANIZE FOR PROTECTION

The Board of Directors of the Farm Bureau have set aside the week of November 10th to 15th for increasing the membership of the HANCOCK COUNTY FARM BUREAU and IOWA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION.

During that week a committee of your neighbors will invite you to join.

The Farm Bureau membership fee is small—only $5.00 a year. In addition you will be given an opportunity to subscribe to the fund of $250,000 which the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation needs to carry on the work of protecting your interests.

There are matters of importance coming up constantly. You must have men on hand to study how these things will affect your business.

What are your feelings on packer control? Do you know that the Chicago packers are spending $20,000,000 a year annually for advertising purposes? THEY ARE PROTECTING THEIR INTERESTS.

What should be done with the railroads? Are you aware that the Brotherhoods are preparing to spend $1,000,000 in a campaign to secure the control and management of the railroads through legislation? THE RAILROAD EMPLOYEES ARE LOOKING TO THEIR WELFARE.

You have seen the value of organization among farmers in the repeal of the daylight saving act. Without an organization to speak for the farming interests this would never have been secured.

Let us get ready now to look after our business! Each and every man must do his part.

Very truly yours,
S. A. Barber, Pres. Farm Bureau

WOLVES SEEN NEAR KLEMME

Last Thursday when Hod Lawhorn and his men were out picking corn they saw four large gray wolves in a field only about two hundred yards distant. The wolves were not at all frightened and after they had watched the men a few minutes trotted away. As luck would have it there was no gun handy to take a shot at the wolves but Hod says he is going to have a little sport yet as he is going to look for them and try to round them up. He recently lost three spring pigs and he thinks that perhaps they were taken by the wolves he saw the other day.

FARMERS ORGANIZE SHIPPING ASSOCIATION

Last Tuesday night the farmers of this vicinity met, and with the assistance of County Agent Nutty organized a co-operative shipping association. Mr. Gran, the manager at Garner, gave an interesting talk, explaining the workings of the association at that place. Over fifty names were put on the membership list that night and others have joined since.

The following officers were elected: President, E. J. Arnold; Secretary and Treasurer G, A. Goll; Directors, Herman Priebe, John Miller, J. E. Stille, John Bock and C. A. Arnold.

Wm. Bachman has been engaged as shipping manager.

Members and friends of the association are hoping for better markets through co-operative shipping. Members get the actual net Chciago price, minus a small sum per car to defray the actual working expenses of the association.

Stock for shipment should be listed at least four days before shipping date to allow ample time for securing cars, etc. Mr. Bachman will be ready to make initial shipment Saturday, November 8th. List your stock at once with him. Telephone 3118.

Every livestock farmer within hauling distance of Klemme is invited to join and help make this venture as great a success as our co-operative creamery. Your names may be handed to the secretary, Mr. Goll, or to any of the officers.

The membership fee is $1.00. Non members are allowed to ship, in which case the $1.00 fee will be deducted from the proceeds of their first shipment, making them full members.

$148,000,000 PAY DAY NOV. 15; GET BUSY

SAVINGS CHALK-TALK BY UNCLE SAM

PUT LIBERTY BOND INTEREST IN U. S. SAVINGS SECURITIES

On November 15 Uncle Sam Will Pay Out $148,517,248; Keep Dollars Working.

The United States government will have one of its biggest pay days on November 15, when Liberty bond interest to the amount of $148,517,248 will be available for the wise investors who bought Liberty bonds to reinvest their interest in War Savings stamps and Treasury Savings certificates of $100 and $1,000 denominations, which virtually are "baby bonds."

The wise person will not join in the orgy of spending which now seems to be going on in all sections of the country. The wise spender is the wise saver. Keep your dollars growing. A dollar now in purchasing power is not worth more than 50 cents as compared with five years ago. That dollar, in due season, will go back to the one hundred cents. So if a dollar is invested now, it will be worth approximately twice as much when the War Savings stamps or the Treasury Savings certificates mature. It is wisdom for every one to keep their income increasing until money is worth more. You can do that by re-investing your Liberty bond interest on November 15 in War Savings stamps and Treasury Savings certificates, which pay 4 per cent interest compounded quarterly.

All you have to do is to take your Liberty bond coupons to any post office and almost any bank and exchange them for War Savings stamps, which are nondepreciable and nonfluctuating. In case you ever need the money, you always can cash them at any post office on ten days' notice. Each purchaser of War Savings stamps gains sure profit and insurance for the future. The government gains some money and assures and stabilizes its financial safety and prosperity by assuring the financial future of its citizens.

Uncle Sam has another pay day on December 15 when $143,533,376.65 will be available for re-investment.

Don't forget these dates. Go to a post office or bank and put your Liberty bond coupons in War Savings stamps.

PLANTS PAY TO AID W. S. S.

Industrial Concerns Boost U. S. Savings Societies—Timekeepers as Secretaries.

The campaign to organize government Savings societies in all the industrial plants of the Seventh district is being pushed with vigor. By means of posters, which are being placed on bulletin boards and in other conspicuous parts of the plants, the worker is impressed with the fact that he is one of the vital factors depended upon to reduce the high cost of living. The cartoon posters visualize to him just what he can do to stop waste and reduce the cost of living. "Don't buy what you don't need" is one of the chief points brought home to the worker in these plants as elsewhere. "Work, Save and Succeed" (W. S. S.) is another of the new slogans of the government.

Many of the plants have taken a live interest in the campaign to get the workers to spend judiciously, save regularly and invest their savings in safe securities—War Savings stamps and the new Treasury Savings certificates of $100 and $1,000, which are virtually "baby bonds."

In a number of plants a man paid by the concern itself is made the government representative. All of his time is devoted to the work of organizing Savings societies. The timekeeper in each department is appointed secretary of a society and this timekeeper is a constant reminder to his fellow workers of the time to invest in the government securities.

KEEP MANURE UNDER COVER

Amount of Moisture in Pile Can Be Regulated Much Without Danger of Leaching.

The advantage of keeping manure under cover, whether piled on the ground or in pit, is that the amount of moisture in the pile can be artificially regulated and with less danger of leaching than if it lies on the ground. In the open pit, surplus of moisture can not result in loss through leaching, but unless water or liquid manure is pumped frequently over the pile it will fire fang through heating. With both leaching and heating guarded against, manure can be kept for considerable periods without serious deterioration in fertility. However, it is always best to get manure onto the fields and under the surface as soon as practical. The best place for manure to rot is in the soil.

No Use in Delaying.

DEMOBILIZING THE SERVICE FLAG

Next Sunday, November 9th, is the Sunday preceding the anniversary of the signing of the armistice a year ago, the beginning of the end of the world war. In commemoration of this event and in honor of the boys from Klemme and vicinity who were in the ranks of our army or in the naval service, this day will be observed at the Methodist Episcopal church by a special service at 10:00 a. m. Sunday.

The service flag of the church which has hung in a place of honor through these months will be "demobilized" as the forces of the nation have been, the men whose stars are emblazoned upon it having passed back into civil life.

But the service is not alone for these, but for all the boys who wore the khaki or blue. These are cordially invited to attend (in uniform, if convenient), and seats will be reserved for them. Any surviving veterans of the Civil War, the men of the Spanish-American war, Red Cross workers and members of patriotic organizations are also invited. Finally, the families and friends of the soldiers and sailors and the public generally are invited to be present and will be sincerely welcomed. The pastor, Dr. A. E. Buriff, will speak on "The Victories of Peace."

BETTER SCHOOLS

Almost thirty years ago, when Klemme had a population of less than 100 people, this Independent School District was formed. The school tax was quite a load for a few years, but Klemme grew and today has 600 people and in a few years more will have 1,000 inhabitants at which time they will have taxable property enough and children enough to establish and maintain as good a school system as can be found anywhere in the state.

Because of this fact many of our townspeople voted against consolidation thinking it would be best to run our own school and let the farmers look out for themselves.

The Country School Problem is harder to solve, altho they voted down consolidation strong in the country, still the Rural People are all agreed that the one room country school of today is inadequate and almost a failure.

In order to improve the Country School it is first necessary to get more pupils together so that the work can be divided between at least three teachers, then each class can have more time for recitation. And right here enters the problem of transportation; you cannot enlarge your country school in any way without some form of transportation.

You have in each township 70 to 90 pupils attending the nine schools with so few pupils you could hardly manage to keep up with the state requirements for a fully equipped Central School. It would require six rigs to haul the children, and then think of your roads, the good roads lead to town, but scarcely ever to the center of a township. If you conducted a Good School accredited by the state in the center of your township, it would be more expense per pupil and would be more tax per quarter section than Klemme's plan for consolidation.

The best plan for improving the Rural Schools, outside of consolidation, is to conduct three schools in a group, have two teams to haul the children from one school house to another. In one school your teacher would teach the 1st, 2nd and 3rd grades, in another school the 4th, 5th and 6th grades and in the last school the 7th and 8th grades. This plan gives 25 minutes for each recitation where now you have only from 8 to 10 minutes, which means that each child would have twice as good a chance to advance as under the Present system. It would not cost much to try this plan. No new School Houses are required, no extra teachers are needed, only just the expense of running the two teams. And if you did not like it you could always go back to the old. This three school plan has ben tried out in a number of places and works well.—Contributed.

BASKET SOCIAL

There will be a basket social and program given at the [illegible] School two miles north of Klemme on Friday evening, November 14th. Everybody cordially invited to attend. Ladies please bring baskets.

ARMISTICE DAY DRIVE ON H. C. L. START TO SAVE

W. S. S. Organization Urges Celebration of Nov. 11 by Dealing Blow to Extravagance.

"Armistice Day" is November 11.

Just one year ago the American people celebrated the end of the world war. This year they have a chance to celebrate again. The War Savings organization of the Seventh District has formulated plans to start a campaign on the anniversary of the cessation of hostilities by urging the people to enlist in a new war on the high cost of living—to start to save on that day, if you have not already done so, and to set forth on November 11 with a determination to buy only what is necessary, to help stop extravagance, curtail waste and invest, at least in part, the money thus saved in government securities.

The "Armistice Day" plans of the War Savings organization include:

"Armistice Day" sermons in every pulpit in the five states of the Seventh District, urging judicious spending, regular saving and investment in government securities.

"Armistice Day" proclamations by the governors of the five states and the mayors of the principal cities of the Seventh District.

Resolutions to be passed by labor organizations and fraternal orders.

"Armistice Day" exercises in all the schools. Every child to be asked to buy at least one Thrift Stamp.

"Armistice Day" pamphlets, showing why every one should join in helping bring down high cost of living by enlisting in the government's campaign on November 11, will be put in the hands of every family in the district. The War Savings organization points out that there could be no better occasion than the anniversary of the end of the war for the people to reflect their joy and thanks by enlisting in the new war—this time on the high cost of living.

William Mather Lewis, director of the Savings Division of the Treasury Department, recently made the following comment on the fight against high prices:

"Waste is the American weakness and waste is a contributing cause to the present high prices. The average American citizen must get in the habit of taking a personal inventory; of studying the leaks in his own financial system; of policing his own pocketbook before the high cost situation will be materially bettered.

"The profiteer's slogan is 'Easy money.' The profiteer fattens today because easy money is universal in America, because extravagance is habitual, because men are content to deal in glittering generalities about the situation and stubbornly unwilling to face the matter personally."

Armistice Day gives everyone the opportunity to "face the situation personally" by enlisting in the savings campaign of the government. Among the slogans suggested for this campaign are:

Work, Save, Succeed (W. S. S.)
Buy only what you need.
Put Liberty Bond interest in W. S. S.
Start Saving Armistice Day.
Police your own pocketbook; save.

November 15 is one of the biggest of the Liberty Bond interest paydays. Then Uncle Sam will pay out to the investors in that class of government security a total of more than $148,000,000 in interest. On that date you have a chance to "TURN YOUR INTEREST INTO PRINCIPAL" by reinvesting it in War Savings Stamps or the new Treasury Savings Certificates of $100 and $1,000 denominations.

On Armistice Day complete the ranks of the national army mobilized to fight the high cost of living to a finish.

START SAVING ARMISTICE DAY

WHAT MONEY IS NEEDED FOR.

In an address to the New York and New England Brick Manufacturers company, Allan Beals declared that the United States needs 1,300,000 homes, 450,000 factories, 5,000 schools, 55,000 apartment houses, 20,000 theaters, 120 freight terminals and 14,000 railroad stations and freight sheds. Capital is needed for these projects and the projects, if financed, would go far toward solving not only the housing, but the employment and wage problems of the country. This capital can be produced only by the people of the United States. It can be most readily and quickly produced through thrift, saving and investment in government securities.

WOMAN'S NERVES MADE STRONG

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Winona, Minn.—"I suffered for more than a year from nervousness, and was so bad I could not rest at night—would lie awake and get so nervous I would have to get up and walk around and in the morning would be all tired out. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and thought I would try it. My nervousness soon left me. I sleep well and feel fine in the morning and able to do my work. I gladly recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to make weak nerves strong."—Mrs. ALBERT SULTZE, 603 Olmstead St., Winona, Minn.

How often do we hear the expression among women, "I am so nervous, I cannot sleep," or "it seems as though I should fly." Such women should profit by Mrs. Sultze's experience and give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such serious conditions as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, dizziness, and nervous prostration of women, and is now considered the standard remedy for such ailments.

BELCHING

Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Let EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy, give you quick relief from disgusting belching, food-repeating, indigestion, bloated, gassy stomach, dyspepsia, heartburn and other stomach miseries. They are all caused by Acid-Stomach from which about nine people out of ten suffer in one way or another. One writes as follows: "Before I used EATONIC, I could not eat a bite without belching it right up, sour and bitter. I have not had a bit of trouble since the first tablet."

Millions are victims of Acid-Stomach without knowing it. They are weak and ailing, have poor digestion, bodies improperly nourished although they may eat heartily. Grave disorders are likely to follow if an acid-stomach is neglected. Cirrhosis of the liver, intestinal congestion, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach—these are only a few of the many ailments often caused by Acid-Stomach.

A sufferer from Catarrh of the stomach of 11 years standing writes: "I had catarrh of the stomach for 11 long years and I never found anything to do me any good—just temporary relief—until I used EATONIC. It is a wonderful remedy and I do not want to be without it."

If you are not feeling quite right—lack energy and enthusiasm and don't know just where to locate the trouble—try EATONIC and see how much better you will feel in every way.

Dare He Confide in Anyone? Carlyle Takes a Chance.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive.

He glanced about warily, lowering his voice until it became a hoarse whisper.

"Three years, mate, and most of that time has been hell. I haven't even been ashore, but once, and that was on an island. These fellows don't put any trust in my kind, nor give them any chance to cut and run. Once in awhile a lad does get away, but most of them are caught; and those that are sure get their punishment. They never try it again. I've seen them staked out on the sand and left to die; that ain't no nice thing to remember."

"But how did you come into it?"

"Like most of the rest. I was second mate of the Ranger, a Glasgow brig. These fellows overhauled us at daybreak about a hundred miles off the east end of Cuba. Our skipper was Scotch, and he put up some fight, but it wasn't any use. There was only three of us left alive when the pirates came aboard. One of these died two days later, and another was washed overboard and drowned down in the Gulf. I am all that is left of the Ranger."

"You saved your life by taking on?"

"Sanchez had the two of us, who were able to stand, back in his cabin. He put it to us straight. He said it was up to us whether we signed up or walked the plank; and he didn't appear to care a damn which we chose."

"And you say others of this crew have been obtained in the same manner?" I questioned, deeply interested, and perceiving in this a ray of hope.

"Not exactly—no, I wouldn't precisely say that. It's true, perhaps, that most of the Britishers were forced to join in about the same way I was,

He Glanced About Warily.

and there may be a Scandinavian or two, with a few Dutch, to be counted in that list; but the most are pirates from choice. It's their trade, and they like it. Sanchez only aims to keep hold of a few good men, because he has got to have sailors; but most of his crew are nothing but plain cutthroats. Indians and half-breeds, niggers, creoles, Portuguese, Spanish, and every mongrel you ever heard of. Sanchez himself is half French. The hellhound who kicked you is a Portuguese, and LeVere is more nigger than anything else. I'll bet there is a hundred rats on board this Namur right now who'd cut your throat for a sovereign, and never so much as think of it again."

"A hundred? Is there that many aboard?"

"A hundred an' thirty all told. Most o' 'em bunk amidships. They're not sailormen, but just cut-throats, an' sea wolves. Yer ought ter see 'em swarm out on deck, like hungry rats, when thar's a fight comin'. It's all they're good fer."

"Watkins," I said soberly, after a pause during which he spat on the dirty deck to thus better express his feelings, "do you mean to say that in three years you've had no chance to escape? No opportunity to get away?"

"Not a chance, mate; no more will you. I know what yer thinkin' 'bout. I had them notions too when I fust come aboard—gettin' all the decent sort tergether, and takin' the vessel. 'Twon't work; thar ain't 'nough who wud risk it, and if thar wus, yer couldn't get 'em tergether. Sanchez is too damn smart fer thet. Every damn rat is a spy. I ain't hed no such talk as this afore in six months, Gates; the last time cost me twenty lashes at the mast-butt. What'd yer have in yer mind, mate?"

"Only this, Watkins. I've got to do something, and believe I can trust you—it's not my life I'm thinking about, but that of a woman."

"A woman! Not the one brought aboard last night?"

"Exactly; now listen—I'm going to tell you my story, and ask your help. My name is not Gates, and I am not the man Mendez brought aboard drunk, and who was thrown over the rail by LeVere. That fellow was drowned. I am Geoffry Carlyle, an English skipper."

Thereupon I told him my story in detail. Then I said:

"I have no plan; to become a member of the crew was my only thought. But I must act, if at all, before the captain recovers. He would recognize me at sight. You will aid, advise me?"

"That is easier to ask than answer, mate," he admitted finally. "I am an English seaman, and will do my duty, but, so far as I can see, there is no plan we can make. It is God who will save the girl, if she is to be saved. He may use us to that end, but it is wholly beyond our power to accomplish it alone. The only thing I can do is to sound out the men aboard, and learn just what we can expect of them if any opportunity to act comes. There are not more than a dozen at most to be relied upon. Play your part, and keep quiet. If you can let her know of your presence aboard it might be best—for if she saw you suddenly, unprepared, she might say or do something to betray you. There are other reasons why it may be best for her to know she is not entirely deserted."

He leaned over, motioning me toward him, until his lips were at my ear.

"It may not prove as hopeless as it appears now," he whispered confidentially. "I helped carry Sanchez to his stateroom, and washed and dressed his wound. There is no surgeon aboard. He has a bad cut, and is very weak from loss of blood. The question of our success hinges on Pedro Estada. This is a chance he has long been waiting for. The only question is, has he the nerve to act. I doubt if he has alone, but LeVere is with him, and that half-breed would cut the throat of his best friend. You understand?—the death of Sanchez would make Estada chief."

"But," I interposed, "in that case what would the crew do?"

"Accept Estada, no doubt; at least the cut-throats would be with him, for he is of their sort. But Sanchez's death would save you from discovery, and," his voice still lower, so that I barely distinguished the words, "in the confusion aboard, if we were ready, the Namur might be so disabled as to compel them to run her ashore for repairs. That would give you a chance. If once we reach Porto Grande there is no hope."

A marling-spike pounded on the scuttle, and Haines' voice roared down.

"Port watch! Hustle out, bullies!"

CHAPTER XIII.

I Accept a Proposal.

I went on deck with the watch, and mingled with them forward. A Portuguese boatswain set me at polishing the gun mounted on the forecastle. I was busily at work on this bit of ordnance, when Estada came on deck for a moment. The fellow chanced to observe me.

"You must be a pretty tough bird, Gates," he said roughly, "or I would have killed you last night—I had the mind to."

Something about his voice and manner led me to feel that, in spite of his roughness, he was not in bad humor.

"That would have been a mistake, sir," I answered, straightening up, rag in hand, "for it would have cost you a good seaman. Three years ago I was skipper on my own vessel. The Bombay Castle, London to Hongkong; I wrecked her off Cape Mendez in a fog. I was drunk below, and it cost me my ticket."

"You know West Indian waters?"

"Slightly; I made two voyages to Panama, and one to Havana."

"And speak Spanish?"

"A little bit, sir, as you see; I learn languages easily."

He stared straight into my face, but without uttering another word, turned on his heel and went below. I had finished my labor on the carronade, and was fastening down securely the tarpaulin, when a thin, stoop-shouldered fellow, with a hang-dog face crept up the ladder to the poop, and shuffled over to LeVere.

"Mister LeVere, sir."

"Well, what is it, Gunsaules?"

"Senor Estada, sir; he wishes to see a sailor named Gates in the cabin."

"Who? Gates? Oh, yes, the new man. He swept his eyes about, until

I Waited for the Man to Speak.

he saw me. "Follow the steward below; Senor Estada wishes to see you—go just as you are."

"Very good, sir."

The fellow led me away. There was no one in the main cabin. I followed the beckoning steward, who rapped with his knuckles on one of the side doors. Estada's voice answered.

I stepped inside, doubtful enough of what all this might mean, yet quite prepared to accept of any chance it might offer. Estada sat upright in the chair gazing straight at me, his own face clearly revealed in the light from the open port. His face was swarthy, long and thin, with hard, set lips under a long, intensely black mustache, his cheeks strangely crisscrossed by lines. The nose was large, distinctively Roman, yielding him a hawklike appearance, but it was his eyes which fascinated me. They were dark and deeply set, absolute wells of cruelty. I had never before seen such eyes in the face of a human being; they were beastly, devilish; I could feel my blood chill as I looked into their depths, yet I held myself erect and waited for the man to speak. Then his lips curled in what was meant to be a smile. He arose, stepped quietly to the door and glanced out, returning apparently satisfied.

"I don't trust that steward," he said, "nor, as a matter of fact, anyone else wholly." He paused and stared at me, then added: "I've never had any faith in your race, Gates, but am inclined to use you. Every Englishman I ever knew was a liar and a sneaking poltroon. I was brought up to hate the race and always have. I can't say that I like you any better than the others. I don't, for the matter of that. But just now you can be useful to me if you are of that mind. This is a business proposition, and it makes no odds if we hate each other, so the end is gained. How does that sound?"

"Not altogether bad," I admitted. "I have been in some games of chance before."

"I thought as much," eagerly, "and money has the same chink however it be earned. You could use some?"

Carlyle sees a chance to carry through his wild plan to save Dorothy and himself, but there are many pitfalls in the way. The chance is a desperate one. Shall he take it? Carlyle can see but one answer to the question.

HOME TOWN HELPS

PLAN WELL BEFORE BUILDING

Failure to Do That Is the Most Frequent Cause for Investment Being a Failure.

Nothing gives a keener zest to thrift than saving to own a home. Our thrifty foreign-born citizens, as well as many of our native-born, are home owners. The home-owning spirit is commendable. A city of home owners is a stable city. A city of renters is apt to be shifting and transient.

If you lose money in owning a home it is usually attributable to one of the following causes:

"You invest in a home too expensive for your income.

"You pay more for it than its location and cost of construction justify, letting the other fellow gobble the profits while you accept the loss.

"You are a poor judge of location values and get into a location where there is little or no demand for property or where values are decreasing.

"You construct a home devoid of conveniences, grotesque in appearance, or out of the ordinary and of a type that few people would desire.

"You neglect little essentials, such as closet room, sunlight, location of stairways and other things. While you may think it matters little, nine other persons out of ten will object to them. Think of building a home in a city where sunshine is pleasant eleven months of the year and then of placing the stairway to the south, cutting out all the sunshine, while the windows are placed at the north. Such is sometimes done. The owner then will wonder why so few desire to buy or rent it. The reason should be clear."—From "Ten Lessons in Thrift," by Thomas E. Sanders.

HAVE EYE TO CITY'S FUTURE

Intelligent Building Plans Mean Much to Its Development and Proper Growth.

Slums are not the product of a city's inevitability. They are the product of its stupidity, of its indifference, lack of perception and thought. A great mass of people cannot live together as four families might live at a country crossroads. Their interdependence demands an assumption of responsibility by the people who can do things for the people who cannot.

A real home will be one in which there is a recognition of responsibility by the people who might do things for the people who cannot.

Life has a right to comfort and material competence; it has a right to color and decoration; it has a right to find itself interesting. It cannot proceed by the suppression of everything that is alluring and by failure to suppress what is squalid.

A home fit for ideal citizens will have healthy allure and beauty, cleanliness, convenience and comfort, clean air, clean streets, decent street cars, no slums, plenty of amusements.

Roads and Trees.

The American Forestry association is doing good service in linking the causes of roads and forestation. It has already given advice and aid in setting out shade trees along the highway in scores of cities and towns throughout the country. The trees are intended to be memorials of our soldiers who died in France and to their comrades who have come home bearing victory.

Something more is involved than a sentiment. The best friend of a road, as of the traveler, is a shade tree. Extremes of temperature, such as come on a blazing summer day with a downpour of cooling rain, heave and crack the unshaded roadbed, opening it to the ultimate ravages of frost and thaw. The shaded road lasts longer and brings a double comfort to the traveler. The war has taught us what this may mean, financially and otherwise. Before 1914, according to Robert Sterling Yard's "Book of National Parks," Americans spent $286,000,000 annually in foreign travel, mainly in Europe. For five years travel has been largely confined to the United States. The country is richer by a billion dollars or more, and richer also in self-knowledge.—Exchange.

The Study of Real Estate.

Real estate is a profession covering many branches of honorable endeavor. Profound study and ethical training are as mandatory as the practical experience gained through office work or personal contact with buyer and seller. I eagerly look forward to an early, concentrated, nation-wide movement by those leading realtors who, realizing the potential benefits arising through intelligent instruction by competent educators in our schools and colleges, will see to it that the study of real estate is made a part of their curriculum. The higher we place the plane of our chosen profession the higher will become the personnel of those engaged in it.—Real Estate Bulletin.

These clean-limbed boys of our own generation, their devotion, their sacrifice, along with the devotion and sacrifice of those earlier souls, challenge us to some worthy deed in the name of the University.'

A committee was appointed at the following annual meting of the alumni to have general charge of the organization of a campaign to carry out the idea thus stated by President Jessup. This committee consists of Fred W. Sargent of Des Moines, president of the University of Iowa Association chairman; W. H. Bremner of Minneapolis, Rush C. Butler of Chicago, Charles M. Dutcher of Iowa City, W. O. Finkbine of Des Moines, J. M. Grimm of Cedar Rapids, Carl Kuehnle of Denison, Joe R. Lane of Davenport, and James B. Weaver of Des Moines. D. D. Murphy, President of the State Board of Education and Mrs. J. L. Scheuerman of Des Moines in addition to the committee make up the list of trustees of the Iowa Memorial Union, a corporation formed to carry on the campaign for $1,000,000.

As soon as the plans for the Memorial Union campaign were announced, strong sympathy and support were manifested by alumni. Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, who is one of the most prominent graduates of the University, wrote to Mr. Sargent that he heartily approved the undertaking, and would do all he could to co-operate in making it a success.

"It seems to me particularly fitting," he wrote, "that the building should be of such a nature that while always preserving its character as a memorial to the gallant sons of Iowa, it should play a practical part in the scheme of University life. For such a building I am sure the students, the alumni and the public of the State will be glad to contribute the funds. The sum of $1,000,000 is not a large one to ask for such a splendid purpose."

Dr. M. H. Thielen, of Grundy Center, wrote:

"There are many loyal sons and daughters of Old Iowa in Grundy county, and they will not be found wanting.'

O. D. Longstreth, who has become campaign chairman for Little Rock, Arkansas, wrote:

"I think the idea a good one. It surely should be practical."

The Greater Des Moines Committee formally recorded itself in approval of the Memorial Union campaign, declaring it was a project of public benefit; and urged its members to support it in whatever way they could. The Commercial Club of Ottumwa through its Board of Directors has expressed commendation of the movement.

Daily there are received at campaign headquarters at Old Capitol letters from graduates and former students expressing hearty accord with the patriotic purpose of the campaign and offering to help in the work.

The University of Iowa, which is compiling a war record of its students, faculty and graduates, asked Mrs. Stephens, who is one of the two surviving members of the class of 1858, what she had done. The foregoing was her answer. Because of her intense patriotism, Mrs. Stephens is among those most keenly interested in the campaign of the Iowa Memorial Union to raise $1,000,000 by November 29 to erect on the State University campus a memorial building in honor of the sons and daughters of the University who served in America's wars. A war worker herself, she believes there should be a fitting memorial to those who gave themselves to their country's cause.

In spite of her advanced years, Mrs. Stephens seldoms misses attending the commencement exercises of the University. In 1918 she won a silver loving cup because her class showed the highest percentage of attendance of living members. Her presence at the commencement scored 50 per cent for her class.

WOMEN WORK FOR MEMORIAL.

Two S. U. I. Graduates Made Members of Campaign Committee.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Two prominent women graduates of the University of Iowa are taking an active part in the campaign of the Iowa Memorial Union to raise this month one million dollars for a memorial building to the sons and daughters of the University who served in the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World War. Mrs. J. L. Sheuerman of Des Moines and Mrs. Marguerite Moore White of Traer have become members of the State Campaign Committee which is in charge of the work. (They are keenly interested because of the patriotic character of the campaign and the value of a students' social center in the life of the State University.)

S. U. I. HOME COMING BIGGEST IN HISTORY

"Kick-Off" for Million Dollar Campaign of Iowa Memorial Union

"OLD GRADS" BY HUNDREDS

All Enthusiastic for Plan for Memorial to University's Soldiers of Three Wars.

Iowa City, Iowa.—By train, by automobile and even by airplane, hundreds of loyal graduates and former students of the University of Iowa will come here this week for Homecoming, on Friday and Saturday. This year Homecoming will be the biggest in the entire history of the State University. It is expected that on Saturday, the day of the annual Iowa-Ames football game, there will be several thousand "old grads" here for the great event. At the annual Homecoming dinner Friday night there will be about 1,000 in attendance.

Especial interest is being shown in Homecoming this year because it will be the "kick-off" for the million dollar campaign which graduates and former students are conducting to raise funds for a memorial building to the sons and daughters of the State University who served in the Civil War, the Spanish-American War and the World War. The intensive campaign will open on Saturday, November 22. The Homecoming dinner will be devoted entirely to a discussion of the campaign plans and the value of the memorial building, which is to take the form of a Students' Union—a clubhouse and home for students, faculty and graduates, in which will be preserved for all time the war records of those who fought for America in the three wars. At that time it is expected, according to Fred Sargent of Des Moines, who is chairman of the Iowa Memorial Union, that announcement can be made of big preliminary gifts which will start the campaign well on its way toward the goal.

For several weeks committees representing the University and townspeople of this city have been working in preparation for the big event. Hotel accommodations have been reserved and rooms have been obtained to care for the hundreds of guests who will be here. Special arrangements have been made to serve meals to those whom the hotels and restaurants here can not accommodate. There will be a special landing field for airplanes, and parking space for automobiles, with a carefully worked-out checking arrangement which will offer security against removal of cars by mistake or theft. University buildings, stores and public buildings and residences in the city will be decorated, and there will be several bands to add to the festivity of the occasion. Homecomers will be met at trains by special reception committee, which will see that they obtain lodging places if they have not already reserved them.

W. O. Finkbine, one of the best-known of the older graduates, is the head of a committee of the Iowa Memorial Union which has had charge of sending special invitations to men and women graduates to come to this year's Homecoming. He has been in touch with alumni in all parts of the country, and reports particular enthusiasm for the event this year because of the memorial campaign.

"Our organization is all ready for the campaign," said Mr. Sargent today. "In each Congressional district, each county of the State and in large cities all over the country where Iowa men and women have gone to live, we have loyal and enthusiastic graduates of old Iowa, formed into campaign committees, instructed in their duties and all set to take up the work of collecting the funds which will pay for the Iowa Memorial Union. The task is a huge one. But 'Iowa Fights,' and fights hard, as our athletic records and war records all prove. I am confident the difficulties will only spur our workers on to harder effort to make this campaign the splendid success it should be, and that the evening of November 29 will find us with pledges for more than the amount we have set as the objctive of our campaign.

"Our purpose is a fine and noble one, and each man and woman engaged in promoting this cause has taken up the work with the high patriotic spirit and hearty loyalty to the University of Iowa. We seek to pay to the brave men and women of Iowa who served America so gallantly the tribute which is due their patriotism. We seek to build for them a memorial for all the years, which will testify to their sacrifices for home and country, and will inspire future generations to equally fine Americanism. We seek to give to our Alma Mater a building which will serve her well, and in serving her well promote the interests of the State of Iowa and our country. This is a cause which may well enlist every graduate's sympathy and support and bring his dollars into the memorial fund. No undertaking could be more worthy or more honorable for the State University and for Iowa. Every participant in it will have a right to feel personal satisfaction and pride in its success."

FROM FOOT BALL TO BATTLE FRONT

University of Iowa Men and Women Prove Heroism In Great War

A MEMORIAL THEIR DUE

Iowa Memorial Union to Raise $1,000,000 for Building in Their Honor at Iowa City.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Every person who has attended a football game at Iowa Field has heard the famous fighting cheer. This is a story of how the sons of the University of Iowa carried that fighting spirit with them when they went abroad in America's cause to help make the world safe for democracy.

On a cold gray day in November, 1918, Sergeant Frank Grubb, who only two years before had been a student at Old Gold, was found dead on a battlefield "somewhere in France." He lay near a German machine gun nest, in which were two of the enemy, dead. In his hands was gripped a crumpled scrap of paper, on which he had managed to write before he died

"They got me, but I got two of them."

Lieutenant William Paul Hyman was a senior in the University Law School when the United States entered the war. He enlisted, went to Fort Snelling for training, and soon was commisisoned. He had reached the other side by November, 1917.

In July, 1918, after severe fighting in the Marne campaign, Lieutenant Hyman was on duty in the front line. Word came to him that one member of his company was missing. This man, a friend, lay wounded out behind some shrubbery, in the direct line of enemy fire. Lieutenant Hyman did not hesitate. He went out to bring back his friend or die in the attempt. He died under a rain of German bullets.

"This act brings to one the words of the Scripture, 'Greater love hath no man than this, that he lay down his life for his friends,'" wrote Senator Kenyon, in sending word of the heroism to Hyman's parents.

A Distinguished Service Medal was awarded to Hyman for his heroism.

Ray A. Potter of Tipton enlisted at Ottawa, Canada, in June, 1915. He served as a sergeant-major in the machine gun corps of the second contingent of the Canadian Expeditionary Forces through the third battle of Ypres, the Somme campaign and the Vimy Ridge fighting, until he was shot through the lung with a piece of shell. He lay three months in French hospitals and two months in hospitals in England, until he was discharged from the army as unfit for further fighting because of this wound. For more than three years he was in active service. He went over the top fourteen times.

When he was discharged from the Canadian forces, he returned to this country and entered the Y. M. C. A. army service as secretary. He was in that service when the armistice was signed.

Lowell Lynn Forbes of Jefferson enlisted in the infantry on September 5, 1917. He was soon promoted, went through an officers' training school and by August of the following year was in service in France. On October 14, 1918, he, as Second Lieutenant, was ordered to occupy, with his platoon of 32 men and 17 French poilus, a ruined village between the Franco-American and German lines. He occupied the village, but was compelled to withdraw before superior forces of the enemy. Occupying that village and retiring involved desperate hand-to-hand fighting, in which he personally encountered five Germans in an old trench. He killed four and took the fifth one prisoner, incidentally saving the life of a French sergeant. A few minutes later he encountered two more of the enemy, killed one and made the second a prisoner. He withdrew his men through a heavy artillery barrage and got them safely into their own lines without losing one of his command

For this exploit the French Government gave him the Croix-de-Guerre with a silver star.

Homer Ireland Smith, of Clinton, was sent abroad in September, 1917, with the famous "Italian Detachment" of flyers. He didn't get to Italy, as did Captain La Guardia, a New York City Congressman, but was held in England for training for night flying. He spent months in the extremely dangerous work of "Zepp strafing" and "Gotha chasing" to protect London and the East Coast of England and Scotland against the Hun air raiders.

Henry Morrow of Iowa City became Captain in the Medical Corps. He was attached to the Base Hospital Center at Beaune, where there were nearly 40,000 beds. He and Captain C. W. Harned, also of Iowa, established a maxillo-facial department for the reconstruction of injured parts of the head, face and neck of soldiers. He only dentist in the center who could do jaw-fracture work. Captain Morrow during the Argonne battle was frequently on active duty for days at a stretch. He was several times cited for the excellence of his work by the sector supervisors. These are typical instances of the way in which the sons of Iowa fought for America's cause. They were selected at random from the war records of the State University. There were more than 2,000 graduates, students and members of the faculty of Old Gold who saw service abroad. Fully 1,000 of that number were commissioned officers in various branches of the country's military establishment.

And then there were the nurses. Fifty of them went from the University—fifty splendid women who gave themselves heart and soul to the work of nursing back to health wounded American lads, or easing their dying moments. For such work as theirs, says Miss Julia C. Stimson, who headed the army nursing service abroad, "no praise would be great enough. It was not at all uncommon for nurses to work fourteen to eighteen hours a day for weeks at a time."

And the ambulance drivers—25 of them went from the University; and some of them returned with decorations from this and foreign governments for their heroic work. And the men in the Y. M. C. A. service, the Red Cross work and other philanthropic and relief work—many of them from the University fought for America just as devotedly as the men behind the guns.

The graduates of Old Gold have determined to honor those who served and to perpetuate the magnificent spirit of Americanism in which they served. That is the purpose of the campaign of the Iowa Memorial Union, which is seeking to raise $1,000,000 this month to erect a memorial building at the University in honor of the sons and daughters of the University who served, not only in the World War, but in the Civil War and the Spanish-American War.

"Their spirit of loyalty and devotion was the finest expression of American patriotism," today said Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the Memorial Union. "The graduates and all those interested in the University are determined to see that it is recognized fittingly, and that the token of our affection shall be not only a beautiful memorial building erected in their honor, but one which shall embody and keep alive always the high ideals and splendid spirit in which they devoted themselves to their country. We plan to build a Students' Union. It will be a memorial building, preserving for posterity the war records of the University's soldiers and war workers. It will be also a building with another valuable field of influence for good—a social center for the students of both sexes, a home for them with all the broadening influences of healthy recreational facilities, devoted to the building up of big, broad-gauge men and women.

"For this noble purpose we ask the alumni, the students and former students of the University among the general public to contribute $1,000,000. That sum, surely, is not too large to give in recognition of what Iowa's sons and daughters did for America and to help create future generations of Americans worthy of the splendid deeds of Iowa's soldiers in the three great wars."

BUSINESS MEN APPROVE.

Support Million Dollar Campaign of Iowa Memorial Union.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Not only graduates and former students of the University of Iowa, but also the business men of the State, are giving their support to the million dollar campaign for a memorial building at the State University in honor of the heroes of America's war. Fred W. Sargent, chairman of the Iowa Memorial Union which is in charge of the movement, announced today that several representative commercial bodies in the State had formally gone on record in approval of the campaign and had urged their members to do all they could to further it.

"These intelligent and far-seeing business men of our State," said he, "recognize that the Memorial Union will serve a high patriotic purpose in honoring our war heroes. More than that, it will add to the State University a building of great practical value which will help to produce bigger, broader men and women for the life of our State each year. A social center such as the Union will be will have facilities for the mental and spiritual development of students which must make them better and more valuable citizens. This aspect of our undertaking has appealed strongly to our representative business men, even when they are not themsleves graduates of the University of Iowa."

Among the commercial bodies which have endorsed the campaign are the Greater Des Moines Committee, the Chamber of Commerce of Des Moines and the Commercial Club of Ottumwa.

OLD, BUT HE FOUGHT.

S. U. I. Graduate of 1900 in Army of Occupation.

George D. Sailor, graduate of the College of Law in 1900, writes from Sayre, Oklahoma, as follows:

"I heartily endorse your fine project. I have quite recently returned from a trip 'over there,' having enlisted in August, 1918, with the Q. M. C. I served in Germany for over eight months, being attached to the Depot Quartermasters, Third Army, A. F. in G. I was a sergeant in charge of one of the large warehouses in Coblenz, Germany. I was one of the oldest of the soldiers. With two exceptions I was the oldest man in the Army of Occupation, so far as I can learn. I am 51 years old."

BEHIND FRONT AT SAINT MIHIEL

Major Lambert, Late of Engineers. Back at University of Iowa

TELLS OF WAR WORK

Now Interested In. Million Dollar Campaign of Iowa Memorial Union for Student Soldiers.

Iowa City, Iowa.—Life at the front behind the great St. Mihiel salient was "tres interessant," take it from Major Byron James Lambert of the Engineers, who in civil life is head of the Department of Structural Engineering in the University of Iowa. Back at his old occupation, Major Lambart is putting into the campaign this month of the Iowa Memorial Union to raise $1,000,00 for a memorial building at the State University to the heroes of the World War and the Civil and Spanish-American Wars who were students or graduates of the State University the same energy he put into building roads and bridges and railroads "over there."

Working almost continuously under enemy fire, with a gas mask always ready, building roads at night, repairing them where artillery fire had made them impassable, Major Lambert found army life anything but dull. He and his men had been in France nearly five months, he says, before his battalion was ordered in August of last year to move up to the front and join the First Army. On reporting to General Morrow, the chief engineer, they were distributed over a front extending from Belleville on the Moselle River to Verdun, on the Meuse. The battalion headquarters were with Company H at the Rattentout railhead, a small village on the east bank of the Meuse river 6 or 8 miles south of Verdun. Here were one battalion colored service troops, numbering about 1,000, and some white troops. Their station was in the Forest de Cinq Freres, an abandoned French camp consisting of tumble-down sheds and dugouts, which had to be disinfected by the Sanitary Corps thoroughly before being used. Even then the rats were not exterminated, but, says Major Lambert, "they were not particularly vicious, and caused little loss of sleep."

At this time preparations for the great American advance were being made, and the air was full of rumors concerning it. One of his jobs was to build a road from main highway to a large temporary hospital so motor ambulances could bring their burdens to it. The territory was under fire, and Boche planes were constantly circling overhead, but though the men at first got stiff necks from "sky gazing," they gradually lost interest in the enemy fiers, relying on their steel helmets for protection against bullets and shrapnel.

"About two or three days before the anticipated advance," says Major Lambert in relating his experiences of those days, "we were asked to supply a detail of fifty men to work at one of the nearby hospitals. We selected a platoon from the colored labor battalion and sent them out under a white lieutenant. They were told to dig water pipe trenches—some three feet wide, four or five feet deep, and a hundred yards or more in length. But when a second ditch was dug parallel to the first, and then a third and fourth and many more, suspicion became a certainty and the next day we had to send white men to continue the grave digging."

All the time there were troop movements going on from dusk until dawn. Stormy nights cars got stuck in the mud or would go off the road into the ditch, requiring arduous work to replace them or make a passable road again. Night raiding parties of the enemy were frequent. One night a party of Germans was found in the rear of one of Major Lambert's companies working at a quarry near the front lines in the forest of Sommedieu. Shots were exchanged, but there were no casualties among the engineers. Another night a spy was taken from a boat on a nearby canal.

"But this event was so common it caused no particular excitement," comments Major Lambert.

On September 9, just prior to the big American drive, he was called to the headquarters of the Field Army and placed in charge of the Bridge Department. On September 12 the artillery preparation for the advance began, lasting four hours, when the infantry went into action.

"From a high hill near Flirey," Major Lambert relates, "we could see the Germans retreating from the St. Mihiel salient on the roads north of Mont Sec, burning villages, ammunition dumps and other material as they retired. In front of us they were going so fast that our boys could hardly keep up. In a short time prisoners began to come back in squads and platoons and by companies. One bunch presented a marvellous spectacle preceded by one of our boys carrying a big switch and whistling Yankee Doodle, and followed by an other Sammie beating a tattoo on an old pan. And the Huns seemed pleased, too. Can you imagine our boys almost voluntarily submitting to such humiliation?"

Efforts are being made to raise $400,000 by sale of stock and $400,000 by bonds. The remainder of the $1,000,000 will be spent by the company leasing the hotel for equipment. Only $75,000 remains to be raised by the sale of stock.

The seventy-nine day tie-up of street car service was ended when Mayor McNutt of Davenport broke a tie vote and signed an agreement by which the C. D. M. railway is given a 7-cent fare with 4-cent fare for working men and the city agrees to stops its court fight on one-man car operation, now in the Iowa Supreme court.

Ben Walker, county agent, has done some excellent work in Hardin county along poultry culling and selection lines. Thirteen flocks have been culled with a total of 1543 birds handled 451 hens were culled as nonlayers, and 1192 as layers, 1543 hens laid 3566 eggs in ten days and the 1192 hens laid 3486 eggs in the same length of time. The 451 hens (nonlayers) laid only 80 eggs in 10 days, or an average of 8 eggs a day.

The third annual Marshalltown Swine and Corn congress, which will be held December 9, 10 and 11, promises to be a much larger exhibition than the two previous shows, twice as many exhibitors than a year ago being expected. The public has not been long in realizing the big field which the swine and corn congress fills in an agricultural way, and the exhibition provides something different from the displays usually seen at the county fair.

W. A. Daskam, of Howard county, is the champion bee man of northern Iowa. He has 160 stands of bees. His crop this year will total about 20,000 pounds of extracted honey—he sells no comb honey whatever—and at present market prices it will bring him over $4,000. He sells most of his crop to jobbers, receiving 20 cents or better per pound. Mr. Daskam has handled bees all his life and is an expert and enthusiast in bee culture.

During the past month the farm bureau of Centerville has shipped in and sold a car of peaches, a car of potatoes and a car of feed, at reduced prices, to farm bureau members and others. Peaches were selling at $3.75 and $4; the farm bureau car sold for $2.85 a bushel. Potatoes were bought on the track and had to be disposed of hurriedly, but many farm bureau members and others took advantage of the saving in price to lay in their winter supply.

A big crop of onions is being harvested in Mitchell county this season, especially around Osage and St. Ansgar. While they are a little under size the yields generally are good over the county. The Hume Miller fields are yielding from 450 to 500 bushels to the acre. The first sold brought $3.00 per hundred weight but prices now are about $2.50. Off of one small place near St. Ansgar $788.00 per acre was made and the expense of raising was less than $100 an acre.

More than 60 breeders from various sections of Carroll county met at Carroll recently to talk over matters pertaining to livestock interests A big lunch was served and a talk given by H. B. Smith of Chicago on tuberculosis eradication in cattle. The members decided to publish a directory. Matters pertaining to the Boys' and Girls' Calf club were also discussed and it was decided to secure boys and girls from every township to take care of a purebred heifer of whatever breed they desire.

The county agent of Louisa county published some interesting results from the experiments at the county farm in that county to determine the length of the growing season in that county for the different varieties of corn. In these tests the following number of days was required to make the corn safe from frost: Ainsworth 90-day—105 days, Silver Mine—110 and 112 days, Reids Yellow Dent—112, 115 and in one case 125, Iowa No. 10—120 days. Louisa county farmers have decided to pay one cent per bushel less for corn picking than last year on account of the good corn and lower prices, so that the scale there will be six and seven cents per bushel.

The Monroe county farm bureau is organizing a baby beef feeding contest for 1919-1920, as are a number of the other counties about the state. The feeding is to begin November 1 and end not later than September 1, 1920. Purebred or grade steers or heifers may be used, the lad picking his own calf, which must be dropped between January 1 and September 1, 1920. Any boy or girl over 10 and under 19 on January 1, 1919, is eligible. Next year the finished calves will be exhibited locally to determine the winners, and these will have an opportunity to exhibit at the county, state and other fairs, where prizes are offered. The bureau is offering prizes in the way of educational trips to county winners.

Swine Feeders' day which was held in Ames October 29, drew dozens of stockmen to that place from various counties in the state. These men were shown the very latest economic methods of feeding hogs.

The biggest county in the state is Kossuth, with 626,005.81 acres. Pottawattamie county is second with 606,460.15 acres. Osceola county is the smallest, having only 254,412.83 acres, while Louisa county is next to the smallest, with 254,712.52 acres. The average size of the counties is about 370,000 acres.

PUT COLLEGE SAVINGS CLUBS IN ALL THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Seventh District W. S. S. Organization to Aid Children Build Up Fund for Education.

College Savings clubs in all the high schools of the Seventh district is the aim of the War Savings educational committee, of which Shailer Mathews is the chairman. This new plan was decided upon at a recent meeting of the committee at the Chicago headquarters. The object is to get high school students to prepare for a college education through saving and investment in War Savings stamps. To secure special training in a college, technical school, normal school, professional school or university costs money, but regular saving by high school students will open the way for any boy or girl of determination. Money can be earned after school, on Saturdays and during the vacation periods. Some boys and girls have an allowance from parents. Frequently they receive cash gifts. This money put into Thrift and War Savings stamps will work for the high school students while they are getting their preliminary education.

Mrs. Alfred J. Benson, manager of the division of schools and churches for Illinois, strongly urged the keeping of a personal account by children. She points out that there are three sources of income for the school child. They are individual earnings, allowances by the parents and gifts. Some system of individual accounts for school children may be worked out by the committee later.

The normal schools and teachers' colleges of the district will receive the attention of the committee. An effort will be made to have Thrift courses put in both these classes of educational institutions at once.

At the meeting of the committee were: Shailer Mathews, chairman; E. U. Graff of Indianapolis; J. V. McNally, Detroit; Thomas Boyce, Milwaukee; Mrs. P. O. Altman, Detroit; Mrs. Alfred J. Benson, and Albert Boswell, manager of sales.

An Aid to Ball Players.

Baseball fielding averages ought to be quite materially "fattened" if a new sort of sun glasses, lately invented, comes into general use. These glasses are so hinged to the player's cap that a touch will drop them into position, allowing him to see the ball coming toward him while he is looking directly at the sun.

Practical Education.

REGULAR FORD WAY

Ford Company Began on Starter in 1911

Henry Ford tested the Ford Starting and Lighting System on his own car for one year.

Ten months ago the Ford Motor Company was not manufacturing Electric Starters; today the output of its Starter Department is greater than that of any other manufacturer of electric starting devices in the world. Its nearest competitor makes one thousand a day, whereas the Ford Company's output is fast approaching the three thousand mark, two thousand eight hundred and eighty-one already having been manufactured in one day.

The Ford starter—and generator, for it is really two separate units—is not the result of a new idea or of a sudden decision. More than eight years ago Mr. Henry Ford's vision saw the need, and his electrical engineers were instructed to begin experimenting. After seven years of constant research, which took into consideration the many different climates in which the Ford car is used, together with the factors of size and weight and an adaptibility to quantity production, twenty-three trial jobs were built. These were tested in many different ways. Mr. Ford himself used one on his car for a year. Still the engineers continued their experiments and improvements.

Then came the order from the Government for 15,000 three-ton tanks, each one of which was to be equipped with two synchronized Ford Motors. A starter was essential, so the one now being installed in Ford cars was evolved. But, only one starter and generator was used to turn over thet wo Ford motors in each tank. January first, 1919, the Ford Motor Company began equipping enclosed cars with this new starting and lighting system. Ford engineers say that although the entire system—Starter and Generator—weighs only thirty-one pounds, it produces a higher torque output (constant rotary motion) pound for pound, than any other system on the market.

When the department for building the Starting and Lighting Systems first began production, fifty hours labor was charged to each unit, but now that machinery and equipment have been installed, the time per unit is four hours. Two huge armature impregnating ovens have been installed, each with a capacity of 1700 every eight hours. I nthese ovens the armatures are dried, soaked in varnish and dried again. Eight hours time is required for this one operation.

The power from the starter to the motor is applied through the well known Bendix drive, which automatically engages the starter and then, once the motor is started, the starter immedaiely disengages. It is equipped with oilless bearings and needs practically no attention.

Within another thirty days or six weeks, the Ford Company expects to be making enough starters so that every Ford car will be equipped with the new Electric Starting and Lighting System.

U. S. ADVISES FARMERS BEST WAY TO INVEST

Transfer of Liberty Bonds Held by Banks Urged as Aid to Cut H. C. L.

Through the State Agricultural colleges of the Seventh district, as well as the other districts of the country, the savings division of the treasury department is starting a campaign to promote savings and investment in government securities, especially for the benefit of the farmer. In a letter to the State Agricultural colleges Benjamin R. Andrews, vice director of the savings division, said in part:

"The treasury department is offering Thrift and War Savings stamps, $100 and $1,000 Treasury Savings certificates (War Savings stamps in larger denominations), and Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness. It is also urging the transfer to private investors of the Liberty bonds still held by banks, which, as the federal reserve board has pointed out, by reducing the inflated credit situation will be one effective factor for checking rising prices.

"The farmers of the country took their full share in the war loans and for the first time became generally investors in securities. The problem arises: Can they to their own advantage continue to invest money in securities, and if so, what form shall the investment take? A leading rural economist recently pointed out that the farmers could not do better than place their surplus funds in Liberty bonds. From many quarters comes the warning against the danger in rising land prices which are in part due to the investment of the farmer's surplus in land which he does not intend to cultivate, but to rent or sell again.

"The government is interested in promoting the holding of Liberty bonds, in preventing fraudulent practices by Liberty bond manipulators, and in continuing the flow of money into Liberty bonds and other government securities."

Following are the chief points the treasury department wishes to be brought to the attention of people in rural districts:

Possible investments for farmer: (a) Re-investment in his own farming desirable as long as more capital can be profitably employed; (b) land mortgages—safe but not readily convertible to cash or convenient as collateral for temporary bank loans; (c) personal notes—risky; (d) shares of stock—speculative and risky, farmer not in position to have special knowledge; (e) government securities, absolutely safe as to principal and interest—no question as to prior claims, always marketable or redeemable.

Government securities now available: $5 War Savings stamps and $100 and $1,000 Treasury Savings certificates, maturing January 1, 1924, redeemable on demand sooner, paying 4 per cent compound interest; Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness, $500 up, running for a few months with interest at 4¼ per cent and 4½ per cent; Liberty bonds and Victory notes, $50 up, purchasable in open market through local banks. Characteristics of these different securities—bonds especially desirable as collateral for temporary loans at banks.

Effect of government investment: (a) Increasing saving fund of the country; the dollar put into government securities releases a banking dollar; (b) expansion of business and trade; effect on foreign trade especially important to farmer as the extension of credits abroad is the sole way of making possible the sale of farm products abroad; increasing capital available for agriculture; (c) high cost of living situation, since increased production and saving are the two fundamental cures for rising prices and investment in government securities provides both; (d) rural land speculation craze—aided by farmer who puts his surplus into farm lands for leasing or sale; checked by government investment; effect of speculation on future farming.

"Holding your government securities is good citizenship."—Why? The government is still borrowing funds.

Farmer now a mark for fraudulent stock operators, Liberty bond scalpers. How check fraud?

WORK, SAVE, SUCCEED (W. S. S.)

VIRGIN ISLANDS SET EXAMPLE.

Uncle Sam's newest possession, the Virgin Islands, has taken most rapidly to American ideals, according to information received by the Savings Division of the Treasury Department. The small population of the islands consists largely of the foreign-born, yet nearly $2,500 worth of War Savings stamps has been sold there this year, the per capita purchases comparing most favorably with those of any of the states of the Union.

The purchases for the islands up to the end of August this year averaged $17.25 for each square mile of the territory purchased from Denmark in 1916. The sales of the stamps were made through the post offices of the islands.

THRIFT CHAIRMEN APPOINTED BY ILLINOIS CLUB WOMEN

Mrs. Frederick A. Dow Hears Favorably From All but Eight Districts in the State.

Mrs. Frederick A. Dow, who recently undertook the task of lining up the 60,000 women of the Illinois Federated Clubs for the Government savings campaign, has received favorable reports from most of the club districts on the progress of the organization work.

Mrs. Dow asked the presidents of the twenty-five club districts in Illinois to appoint thrift chairmen. She has heard from all but eight districts.

The chairmen appointed are: First, Mrs. C. D. Stone; Second, Mrs. Howard Ames; Third, Mrs. H. H. Day; Sixth, Mrs. W. J. Benson; Eighth, Mrs. Inez Deach; Ninth, Mrs. W. G. Cook; Tenth, Miss Fannie Whiting, Chicago; Twelfth, Mrs. Minnie Cofield, Tonica; Thirteenth, Mrs. Adolph Eichlor, Dixon; Fourteenth, Mrs. Flo Ervin, Biggsville; Fifteenth, Mrs. R. D. McCracken, Knoxville; Seventeenth, Miss Roxanna Hill, Pontiac; Eighteenth, Mrs. J. R. Hanlon, Grant Park; Twenty-first, Mrs. C. S. Mahan, Palmyra; Twenty-second, Mrs. Peter Johnson, Collinsville; Twenty-third, Mrs. Harry Farson, Salem; Twenty-fifth, Mrs. E. E. Jacobs, West Frankfort.

"Because the war is over many people think all movements started during the great world conflict are now 'dead issues,'" said Mrs. Dow. "But that is not true of the savings campaign of the government, and the women can play a very vital part in making this a great success, not only to help finance the government but to help themselves and the community in which they live. Some women have an idea that this campaign is only a man's affair. They are mistaken. There is no better channel to make thrift a permanent habit than the home, and it is through the women the home can be reached. The job of making this campaign a success is just as much a woman's as a man's."

NEW SAVINGS CERTIFICATES CALLED MARVEL OF FINANCE

U. S. "Baby Bonds" of $100 and $1,000 Denominations Are Becoming Popular Investment.

Reports from all parts of the Seventh district show the increasing popularity of the new $100 and $1,000 Treasury Savings certificates. They are virtually "baby bonds" and their investment value is readily seen. Both banks and individuals are investing in this new form of government security. Secretary of the Treasury Glass has characterized these certificates as "the marvel of finance," and Albert Boswell, manager of sales for the Seventh District War Savings organization, has pointed out six reasons why this term of the secretary of the treasury fits them. The reasons are:

1. They carry valuable tax-exemption privileges.

2. They cannot depreciate in value, not being subject to market fluctuations.

3. They are a liquid investment, redeemable for cash on ten days' notice.

4. They yield a substantial income, actually more than 4¼ per cent.

5. They are short term, maturing January 1, 1924.

6. They represent absolute safety as obligations of the United States government.

The $100 certificates may be purchased at post offices of the first and second class and at banks; $1,000 certificates may be obtained through banks or trust companies and certificates of either denomination may be ordered direct from the War Savings district headquarters, 105 West Monroe street, Chicago, Ill.

The new certificates are issued only in registered form with the name of the owner written in at the time of the purchase. The registration records are kept in Washington and this feature is a protection to the investor.

War Savings certificates filled with twenty War Savings stamps, series of 1919, may be exchanged for Treasury Savings certificates in denominations of $100, and ten such War Savings certificates may be exchanged for a $1,000 Treasury Savings certificate. The price of the $100 certificate in November is $84.40. The increase in cost is 20 cents each month. The $1,000 certificate in November costs $844. The price of this denomination increases $2 a month.

—BUY ONLY WHAT YOU NEED—

$700,000,000 IN FOOD WASTED.

The National Association of Waste Material Dealers estimates that Americans throw away $700,000,000 worth of food each year. If only one ounce of food is wasted or spoiled in each of the 20,000,000 homes in America, the total loss is 1,300,000 pounds a day. As much coal is wasted annually as all the mines of the country could produce in two weeks.

MAKE MONEY WORK FOR YOU.

An investment of $100 in Liberty Bonds increases to $150 in about 17 years, if interest is reinvested as received at 4 per cent, interest compounded quarterly. War Savings Stamps pay this rate, beginning the day purchased. Make your money work for you.

Petty Arithmetic.

"I suppose you always look out for number one?" said the admiring friend. "No, sir," replied Mr. Dustin Stax. "A man who confines himself to such a small figure as number one is likely to get left out of the big calculations that go with modern affairs."

The Why of It.

Water rolls off cabbage leaves because they are covered with a minute dust.

That's Why.

The woman who claims to know the most about how to raise children usually has none of her own to practice on.

GIVE CLOVER YIELD GOOD CARE IN FALL

Desirable That Stands Have Every Chance to Come Through.

In Many Sections Application of Lime Will Benefit Crop—Farmers Will Find It Profitable to Make Best Preparation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Both red and alsike clover seed were harvested and largely threshed early in October. The fields seeded this spring are the ones from which clover hay and clover seed will be taken next year, and in view of the fact that clover seed is scarce and high priced it is desirable that the stands this fall be given every possible chance to come through the winter in good shape, say specialists in the states relations service. A light top dressing with manure, where this can be done, will be helpful, and will be best applied after freezing weather sets in. The young plants should not be pastured too close, nor should they be allowed to bloom and make seed. If the plants come into bloom, they should be clipped early. A height of four to six inches, just before going into the winter, is the most favorable condition.

The preparation of the land on which red clover is to be seeded next spring should be considered this fall. In most parts of Iowa and Illinois, the application of lime will benefit red clover. On some lands it is absolutely essential for a good stand. Lime is best applied when the land is being prepared for wheat. An application of two tons of fine-ground limestone is commonly enough, although on badly run-down land or on land known to be very sour, three tons per acre may be applied with profit. Clover also needs phosphates, and 200 to 250 pounds per acre should be drilled in with the wheat. Both wheat and clover will benefit.

Red clover seed is likely to remain high-priced for a year or two at least, and farmers will find it profitable to devote all the care necessary to preparing their land so as to give the clover crop every possible chance.

PLANT HARDWOOD TREE SEED

Mulch Around Young Trees Will Furnish Ample Protection From Severe Winter Weather.

In raising hardwoods from seeds, species having soft, unprotected seeds, such as elms and soft maples, should be planted as soon as the seeds fall. The hard, nutlike seeds from such trees as oaks, hickories, walnuts, butternuts, should be gathered in the fall, buried either in sand in the cellar or in well-drained sandy soil outside, and planted in the spring just as soon as they are taken out of the sand.

The seeds can be planted in garden rows, spacing the seeds about six inches apart, or with a dibble the nuts can be planted in specially prepared spots where the trees are to remain. Soft, delicate seeds, like the elm, however, should be planted in the garden and transplanted after they are two years old.

A mulch around the young trees will furnish good protection for the winter.

Young trees should be trimmed from the start, in order to give the best growth and shape.

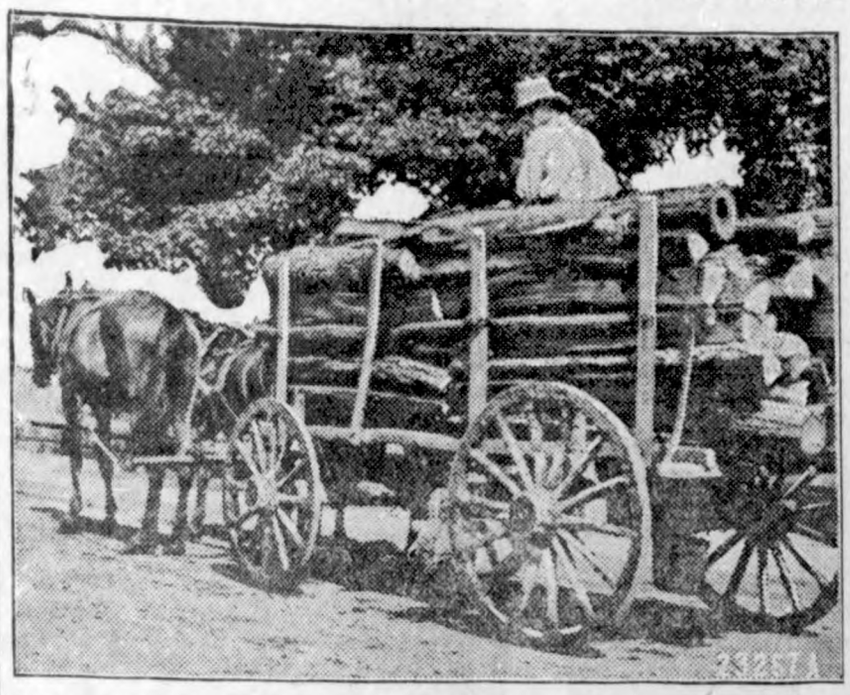
PROPER STORAGE FOR ONIONS

Loose Skins, Dirt and Decaying Specimens Should Be Removed—Ventilation Important.

Before onions are put in storage or on the market, they should be screened to remove loose skins, dirt and soft or decaying specimens.

Onions in storage require plenty of ventilation. For this reason they must be stored in small quantities where there is a cool temperature and dryness. The bulbs should be spread out several inches deep on slat racks or placed in crates. Because of the difficulty experienced in ventilating them thoroughly, bags or bins are not so satisfactory. In special storage houses the temperature is kept as cool as possible, safely above the freezing point. Where onions are not used until spring, they are sometimes allowed to freeze hard and then covered with a heavy layer of straw or hay to prevent them from thawing until late winter or early spring.—Pennsylvania State College.

GOOD INCOME FROM FARM WOODLAND IS ASSURED TO FARMER BY PROPER CARE



A Farm "Crop" Too Many Farmers Overlook, With the Present Excellent Prices for Its Products the Farm Woodland Can Be Made a Valuable Asset.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A source of regular income lying at the door of many a farmer, but too often neglected, is the farm woodland. With increasing scarcity of lumber, and with excellent prices now being offered for forest products, proper care of the wooded area on the farm will amply repay the farmer.

To secure a fair price for this timber the owner should know how much material he has and for what purposes it is best adapted. The first thing for him to do, according to the forest service of the United States department of agriculture, is to find out how much timber of each kind the woodland contains, what products it will yield, and what is its general condition and quality.

If the wooded area is small, it will be best to measure each tree separately. The diameter should be measured at about 4½ feet above ground with calipers made for the purpose. Heights should be carefully estimated, or measured with some sort of height instrument to the first large limbs. Knowing the diameter and height, the amount of timber in board feet in each tree can be found by the use of volume tables. Such tables are included in Farmers' Bulletin 715, Measuring and Marketing Wood-lot Products, which will be sent free on application to the department of agriculture. The quantity of cordwood a tract will yield can hardly be estimated by an inexperienced person. Sales of such material will usually have to be made on the basis of actual cut.

Measuring on a Large Tract.

If the woodland is large it will, of course, seldom be possible to measure each tree separately. In such cases every tree may be measured on parallel strips 66 feet wide running through the tract. Every 660 feet in length of such strips comprises an acre. Averaging all the acres comprised in the strips and multiplying by the total acreage of the tract gives the total stand. The strips should include at least 10 per cent of the woodland. Proper allowance must also be made for defective timber. Dead trees, except those killed by fire or other outside agencies, are apt to be very defective and should be culled. When the tract is exceptionally large, it may pay to employ a professional "cruiser" to estimate the timber.

If the owner depends altogether upon local industries to buy his product, he is likely to find his market extremely limited. Some products, such as crossties and fuel wood, have to be sold locally; it would not pay to transport them far. But other products, among them tan bark, can be shipped 150 miles, and still others, like walnut timber for gunstocks, can be shipped almost any distance.

Railroads Large Purchasers.

Railroads are the largest purchasers of crossties. Any station agent will furnish information concerning specifications and prices. Electric railways in cities and towns also use ties, but unless the distance to town is short it will not pay to ship them. Electric interurban lines offer the same opportunity for disposing of ties as do the steam roads. Telegraph and telephone companies are always on the market for poles. Electric power and electric railway companies also use poles.

The market for piling is not very extensive, but railroads, large construction firms, and docking companies purchase considerable quantities. Piling timbers, which must be straight and long, bring good prices. Mines are large users of timber.

Sawmills, veneer mills, and fruit and vegetable package factories offer a market for the particular kinds and qualities of the woods they handle. These industries buy their material in log form, and all the farmer needs to do is cut and deliver his timber in the rough to the mill. Veneer logs must be of good quality and usually 16 inches and over in diameter. Selected stock brings a high price.

The forest service has prepared bulletins on the wood-using industries of a number of states which tell the uses to which various woods are put and the quantity used annually for each purpose.

The forest service has prepared bulletins on the wood-using industries of a number of states which tell the uses to which various woods are put and the quantity used annually for each purpose. A list of these bulletins and information as to how to procure them may be had upon application to the forest service, Washington, D. C.

Ways of Selling Products.

The way in which farm forest products are sold may have a good deal to do with the profit an owner gets from his tract. There are four ways of selling: (1) By scale measurement of rough products; (2) by the piece, for such products as ties and poles; (3) by the boundary, for a lump sum; and (4) by lumber scale of sawed products.

Selling by the log or piece is the simplest method. Ties, poles, piling, etc., are always sold by the piece. The important things to know are the different grades of each product and their relative value. Fire wood, pulp wood and excelsior wood are sold either by the cord or rick. This, too, is a comparatively simple method of marketing. To be sure of selling profitably by boundary for a lump sum, the owner must make a very careful estimate of the amount and value of his timber.

When to Cut Timber.

In the majority of cases the best time to cut timber is in the winter months. Winter-cut timber seasons slowly and evenly, and by the time the warm weather comes is air-dried. Products which must be peeled, however, such as ties, poles, and tan bark, should be cut in spring, when the bark peels most easily. Veneer logs can be cut in any season of the year, provided they are delivered without long delay after being cut, and the ends are painted to avoid rapid drying and checking of the wood. Pulp wood and tannin-extract wood may be cut and shipped at any season of the year.

New Stallion Farm Established at Buffalo, Wyo., to Produce High-Class Animals.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A new stallion farm, the only one of its kind in the country, was established by the United States department of agriculture in co-operation with the Wyoming Agricultural college, at Buffalo, Wyo., the 1st of July. It is to be known as the United States-Wyoming Horse Breeding station, where the work that has been done for the past 15 years by the department in co-operation with the Colorado Agricultural college will be continued. The object of the work at this station will be to produce high-class stallions suitable for the production of utility horses adapted to western range and farm conditions. Stallions at this station are available for use by mare owners in the community, and from time to time they will be sent for service to different parts of Wyoming and Colorado. Stallions developed for the range weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Currants and gooseberries are very hardy and withstand extremely low temperatures; in fact, if windbreaks are provided, most varieties are able to withstand the severe conditions in most parts of the upper Mississippi valley and the northern great plains area.

FARM POULTRY

MORE POULTRY IS PRODUCED

Application of Better Methods Has Done More to Help Than Greater Number of Fowls.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Poultry production increased 5 to 20 per cent in 1917 and 1918 in Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Iowa, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota, which comprise district No. 3 of the emergency extension poultry work being conducted by the United States department of agriculture. Efficiency in poultry management through the application of better methods, advocated by poultry specialists of the department and state colleges, has done more to increase production than the keeping of a greater number of fowls, says the department's representative in this district. In the culling campaign in one state enough money was saved to farmers by disposing of 200,000 slacker hens to more than pay the expenses incurred for all of the extension work carried on in that state, and this culling work was only a part of the extension enterprise.

It was the one campaign wherein results were immediate, however, and it also afforded a definite basis upon which to estimate and tabulate the financial saving. The "better poultry" and "early hatch" campaigns were of even greater importance, and the saving and conservation of food through the "preserve eggs" and the "infertile egg" campaigns runs well up into the hundreds of thousands of dollars the representatives report. More stress is now being placed upon the educational features of poultry work to insure greater efficiency in management. The farmer or poultry raiser will not be content in the future with an average egg yield of six or seven dozen for each hen, when it is known that the average yield should be from nine to twelve dozen.

INSPECT SHIPMENTS OF EGGS

Federal Food Inspectors of Department of Agriculture Watch for Violations of Law.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Interstate shipments of eggs are being watched closely during the hot months by federal food inspectors of the department of agriculture, in order that appropriate action may be taken when such shipments violate the law.

Shipments containing eggs which have yolks stuck to the shell, moldy eggs, black spots, mixed rots, addled eggs, and any other eggs which are filthy, decomposed or putrid, are in violation of the law.

Careful candling before shipment will enable dealers to eliminate the bad eggs. The elimination of the spoiled or partially spoiled eggs before shipment not only removes the hazard of violating federal and state food laws, but it is economical in that it saves shipping charges on eggs likely to be rejected at place of receipt. A number of states have laws or regulations specifically requiring the candling of all eggs placed on sale.

Directions as to how to candle eggs, as well as information regarding the best methods of packing, shipping and storing eggs, will be sent upon request to the United States department of agriculture, Washington.

POULTRY NOTES

Provide roosts and dropping boards.

* * *

Keep hens free from lice and the house free from mites.

* * *

Always handle ducks and geese by the necks, never by the wings or legs which are not strong enough to serve as handles.

* * *

An angry old goose will sometimes strike with her wings hard enough to break a man's arm, and care should be taken when handling geese.

* * *

Old fowls do not need much corn or cornmeal during hot weather, but a certain amount should be fed to make a fairly well-balanced ration.

Cull out and kill all weaklings and deformed specimens among the chicks, so as to stop their feed bill and give their room to more promising youngsters.

An indirect plea for the dignified but plain pulpit setting of former years comes from the London Nation, which tells about a worthy Scotsman who was a member of a great church. Although the building was imposingly ornamented and the atmosphere reverential, he did not enjoy the services.

"But," asked a friend, "what do you find to dislike in the services?"

"I'll tell ye," the Scotsman replied. "The pastor is fine mon, but he cries too freely when he preaches. Too sentimental, ye ken."

"And maybe ye wadna be sentimental," the friend retorted, "when ye got up in sae fine a place with sae little ye could say."

Surely Something of a Jonah.

There is still some firm belief in Jonahs at sea. Not so long ago, in England, a sailor, who was prosecuted for failing to join an Admiralty transport, pleaded in excuse that he was known to seamen generally as Jonah, and that the sailors on the transport had threatened to throw him overboard if he did join.

Certainly if superstition ever could be rational they had some reason for theirs. This sailor had served on the Titanic and the Empress of Ireland, both of which were wrecked, and on the Lusitania and Florizan, both of which were torpedoed.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

FARMERS!

Have a right to the cost of procuction. Only about twice in the past forty years has the price of farm products brought the cost of production. Take away from the farmers of the middle west the money made in the rise of farm lands and they have worked for nothing.

The long hours of labor; the work of women and children; the work without wages or return on capital invested have made it possible for farmers to pay for their farms.

RECORD PRICE FOR KOSSUTH

Belmond will have a new factory for the manufacture of concrete mixers, punching machines, trip hammers, fence posts, shingle machines, etc., in the near future. The company will be known as the United Manufacturing Co., and is incorporated with a capital of $75,000. The firm consists of Mr. Wege, his brother, and Mr. Gernek, all of Waterloo.

It is expected that an iron foundry will locate here also. A friend of Mr. Wege of the United Manufacturing company wishes to locate wherever Mr. Wege does, and wlil doubtless establish his foundry here for that reason.—Democrat.

LARGEST CASKET IN IOWA

The largest casket ever made in Iowa was turned out last week by a Burlington company for the corpse of a 600 pound woman at Albia. The casket weighs 700 pounds and would hold six average sized men. How would you like to be a pall bearer?

IOWA CORN CROP MAKES ROAD CORNERS DANGEROUS

Better go slow at the corners, till the corn is cut. Iowa corn, towering higher than a man on horseback, has turned many thousand otherwise safe road crossings into danger spots on the highways. The average Iowa corn field forms just about as complete an obstruction to view for motorists approaching corners as a forest of trees. While sometimes it is advisable to cut down trees to make a road safe, it would hardly be advisable, to authorize road officials to cut down good Iowa corn for the sake of saving the limbs and possibly the lives of fool automobile drivers and their companions who rush upon corners at wild speed regardless of the fact that they can have no knowledge of the approach of cars upn the cross roads. The sensible thing for Iowa motorists is to slack up and get the car under control when approaching corners. Sounding the hrn may be alright but it is uncertain whether the other fellow hears or not and then there is no reason why he should slow up when he hears your horn and you dash wildly ahead with unchecked speed making him do all the slowing. Better go slow at the corners till the corn is out.

Perpetual Motion.

One of the examples of perpetual motion machines given by Mr. Benham is the electric dry pile, of which a celebrated specimen made by Singer 75 years ago "has been continuously tinkling its little chime bell at Oxford for the whole of that long period of time and shows no sign at present of any actual diminution of energy." Of course, no one knows what the life of the electric dry pile may be.

CHINESE GIRL STUDENTS HAVE ICE CREAM AT MEETING

CHINESE BECOME SOCIAL PIONEERS

Men and Women Form Good Fellowship Club Together Under Y. W. C. A. Leadership.

The Good Fellowship Club has made its appearance in society in Hangchow, China.

It began with the desire of a progressive young Chinese doctor to give his compatriots, especially the Christians, some healthful form of social intercourse.

Channels for a good, clean, social life among Chinese people are very limited. Until recently becoming a Christian often meant cutting oneself off from one's friends and relatives, also from feast days and festivals. As for joint meetings of men and women—well, such a thing was never heard of in decent society.

The young doctor's plan of having a club where men and their wives might come together to enjoy a good time with each other was discouraged and sniffed at. However, a few people agreed to be pioneers in the cause of social intercourse, and Y. W. C. A. secretaries agreed to help make the club a success.

At first the meetings of the club were laughed at by outsiders and the whole affair considered a joke. However, the members kept on meeting, first at one house and then at another. Soon the men got over the feeling of strangeness at starting out with their wives on Tuesday evening for a friend's home. The women began to enjoy the outing and to take part in the discussions—an intelligent part, too—much to the surprise of their husbands.

The membership grew. The club's fame began to spread. At first the discussions of the club were conducted in English. Soon it became necessary for them to be carried on in Chinese so that more of the women could understand and take part. Many of the scoffers began to apply for admission. The members began indulging in much friendly chaffing and occasionally forgot their dignity to play jokes on one another. Finally it became so large that it had to be divided into two sections, which met separately three Tuesday evenings in the month and on the fourth Tuesday met together for a joint session, with a special program.

Students just returned from American and German colleges, an old Buddhist scholar who is particularly interested in the discussion on Buddhism and Christianity, merchants, railroad and government officials compose the men's side of the room. The women are still a bit shy about talking in front of so many people, but many of them show signs of great executive ability and power of leadership. They are all well poised, clear thinking individuals, who will have a great influence on China's future. They discuss among themselves group meetings in their various churches, the lack of amusements for Chinese women, social service work, subscription lists for the orphanage, cake making, types of stoves, baby diets, the latest engagement and other topics such as one would hear discussed by a group of women gathered together any place in America.

The social part of the evening is given over to games, which at first astound the sober Chinese gentlemen, but which they take up with great zest after the first evening. And their wives enjoy it just as greatly.

Real American picnics are the latest thing which the club has tried, and they are a great success. A Christmas play is being planned now.

ENGLISH IS COMMON TONGUE.

Chinese Girls Learn It to Talk to One Another.

Chinese women students in the Tung Fu College, Peking, China, are obliged to learn English in order to talk with one another because of the different dialects used by the student body.

Girls from the extreme western provinces of China, who attend the school, must remain in Peking during all of the eight years required for their high school and college training, because to return each summer would require six weeks for the trip one way and would cost more than a trip to America and return.

Girls from each of the western provinces speak a different language and they cannot understand one another any more than they can the girls from northern, southern, eastern or central provinces. Hence, they have adopted English as a common tongue.

NEW SCHOOL FOR CHINA.

Y. W. C. A. Secures New Site for Girls' Physical Training School.

A new home has been found for the Physical Training School which the Young Women's Christian Association has opened for native girls in Shanghai, China.

The school, while in the country, is not far distant from the National Headquarters of the Y. W. C. A. in Shanghai nor far from the local Y. W. C. A. The grounds cover eighteen "mow," which means approximately six acres, and are divided by a private road. A foreign residence already on the grounds will be used by the American teachers, while native buildings on the other side will furnish living quarters and classrooms for the 35 students.

The grounds boast a garden, tennis courts and an athletic field.

SERVICE FLAG DEMOBILIZED

Despite the stormy weather, a considerable audience was present last Sunday morning at the service in the Methodist Episcopal church marking the demobilizing of the service flag which has had the place of honor on the wall of the church during the war. The men in uniform occupied seats reserved for them, patriotic songs were sung and the choir gave a beautiful and appropriate anthem.

In the course of his address Dr. Buriff spoke of the turbulent conditions at home and abroad, marked by the two extremes of unwonted luxury and industrial unrest. While many problems are still to be solved, he said some things have been decided. This is not to be a German world, with all its peoples goose-stepping at the command of kaiser or junker. At the same time, it is not to be an English or American world. God is not a tribal deity, the junior partner of the kaiser nor is he an Anglo-Saxon God, knowing no language but English, with perhaps a smattering of French. The rights not only of small nations but of so-called inferior peoples must be safe-guarded. Labor has come into its own, but not to establish a new autocracy. There is no great danger of the spread of bolshevism in this country; it is an imported product and not contagious except among its importers, and there are too many farmers in America and too many other people who have a real stake in the country.

At the conclusion of the address the congregation stood for a moment in silence in honor of the gold star on the service flag and then the minister drew down the stars and stripes over the service flag, typifying the merging of the men in the service into the common mass of our citizenship. The whole service was beautiful and impressive and much apreciated by those present.

DEFINITIONS OF A BOOSTER

A booster is a citizen who talks as strong for Beaver Crossing when he is at home as he does when he is 1,000 miles away, and vice versa.

A booster is a man wise enough to know that by helping his community he is helping himself, and then acts on that knowledge.

A booster is a man who contributes to the religious, social, charitable and commercial undertakings of his city in proportion to his means.

A booster is a man who will let the "Wes pirit" dominate his thoughts and actions and will work in harmony with his fellow citizens for the community betterment.

A booster is a man who helps to keep his city clean morally and physically.

A booster is a man willing to serve.

A booster is cautious in his criticism of those willing to serve.

A booster is a man who believes in Beaver Crossing citizens and believes that his home town is the best place in the whole wide world. That's a loyal Booster.

A booster is a man who believes in work, faith, charity; that day follows night; that time heals; that humanity contains more good than bad and that this old world is a mighty good place to live in.—Times, Beaver Crossing, Nebraska.

WORK, SAVE, SUCCEED (W. S. S.)

REVISED VERSIONS

There was a little man,
Who laid down his little gun,
With its bullets all made of lead, lead, lead,
And he got a little book,
And when in it he did look,
Why many happy things he said, said, said.

So he took it home
To his good wife, Joan,
And bade her to sing and smile, smile, smile,
For a Thrift Stamp new,
A War Savings Stamp, too,
He'd buy her every little while, while, while.

Humpty Dumpty sat on a wall,
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall;
Not all the king's horses nor all the king's men
Could set Humpty Dumpty up again.
(For Humpty, you see, saved never a cent;
The money he made he most carelessly spent.)

Now Humpty Dumpty sits on his wall
As proud as can be and with never a fall.
He doesn't need horses, he doesn't need men
To rescue and set him on wall-top again,
For Humpty, you see, learned his lesson with care;
War Savings Stamps cherish the change he can spare.

Hippety hop to the Government shop,
To buy a War Savings Stamp dandy;
One for you, and one for me,
And one for Brother Sandy!

THRIFT IS HABIT; GET IT.

"Thrift is a habit. A habit is a thing you do unconsciously or automatically without thought. We are ruled by our habits. When habits are young they are like lion cubs—soft, fluffy, funny, frolicsome little animals. They grow day by day. Eventually they rule you. Choose ye this day the habit ye would have rule over you. The habit of thrift is simply the habit which dictates that you shall earn more than you spend. In other words, thrift is the habit which provides that you spend less than you earn. Take your choice."—Elbert Hubbard.

THIS WEAK, NERVOUS MOTHER

Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which added to my weak condition kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness."—Mrs. J. WORTHLINE, 2842 North Taylor St., Philadelphia Pa.

The majority of mothers nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down, nervous condition with headaches, backache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. It is at such periods in life that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will restore a normal healthy condition, as it did to Mrs. Worthline.

INDIGESTION

Caused by

Acid-Stomach

Millions of people—in fact about 9 out of 10—suffer more or less from indigestion, acute or chronic. Nearly every case is caused by Acid-Stomach.

There are other stomach disorders which also are sure signs of Acid-Stomach—belching, heartburn, bloat after eating, food repeating, sour, gassy stomach. There are many ailments which, while they do not cause much distress in the stomach itself, are, nevertheless, traceable to an acid-stomach. Among these are nervousness, biliousness, cirrhosis of the liver, rheumatism, impoverished blood, weakness, insomnia, melancholia and a long train of physical and mental miseries that keep the victims in miserable health year after year.

The right thing to do is to attack these ailments at their source—get rid of the acid-stomach. A wonderful modern remedy called EATONIC now makes it easy to do this.

One of hundreds of thousands of grateful users of EATONIC writes: "I have been troubled with intestinal indigestion for about nine years and have spent quite a sum for medicine, but without relief. After using EATONIC for a few days the gas and pains in my bowels disappeared. EATONIC is just the remedy I needed."

We have thousands of letters telling of these marvelous benefits. Try EATONIC and you, too, will be just as enthusiastic in its praise.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

Fate Gives Carlyle Chance He Has Been Seeking.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive. Carlyle finds a friend in Watkins, an English sailor.

—9—

"If I had any to use; after a sailor has been drunk there is not apt to be much left in his pockets."

"The fact is," he began doubtfully, "what you just said to me on deck chanced to be of interest. You are a navigator?"

"I was in command of ships for four years, senor; naturally I know navigation."

"I will soon learn if you have lied, and that will be a sorry day for you. I'll tell you, Gates, how matters stand aboard, and why I have need of your skill. Then you may take your choice—the forecastle or the cabin?"

"You invite me aft, senor?"

"I give you a chance to move your dunnage if you will do my work. Listen now. Sanchez has been badly hurt. It may be weeks before he leaves his cabin, if, indeed, he ever does. That leaves me in command with but one officer, the mulatto, LeVere. This might answer to take us safely to Porto Grande, as we could stand watch and watch, but Francois is no sailor. It was his part on board to train and lead the fighting men—he cannot navigate. Saint Christopher! I fear to leave him alone in charge of the deck while I snatch an hour's sleep."

"I see," I admitted. "And yourself, senor? You are a seaman?"

"Enough to get along, but not quite sure as to my figures. I have taken no sights except as we came north on this trip. 'Tis for this reason I need you—but you will play me no smart English trick, my man, or I'll have you by the heels at once. I know enough to verify your figures."

"I thought of no trick, Estada," I said coldly, now satisfied as to his purpose and confident of my own power. "You would have me as navigator, very well—at what terms?"

"With rating as first officer and your fair proportion of all spoils."

"You mean then to continue the course? To attack vessels on the high seas?"

"Why not?" sneeringly. "Are you too white-livered for that sort of job? If so, then you are no man for me. It is a long voyage to Porto Grande, and no reason why we should hurry home; the welcome there will be better if we bring chests of gold aboard. Ay, and the thought will put hope into the hearts of the crew; they are restless now from long waiting."

"But Captain Sanchez? You have no surgeon, I am told. Will he not suffer from neglect of his wound?"

"Suffer? No more than under a leech ashore. All that can be done has been. His was a clean knife thrust, which has been washed, treated with lotion and bound up. No leech could do more."

"And my quarters—will they be aft?"

"You will have your choice of those at port. Come now—have you an answer ready?"

"I would be a fool not to have," heartily. "I am your man, Estada."

CHAPTER XIV.

I Warn Dorothy.

The Portuguese, evidently well pleased at my prompt acceptance of his proposal, talked on for some time, explaining to me something of the situation aboard the Namur, and pointing out what he believed to be our position on the chart. I asked a few questions, although I paid but little attention to what he said, my mind being busied with searching out his real purpose. No doubt the situation was very nearly as he described it to be—LeVere was no navigator, and Estada himself only an indifferent one. Yet at that the course to the West Indies was not a long one, and if the Portuguese had been able to bring the bark from there to the Chesapeake, the return voyage should not terrify him. No, that was not the object; he was planning to keep at sea, to waylay and attack merchant ships, and then, after a successful cruise, arrive at Porto Grande laden with spoils and hailed as a great leader. His plan was to dispose of Sanchez—even to permit the Spaniard to die of his wounds; possibly even to hasten and assure that death by some secret resort to violence. No doubt LeVere was also concerned in the conspiracy and would profit by it, and possibly these two were likewise assured of the co-operation of the more reckless spirits among the crew. I remembered what Watkins had whispered to me forward—his suspicions of them both. He had been right; already the fuse was being laid, and, very fortunately, I happened to be chosen to help touch it off. The chance I had sought blindly was being plainly revealed.

It was evident enough, however, that Estada had no intention of trusting me immediately with his real motives. His confidence was limited, and his instructions related altogether to mere matters of ship routine. I could await developments. But I was becoming wearied by the man.

"I understand perfectly, senor," I broke in at last impatiently. "You will have to take for granted that I can enforce sea discipline and navigate your boat to whatever part of the ocean you desire to sail. All I need is your orders. This, I take it, is all you require of me?"

"Yes; I plan, you execute."

"Very good; now about myself," and I arose to my feet, determined to close the interview. "You say I may choose any stateroom on the port side?"

"They are all unoccupied, except one, used by the steward as a storeroom."

I opened the door and stepped out into the main cabin, the roll of charts under my arm. Estada didn't wait for me to question him.

"Captain Sanchez' stateroom is aft," he said, with a wave of the hand. "There are two rooms. Jose is with him—a negro with a knack at nursing."

"Who else is quartered aft here?"

He ignored the one thing I most desired to learn, but I did not press it, believing I knew the answer already.

"LeVere has this middle stateroom, and Mendez the one forward. Mendez is third officer and carpenter. Just at present with LeVere required on deck he has charge of the men below. Not the working crew; they are quartered in the forecastle and are largely English and Swede. But we have to carry extra men, who bunk amidships—hellhounds to fight—mongrels of course. They are allowed on deck amidships when we are at sea, but are not encouraged to mingle with the sailors. We're over a powder magazine all the time, Gates—any spark might set it off."

I opened one of the doors opposite and glanced within. The interior differed but little from that of the stateroom occupied by Estada, except it was minus the table. No doubt they were all practically alike.

"This will do very well," I said quietly. "Now how about clothes? These I wear look rather rough for the new job."

"I'll send you the steward; he'll fix you out from the slop chest."

I was glad to see him go and closed the door on him with a sigh of relief. It had all occurred so quickly, almost without effort on my part, I could do little but wonder what strange occurrence would be next. What, indeed, was there for me to do except to await developments? Only one thing occurred to me—I must discover some means immediately of communicating with Dorothy Fairfax.

The importance of this could not be overestimated. With myself quartered aft and eating in the cabin we were bound to meet sooner or later, and the girl must previously be warned of my presence aboard, or in her first surprise at the recognition I should be instantly betrayed. If I was to serve the girl there must be, first of all, intelligent co-operation between us. She must not only know of my presence on the Namur but also the purpose actuating me. I had reached this conclusion when a light, hesitating knock sounded at the door.

Gunsaules entered, garments over his arm, and laid out the pieces carefully one by one, evidently proud of his selection.

"The clothes seem to be all right, steward," I said, "and I judge will fit. Now hunt me up first of all something to shave with then some tobacco and a pipe, and—yes, wait a second—writing materials. And, by the way, there are two staterooms astern. Who occupies the one to starboard—Senor Estada?"

"No, senor; it is the young lady."

"Oh, the one brought aboard last night. Have you seen her?"

"Si, senor; she is English and good to look at, but she sit and stare out the stern port. She will not speak or eat. I take in her breakfast, but she touch not a morsel. So I tell Senor Estada, and he say, 'then bring her out to dinner with me; I'll make the hussy eat if I have to choke it down her dainty throat.'"

"Good; I'll have a look at her myself then. Now hurry up those things, steward, and remember what I sent you after."

He brought the shaving set and writing materials first, explaining that he would have to go down into the lazaret and break open some packages for the tobacco and pipe. The moment the fellow disappeared I grasped the opportunity. I dashed off a note hurriedly—a brief line merely stating my presence on board and begging her not to exhibit surprise at meeting me. I had no time in which to explain or make clear the situation. With this folded and concealed in my hand I silently pushed open the door.

I crept swiftly forward, following the circle of the staterooms, until I came to the closed door of the one I sought aft. I bent here an instant, listening for some sound from within, but heard none. Beyond doubt the girl was within and alone, and I must trust her quick intelligence to respond to my written message. I thrust it through the narrow opening above the sill, and the moment it disappeared within stole swiftly back to my own room. The action had not been seen, and yet I had scarcely a moment to spare. Before I could lather my face the steward returned, bearing in his hands tobacco and pipe.

Estada, however, remained away longer than I had anticipated he would, and I was fully dressed and comfortably smoking before he came down from the deck and crossed the cabin to my partially open door.

"The starboard watch has been called," he said, "and you are to take charge of the deck, relieving LeVere. I waited to explain the situation to the men before you appeared, I suppose you are ready?"

"Ay, ay, senor," knocking the ashes out of my pipe and rising. He eyed my clothes disapprovingly.

"Rather a fancy rig, Gates, for a first officer on duty."

"Some style, I admit, senor, but they were all the steward offered me."

"You'll have to carry a hard fist, my man, to back up that costume aboard the Namur," he said coldly. "Those black devils are apt to mistake you for a plaything" I followed him up the stairs to the deck. LeVere was still on duty, and came forward and shook hands at my appearance.

"Rather glad I didn't drown you," he said, intending to be pleasant. "But hope you'll not run amuck in the after cabin."

"I shall try not to unless I have cause," I answered, looking him square in the eyes and determining to make my position clear at once. "Senor Estada tells me I am to relieve you. What is the course?"

"Sou'west by half sou'."

"Do you know your position?"

"Only in a general way. We have held an east by south course since leaving the capes, until an hour ago, making about ten knots."

"Very well; I will figure it out as best I can. There is nothing further to report?"

"No, senor; all has been as it is now."

He glanced toward Estada, not greatly pleased, I presume, with my brusqueness, yet finding nothing in either words or manner from which to evoke a quarrel. The latter had overheard our conversation, but he stood now with back toward us looking out on the sea off the port quarter. His silent indifference caused LeVere to shrug his shoulders and disappear down the ladder on his way below. I turned my face to the man at the wheel—it was the giant negro, Cochose.

Peace or war? Dorothy is offered the choice by her brutal captors. Whichever she chooses, what hope is there for her amid the Wolves of the Sea? Carlyle, watching intently, longs for the chance to go to her aid.

"No," replied Senator Sorghum; "I first commenced with my constituents and decided on my opinion. Then I did an enormous amount of studying in order to maintain it."

Important to all Women Readers of this Paper

Thousands upon thousands of women have kidney or bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

You may suffer pain in the back, headache and loss of ambition.

Poor health makes you nervous, irritable and may be despondent; it makes any one so.

But hundreds of women claim that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, by restoring health to the kidneys, proved to be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Many send for a sample bottle to see what Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine, will do for them. By enclosing ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., you may receive sample size bottle by Parcel Post. You can purchase medium and large size bottles at all drug stores.—Adv.

KIDNEYS WEAKENING? BETTER LOOK OUT

Kidney and bladder troubles don't disappear of themselves. They grow upon you, slowly but steadily, undermining your health with deadly certainty, until you fall a victim to incurable disease.

Stop your troubles while there is time. Don't wait until little pains become big aches. Don't trifle with disease. To avoid future suffering begin treatment with GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules now. Take three or four every day until you feel that you are entirely free from pain.

This well-known preparation has been one of the national remedies of Holland for centuries. In 1696 the government of the Netherlands granted a special charter authorizing its sale.

The good housewife of Holland would almost as soon be without food as without her "Real Dutch Drops," as she quaintly calls GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Their use restores strength and is responsible in a great measure for the sturdy, robust health of the Hollanders.

Do not delay. Go to your druggist and insist on his supplying you with a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Take them as directed, and if you are not satisfied with results your druggist will gladly refund your money. Look for the name GOLD MEDAL on the box and accept no other. In sealed boxes, three sizes.

J. L. Wible, a young man who has been making his home at Luverne, was caught in a cave-in while at work in a tile ditch on the Beardsly & Wendt farm east of town Monday. He was laying bottom through a pocket of sand and the first cave-in wedged his feet in so he was unable to move. The top of the bank began to crumble and a 10-inch tile rolled in the ditch and struck him on the head, rendering him unconscious. Soon another section of the bank rolled in and buried him pretty near up to his neck. His assistants secured the help of Wm. Hamilton, who was pulling out rock a short distance away from the scene of the accident, and after considerable digging and pulling Mr. Wible was rescued from his perilous position The pressure of the earth injured him somewhat and he was feeling pretty sore the next morning, but feels mighty fortunate in escaping as lucky as he did.—Bancroft Register.

The little old red schoolhouse with a curriculum confined to the three Rs and one teacher for all grades is rapidly becoming obsolete in Iowa. The consolidated school, with twelve well defined grades and courses in industrial arts and languages, is taking its place in practically every county in the state. There are now 288 consolidated schools in Iowa, fifty-three of these having been built since July 1. Some counties have as many as five consolidated schools. In 181 different districts of the state the question of consolidated schools will be voted upon in the near future.

On October 14 and 15 the Pure Bred Breeders' association of Dallas county and the Farm bureau, with the support of the Waukee Commercial club, held a county fair and live stock show at Waukee. Several

As long as corn and hogs hold the present relative price positions the Iowa farmer has little reason to complain. But if the margin becomes much narrower more than one hog raiser in this state will find small returns for his labor.

Every bank in every county of the state will act as agent for the collection of funds for the Roosevelt Memorial fund. The drive in some counties has been slow in starting for reasons that were unavoidable, but indications are that the finish will not be slow.

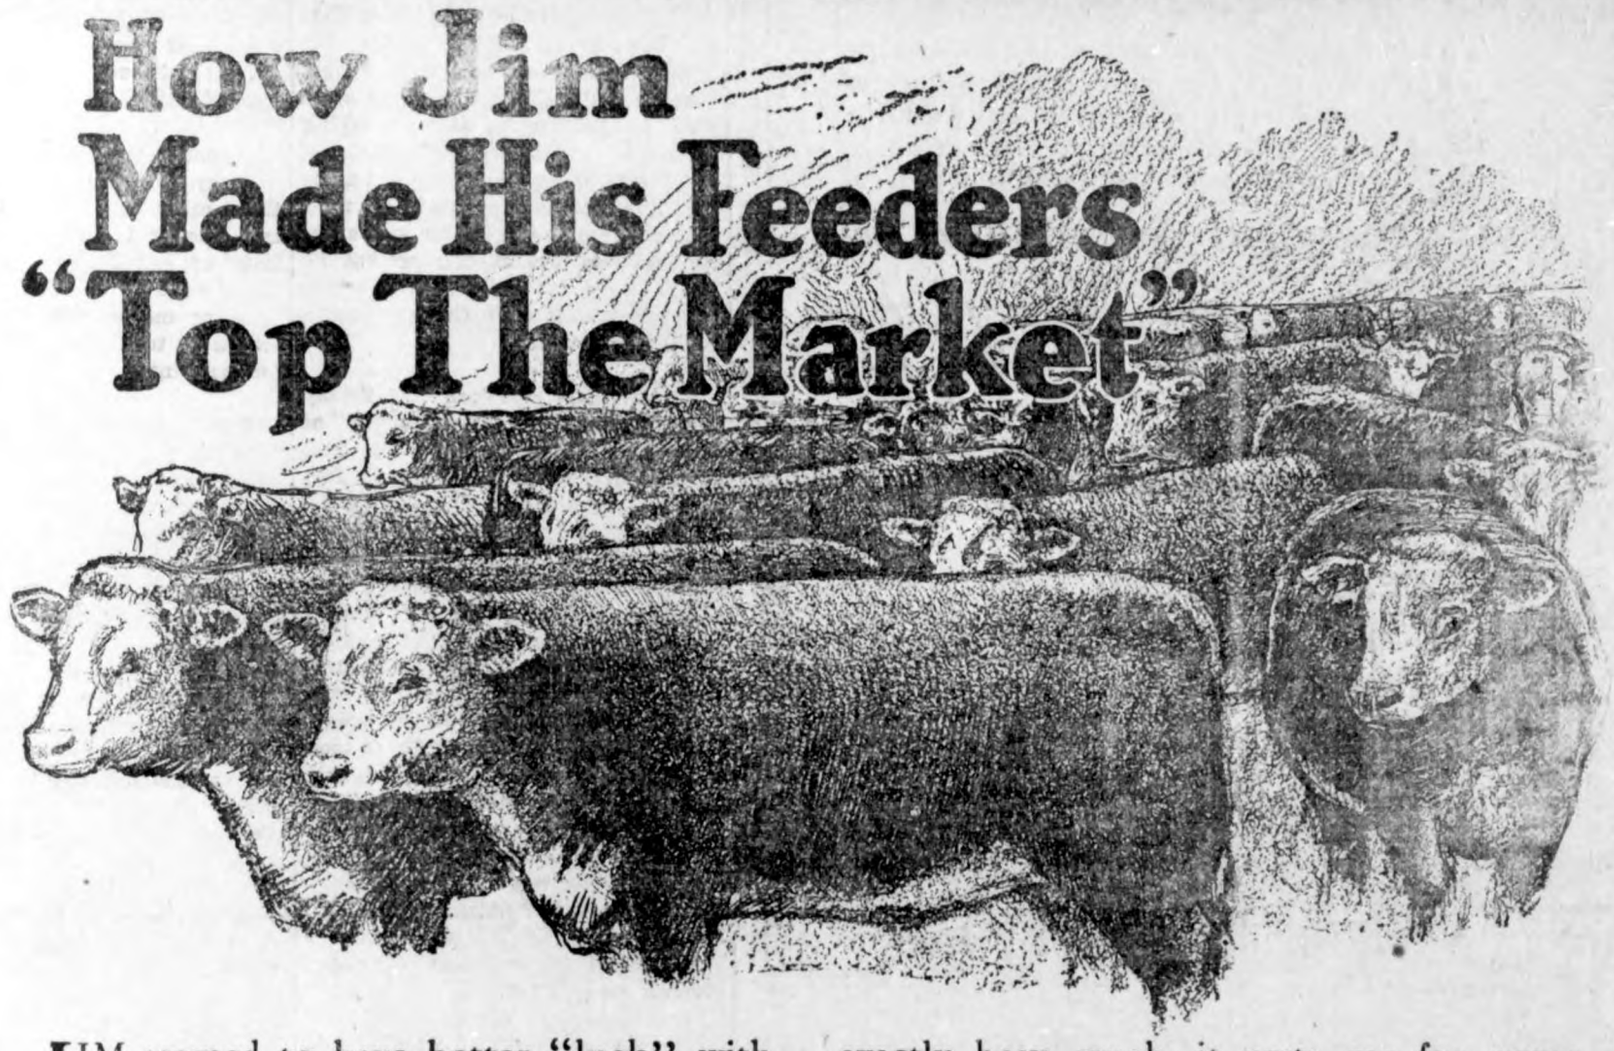
How Jim Made His Feeders "Top The Market"



JIM seemed to have better "luck" with his feeders than his neighbors. Time after time his cattle "topped the market" at Chicago and South Omaha.

Finally, Charlie Bascom from down Northville way, came right out bluntly and asked, "How in the world do you do it, Jim?"

And Jim told him.

"One 'how' is right here in my hand," confessed Jim, holding up a copy of Successful Farming. "There isn't an issue of this paper that fails to give me valuable pointers on feeding and other matters pertaining to making money on feeders. Certainly the most practical, downright helpful publication I get.

"You see, Successful Farming is largely edited by its subscribers—practical farmers with just the same problems as you and I, Charlie. That's why the articles in it are so useful—and down-to-the-soil correct.

"For instance, one article in it showed me where I'd been making mistakes in winter feeding and watering. That one article was worth 10 years' subscription price to me. Taught me a lot about feeding roughage and grain to get best results—to stimulate the cattle's digestion and make them get more 'good' out of their feed.

"Another time, another article gave me helpful 'tips' about how to grow the best feeding crops—and how to feed them to best advantage to stock on my farm.

"Most important of all—this paper has shown me how to use my pencil and paper to figure rations, costs and other items which enter into the cost of feeder-gains. It has, in various ways, shown me how to know exactly how much it costs me for every pound of gain my cattle make. That has enabled me to not only send prime cattle to market, but also come home with prime profits in my pocket. It has taught me how to maintain a good margin of profit between my cost of gain and the market prices—so that I can feel more comfortable if the market breaks a bit.

"That's why I like and read Successful Farming. Its practical help has enabled me to take a lot of the gambling out of stock raising."

800,000 farmers, their wives and their whole families, take a lively interest in Successful Farming. Every issue contains articles that will help you in every department of farm home and farm work. Probably no other paper in America has the same co-operation of the majority of its subscribers as has Successful Farming. It helps its subscribers because its subscribers help Successful Farming.

Think of getting such a paper as this for merely 35 cents a year—$1 for three years.

And, remember, more than 800,000 of America's shrewdest farmers—more than 800,000 of America's most prosperous and happy farm families—read and rely on Successful Farming.

An accomplishment,

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Straatman retunred last week Wednesday from a six weeks' visit with relatives and friends at St. Marys, Ohio, and other points near there. Ohio was formerly Mr. Straatman's home but it has been about twenty five years since he was there last and he thought it was about time to go back and renew old acquaintances.

There are a number of interesting new ads in this issue of the Times and it will well pay you to look them over carefully.

Charlie Griffen stalled us on the street the other day, wrote out a check for the Times and told us to send it to him via. Garner Route. He says he has run the farm too long now without having the Klemme Times to read after chore time.

Mrs. Anna Fuller, Mrs. Elmer Fuller and Mrs. E. G. Ell and son were all at Garner Saturday afternoon.

Wm. Bachman the manager for the new farmers stock shipping association is right on the job these days. We meant to have an interview with Mr. Bachman but he was out of town the fore part of the week. However, we will say this for "Bill" now that he is out of town and can't lick us for writing this little local, that we believe he will make a very good manager for the farmers as he is taking a great deal of interest in the work. "Bill" will perhaps have a little office built near the stock yards in the near future where he can better look after the business, but at the present he has his office at the house and you can either walk over there or reach him by telephone.

A. D. Gimer returned last Friday from the Buttermakers' 'pow-wow" at Dubuque. The buttermakers also took along sample butter and we were fortunate enough to have a pound of the butter left here to pass judgment upon. As a butter judge we claim we are second to none and there are none our equal. We say that Mr. Gimer's butter is absolutely the best we ever ate, the same was also unanimously voted "aye" by our better half who also claims to be a great butter judge. No doubt the butter Mr. Gimer took to Dubuque competed very favorably with any of the other creameries of the state.

Henry Beier was transacting business at Garner last Saturday.

August Lau returned Saturday evening from Minneapolis. About a week or ten days ago Mr. Lau left for Milwaukee, Wis., and from there he went to Chicago, later going to Minneapolis. The cause of his travels is that he is having specialists examine his leg which he injured some time ago and which troubles him a great deal of late.

John Opsal began duties as clothing man at the Wellemeyer store on Monday morning, and it looks quite natural to see John's smiling face behind the counter. John has been acting as salesman for the Black Hawk Fruit Co., of Waterloo, for the past six months or so but prior to that time was selling groceries at Wellemeyers. We are glad to have Mr. Opsal back with us again.

Mart Palmby, of some point in Minnesota, the name of the town we did not get, arrived in Klemme Monday for a few days' visit with old friends.

Haiko Brass has been hauling lumber to his farm southwest of Klemme for the past week with which he will erect a fine new barn. Mr. Brass is located closer to Goodell but undoubtedly the fine lumber and low prices in Klemme attracted him here to purchase his lumber.

Chas. Cortney, the young man who has been working for Elmer Ludeke this summer and fall, left Monday for Kansas City where he will visit with his folks for a while before gong to Dallas, Texas, where he intends to work during the winter.

Duck shooting has been good this week, but more especially so Monday. Local hunters say that they never saw so many ducks before in their life and that the ponds were almost covered with ducks. Some ponds sheltered several hundred ducks and they were easy to crawl up to.

Sinews of Virtue.

Good company and good discourse are the very sinews of virtue.—Walton.

Wallace Pavey went to Forest City Tuesday morning on the train to take n the Home Coming and Armistice Day celebration at Forest City. At the fore part of the week the weather looked like bob sleigh riding would be more in line, but Forest City was lucky in having a good day for their celebration. A Home Coming celebration is scheduled for the 18th at Mason City. Pete Becker, of Garner, has been hired to roast beeves for their free barbaque lunch.

Louie Knoke went to Mason City Tuesday to have his arm looked after. It is getting along quite well now.

Ray White and family went to Forest City Tuesday for a visit with home folks and friends.

Lee Ell, of Mason City was a Klemme visitor Tuesday.

"Prof." Tompkins drove over from Garner last Friday looking up a few life insurance prospects.

Jim Young, of Garner, was a business caller here Monday and while in town found a little time to call at the Times Office.

The dance here last Thursday evening was very well attended and there was a good crowd from Garner, Goodell and Belmond. All report the best kind of a time.

A number of Klemme men left Tuesday evenng for Omaha. Among the number were Max Willard, Lyell and Leonard Wellemeyer, Tony Hausher and Dave Anderson. The latter went to visit with a couple of brothers and the rest of the gentlemen went to Omaha to look up work for the winter.

Master Dorance Day went out in the country with Grandpa Smith last Friday and is expected back today (Tuesday). John Day, his "dad," was getting pretty lonesome and said if Dorance didn't take a notion to come back to town soon he would have to go out in the country and stay with him.

According to the Clerk's records at the county court house we notice a marriage license was issued to R. J. Roths and Miss Minnie Bachman, both of this place, on the 29th of October. We have not heard, but presume they are happily married by this time and we extend congratulations to the happy couple.

Prof. Collins left last Friday evening for an over Sunday visit at his home at Eldora.

Ed. Jacobs autoed to Garner Sunday afternoon for a visit with his folks.

Despite the bad weather Monday evening a good house turned out to see the minstrel show at the Idle Hour Theatre.

Harvey Stille went to Dallas, Texas Monday evening where he will work this winter.

H. L. Suckow and family have moved into town and are now quite comfortably located for the time being in part of Mrs. Kirschner's house where they will live for the winter.

Henry Freie is getting his house pretty well up in the east part of town or more exactly locating, on the lot east of Chris Blumer's residence. Henry expects to get the house completed soon so they can move in this winter. It will add another fine residence to Klemme.

What was a big heap of bricks a few weeks ago now looms up as a fine new implement store for Henry Lau & Son. The building is pretty well up now on the exterior but the finishing is yet to be done.

John Waterman is watching every train now days in the hopes that the large plate glass front will arrive so that he can go ahead and have his post office building finished up. John is quite anxious to get into the new place and sell stamps in the fine new building. Oh, yes, we might add, even if it be a little late, that John has quite an up-to-date feature in the post office. Some people do not know that the Klemme Post Office has a stamp cancelling machne of the latest type. All John has to do, or his assistant, is to chuck a bunch of letters into the machine and turn the crank and—whizz—they are all cancelled. Quite handy and saves a lot of work, says John.

The World's Greatest Phonograph Value

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

Quick! Read this through and grasp this extraordinary opportunity today! This remarkable offer is the result of Mr. Edison's expressed wish to see a phonograph in every home in the U. S. A.

He has given his consent to this Free Trial of the Amberola in your home. There are absolutely no "strings" to this offer. You do not have to pay or promise to pay one cent in connection with this Free Trial. You are not placed under the slightest obligation.

Come to our store today or tomorrow, pick out your Amberola and a dozen Amberol Records. We will deliver them promptly to your home. Let the Amberola entertain you for three days—ample time for careful judgment and comparison. At the end of the three days' Free Trial if you do not want the Amberola we will call for it—and thank you for giving the Amberola this trial. If you do want it, we will arrange terms of payment to suit you.

How can Amberola dealers afford to give these Free Trials? Because in the overwhelming majority of these Free Trials, people never want to part with the Amberola! Edison's great inventive brain has made the Amberola so superior to ordinary phonographs and "talking machines" that in those three days of Free Trial it sings its way into peoples' hearts and homes forever!

Numbers of people will instantly avail themselves of this Free Trial offer. If you do not act at once we may have to put you on a waiting list. So let us hear from you right away!

Iowa district judges want more money. They are not going to strike but they have appointed a committee to make arrangements to take the matter up with the sate legislature. At present district judges in Iowa receive $4,600 a year.

The method of conducting nurses' training schools, the specializing of certain subjects by nurses and the educational side of the profession was taken up in the business session of the Iowa State Nurses association at Hotel Fort Des Moines.

Eighty-two per cent of the traffic on the Iowa primary road system in 1918 was motor driven. Forty-seven per cent of all traffic on these same roads was strictly local; 48 per cent inter-urban or inter-county, and but 7 per cent was inter-state or tourist.

"Bright Lad" a Hereford calf raised by Steinbrich Brothers at Solon, has been sold for $10,000 at a sale of Hereford cattle in Kansas City, the purchaser being Frank L. Fox of Kansas City. The animal had been disposed of by the former owners at a West Liberty sale.

Only two new candidates appeared for teachers' examinations at the examinations held at Charles City recently. Six teachers took the examinations to obtain higher grades. Under the new state ruling admitting girls of seventeen to teach there has been only one in Floyd county to receive a certificate.

Owners of motor vehicles must wait a few days before making application for the 1920 number plates and payment of the new license fee. The reason for the delay is explained in the fact that the secretary of state has not yet sent out the schedule of weight of cars and factory prices for the various makes.

Tuberculosis must be prevalent among swine somewhere throughout the state of Iowa. Out of 70,700 hogs forwarded in five shipments in September from Sioux City to the Chicago market, 2,000 of them were afflicted with tuberculosis, or 26.47 per cent. An effort is to be made to locate the point of origin of this infected swine.

Practically every chapter of the 128 Red Cross chapters in Iowa are hard at work on their campaign. Rain and bad roads are handicapping the work in some counties, but excellent reports are coming in. Allamakee county, reporting a membership of 4, 908, was the first county in the state to report its campaign completed.

Charles Ballard, of Odebolt, July 7 harvested 304 bushels of potatoes from an acre tract and immediately prepared the ground again, planting potatoes, peas and beans. On September 22 he harvested his potatoes and again secured 145 bushels, besides having a nice crop of peas and beans, the first mess of which was obtained September 14.

The farm federation drive for Marshall county is on and it is the aim of the campaign to secure practically every farmer in the county as a member in the farm organizations. State and national campaigns now are on to increase the membership of the farm bodies, and in counties adjoining Marshall from 90 per cent to practically all farmers have enrolled.

The question whether or not Iowa land will produce in a manner to justify the present price, is often discussed, and advocates pro and con seem to present forceful arguments. However, when we contemplate the fact that sugar beets in Indiana, this season, have yielded in excess of $200 per acre, we get a vision of the potential possibilities of Iowa land, knowing, or believing, at least, that Iowa soil is at present superior to that of Indiana.

Plans for replenishing lakes and rivers of Iowa with game fish were proposed at a meeting of the Iowa Fish and Game Conservation society at the Elks' club in Des Moines recently.

Iowa farmers have sustained a loss of approximately $210,000,000 since the drop in hog prices began several weeks ago. There were approximately 10,000,000 hogs raised during the past season in Iowa, and the depreciation averaged $7 per hundred pounds, estimating average weight of the hogs at 300 pounds.

Farm income tax and management problems were discussed by five specialists at a district conference of county agents and farm bureau officers held at the Polk county courthouse. The men present were informed concerning these subjects, so that they may conduct an educational campaign among farmers of the district concerning them.

William Keating, residing in Polk county just west of Des Moines, is doubtless the champion wheat grower of the state this season. He had 37 acres of winter wheat and secured on an average 35 bushels to the acre. For that sized acreage he has a good record to his credit. He hauled, the wheat to the mills in Des Moines and received $2.12 per bushel. That was $74.20 per acre and from the 37 acres a total of $2,745.40 was received.

Polk county will have a $100,000 tubercular hospital as soon as a suitable location can be decided upon. Plans for the building have been started by the board of trustees of the Polk county hospital. The trustees recently finished an inspection of the state hospital at Iowa City and several county hospitals with a view to getting suggestions as to the best type of building.

These patents have been granted residents of Iowa: W. R. Smith, Frederick, attachment for motor cars. Mary McGee, Muscatine, stove pipe attachment. F. C. Feckley, Delta, bottle washer. C. C. Anderson, Fairfield, metallic packing. S. J. Van Kuren, Cedar Rapids, apparatus for ripening, curing and pasturizing milk, cream and other liquids. Harvey M. Strong, Des Moines, transmission band adjuster.

Wright county farm agent has been experiencing considerable trouble of late with animal diseases over the county. With the aid of the federal veterinarian four outbreaks of hog cholera were checked and the herds put under quarantine. Due to a large amount of mixed infection and abnormal symptoms some difficulty has been experienced in diagnosing the real trouble in many of these cases. Losses have been sudden and quite heavy in a few instances.

During the past year farm buildings valued at more than $2,355,000 have been erected on Iowa farms. All of these buildings have been built from plans furnished by Iowa State college. This does not take into account the many structures erected by farmers throughout the state from plans secured elsewhere. In the office of every county agent in the state may be seen a neatly bound volume of all plans used by the college promoting farm buildings on Iowa farms. The farm building plan service of the Agricultural Extension department has grown by leaps and bounds, and there is hardly a county in the state where there is not a tendency on the part of the farmers for better farm buildings.

That Iowa has reason to fear a visit of the European corn borer, through the introduction of sweet corn from the east to be used as seed, is the opinion of E. D. Ball, state etomologist, who has returned from New England. The borer has been found in four of the eastern states. Massachusetts and New York have the largest infection, but it has spread to the edge of New Hampshire and has been found in a small area in Pennsylvania. A large part of Iowa's sweet corn seed is bought in the east. It is shipped on the ear in order that the purchasers can see the kind of ear they are buying. The worm not only feeds on the corn, but bores through the cob and stalk, so that an infected ear may appear perfectly sound until the corn is cut from the cob.

FARM TERRACING IS VALUABLE PRACTICE

Pennsylvania Farmer Enthusiastic Over Benefits.

Great Advantages to Be Derived Are Little Understood in Greater Portion of Northern States—Prevents Soil Washing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The owner of a large farm in Pennsylvania, on which one of the first attempts at terracing in the North Atlantic states was undertaken last spring, is enthusiastic about the benefits of this work. He has asked that the drainage division of the Bureau of Public Roads, which supervised the project, aid in extending the terracing this fall.

This sort of rural engineering is new in the region, and the low ridges at various levels on the sloping fields of this farm have occasioned the liveliest interest in the whole district. Terracing of various types has been practiced in parts of the South for a number of years, but in many sections of the North its great advantages are little understood. Consequently, the bureau is particularly interested in this demonstration of the permanent value of terracing on this Pennsylvania farm.

The Bureau of Public Roads points out that the washing away of earth by water costs the farmers of the United States approximately one million dollars every year. Soil losses from this cause occur in every state of the union and in almost every county of every state. Terracing is the most effective method of prevention.

There are two types of terraces—the bench terrace and the ridge terrace. A field of bench terraces resembles a series of benches or a flight of steps. Ridge terraces, as the name implies, are simply ridges of earth thrown up across the slopes or hillsides. Ridge terraces are divided into two classes with respect to width and base, narrow base and the broad base. A broad base is the more recent type of the two, and as yet has been used in only a few localities. However, it is rapidly coming into general use and is taking the place of the narrow base because of its superiority for most, if not all, conditions. This is the type on the Pennsylvania farm. Its chief advantage lies in the fact that it can be readily crossed by large farm machinery, and therefore it does not interfere with the usual farm operations. The broad embankment of earth gives the terrace strength to withstand the pressure of water and prevents breaks due to seepage.

SWINGING DOOR VERY HANDY

Device Will Enable Farmer to Keep Hog Pens More Comfortable in Winter and Summer.

A door attached at the top so it will swing in and out will not only enable one to keep the pens warmer in winter and cooler in summer but will also prevent the hogs from breaking the door off, and does not require the care that doors attached otherwise need, says a writer in Michigan Farmer. There are different methods of fastening. A criss-cross belt hinge works well, or an ordinary metal hinge with the pivot extended below door frame an inch or so. Still another method is to insert pins in the doors and through the door frame about three inches from the top.

REPAIR SHOP QUITE USEFUL

Time and Money Saved When Tractor or Other Machinery Happens to Get Out of Order.

A shop that need not be equipped with expensive tools, but will be found almost indispensable when installed, is a demand of modern farming. Should a tractor or other farm machine or implement need repair, both time and money can be saved if a repair shop is on the place.

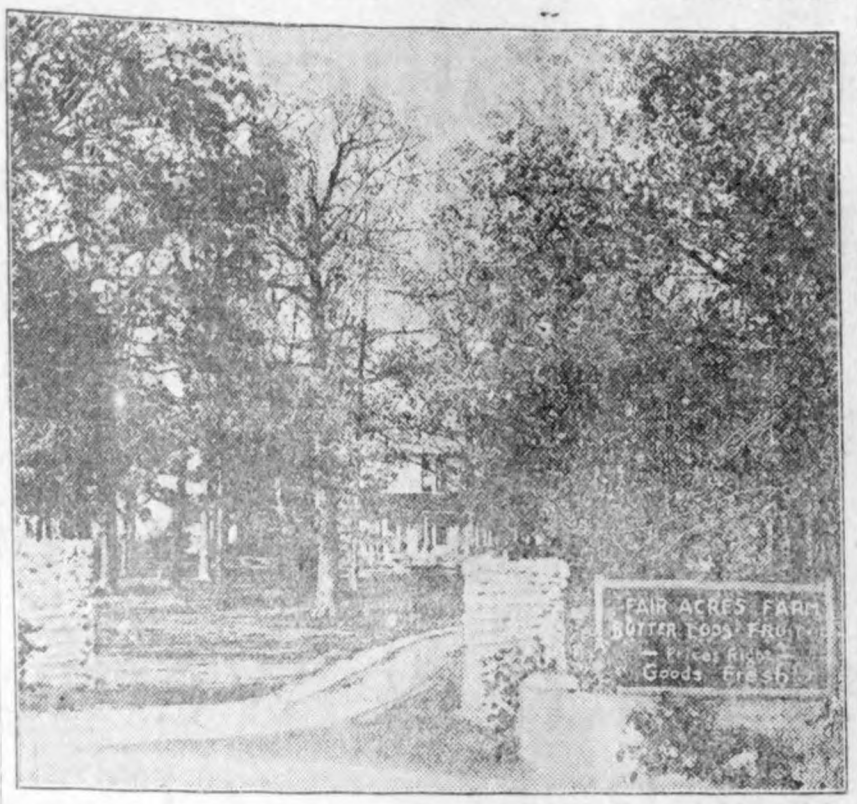
A forge, anvil, tongs and hammer will make welds and straighten and bend rods. Chisels, wrenches and a press drill are needed in this shop. Old files can be made into useful tools. The farm junk heap can be raided and will produce wonderful results by the outfit, and a trip to the blacksmith shop in town and vexatious delays can be avoided.

GOOD FEED FOR LIVE STOCK

Properly Made Silage Is Excellent for Horses, Cattle and Sheep—Increases the Flow of Milk Greatly.

Silage properly made is a good feed for horses, cattle and sheep. It increases the flow of milk in winter when prices are highest, thus lowering the cost of production and increasing the profits.

MANY METHODS BY WHICH CONSUMERS MAY BE MADE CUSTOMERS FOR FARM PRODUCTS



How a Neat Bulletin Board Can Be Made to Announce Products for Sale.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Mention advertising to the old-time farmer and he thinks of large display-type announcements more or less expensively illustrated. But modern farmers have found scores of ways by which they can attract buyers for their products. The suggestions offered herewith are designed particularly for the farmer who is in a position to supply a given grade of goods in sufficient quantities to meet a stable demand. Butter, eggs, live and dressed poultry, dressed meat, home-rendered lard, sausage, fruit and vegetables are among the commodities the sales of which can be bettered by some form of farm advertising.

There are many means of direct appeal to buyers which are made particularly profitable by the tremendous increase in auto travel. Today that farm is remote indeed which is not passed many times a week by town or city motorists, the majority of whom are possible customers for the farmer. Consequently he must look well to the appearance of his place. Perhaps unsightly features of which he is not conscious exist, but the passerby, keen to discern these signs of laxness, hesitates to purchase at such a farm.

Uses for Bulletin Boards.

A bulletin board near the front gate is a big asset, if carefully prepared. In addition to the name of the farm or the farm owner, it should state in simple, large type the kinds of produce for sale and the prices. Some farmers have found supplementary notices, placed at a proper distance on either side of the main bulletin board, very valuable in calling attention to the latter. Suggested wording for these follows:

FAIR VALLEY FARM
Read Marketing Bulletin Ahead.

There are various ways in which the farm name can be displayed to the owner's financial advantage. Any farm will be better remembered by passing strangers if its name appears in neat lettering over or beside the main entrance or across the face of a barn. The farmer who possesses an auto truck—and he is legion these days—is overlooking a splendid advertising opportunity if he does not have the name of his farm and his special products neatly lettered on the side of his vehicle. Then every trip to town is a reminder to hundreds, perhaps thousands, of people that the owner is still "on the map." One dairy farmer who built up a large retail trade not only carried on his vehicles the name of his farm, but made all his trucks and wagons even more distinctive by painting them a dark yellow.

Letterheads a Help.

Printed letterheads are a real asset for the farmer who is selling to either wholesale or retail trade. The following form is suggestive:

FAIR VALLEY FARM
BUTTER, EGGS, DRESSED POULTRY, BY PARCEL POST FROM THE FARM TO YOU.
BLAND, MD.....19..

Many farmers who handle considerable quantities of produce find it profitable to use distinctive, printed wrappers. Another simple means of advertising is neatly printed gummed labels for use on the outside of packages sent by parcel post or express.

Advertisements in local or metropolitan papers should be short and should give a description of the goods with the prices, and the name and address of the person advertising. In some cities the Sunday edition gives better results than the daily edition.

What Advertiser Should Know.

The person who advertises must offer a product that is wanted by the persons who read the paper at the time the product is advertised, in the places where the paper has a circulation. In other words, he must know what to advertise, when to advertise, and where to advertise. The following are suggested forms for parcel post classified advertising:

James J. Jameson, Proprietor

Fresh eggs, direct from the farm. Send ——— for three dozen delivered by parcel post, prepaid. Fair View Farm, Blank, Va.

Butter, direct from dairy. Fresh, clean, and sweet. Send ——— for two pounds, delivered postpaid by parcel post. Fair View Farm, Blank, Va.

Cherries from the tree to you by prepaid parcel post. Picked the day they are mailed. Send ——— cents for ——— quarts to Fair View Farm, Blank, Va.

Typical of the small number of farmers who have entered the field of national advertising is one in a middle-western state, who has built up a country-wide trade in his special brand of home-made sausage by using the advertising columns of publications of national circulation, supplemented by cleverly prepared pamphlets and the use of distinctive wrappers.

BENEFITS OBTAINED FROM BETTER SIRES

Farmer Increases Products and Receives More Money.

Crusade Launched by Department of Agriculture Will Eventually Result in Reducing Cost of Living to Consumer.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The definition of the term "pure-bred sires" is written in one word—"economy." There are many definitions, many of them learned and long, that might be written, but the breeding experts of the United States department of agriculture, when they met to launch the state and national crusade for "Better Sires—Better Stock," agreed that the primary meaning of it is economy.

The scrub hog requires a certain number of bushels of corn to make 200 pounds of pork. The pure-bred or high-grade hog takes the same number of bushels of corn and makes 300 pounds of pork. The pure-bred or high-grade cow makes three gallons of milk out of the same quantity of silage that the scrub cow uses to make a gallon and a half of milk. These figures are not meant to be scientifically exact, of course, but merely to illustrate the principle. The result is that the farmer gets more pounds of salable product out of his feed when he uses pure-bred sires at the head of his herds and flocks. He gets more money and his family lives better. But something else happens. When he sells more pounds of a better class of meat or more gallons of rich milk he feeds the city family better than he did when he kept scrub stock. The final result of pure-bred sires is that the farmer makes more money and the city family gets more and better food, probably at lower prices.

The crusade, the experts say, eventually will tend to result in reducing the cost of living to the consumer without taking the difference out of the pocket of the producer. For that reason, they point out, the city man has a definite money interest in the better sires crusade. While he can hardly be expected to put the same amount of effort into it that the live stock breeder should, he is expected to give encouragement and aid to the program whenever the opportunity offers. And there will be no lack of opportunity, particularly in the smaller cities and towns where the farmers are in close contact with the city business men.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Where is your binder?

Get the stables ready for winter.

* * *

Save some clover seed this season.

* * *

Comb honey should be removed from hive as soon as capped.

* * *

There is no money in working team or man in the rain.

* * *

Use the best seed obtainable; poor seed means low yields.

* * *

Trace chains and short tugs are a happy farm combination.

* * *

Don't waste and burn the straw. It is valuable and should be returned to the land.

LIVE STOCK

CARE FOR VACCINATED HOGS

Lack of Proper Attention Has Resulted in Material Losses Which May Be Avoided.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Improper care of hogs following their immunization against hog cholera, administered in public stock yards and after arrival at their destination, has resulted in losses which may be materially decreased. The following instructions for the prevention of losses are valuable:

"Shipments should be made promptly after immunization, or should be delayed for not less than ten days. Truck hauls and shipments not exceeding 36 hours in length can be made promptly to advantage.

"Avoid crowding; allow stocker hogs relatively more floor space than fat hogs.

"It is important that drinking water be constantly accessible to the hogs, except in severe winter weather. If the car does not contain special water devices, a water trough, protected by slats over its top, should be securely fastened to the floor.

"Little or no feed is necessary during the 24 hours following inoculation, but clean water should be accessible. Short-haul shipments need not be fed in transit.

"When hogs arrive at their destination they should not be driven over the roads, but hauled from the car to the farm in wagons or trucks. Load and unload gently. Avoid chasing and unnecessary excitement in handling. In summer, unload where there is natural woodland shade or shelter pens; in winter, where there are suitable clean, bedded houses.

"Protection against rain should be provided.

"Do not permit wallows in pasture or lot. The use of wallows by recently inoculated hogs may produce pneumonia.

"For the first two weeks, if it is in season, allow shipped hogs limited fresh pasturage. If alfalfa or other leguminous pasture is not available, a supplemental concentrate should be supplied. If no pasture, use self-feeders for soaked oats, and separate ones for tankage or other protein concentrate. At the end of two weeks begin gradually to change to the permanent ration. Keep fresh, clean water always available.

Do Not Neglect Hogs After Vaccination Against Cholera.

"Watch your hogs carefully each day for failure to feed or other signs of disease or sickness. Have a quarantine pen and place sick hogs in it promptly.

"Short rations and a laxative may be used for slightly sick hogs.

"The appearance of any disease in which a number of hogs are similarly affected requires immediate expert advice and treatment. Consult your veterinarian."

REDUCE LOSS BY CHOLERA

Farmers Must Organize in Determined Effort Consisting of Self-Imposed Quarantine.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Permanent reduction in losses from cholera, says the United States department of agriculture, can be expected only when farmers organize in a determined effort consisting principally of self-imposed quarantine, the continuous employment of sanitary measures and the early use of the serum treatment should the herd become infected or dangerously exposed.

PREVENT CROWDING OF PIGS

Properly Constructed Feed Trough Will Permit Each Little Porker to Get His Share.

Young pigs should be given their feed in such a manner that each individual pig gets its share. The simplest way to accomplish this is to allow the pigs to eat from a properly constructed feed trough, one that will keep the pigs out of the feed and will lessen the possibility of crowding.

Why That Lame Back?

Morning lameness, sharp twinges when bending and an all day backache; each is cause enough to suspect kidney complaint. If you feel tired all the time and are annoyed by dizzy spells, headaches and irregular kidney action, you have additional proof and should act quickly to prevent more serious kidney trouble. Use Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy that is recommended everywhere by grateful users. Ask your neighbor!

SALE STARTS

Wednesday Nov. 19

At 8:00 A. M.

STOCK WILL NOT LAST LONG---COME IN EARLY and MAKE YOUR SELECTION!

This shows one of the many different styles of players we have on display. All are thorougly high grade instruments, excellently manufactured of carefully selected material---instruments that possesses a purity of tone unexcelled and are so durable in construction that they are certain to be permanently satisfactory. You must see and hear them to appreciate their goodness.

Every Instrument brand new and doubly guaranteed for ten years

At this time it may seem rather peculiar to some that I am putting on a sale of player pianos particularly at prices less than the regular retail price and especially in view of the fact that there is a very serious shortage of goods. In the first place I count myself very fortunate in having this stock. In the second place it has been my policy to always give my customers the best that can be obtained without charging exorbitant prices. If you purchased anyone of these instruments at the regular retail price you would be getting your money's worth, for each instrument is worth every cent of the regular retail price but during this sale you will have an opportunity to obtain one of these instruments for less than the retail, saving you from $125 to $275, depending upon the instrument that you select. Each instrument is fully guaranteed to be thoroly high grade and excellently constructed.

"Waltham-Made" Instruments are renowned for their purity of tone. Most anybody can gather together materials for making a piano or player piano and produce an instrument that looks something like a piano or player but whether or not it will possess the requisite purity of tone is a question. It takes years of experience in order to produce an instrument of this kind. These instruments must not be confused with the cheap commercial piano with which the market is flooded. Each instrument is high and better than any that have been sold around here so far. If you will only come in and look these instruments over you will see for yourself that they are better. No instrument possesses the same carefully made plate. No other instrument is quite so well finished and none of them possess the purity of tone you will find in these.

Don't forget that while I have a large shipment of these instruments that they are not going to stay on my floor very long. First come, first served. Come quickly.

Last Tuesday evening while Otto Pueschel was on his way to Nora Springs on the road past Henry Buckmann's and just as he passed the drive into the Buckmann farm he met up with an automobile that wanted to go into the Buckmann drive and instead of waiting until Otto passed the drive, the driver of the other car turned in ahead of him, causing a head on collision. None of the occupants of the car were hurt, but both cars were put out of business. The repair on the Pueschel car amounted to $41 and about the same amount was spent on the other car to get it in shape to run again. Ed. Galloway of Nora Springs is the owner of the other car. Both cars were Fords.—Rudd Review.

Theodore Parker has wisely said that men and women, and especially young people, do not know that it takes years to marry completely two hearts, even of the most loving and well-sorted. But nature allows no sudden change. We slope very gradually from the cradle to the summit of life. Marriage is gradual, a fraction of us at a time. A happy wedlock is a long falling in love. We know young folks think love belongs only to brown hair and plump, round, crimson cheeks. So it does, for its beginning, just as Mount Washington begins at Boston Bay. But the golden marriage is a part of love which the bridal day knows nothing of. Youth is the tassel and silken flower of love, age is the full corn, ripe and solid in the ear. Beautiful is the morning of love with its prophetic crimson, violet, purple and gold, with its hopes of days that rae to come. Beautiful also is the evening of love with its glad remembrances, and its rainbow side turned toward heaven, as well as earth.—Wesley News-World.

J. N. DAY'S

Klemme, Iowa

"The Busy Store"

The writer took a day off last week and went to see the old familiar sights around his old home and birthplace in Hancock county. At Garner where we witnessed the first sunrise—our first sunrise—where we used to snare gophers where the brick schoolhouse now stands, the passing years have wrought many changes. Brick banks and store buildings now adorn many of the business lots that a few years ago were littered up with unpainted, unsightly and poorly constructed wood frames. Garner now boasts of having one of the strongest co-operative farmers' institutions in the state in the elevator line and also of having a wonderfully successful creamery association owned and operated by the farmers of that vicinity. They are now talking of paving their main thoroughfare, which, if done, will make Garner a real town. At Klemme where we were given our first lessons in the art of building a newspaper, we were dumfounded when we beheld the improvements and changes that have been made there in the last two years. Several new residences, costly and modern, and new brick business blocks have been erected that transform a street once weary, worn and weatherbeaten, into a modern city down town avenue. And outstanding among these improvements is one business block that would be a credit to Des Moines or Omaha. This is the Wellemeyer department store—a creation of Mr. Wellemeyer's imaginative powers for building a business in a town of 600 that sells goods to people from towns on every sidet hat amply justify and compensate Mr. W. for expending close to $40,000 in this new department home. Everything in this store is planned with an idea in mind of serving the patrons of any department with speed, accuracy and pleasure. It is almost impossible to enumerate the various departments under this one but let it be enough to say that it is three stories from basement to roof with not less than ten departments on each floor. Mr. Wellemeyer worked two years on the plans, after which he paid an architect 400 to strengthen, beautify and perfect them, and we will say without hesitation there is not another business block in northern Iowa that can approach it for service to the public and benefit to the town. Klemme may well feel proud to have the building and to claim Mr. Wellemeyer as one of its business men. Many of our readers will wonder why we have dealt so extensively on this subject. Well, it's this way. It isn't the size of the town that makes good business men, but rather the size of the business men that makes a good town. If you are small and pessimistic you won't grow and expand like you would if you are possessed of large ideas and optimism Mr. Wellemeyer is optimistic, jovial and pleasant and has 10 sales people serving him in a town of six hundred people, with no manufacturing industries to depend on. His territory is a 30 mile radius any direction from his store. Rudd has the same opportunities and again we say it's the size of the man that counts.—Rudd Review.

RURAL CARRIER EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission has announced an examination for the county of Hancock, Iowa, to be held at Clarion and Algona, on December 13, 1919, to fill the position of rural carrier at Corwith and Kanawha and vacancies that may occur later on rural routes from other postoffices in the above mentioned county. The examination will be open only to citizens who are actually domiciled in the territory of a postoffice in the county and who meet the other requirements set forth in form No. 1977. Admission of women will be limited to the widows of U. S. soldiers, sailors or marines, and to the wives of United States soldiers, sailors or marines who are physically disqualified for examination by reason of injuries received in the line of military duty. This form and application blanks may be obtained from the offices mentioned above or from the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C. Applications should be forwarded to the Commission at Washington at the earliest practicable date

One of the examples of perpetual motion machines given by Mr. Benham is the electric dry pile, of which a celebrated specimen made by Singer 75 years ago "has been continuously tinkling its little chime bell at Oxford for the whole of that long period of time and shows no sign at present of any actual diminution of energy." Of course, no one knows what the life of the electric dry pile may be.

LARGE CROWDS ENJOYED ARMISTICE DAY

Weather Did Not Seriously Interfere With Enjoyment of the Splendid Program

Armistice Day, while not the most prepitious for an outdoor celebration, proved to be a successful event. Although the inclement weather kept many at home who otherwise had planned to come, the streets were filled with people in the morning at the parade hour. The parade was headed by the Buffalo Center band, a musical organization that has more than made good and its appearance and willingness to go through with every detail assigned has made a lasting impression not alone with the people of Forest City but every one who were present in the city that day. The strong feature of the day's program was the notable address by E. G. Dunn of Mason City. It is doubtful whether a stronger talk on the vital issues confronting the American public was ever delivered in Forest City. The speaking program was at the opera house instead of the large tent as previously planned. The change was made necessary due to the weather. It is estimated that two thousand people gained admittance to the theatre.

At the noon hour, the soldiers, sailors, marines and their folks and friends were served with dinner at the High School building. The dinner was prepared by the various ladies' aid societies of Forest City, was served under the direction of Miss Stark assisted by Mrs. Oliver Gorden, Miss Jennie Thorson, Miss Gunderson and Mrs. Connor. Some four or five hundred people were served.

The afternoon program was carried out as advertised.

During the evening the free dance, given at Yeoman hall and the other at the Bergie garage building, afforded enjoyment to hundreds of people.—Winebago Republican.

DON'T FEEL THANKFUL?

Many a man—and woman, too—insists there's "nothing to be thankful for" in his—or her—life. And these thankless ones are not all near the bottom; they are not all poor, lonely, sorrow-laden. Indeed, you'll find more who "have nothing to be thankful for" in the middle walks of life than elsewhere, good, honest folk who have met with a measure of success, a taste of reverse, and quite a few unrealized dreams. Probably it is because of the dreams that they feel so thankless.

They hoped for too much. Their air castles were too magnificent, too airy, and too feebly supported by energy and will power. But because they hoped for much, gained little, they are come to this Thanksgiving time with "nothing to be thankful for."

Of course they err. The living human being has much to be thankful for. He has life, the greatest thing on earth, to be thankful for. The man who wants it has a job, another thing to be thankful for. He has a family, children, a home, an appetite for food, the church, the school, books, why, man alive! we could go on for the length and breadth of this page setting down things for which we, you, and all of us can—AND SHOULD—be thankful.

If you can't see it that way; if to you your life appears minus reasons for thankfulness, go out into the highways and byways of the world and see the human beings who have less than you—and be thankful. That is one sure way of acquiring one's own share of hat thankful spirit. It can not fail. Don't, we beg of you, attempt to instill thankfulness into your heart and mind by turning your eyes upon those who have more than you—better health, greater wealth, more power. Those who gaze too steadily upon the larger possessions of others are those who chorus:

"We have nothing to be thankful for."

BIG BAND ORGANIZED MONDAY EVENING

KLEMME ASSURED OF A BIG BAND FOR YEARS TO COME

NMonday night a number of boys and young men met at the First National bank to discuss the possibilities of organizing a band for Klemme. We are pleased to say that what will be the biggest band in Northern Iowa, was organized. Twenty-four members joined the band to start with. At least a half a dozen or ten more beginners are expected to join the band, but could not be at the meeting the first night. Quite a number of boys and young men in the country are also in the band and several more in the country have given their assurance that they want to join the band. When the band is fully recruited there will be between thirty and perhaps forty pieces in the Klemme band, which means that Klemme will have one of the biggest bands in the state.

After discussing the various subjects of the band the different members answered a roll call by giving the instrument they wished to play. And as in the case in all beginning bands about half wanted to play cornet. However the officers of the band selected from this the number that they thought would make the best players on the diffesent instruments and assigned some to other instruments in order that the band might be well balanced and with the result that the following line up was chosen as a starter:

Cornets—
Fred Arnold
Earl Josten
Milvern Ell
Charles Gibbs
Cliff Lenz
Milton Lenz
Mellophones
Frank Gibbs
Harl Gimer
Albert White
Leslie Hartbeck
Donald Stille
Trombones—
R. A. Jorgenson
Arthur Johnson
Bass—
Fred Bell
Clarinets—
C. G. Waterman
Glenn Busch
Verner Schlawein
Jeff Bell
Baritones—
A. R. White
Howard Wiles
Saxophones—
Andrew Wellemeyer
Harry Buss
John Baumgartner
Snare Drums—
Adolph Lauritzen
Bass Drums—
Vacant

We can easily place several more players in the band besides the above players. Anyone wishing to play in the band may do so by calling either R. A. Jorgenson or C. G. Waterman.

The band boys also chose their officers and elected R. A. Jorgenson, president; C. G. Waterman, Secretary and Treasurer; Howard Wiles, Librarian; and Chas. Gibbs, Janitor. The next meeting will be Monday, December 1st, at the First National Bank until other band rooms can be found. It is hoped that at our next meeting we will have a list of band instruments from which to order so that the band can fully be equipped and ready for rehearsal in about three weeks or a month.

Don't forget that we can use at least ten more players in the band. We lso want all the old players to be at the next meeting. The band as it was organized Monday evening had only three old band men present, the rest are all beginners. Talk band to everybody you meet, tell them about Klemme's big band and then get the other fellow to join. Age makes no difference. All boys from ten years to sixty are welcome to join.

Peace or War? Dorothy Is Forced to Choose.

Synopsis — Geoffry Carlyle, master of sailing ships at twenty-six, is sentenced to 20 years' servitude in the American colonies for participation in the Monmouth rebellion in England. Among the passengers on board the ship on which he is sent across are Roger Fairfax, wealthy Maryland planter; his niece, Dorothy Fairfax, and Lieutenant Sanchez, a Spaniard, who became acquainted with the Fairfaxes in London. Carlyle meets Dorothy, who informs him her uncle has bought his services. Sanchez shows himself an enemy of Carlyle. The Fairfax party, now on its own sloop in the Chesapeake bay, encounters a mysterious bark, the Namur of Rotterdam. Carlyle discovers that Sanchez is "Black Sanchez," planning to steal the Fairfax gold and abduct Dorothy. He fights Sanchez and leaves him for dead. In a battle with Sanchez' followers, however, he is overpowered and thrown into the bay. In a desperate effort to save Dorothy, Carlyle decides to swim to the Namur. By a ruse he gets aboard and mingles with the crew. The pirates return to the Namur with Dorothy, the captured gold and Sanchez, badly wounded but still alive. Carlyle finds a friend in Watkins, an English sailor. Estada, acting captain, makes Carlyle first mate of the Namur.

CHAPTER XV.

—10—

The Cabin of the Namur.

Both huge, black hands grasped the spokes, and it was evident that it required all his giant strength to control the bucking wheel. He was an ugly-looking brute, the lower portion of his face apelike and the wool growing so low as to leave him scarcely an inch of forehead. His eyes lifted an instant from the binnacle card to glance at me curiously. They exhibited no flash of recognition.

For half an hour Estada hung about aft, apparently paying no attention to me, and yet watching my movements closely. There was little to be done, but I thought it best to keep the watch reasonably busy, so they might thus learn that I knew my work. They proved prompt and capable enough, although I was eyed with some curiosity when I first went forward, and, no doubt, was very thoroughly discussed behind my back. The idlers amidships were a totally different class—a mongrel scum, profanely chatting in Spanish or swaggering about the deck, their very looks a challenge. However, they kept out of my way, and I found no occasion to interfere with their diversions. After Estada left the deck the majority amused themselves gambling, and as I had received no orders to interfere I permitted the games to proceed. Mendez interfered only once on occasion of a brief fight. My only instructions from the Portuguese on his going below was to call him at once if a sail was sighted. Apparently he was satisfied of my ability to command the deck.

No occasion to call him arose during my watch. It was still daylight, but with a purple gleam across the waters, when LeVere arrived on deck for my relief. We were talking together abaft the wheel when Estada appeared in the companionway.

"Every promise of a clear night," he said, glancing about at the horizon. "Better change the course two points, LeVere; we are lying in too close to the coast for our purpose. The table call will come very shortly, Senor Gates."

I washed up hastily in my stateroom and came out into the cabin perplexed as to what might occur within the next few moments. Yet whatever the result there was no avoiding it. My every move was one of extreme caution.

Estada and Estevan awaited me. The latter was all rigged out, and with smooth black hair oiled and plastered down upon his forehead. I never beheld a more disagreeable face, or one which so thoroughly revealed the nature of a man. As I touched his hand, at Estada's brief introduction, it was as if I fingered a snake.

"This is your chair, Gates, and you will find we live well aboard the Namur—wine, women and song—hey, Manuel! Why not, when all are at command? Steward, you told the lady what my orders were. Then bid her join us."

We stood in silence, as Gunsaules crossed the deck and inserted a key in the after stateroom door. Manuel was grinning in full enjoyment, but the expression on the face of Estada was that of grim cruelty. I felt my hands grip like iron on my chair back and my teeth clinch in restraint. God, but I would have liked to grip the fellow where he stood—all the bottled-up hatred in my soul struggling for action. Yet that would only mean the death of all hope, and I turned my eyes away from him and stared with the others at the opening door.

Out into the full light of the cabin the woman came and halted barely a step in advance of the steward, her head uplifted proudly, her eyes on us. Never before had I realized her beauty, her personality, as I did then. Her posture was not that of defiance nor of surrender; she stood as a woman defending her right to respect, sustained by a wonderful courage. I caught her glance, but there was no recognition in it; not by the flicker of an eyelid did she betray surprise, and yet in some mysterious manner a flash of intelligence passed between us. It was all instantaneous, for her gaze seemed to concentrate on Estada as though she knew him as leader.

"You sent for me? For what?" she asked, her Spanish clear and well chosen.

"To join us at meal," he answered unmoved. "It is better than to remain alone."

"Better! You must have a strange opinion of me to believe I would sit with murderers and thieves."

"Harsh words, senorita," and Estada grinned grimly. "Yet I expected them. There are many trades in the world by which men are robbed. We only work at the one we like best; nor will I discuss that with you. However, senorita, I can say that we have taken no lives in this last affair."

"No lives!" in sudden, incredulous surprise. "You mean my uncle lives?"

"If you refer to Fairfax—the one in whose room the chest was hidden, I can only reply truthfully that he lives.

"Peace or War?"

One of my men struck him down, but it was not a death blow. If that be the reason of your disdain there is no cause. This chair is held for you."

"But why was I brought away a prisoner? To be a plaything? A sport for your pleasure?"

"That was but the orders of our chief; we await his recovery to learn his purpose."

"Sanchez! Was he your chief? A pirate?"

"A buccaneer; we prey on the enemies of Spain. It was at Captain Sanchez' orders we waited the arrival of your vessel from England. He loved you; he would no doubt have dealt with you honorably; I have reason to believe that to be his purpose now. Nothing will change his purpose. He is that kind, and he has the power. He determined that if you would not come to him by choice you should be made to by force. You are here now by his orders and will remain until you consent to his purpose—all that remains for you to decide is whether you choose to be prisoner or guest aboard."

"And if he should die?"

Estada shrugged his shoulders indifferently.

"Who knows?"

Her lips tightened as though to hold back a cry while one hand pressed to the open door steadied her. There was a look in the searching eyes I did not like to see. It was a moment before she could control her voice.

"I have heard them call you Estada. Of what rank in this company are you?"

"I am Pedro Estada, formerly the first officer, now, by occasion of Captain Sanchez' wound, in full command. These are two of my officers—Senor Gates, one of your own countrymen, and Manuel Estevan. And now that I have answered your questions, what is it to be between us—peace or war?"

Her eyes dropped, and I could distinctly note the trembling of her slender figure. When she slowly raised her glance once more it rested on my face as though seeking approval, guidance.

"If there be only the one choice," she said quietly. "I accept peace. I cannot live locked in that room alone, haunted by my thoughts and memories. If I pledge you my word, senor, am I to enjoy the freedom of this cabin and the deck?"

Estada looked at us, a shade of doubt in his eyes. I made no sign, but Manuel nodded.

"Why not?" he asked in his harsh croak of a voice. "So long as we be at sea? What harm can the girl do?"

"Perhaps none; I will take a half chance, at least. You shall have the freedom of the cabin. So long as you keep your word, while as to the deck, we will consider that later. Prove you mean what you say by joining us here."

My recollection of that meal is not of words but of faces. Estada's eyes sought constantly the girl's face, and to my consternation exhibited an interest in her personality which promised trouble. I know not whether she noticed this awakening admiration, but she certainly played her part with quiet modesty. I believe that even the Portuguese reached the conclusion that she was not altogether regretful for this adventure and that it was safe for him to relax some degree of vigilance. His manner became more gracious, and long before the meal ended his language had a tendency to compliment and flatter. I contented myself with occasional sentences. The young woman sat directly across from me, our words overheard by all, and as I knew both men possessed some slight knowledge of English I dare not venture beyond commonplace conversation in that tongue. With quick wit she took her cue from me, so that nothing passed between us, either by word of mouth or glance of eye, to arouse suspicions.

Believing the feeling of confidence would be increased by such action, I was first to leave the table, and it being my watch below immediately retired to my room, noisily closing the door after me, yet refraining from letting the latch catch, thus enjoying a slight opening through which to both see and hear. Manuel did not linger long, making some excuse to go forward, but Estada remained for some time, endeavoring to entertain. His egotism made a fool of the man, yet even he finally became discouraged of making her comprehend his meaning, and lapsed into a silence which gave her an excuse to retire. This was accomplished so graciously as to leave no sting, the fellow actually accompanying her to the door of her stateroom, bowing his compliments as she disappeared within. The fool actually believed he had made a conquest and preened himself like a turkey cock.

"Gunsaules, you need not lock the senorita in her room or guard her in any way hereafter. She is permitted to come and go as she pleases aboard."

Estada entered his own stateroom, leaving the door ajar. When he came out he had exchanged his coat for a rough jacket. Thus attired for a turn on deck, he disappeared through the companion.

CHAPTER XVI.

In Dorothy's Stateroom.

I stood crouched, with eye at the crack watchful of every movement in the lighted cabin, my own decision made. I must see and talk with Dorothy. Gunsaules turned down the light and departed along the passage leading amidships. A moment later I heard the sound of dishes grinding together preparatory to being washed. No better opportunity for action was likely to occur, although the situation was not without peril. I crept along close to the side walls, lifted the latch noiselessly, and slipped quickly within. There was no light, except a glimmer of stars through a large after port, but against this faint radiance she stood vaguely revealed. Her first thought must have been Estada, for there was a startled note in her challenge.

"Who are you? Why do you come here?"

"Speak low," I cautioned. "You must know my voice."

"Geoffry Carlyle!"

"Yes, but do not use that name—all hope depends on my remaining unknown. You welcome me?"

She came straight forward through the dim star shine, a spectral figure, with both hands outstretched.

"Welcome!" her tone that of intense sincerity. "Your presence gives me all the strength I have. But for you I should throw myself through that port into the sea. But I know not how you came here—tell me, you are not one of these wretches?"

"No; you must believe that first of all, and trust me."

"I do—but—but tell me all you can."

"Is there a divan here, or anywhere we can sit down together? I can see nothing in this darkness."

Carlyle saves Dorothy from death at the hands of a mysterious intruder but is unable to account for the sudden attack in the night. There is some dark plot behind it all. What will the morning disclose?

HOME TOWN HELPS

FATAL LACK OF ENTERPRISE

Some Communities Seem to Forget How Vital Are Business Enterprises to City's Growth.

Contrast the intelligent employment or present opportunities in certain communities with the lack-of-plan situation in most cities.

Contrast it, if you will, with the attitude of an Indiana city which found not long ago, that one chief industry of the community, a glass factory, would likely move because the supply of natural gas, which had attracted the factory in the first place, was about to fail.

In the gas-boom days the community had sunk gas wells and had invited this factory to come. But the old spirit soon died, and no effort was made to get additional gas or the additional factories which would have resulted.

And when the glass manufacturer found the supply failing, two or three years ago, he appeared to be about the only person in the community who was particularly concerned. There was some vagrant talk of the possibility of finding some additional natural gas. But nothing was done about it until the manufacturer himself decided that rather than move his home, he would take a chance on a new well. He found gas and is still there, though not through the enterprise of the city, which would apparently have allowed him to move rather than bestir itself.

And even now there is no movement for sinking additional wells, though this experience indicates that such wells might reasonably be expected to pay.—From The Nation's Business.

WALKS OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

No Greater Mistake Than Neglecting Attention to the Needed Pathways Between Buildings.

Walks between buildings add a good deal to the ease and comfort with which the chores can be done, and reduce the amount of dirt that is carried into the house. Concrete is one of the best materials for making walks, and when they are properly made the construction is permanent, says the state college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

In making the walks it is wise to excavate from 8 to 10 inches and fill in with from 4 to 6 inches of cinders or similar material, well tamped to make a good base. On top of this place 3½ inches of concrete tamped in place and a top coat of ½ inch of cement mixed in the proportions of one part of cement to two of sand. The gravel for concrete should be well graded in sizes from ¼ inch to 1 inch, and for this material the proportions may well be one part cement, three of sand and six of gravel. Poorer materials should have a richer mixture. The top coat should be troweled to drive it into the concrete base but not necessarily to make it smooth.

A rough-surface walk may be advisable, in which case a little finer gravel may be used in the concrete and the full four inches made of this material.

Diseased Trees.

Owners of elm and maple trees who find small reddish or light-colored bunches on the leaves will have to rest as easily as possible for a while, says C. L. Fluke, entomologist at the Wisconsin experiment station, for no control measures for this particular trouble have yet been found. The bunches are galls caused by small mites which look like tiny spiders. They live within the galls and thus cannot be reached by sprays. Undoubtedly there is some point in the life history of the mites where control measures can be used, says Mr. Fluke, but so far there has not been much study of these insects and this point has not been found. The injury to the elms is in the form of small, light-colored globular bunches. The galls on the maple leaf are red or black, and there are sometimes as many as a hundred on one leaf. Maples are also subject to blister galls, caused by the larvae of the flies called gall midges. These galls are in the form of spots having a green center surrounded by rings of yellow and deep red.

Looking to Business Future.

A manufacturer who finds that there is a market for a certain product does not abandon that and turn to something which his facilities are not capable of making. He multiplies the product for the manufacture of which he has equipped himself. By the same token, the business man who is interested in community development needs to look about him, analyze what he sees, and while undertaking the improvement and further promotion and enlargement of present factories, seek new ones in the same or in a similar line, if it appears that there is room for them—and there usually is.— Exchange.

She Was Optimistic.

"My dear," moaned the patient, as he tossed restlessly on his bed, "it's the doctor I'm thinking of. His bill will be terrible!"

"Never mind, Joseph," said his wife, consolingly. "You know there's the insurance money."

Stock Raising in WESTERN CANADA

is as profitable as grain growing. Successes as wonderful as those from growing wheat, oats, barley, and flax have been made in raising Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Hogs. Bright, sunny climate, nutritious grasses, good water, enormous fodder crops—these spell success to the farmer and stock raiser. And remember, you can buy on easy terms

Farm Land at $15 to $30 An Acre

—land equal to that which through many years has yielded from 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre—grazing land convenient to good grain farms at proportionately low prices. These lands have every rural convenience; good schools, churches, roads, telephones, etc., close to live towns and good markets.

If you want to get back to the farm, or to farm on a larger scale than is possible under your present conditions, investigate what Western Canada has to offer you.

WATCHES AND BANK VAULTS

Why Safe Receptacles Ocasionally Have Bad Effect on the Stored Timepieces.

Overseas men who left their watches along with other valuable articles in bank vaults have in many instances found their timepieces erratic or entirely useless on their return.

"Magnetized," the watch expert would say when the timepieces were taken to the repair shop.

When a watch is magnetized the hair spring contracts and does other unseemly things, and the watch runs only casually if at all. Watch repairers say they can demagnetize a watch in a little while and it will be just as good as ever.

But why should a bank vault cause this magnetizing? That's the odd feature of it, for frequently the very factor that makes the watch's repository a safe one puts it "on the fritz" as far as usefulness goes. A watch is magnetized when some electric current is near enough to have an effect. And usually the electric current that does the work is the current that operates the bank's burglar alarm.

Very Strange.

"Young Softly seems to be very much occupied." "That's odd, since he has such a vacant look."

Both the bride and bridegroom may be timid, yet they always stand up for their rites.

Noble Books.

Noble books bring their thought give it to us, not as men bring th treasures to a warehouse, laying th down there upon the floor as on a f eign, unrelated substance, but as bring the spark of fire to a pile wood which has within it the power burning and turning into fire. It not the fullness of their hands wh makes them welcome. It is the d cacy and discrimination of the fin which they lay upon some spring in and by which they set some of uature free.—Phillips Brooks.

Ancient Knightly Order.

The order of Knights of Dannebrog was established in 1219 by Valdemar II, according to Danish tradition, as a memorial of a victory over the Esthonians, won by the appearance in the sky of a red banner bearing a white cross. Historically the order dates back to 1671 when it was founded by Christian V. It was originally restricted to 50 knights and was family or court decoration. In 1808 it was made an order of merit by Frederick VI and is awarded only for distinguished and meritorious services.

The insignia of the knighthood is a white enameled Danish cross with red and gold borders, bearing in the center the letter W and on the four arms the inscription "Gud og Kongen" (for God and King). The ribbon is white with red edging. The rank is an honorary one and entitles the recipient to use the title "Sir." The rank and title are not hereditary.

Snaring Birds of Paradise.

To obtain the much prized feathers the New Guinea natives set out for the forest, knowing that the bird of paradise seeks to conceal his rainbow hues in the dense foliage of the trees. If they can find no haunt of the desired birds they start calling in excellent imitation of the shrill, ugly cry of the bird of paradise to its mate. This ruse is usually successful, and a bird shows itself only to be snared or shot down with arrows.

In mating season the male bird dances before the female he desires as a mate, to display his beautiful feathers, and at such a time so absorbed are the birds in their own affairs that large numbers are easily taken by the wily natives.—Savannah Morning News.

"The GREATEST of them all"

Head and shoulders above the crowd stands Thomas A. Edison!

"Head and shoulders" above the crowd of ordinary phonographs and "talking machines" stands Edison's great contribution to the world's enjoyment—

THE NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

No product can be bigger than the brain that evolves it. No other brain in the world today has the inventive ability of Edison's. That fact alone is sufficient proof of the absolute superiority of the Amberola.

But the Amberola can quickly and easily prove its own superiority. Its tone—oh, what a revelation, compared to metallic "talking machines" and shrill-sounding phonographs! None but Edison could work that miracle of tone.

Then the Amberol Records, made for the Amberola alone! They are practically unbreakable and everlasting—what a contrast to the costly fragileness of other phonograph records.

And for range of music—the widest in the world—all the best, all the greatest, all the latest. An endless feast of fascinating melody.

Yet the biggest surprise of all is the price! This wonder phonograph costs less than inferior competitors! There is not a single draw-back to your owning an Amberola right now!

Don't listen to the claims of other manufacturers—listen to their machines. Then come in and compare the matchless tone of the Amberola. Edison's wizardry will win you every time.

We'll expect you in today—now don't forget.

FREE Trial Offer

We will place an Amberola in your home for 3 Days' Trial, which will not put you under the slightest obligation or expense. Come here, select an Amberola and a number of records and we'll send them to your home. At the end of 3 days, if you do not want the Amberola, we'll call and take it away. If you do want it, we'll arrange terms of payment to suit you.

Al Koerner was a business visitor at the county seat town Monday morning between trains.

Mrs. Walter Schultz was a Garner visitor between trains Monday morning.

E. W. Sinclair, of Garner, was transacting business in Klemme last Friday afternoon between trains.

We hear good reports regarding a former Klemme young man, Hartley Blewitt, who formerly worked in the State Savings Bank. We hear that Hartley is a candidate for the matrimonial ring and that he takes the fatal step next week with a sweet young lady. We offer congratulations Hartley, and wish you all kinds of happiness.

Art Kuck was a pasenger to Garner Tuesday morning on business. We presume Art went there to buy some decoy ducks.

Dr. A. E. Buriff received his shipment of household goods last Saturday and was real busy moving into the parsonage. His wife expects to join him in a few weeks.

Ed Jacobs and Burt Mathews drove over to Mason City Sunday.

A number from here attended the home coming doings at Mason City Tuesday.

A. H. Meyer, Pastor

Gerald McCullough, the little short long braber here, spent Sunday with Garner friends. We at first were going to say that he visited with his folks, but on second thought decided there was a young lady who perhaps took most of his spare time.

Miss Hulda Johnson was a passenger to Ames last Saturday where she went for an over Sunday visit with her friend, Miss Bessie Thompson. Miss Thompson was formerly operating a linotype machine at the Garner Signal office, but now holds that position with the Ames publication.

Miss Clara Yarish returned to Garner Saturday afternoon after spending several days in Klemme sewing for different parties.

Mrs. Washburn, of Ventura, visited at the G. W. Kluckhohn home here Saturday. Mr. Kluckhohn and Mrs Washburn are brother and sister. The Washburns are now running a general store at Ventura.

Ernest Lewis came over from Mason City Saturday evening for a couple of days' visit under the parental roof. "Stub" is learning all the tricks in the plumber's trade and is now quite capable of fitting together steam pipes. He returned to his job Tuesday.

A number of young people from here went to Belmond Monday evening to take in the big dance. Hunt's Orchestra from Fort Dodge furnished some excellent music. All report a good time.

E. G. Ell and Elmer Fuller drove over to Rolfe, Iowa, Iast Friday. The object of their trip was to bring back a Ford Sedan.

Frank Carpenter has been on the sick list for three or four weeks but was able to be about the street the first of the week.

C. F. Busch drove over to Garner Saurday on a business mission.

LOST—Crank for Chevrolet car, in or near Klemme, last Wednesday. Finder leave at Times Office or Hotel. Dr. Schultz.

Luie Sampson enjoyed a visit from his nephew, Mr. Wesley Sampson of Redesburg, Montana, a few hours Monday afternoon. Mr. Sampson was visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gast, of Garner, with whom he came over to Klemme with. It was about sixteen years ago since Louie saw Wesley and years have made some change so that the gentlemen did not recognize each other at once. Mr. Sampson will visit a sister at Coon Rapids before returning to his home in Montana.

There was a dance at Goodell last Friday evening and as a result a number of Klemme's young people were in attendance.

Wm. Trafford drove over to Clarion Monday where he went to interview some young couples who have just taken the matrimonial steps. Now we presume Bill was there to sell them some furniture. We can say he landed them all right.

Chris Jacobs, of Garner, the senior member of Jacobs & Son, hardware dealers of this city, was a Klemme caller between trains Monday. Chris came over to see how business was progressing and found that it was 100 per cent good.

Miss Mildred McCullough began work in the Wellemeyer store Monday as book-keeper. This position was formerly held by Miss Anna Griewe, but she is now on the first floor as head clerk of the dry goods and ladies furnishing department. Miss McCullough comes from Garner. For the past few months she has been teaching school near Klemme. Miss McCullough is a very capable young lady as she has completed a business course and also has had business experience before coming to Klemme and will make a very valuable help at the Wellemeyer store.

Dale Smith received a telegram from his brother, Dwight, who is in Texas, Tuesday. The telegram told of lightning having struck an oil well of the oil catching fire, hw it flowed through the streets of the small town completely wiping the village off the map. This must have been some sight and worth the trip to Texas to see.—Democrat.

JOY OF LIVING

Life itself is the greatest gift there is. To get the most out of it is a duty as well as a pleasure, for we have but one life to live. Music, which gets into our innermost being and moulds our character, chases out discord with melody and despondency with cheer.

It makes no difference whose Christmas gift you are considering---husband or wife; parents, whose hair has silvered; or children with golden locks. Bring more music into their lives and your present to them will be happier days.

"God sent his singers upon the earth
With songs of sadness and of mirth,
That they might touch the hearts of men,
And bring them back to Heaven again!" Longfellow.

Buy a Piano, a Player-Piano or a Phonograph so your children may live in an atmosphere of music and they will absorb it as they do air and sunshine. You will find greater zest to your own joy and a contentment which music alone can bring.

Select the Piano you want at this sale we will hold it if you wish and deliver it to your home on Christmas Day.

HONOR HELD BY QUAKER CITY

First American Edition of the Hebrew Scriptures Was Put in Type in Philadelphia.

The first American edition of the Hebrew Scriptures was put in type at Philadelphia by William Fry.

The first translation of the Scriptures into English by a Jewish scholar in America was that of Isaac Leeser of Philadelphia in 1853, and the first English version prepared by a group of Jewish scholars is that of the Jewish Publication society of America, Philadelphia, 1917.

One of the most important and widely used revisions of the Rheims-Douay version was that of Archbishop Kendrick of Philadelphia, 1851-62.

Ben Franklin didn't think the language of the King James version sufficiently up to date to suit the literati of his time, and he tried his improving hand on the Book of Job with this result:

"And it being levee day in heaven, all God's nobility came to court to present themselves before him; and Satan also appeared in the circle, as one of the ministry. And God said to Satan: You have been a long time absent; where were you? And Satan answered: I have been at my country seat, and in different places visiting my friends."

In the Philippines.

In 1917 the Philippine islands experienced two typhoons, while one hundred and fifty earthquakes were reported from different parts. The damage done was slight and the casualties few. They were not so fortunate in Formosa, where two destructive typhoons were experienced in July and August, and two in Japan in October. The appearance of the water hyacinth is reported from several places in the Philippines, and the secretary of agriculture reports that, unless legislation provides for its destruction wherever found, all still or sluggish waters will soon be impassable to craft or logs and even river steamers. The necessity for increasing the working establishment in the forests of the Philippines, if forest produce is to be preserved, is becoming an urgent necessity, and it is pointed out that in Java, Japan and British India forest officers are employed to a much larger extent than in the Philippines.

Keep Up the Morale.

The big thing in life's battles is the morale. You may have the men and the guns, but if the men lack the ginger they are impediments to attainment. It is easy to do things when you are on the winning side. The trouble begins to brew when things go wrong. Anybody can go with the current. It's breasting the tide that shows where strength lies, and muscular strength is the least side of it. When the brain is right and nerve control dependable you can make machines do muscular tasks. There are few things that man's ingenuity has not submitted to mechanical control. So the problem of today is to keep the head right. It means more than keen thinking. There are men of the keenest intellect who need the constant urge of right morale.

Plant All Animals Hate.

A most interesting plant is the Virginia wild ginger. There are several other species, as far south as Florida and northward to Connecticut. The plant grows in very hilly and wooded places, says the American Forestry Magazine, and is easily recognized by its kidney-shaped leaves and curious purplish brown flowers. These flowers grow one to a stem. No living thing will eat the bitter leaves, and you rarely see the flower unless you hunt for it, for it hides itself out of sight if possible.

Woman Conductor Would Have No Mud Tracked Into Elevator That She Was Running.

She was a fat, comfortable looking Irish woman. You could see her putting out a good washing or rocking a baby, but it was hard to believe your eyes when you saw her running an elevator at night in an office building. There she was, just the same. And the little Italian who was scrubbing the main hall had left water, quite a puddle of it, in front of the elevator.

All proceedings were stopped. The elevator did not run. With arms akimbo she dressed down the hapless little man and ordered him back with his mop. "Come here and clean this up!" she ordered. "I'll not have folks tracking water into my elevator." He came.

Memories of muddy feet on home-scrubbed porches and immaculate halls. It was her elevator, not her employer's, when she was running it, and tracked it should not be.

Here's a toast to home ideals in public housekeeping. May they blot out worse flaws than the mere tracking of physical dirt!—New York Times.

First Clocks Simple Affairs.

The first clocks were simple affairs which showed the hour alone; then followed the addition of the minute hand, and later came clocks which recorded the day of the month, the phases of the moon, and many other pieces of information, generally of a more or less astronomical character. During the sixteenth century, the Italian and German clockmakers, notably those of Nuremberg and Augsburg, made great progress in their art. There are those who claim that one Richard Harris, an Englishman, invented and set up the earliest pendulum clock some time during the first four decades of the seventeenth century; but this story does not appear to be well authenticated, and the honor of introducing the pendulum seems to belong to the Dutchman, Huygens.

The "Know How" of Bumper Corn Crops

THERE are more than 800,000 subscribers to Successful Farming—and our subscribers provide a large percentage of the articles and suggestions that appear in our columns. Seventy-five per cent of them live in the Corn Belt and get a good living and a goodly bit over for luxuries and for the good old bank account. They know the "Know How" of corn crop success. They constantly give us plans for better seed selection, seed-bed preparation, planting, cultivating and caring for the growing crops. Successful Farming—located in the heart of the Corn Belt—is naturally "the clearing house" for the bigger-clear-profit ideas of all corn growers. This monthly magazine is virtually "the house organ" of these more than 800,000 successful farmers. They give and, in turn, get.

Success-Crop Secrets Straight From the Very Heart of the Corn Belt

Every number of this practical magazine is packed full of helpful information. It does not confine its aid to the big farmer. The man with an acre or two will find it as helpful as the millionaire with his thousands of broad acres.

You will be inspired—given new ambition and new ideas and new success-plans by every issue of this intensely interesting magazine. It's a big magazine—big in size (76 to 196 pages every month)—and big in scope. Your wife will find it full of suggestions regarding housework. Your boy will find delight and profit in reading the pages especially designed to hold his interest. Your daughter will read eagerly the many articles that are written to help her.

Helpfulness is the keynote of Successful Farming—that's why it is the powerful paper it is today, helped by its more than three million readers.

Send your subscription and see for yourself what a remarkable publication has sprung from America's richest section—the Corn Belt.

WINTER PROTECTION GIVEN FRUIT TREES

Something Must Be Done to Keep Away Mice and Rabbits

Galvanized Screen Wire Affords Ample Means of Keeping Rodents Away During Winter—It Is Easily Put in Position.

Small trees and even trees that are a couple of inches in diameter should have protection from mice and rabbits during the winter, and if we will make this protection of equal service in keeping borers from the base of the trees we will kill two birds with one stone.

Galvanized screen wire is the best thing I know of for the protecting bands, and as this is the easiest to put on of anything, and when it is not needed it can be removed and put away to keep it from being quickly destroyed and one band will generally suffice to grow a tree past the danger stage from rabbits and mice, though the borer danger is ever with us, writes Lewis Hillara in Inland Farmer. After the tree is larger other means will be better for combating these.

The screen wire should be wide enough so the rabbits cannot reach above it even when there is a heavy snow on the ground. Two feet will be enough usually, and where heavy snows seldom are deeper than a few inches they will not need to be as high as this. We should remember that the deeper the snow and the longer it is on the ground the worse the danger from rabbits, for they get very hungry at such times, as they can reach very little food.

Before going to the orchard we should cut the wire into strips three times the diameter we want the bands, and this we regulate according to the size of the trees, but we should allow for a couple years' growth. A foot strip will give a band between three and four inches when the lap for fastening is taken out, and this is a very good size.

WHEAT STRAW AS FERTILIZER

Much Better Plan to Scatter in Autumn Than to Permit It to Rot in Stacks in Field.

By scattering the wheat straw at this time the farmer should receive very much more benefit from it than if it is allowed to rot in the stack this winter and hauled out next spring or summer. Chemical analysis shows that wheat straw contains 10 pounds nitrogen, 2.6 pounds phosphoric acid and 14.8 pounds of potash in one ton. From these figures one can readily see the fertilizer value of wheat straw.

VEGETABLES NEED MUCH AIR

Circulation in Storage Places of Big Importance for Cabbage, Onions, Etc.

Root crops and cabbage require a cool cellar with some moisture in the air. Squash and pumpkins require a dry warm cellar. Onions should be placed on shelves or in bins not over eight or ten inches deep with a good circulation of air about them.

PREVENT RAVAGES OF WEEVIL

Fumes of Carbon Bisulphide Settle Among Peas or Beans Destroying All Insects.

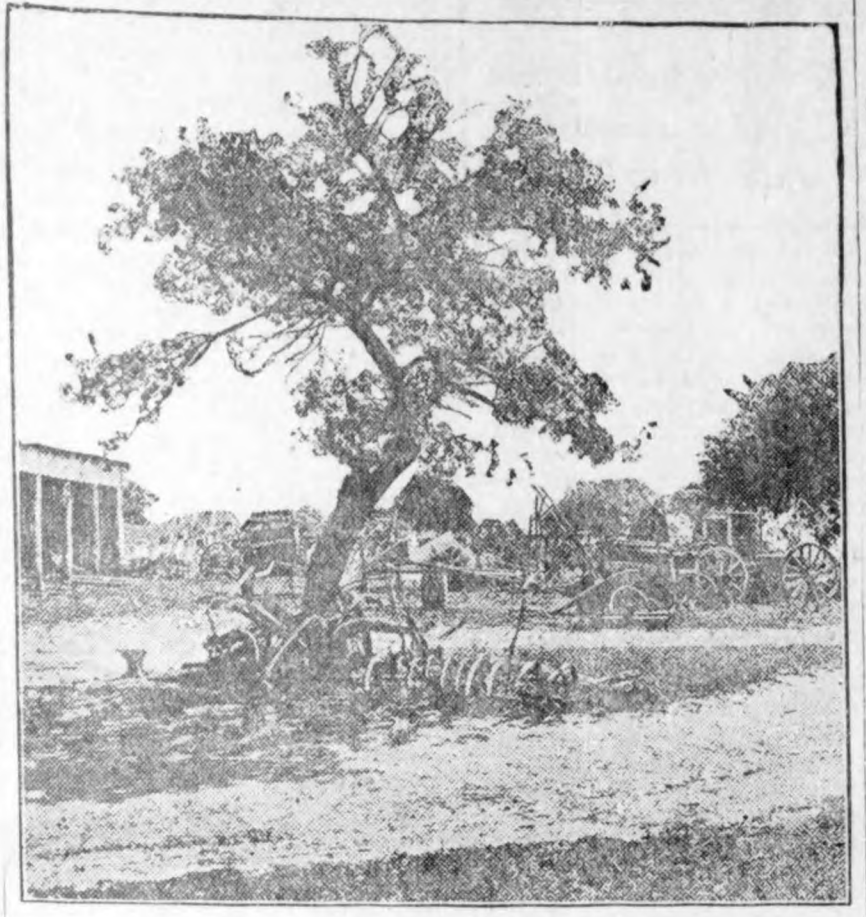
Protect beans and peas from the weevil ravages by putting in an air-tight receptacle and putting carbon bisulphide in a saucer. This quickly evaporates and the fumes settle among the peas or beans, destroying any weevils present.

WAY TO STOP SOIL WASHING

There Is Nothing That Equals Terracing or "Contour Farming" to Prevent Injury.

Many preventive measures of controlling soil washing, such as crop rotation, deep plowing, maintaining organic matter in the soils, etc., have been advocated, but there is nothing that equals terracing or "contour farming," as it is sometimes called

TO PREVENT DETERIORATION EVERY FARM IMPLEMENT IS ENTITLED TO PROTECTION



The Broad Road That Leads to Poverty.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Probably you do not believe that "the sins of the fathers are visited upon the sons, even to the third and fourth generations."

You wouldn't believe, perhaps, that leaving your plows and harrows in fence corners this winter without even greasing them may be a sign that spells poverty instead of prosperity for your grandson. It may not, but—well, listen to a story.

Two young men, brothers-in-law, took their wives, cows, horses, and plows into a new land in 1840. As pioneer farmers, they began with equal opportunities. Sixty-seven years later the writer had occasion to go over the two farms. The grandsons of the pioneers were operating them. One farm was a good one and the men who operated it, while not rich, were comfortable and contented. The other was a run-down, poor farm and its owners were constantly hard put to make ends meet.

The original owner of the run-down farm had been dead a great many years, but the man who pioneered on the prosperous farm was alive, 93 years old, physically active, mentally sharp as a briar. The writer, unable to see why there should be so much difference between two farms that were equally fertile to begin with, asked the old man how it came about.

Jimmie Was Careless.

"I don't know—well, I reckon I do too," he began. "Jimmie was a good man, but he was mighty careless. When he finished laying by his corn, he left his plow in the furrow and hung his gear on the beam or leaned them against a stump. When he started plowing the next spring, he had to dig his collar and hames out of the dirt, all muddy and rotten, and his plow was rusty and wouldn't scour."

Now, of course, this old gentleman was wrong in thinking that lack of shelter for his implements was the cause of his brother's failure, but he had pointed out an effect that was indicative of the cause, just as his own well-kept implement sheds were indicative of the cause of his own success. The brother's rust-pitted mold board merely went to show that he was a poor farmer all around.

The United States department of agriculture corroborates the testimony of the old gentleman in its general application. Good farmers, says the department, take care of their implements. They may not always find it convenient or profitable to build expensive sheds for their tools, but they will manage to protect them from moisture in one way or another.

Plow Is Neglected.

In this day of complicated machinery most farmers probably give little thought to the care of so simple an implement as a plow. But, says the department, more effort has been expended in the slow process of developing this seemingly simple tool than in that of any other implement on the farm. It is the basic tillage tool, the fundamental farm implement, it is richly entitled to be properly cared for when not in use.

When laid by, say the implement experts, the plow should, if possible, be stored in a dry place, away from contact with the ground. In any case the bright parts should always be coated with grease to prevent rust. Once the mold board and share have became pitted with rust, an efficient job of plowing cannot be done until the corroded parts again have acquired a polish by use.

The department of agriculture, of course, does not stop with the plow in its admonition in this regard. Harrows, also relatively simple but tremendously important implements, are, next to plows, most generally neglected. Many farmers who would not neglect an expensive harvesting machine, say the experts, are careless as to harrows and other implements of this type. But these, also, represent capital invested and a larger return is possible if they are properly cared for at the end of the season.

Support Harrow's Teeth.

If harrows are stored under a shed, the teeth should be supported by blocks and boards so that they will not become embedded in the ground. All accumulations of earth and trash should be removed. This is especially applicable to wooden frame harrows. The earthly accumulations retain moisture and accelerate decay. When the wooden parts have dried out sufficiently, they should be painted to prevent season checking and splitting. As the harrow works in wet earth and close to the ground, deterioration is rapid once checking has started.

If the disk harrow is stored in a shed or other floorless building, the disk gangs should be run upon boards so the disks will not become embedded in the ground. Whether housed or not, the implement should be carefully cleaned of all accumulations of soil and the disks should be greased with a heavy grease to prevent ust. The paint, particularly on the wooden parts, should be renewed frequently.

Care of Mowers.

Mowers, more generally than plows and harrows, are put under shelter, but many of them spend the winter at the edge of the meadow where the last cutting of hay was made, and in most cases they are not properly greased even when sheltered. Get the mower under shelter, if possible. In any case, clean the knife bar, wipe it with a greasy rag, and store in a dry place. Place a block of wood or other support under the mid-point of the tongue, so that it will not acquire a permanent sag. If the mower is stored with the cutter bar in a vertical position, place a block of wood under the shoe to take the weight off the frame. All accumulations of vegetable matter and dirt should be removed and all bearings and other bright parts of the machine oiled or greased. Much the same rules apply to reapers and binders.

The time to care for each implement is when its work is finished. Pressure of other work, however, frequently makes this inconvenient, but nothing should be allowed to interfere with getting all machinery greased, and, if possible, under cover before the beginning of winter. Then, as early in the winter as you can find time for it, go over every piece and see what repairs are needed. If new parts have to be ordered, order them at once. A great deal of valuable time is lost every spring waiting for repair parts to arrive from the city.

Cost of Machine Shed.

It should be borne in mind that the proper care of implements does not necessarily entail the expense of building costly implement sheds. The overhead cost of such structure often far exceeds any possible depreciation of implements through exposure to the weather. But such housing space as is available, and grease and paint should be used without stint. Any farm implement, with bearings and bright parts well protected with heavy grease, is better off out in the weather than standing in a shed without protection by grease or oil.

The United States department of agriculture has two bulletins—Farmers' Bulletin 946 and Farmers' Bulletin 947—devoted to the repair and adjustment of farm implements. With all implements safely sheltered for the winter, you have time to write for these bulletins and to use the information they contain in putting your implements and machines in the best possible condition for next crop season.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Every short cut in one's work that lessens man or team labor is a direct maker of profits.

* * *

The best time to sow sweet clover is in the early spring, any time from January to May.

Rainy days are excellent times to put the tractor in shape for the next season.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

MAKING BUTTER AND CHEESE

Increase in Profits Received by Women in Many Sections Due to Improved Quality.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farm women in many parts of the country have doubled their receipts for butter. In some instances this increase in price is due to the improved quality of the product and in others to better marketing methods. Both the better quality and the better selling have been made possible by the assistance given the butter makers by the home demonstration agents. These experts in home economics, who are sent out by the department of agriculture and state agricultural colleges, teach improved methods of making butter and cheese, as well as other household lore, to the women who live in dairy counties. As soon as enough women in one locality are making first-class butter enough to warrant starting a butter club, one is organized.

Butter Making on the Farm.

These circles or clubs market cooperatively, and the quality of the products which are sold through them is guaranteed by the members. One such club is located in Neshoba county, Miss. It has had more demands for its butter this year than it could fill. During the season it has supplied three markets and shipped away about 40 pounds each week. During the first six months of the year the Hope Butter circle of Neshoba county received $725 for butter shipped out of town.

KEEP COWS CLEAN IN WINTER

Especially Difficult Task When Animals Are Confined to Stable During Cold Weather.

During the winter season when cows are housed much of the time it is especially difficult to keep them clean. The only practical way is to prevent them as far as possible from becoming dirty. The practical way to do this, suggests Percy Werner, Jr., of the University of Missouri college of agriculture, is to use the modern stall.

When the cow is tied in such a stall most of the droppings fall into the gutter, the platform remains reasonably clean so that the animal does not become coated with manure every time she lies down. The manure should be removed at least twice each day and plenty of bedding should be used on the platform.

If visible dirt is present in the region of the udder and flanks at milking time it should be removed by grooming. A covered milking pail, which can be purchased at any dairy supply house, will keep from 60 to 70 per cent of the dirt out, which otherwise falls into the milk from the cow during milking.

DISPOSITION OF DAIRY COWS

Animals Should Be Active, Even Bordering on Nervousness—Other Characteristics.

Dairy cattle should have a more active disposition, even bordering on nervousness. They should have many characteristics in common with beef cattle, such as a wide head, large heart girth and good spring of rib, but should have small bones, large udders and give large quantities of milk for long periods of time.

BULL ASSOCIATION RESULTS

Average Production of Daughters Was 1,145 Pounds More Milk Than Their Dams.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The results of co-operative bull association work are encouraging. Of the 17 daughters of bulls in one association, 10 excelled their dams. The average production of the daughters was 1,145 pounds more milk than their dams, and 26.7 per cent more butterfat.

DAIRY COW AS SOIL BUILDER

Farmer Is Beginning to Recognize Value of Animal on Farm Where Fertility Is Low.

The farmer who lives on a farm on which the soil has become slightly depleted in the past few years is beginning to study fertility and recognizes the value of the dairy cow not only as a soil producer, but a soil builder as well.

SAVED HER LIFE

Morrison, Iowa.—"Dr. Pierce's remedies and the professional advice received from the specialists at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. (which I followed to the letter), saved my life when I was a girl and I have had cause to feel grateful for more than forty years. When I was about sixteen years of age I fell from my horse and was terribly injured internally. A short time after this an immense bunch formed on my right hip which doctors neglected to lance and consequently my entire system was poisoned. I not only became terribly emaciated but my body was a mass of running sores and my right limb drew up under me and became helpless. I was in bed for more than six months and all hope for my recovery had been given up when someone told my father about Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, where they not only manufactured some wonderful remedies but also gave advice free, so he wrote for advice, and in a very short time we were very thankful that he did, because the first half bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery' helped me so much that I was able to raise my head from the pillow, my appetite returned and I was able to sleep. Then the sores commenced to heal and I knew that I had started on the right track.

"It took five years to bring me back to my original good health but I took no remedies but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Pleasant Pellets'—with the approval of my doctor all the time. This was forty years ago and I am still in the best of health. I have never had any sign of a blood disorder since or any ailment due to impurity left in my system, and I feel quite confident in recommending Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as a blood purifier. The 'Favorite Prescription' I found equally as good in toning up the womanly organs, and I could not have kept house without the 'Pleasant Pellets.' Every member of my family has found them to be unequaled as a purgative and liver tonic, and we have often had to drive a good many miles from home to get them."—Mrs. N. P. Jensen, P. O. Box 100.

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

In these days of unsettled weather look out for colds. Take every precaution against the dreaded influenza and at the first sneeze remember that Boschee's Syrup has been used for fifty-three years in all parts of the United States for coughs, bronchitis and colds, throat irritation and especially for lung troubles, giving the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. Made in America and kept as a household remedy in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Try one bottle and accept no substitutes.—Adv.

ST. CHARLES WOMAN WAS FORTUNATE

It Was a Lucky Day for Mrs. Wiethoelter When She Read About Doan's

"I had such awful cutting pains in the small of my back and hips, I often had to cry out," says Mrs. Ernest Wiethoelter, 550 Madison St., St. Charles, Mo. "The pain was knife-like and I couldn't turn in bed, in fact I was almost helpless. My feet and ankles swelled badly, my hands were puffed up and there were swellings under my eyes. I often got so dizzy I had to sit down to keep from falling and my health was completely broken down. The kidney secretions pained terribly in passage and in spite of all the medicine I took, I kept getting worse until I was a wreck.

Mrs. Wiethoelter

"By chance I read about Doan's Kidney Pills and bought some. After I had used half a box there was a change and I continued to improve; the pains, aches and swellings left and my health returned."

Sworn to before me,

WM. F. WOLTER, Notary Public.

ALMOST TWO YEARS LATER, Mrs. Wiethoelter said: "I think as highly of Doan's as ever. Whenever I have used them, they have benefited me."

Recent investigation of the records has disclosed that Jackson county stands first in the state in the number of purebred animals of all kinds.

Another shipping association has been organized in Tama county with twenty-three members. The new association is located at Buckingham.

The birth records for Tama county show an increase of 34 in the population during October, 18 boys and 16 girls. One pair of twins, girls, is listed.

A good many husking machines are being used in Grundy county and generally with satisfaction. The yields are running on an average of about 40 bushels to the acre.

Reclamation of several thousands of acres of bottom land along fifteen miles of the course of Indian creek in Cass county is planned by building a ditch to straighten the channel.

There is a scarcity of corn pickers in Clay county, according to Chas W. Martin, county agent. Very few have applied for work along that line, and at least 75 farmers are in need of help.

The sale of fifty-nine head of blooded Durocs at the Iowa City pavilion totaled $3,403 for the lot, with an average of $57.67 each. The sale attracted buyers from all parts of the state and some from other states.

The farmers of the vicinity of Bouton are to have an electric system, and the contract has been made with Fred Schnoor of Bouton for the construction of seventeen miles of high tension line which will serve thirty-five to forty farmers. They have organized under the name of the Peoples Electric Light & Power company.

Interesting features of the Mid-West Horticultural show at the Coliseum were the demonstrations made by the boys' and girls' clubs from each of th congressional districts of Iowa. The boys gave demonstrations of seed testing and the girls their ability as cooks. The results of the girls' demonstrations were served to the visitors, sometimes in groups and at dinner.

Mrs. Clyde Cooper of Boone is proud of the record made by her eighty hens since March 1. Her hens, by actual count, have laid 850 dozen eggs since that date. This is a record much above the average for the county. Mrs. Cooper believes in culling out the nonlayers and has had her flock culled this year. She says she will not keep a hen that does not lay at least 100 eggs each year.

County Agent J. F. Coupe has had his hands full recently placing corn huskers on Carroll county farms. There has been some dissatisfaction on the part of local huskers and others regarding the price paid. The good men, for the most part, have been satisfied, but some trouble has arisen among undesirables over price. Ninety huskers have been placed recently by Mr. Coupe.

Fruits and vegetables from more than 250 Iowa exhibitors were seen at the Coliseum, in Des Moines at the annual exposition of the Mid-West Horticultural association. Backed with $8,000 appropriation by the last legislature, the annual exhibit of horticultural products, vied with any in the country. Approximately $6,000 in prizes were awarded. Of this amount $5,500 was in cash for the prize winners in the various classes.

Any boy or girl in Iowa under 16 years of age who is suffering from deformity, organic trouble or illness of any sort, other than contagious disease, and whose parents are unable to provide medical treatment, has an opportunity for free treatment and possible cure. Miss Lola G. Yerkes is following up cases which have come under the notice of the hospital of the medical college of the State University of Iowa, with a view to making permanent cures.

There is one farmer in Johnson county who is thoroughly convinced that spraying pays when done at the right time. Fred Elliott is well known among the many excellent farmers of Johnson county. At a recent meeting held on his farm, a few miles from Iowa City, results of the summer and spring spraying work were explained by Professor Herrick, of Iowa State college. Apples from sprayed trees and unsprayed trees were piled in two separate piles on the ground and the difference was very marked. The average sprayed tree on the Elliott place produced forty-six times as much fruit as the unsprayed tree.

The first sheep club organized in Iowa for developing the Shropshire and Delaine breeds in Henry, Davis, Wayne and Van Buren counties has had a successful year. The county agents were in charge of the work. Ewes were selected in the fall of 1918 by a committee of sheepmen and distributed to the boys in lots of two. The boys then showed their sheep at the county fair this summer. Some of the counties secured a ram and had the boys turn their ewes in one pasture. Each boy is charged for the use of the ram and pasture rent.

Work on the Britt school building is almost at a standstill for want of bricklayers. Though the company has been offering $1.25 per hour for an eight hour day, they are not able to find the number needed, and they are considering abandoning the work until spring.

Five hundred dollars an acre is what land in the neighborhood of Avoca is bringing. George Jarvis of Walnut has just bought of Fred Christensen a forty acre tract near Avoca at that price. Two years ago Christensen bought the land at less than half the figure at which he has just sold it.

A booster meeting of the farm bureau members and all others interested was held in Primghar recently and more than 400 farmers were in attendance. All delegations were seated by townships and an excellent program was given. 1380 members and $5,500 for the state federation is the record for the drive.

Duer & Beebe of Charlotte, in Jackson county, have just purchased of J. W. Walt of Ontario, Can., the great Gainford Marquis, a Shorthorn bull, which has an enviable record as a show animal, and which is half brother to Gainford Champion, for which Tilton & Burleson paid the sum of $6,500 a few years ago.

Women are more successful as beekeepers than men because they pay more attention to details, according to Frank Pellett, who addressed the eighth annual convention of Iowa Beekeepers at the public library in Des Moines recently. Iowa ranks third in the bee industry at present, but indications are that the state will be first within the next ten years.

In the past it has been a question as to whether or not it was profitable for the average farmer to try to raise pure bred livestock. The farm management specialists of the Iowa State college have by investigation found that in nine cases out of ten the farmers who make the most money are those who market around eighty per cent of their farm produce in the form of livestock. It has also been proven that a good grade of livestock is more profitable than a poor grade. In order to keep up the good grade of stock, it is necessary for a certain per cent of the farmers to keep pure bred herds and furnish registered sires.

The over supply of corn huskers in Cherokee county has disappeared and there has been a mad scramble on the part of farmers for competent help to gather in the corn crop. Calls have been very heavy at the county agent's office. The corn is unusually good and very few report less than forty bushels to the acre. Some fields will run as high as eighty bushels to the acre. The average for the county should exceed fifty bushels to the acre. Quality is good. Some of the corn is down and farmers are making a desperate effort to get it husked as early as possible. This in part accounts for the shortage of help.

Two special elections are to be held in the southern part of Marshall county within the next thirty days. Voters of Jefferson township will approve or disapprove of a proposed bond issue of $45,000 for the purchase of a site and erection of the first township high school building in the county. At Ferguson, December 5, voters of that village will say whether or not a bond issue of $2,000 will be sold to pay for a town electric lighting system. The election in Jefferson township is of more than ordinary passing interest to all country school supporters as it marks the first effort in the county to establish a township high school. In other counties of the state such schools have been very successful.

J. Grant and sons of near Miles have just delivered a Poland China hog, Big Jones, full brother of the famous Big Grant, to C. Forrest of Linn county, the purchase price being $3,500. Big Grant is well known to stock breeders, for he has swept the shows, carrying off prize after prize. For breeding purposes the animal is reputed to be worth $50,000.

M. B. Knop of the Pioneer Cow Testing association is a firm believer in the cow test association and points to his experience as evidence that they are a good thing in any county. Mr. Knop's herd of high grade Holsteins averaged 8,027 pounds of milk and 333.6 pounds of butter fat this year, and he was awarded the Kildee production trophy, awarded to the association in Iowa having the highest production grade herd each year. Mr. Knop has been a member of the Pioneer association since its organization in 1909. He has increased the average production of his herd during the time he has been a member 5,082 pounds of milk and 213.5 pounds of fat for each cow to 8,027 pounds of milk and 333.6 pounds of fat. This shows a 60 per cent increase in butter fat. Mr. Knop did not secure these results by the addition of purebreds and the elimination of scrubs, but by the breeding up of his grade cows with purebred sires.

Iowa is fast becoming a sheep state, if the large number of lambs imported within the past few months is any criterion. More than 723,000 feeder lambs have been bought at the Omaha market alone.

The proposal to build a lighting plant and city hall in Massena will probably carry overwhelmingly at the election called for December 8. Massena has no electric light system. Plans for building a transmission from Cumberland to Massena fell through. This prompted the proposal to build a city owned plant.

CHILDREN KILLED BY AIRPLANE

Two children were killed and two other children and the driver of the school bus were injured at Hetterdal, Minnesota, when the sleigh carrying twelve children was struck by an airplane. The pilot of the plane was attempting to make a landing, and the driver of the sleigh turned the outfit directly in the path of the plane. The pilot tried to clear the sleigh by rising but the distance was too short, the tail of the machine striking the sleigh, upsetting same.—Estherville Democrat.

Last Wednesday night someone entered the postoffice lobby and reached in thru the pening at the letter box, taking ut a bunch of some thirty or forty letters. The theft was discovered when Mr. and Mrs. J. V. McMillin came home from a party at the H. C. Armstrong home and found a lot of torn and opened letters lying where they had been thrown close to their residence. Postmaster Lee was notified and when he started to work on the clue he discovered another bunch of letters near the Hanapel Studio where they had been carelessly thrown. The matter has been reported to the postoffice department. The action of the thieves in throwing the letters carelessly about would indicate they are amateurs in the art of grabbing what you want. As the penalty for such a crime is $2,000 fine five years in jail or both, it seems a seasoned robber would have taken greater precaution in disposing of the letters that proved worthless to him. —Britt News-Tribune.

The sewage plant now belongs to the town of Garner. This was officialy decreed Friday when the mayor and city council made their tour of inspection, found the improvement up to contract in every particular and accepted the job. The contractors, Cook & Kean, are to be complimented upon their work. In the first place, they surrounded themselves with expert sewer men, planned carefully and went through the entire contract without a single hitch and completed the job in record time. The town was likewise fortunate in having secured Engineer Thorn to attend to the engineering work, and the town is more than pleased. The contractors do not confine themselves to sewage work alone, and will doubtless be here at the letting of the paving contract at a later date.—Garner Democrat.

BUYING AT HOME THIS YEAR

Many good citizens have approved the plan of keeping prosperity at home by trading with the local merchants.

Many thousands of dollars are spent annually in Christmas shopping in this community and all indications point to heavier buying this year than ever before.

Our dealers have prepared for it by laying in stocks calculated to please any fancy, and we are assured by them that these goods will be priced down to the very limit of economy.

From week to week the advertising pages of this paper will contain the choicest offerings of our live merchants.

A carful reading of the ads each week will give the purchaser a valuable line on what and where to buy, and will be one of the most valuable aids of all in the Christmas shopping.

This is our town.

It is what we have made it in the past, and it will be what we make it in the future.

The wise bird feathers its own nest.

Last Friday night there was a basket social in Cerro Gordo county, Union township, at the Lindon school, which was the biggest success of anything we have heard of in the line of socials for some time. The teacher, Miss Edna Noll, gave a box of candy to the highest bidder. There were eleven baskets and the proceeds from these were $105.75, Harry Brooks carrying off the prize by paying $18.50 for his basket. There was also a voting ocntest for the most popular young lady which netted about $45.00 Miss Sylvia Brooks getting the gold lavalliere.

KLEMME BAND STILL GROWING

Last week we told of the wonderful success with which the Klemme Band was organized and how twenty-four boys and young men had signed up for the band. We are glad to state that the band now numbers about thirty pieces. We look for several more to join the band at our next regular meeting which will be Monday evening. It is hoped that at that time we will have a list of instruments at hand from which to order so that the band can soon be ready for rehearsals. We want to have about forty players in the band and so there is still room for several more beginners. Klemme will then have the biggest band in the state and with hard practice will be the best band in the state. Come boys, if you are not yet in the band then come to the next meeting on Monday night and join, it costs you nothing.

The American Legion has made plans for a nationwide athletic league to be composed of Legion men and which will include every branch known. Under present plans the nation will be divided into eight zones and eliminating contests in these zones will be held, and the winners will meet in the finals to be held at San Diego, Calif., for a great athletic tournament in the fall. It is planned to make the flal tournament a national affair and in addition to athletic events, an aviation event is planned.

RULES ANNOUNCED FOR $1,000 NAME CONTEST

San Francisco, Nov. 25th.—Rules for the award of one thousand dollars to the person first suggesting the best name word denoting U. S. America and Britannia have just been announced by the World Trade Club of San Francisco. The contest is open to all humankind. Words to be considered must be received before May 1, 1920. One thousand dollars has been deposited with the Wells Fargo-Nevada National Bank of San Francisco, and the amount will be paid in the currency of the nation from which the best word is suggested, to the person first suggesting the best name.

It is interesting to note the names that have come from all quarters of the Globe—particularly from U. S. America, Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, British Isles, Canada, the Philippines, Eurasia, Africa, China, Japan, Oceania. Names are poruing in from all parts of the world, including France and the Scandinavian countries. "Unitania" is the best word received thus far. The question now is, will someone devise a better name than Unitania before 1 May, 1920, and thus earn World Trade Club's award of $1000.00?

MUST BE EIGHTEEN TO ENLIST IN NAVY

"On account of the many underage enlistments that have recently been made in the U. S. Navy, which has caused a great deal of trouble and expense to the Navy Department, an order has been issued prohibiting the enlistment of anyone under eighteen years of age, and an age certificate executed in duplicate before a Notary Public, substantiating the date of birth of the applicant, is necessary before they can be accepted."

WHAT WILL YOU GIVE?

Already the little ones of this community are beginning to wonder what Santa Claus will bring them this Christmas.

Daughters are making veiled suggestions, and the sons are openly bidding for parental favor at this time.

Mother has her secret desires, and father is checking up to see if he can afford a new suit or a pair of shoes.

The family eye is turning to Christman and is bright with expectation. Yuletide joy is hovering in the offing and all arms are extended to it.

But what will you give? That is the old, old story—the one which each person must determine for himself.

Our local merchants are ready for the rush. They are prepared to satisfy every legitimate demand. Their selections are especially appropriate this year.

Our advertising columns will keep you in touch with the situation each week. The choicest and best of all gifts will be found there.

You want it, the home town has it, and the home paper will tell you where to get it.

NORTH IOWA CORN, GRAIN AND POULTRY SHOW

The largest exhibit of farm products ever stated in Iowa is to be held in Mason City, Dec. 15-16-17. What promises to be one of the largest Corn and Grain Shows ever held in the State is to be staged at the Mason City Armory on Dec. 15-16-17 in connection with the annual exhibit of the Upper Iowa Poultry Assn.

For years it has been the desire of the farmers interested in the improvement of corn and grain to put on an exhibit somewhere it would really represent the best northern Iowa's products. The culmination of this idea came at the time of the county agents' meeting in Mason City during November, when ten agents agreed to co-operate in putting on this show.

$1,000 in cash prizes has been set aside for premiums in the corn and grain districts.

The show territory has been divided into three districts. Winnebago, Worth, Mitchell and Howard comprise District No. 1 and will compete in classes for single 10 ear and 30 ear samples of both white and yellow corn District No. 2 comprises the counties of Hancock, Cerro Gordo and Floyd, and classes similar to those in District No. 1. Wright, Franklin, Butler counties make up District Noo. 3, having the same classes mentioned for No. 1. An open class is provided for corn other than white or yellow, open to competition from all counties.

Special classes for amateurs have been made for Cerro Gordo and Floyd counties. There is also a class for rural schools of Cerro Gordo county.

The grain show is an open show, competition being among all counties in the show territory. Classes in this are provided for a peck of white oats, oats other than white, barley, and soy beans, as well as a class for early and late potatoes.

The show is being managed by a Board of Directors consisting of the county agents from each of the above mentioned counties, any of whom can give you information on the show and will be glad to furnish you with premium lists. A program is being arranged for each day. These programs will consist of one day given over to the ladies, one day a general farm program and one day to the poultry work

The poultry exhibit promises to be one of the real features of the Show. The exhibits in former years have been of the strongest in Iowa and a special effort is being made to make this an especially high-class exhibit. The poultry show will be in the same building. Judges of international reputation have been selected for all districts.

TRAVEL IN JAPAN

Hotel Customs Somewhat Embarrassing to Europeans.

Taking Bath in Public, In Water That Would Boil a Lobster, Is, or Used to Be, in the Nature of Torture.

With the advent of the "modern hotel" in Japan the old inns, or resthouses, have been to a large extent relegated to obscurity, but some still survive in parts where European travelers seldom penetrate. The kind of welcome accorded to visitors in one of the village inns is very far removed from western ideas of hospitality. Here is the interesting experience of a traveler as related in The Caterer and Hotelkeepers' Gazette:

"As soon as I arrived I was conducted by the polite hostess into the chief guestroom, which looked out upon the cool orchard of a temple.

"Cushions were brought in, and bright kimonos. I took off my dusty English clothes, and put on first the lower kimona, made of cotton; and then a gaudy silk one, bright with the colors of the hotel.

"The room, like all Japanese rooms, was bare except for a single decoration. There is always a special corner for the room's ornament, which is sometimes a vase of flowers, sometimes a piece of china, sometimes simply a painting upon silk or a woodcut. The subjects are not seldom such as bring a blush to the European cheek, but they have no such effect on the Japanese, who seem more concerned with the arrangement than the subject of the ornaments. There are strict rules for decoration; it is laid down, for example, that flowers of different colors should not be mixed in one vase.

"At length, because I was famishing, a low table and a brazier were brought in and set in front of me and my cushions.

"Every time I thought I had finished, the hostess or one of the maids would trip in with another tray of dishes and put them before me on the table. Had I not been able to use chopsticks before, I should certainly have become expert by the end of that meal.

"A little while after the meal—for it did end at last—I was told that the bath was ready. I was taken to the open courtyard and introduced to the arrangements there.

"Two huge barrels were sunk in the earth, one filled with hot, the other with cold water. There was a thin screen on two sides—not against prying eyes, but simply to keep off the wind. Indeed, as I began to take off my kimonos an interested audience of both sexes turned to watch me. This was unpleasant, and I did my best to dodge their gaze behind the screen.

"I might have saved myself the trouble. A moment later, in reply to the calls of the innkeeper and his wife, their daughter came up hastily to bathe me, as her duty was. She was not in the least embarrassed—and I soon had other things to worry me, for when, at the young lady's direction, I let myself down into the hot tub I discovered that, in the usual Japanese fashion, the heat of the water in it was not less than 115 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Up to my neck in that hot bath I suffered exquisite torture, which turned to the most exquisite agony when I stepped on the still hotter kettle lying on the bottom of the tub. The innkeeper's daughter pulled me out, red as a lobster and very nearly boiled. She dropped me, more dead than alive, into the cold tub, pulled me out again, and dried me.

"Then she bowed politely, and left me to return to my room."

Husbands Are Hoping.

Recently an Irvington woman invited a few of her friends to play cards during the afternoon. There was a strong intimation that the highest score would be rewarded with a prize. That stimulated interest to a degree.

The women had visions of the ordinary prizes given for card proficiency. One of them thought of a nicely hemmed towel, another saw visions of a cut-glass tumbler, and still another dreamed of something else. There was but one table and as the hostess was barred the contest was wholly between the remaining three. Finally the games were over and the scores tabulated. Then the hostess came in with a big glass of currant jelly and presented it as the prize of the afternoon. She picked the currants in her own garden and had made the jelly herself.

There is hope in the hearts of some Irvington husbands that the fad of giving real food as prizes will grow. Then, if their wives are good enough bridge players there may be something to eat when husbands come home in the evening.—Indianapolis News.

No Jugo-Slav Race.

There is in strictness no such thing as a Jugo-Slav. There are Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, all of whom speak the same language, with variations, and are now of the same nationality. There is a religious question among Jugo-Slavs, which has, on occasion, been stressed by the intriguing imperialist politicians on the borders who have been anxious to prevent national unity, the Serbs being of the Greek, or Orthodox church, and the Croats and Slovenes of the Roman church. There are no more than 12,000,000 of them altogether, but the territory of the new nation is larger than that of Great Britain.

WOMAN'S RIGHT TO PROPOSE

British Girl Claims That Conditions Following War Have Made Old Ideas Look Foolish.

Among the last rights of women to be fought is the right to propose.

It is the inevitable consequence of the vote and of the war. The position of woman with regard to marriage has entirely changed, and the sooner it is recognized the better. Up till now nice women have properly not proposed, because it meant virtually: "Will you keep me?"

Now that a woman can be as independent as a man she need have no scruples on that score. "A Girl From the War" writes in the continental edition of the London Mail.

In every other direction the position of men and women, with regard to marriage, is equal. It is quite ridiculous that it should be an honorable thing in a man to love a woman who does not return his affection, and yet be a disgrace to a woman to love unasked. A proposal from the man clears the air, and it would be the same with one from the woman.

In the present condition of things a woman often wastes the best years of her life on a hope. It would be much better if she could say in the beginning: "I like you, and if you like me as much as I like you, let us spend our lives together." It would be quite simple for the man to reply, if he were of a different mind: "I am sorry. Of course, I like you, but I do not feel like going into partnership."

The woman would then put him out of her mind and go about her business. Broken hearts heal in time, and it is possible that hearts would never get beyond the wounded stage if this plan were adopted.

There is a serious reason why it should be adopted. Some badly wounded men are feeling much as if they had changed places with the women. They do not have to say, "Will you keep me?" when they propose, but what to them is almost as bad, "Will you keep yourself?"

It would be a great relief to many a crippled man in love if proposals were taken out of men's hands.

In the present circumstances no nice girl could bring herself to propose, however willing she is to keep herself, however much she loves the man.

There is no need to fear that the new right would give added license to the other kind of girl. She proposes now, although not in so many words.

Chinese Salvation Army.

A new element has been added to the night life of Peking and Tien-tsin, strange and yet familiar to occasional sightseers from western countries. The "Chiou Shih Chun," or "Save-World Army," is conducting its open air meetings on the street corners of the Chinese cities, and the spectacle reproduces in China a scene that was equally strange in the great cities of England and America when the Salvation army first came into existence. For "Chiou Shih Chun" is Chinese for "Salvation army" in a land where the language has no exact verbal equivalent for "salvation" and must do its best by the combination "save-world."

Less than three years ago the Salvation army made its start in China, and a party of forty officers from the West tackled the job of mastering enough of the language to begin operations. At present there are five corps of the "Chiou Shih Chun" in Peking, two corps in Tien-tsin, and fourteen scattered throughout the country as far north as the border of Mongolia. In organization the "Chiou Shih Chun" is identical with the Salvation army elsewhere and the Chinese salvation soldier lives under the same rules of discipline.—Christian Science Monitor.

Night Fly Fishing.

The question as to whether or not trout will rise to flies by moonlight is one that has long been discussed in the Adirondacks. A number of Adirondack guides have insisted that they have taken good catches of trout by moonlight fly fishing. Others of the woods brethren, however, have merely smiled when one speaks of snaring the speckled ones under the light of the June moon.

Some fishermen claim to have taken them that way, while others say it is merely a fish story. Apparently about the only way one can prove it to his own satisfaction is to go some moonlight night to waters where they know trout are and try it for themselves.

There is, however, no doubt regarding brown trout taking flies at night, at least not in some waters. Arthur Munsil Malone recently secured seven fine brown trout from Salmon river, whose waters were bathed in moonlight at the time.—Saranac Lake Daily Item.

Honor for the Cowbell.

Never again can the cowbell be looked upon as something merely bucolic, commonplace and utilitarian, connoting at best for the city man memories of idling away a summer holiday in the country. What the cowbell has meant to the country boy in early rising to do stable chores, and tedious hunting through swampy bottom lands for the heifer who appears to have no homing instinct it is rather difficult to express politely. But now the despised cowbell has achieved its apotheosis, for thanks to the ingenuity of a California composer, a set of them, "covering a chromatic range of an octave and a half," was used in the symphonic music of this year's Bohemian Grove play. This, perhaps, in some small degree makes up for the fearful contemporary misuse of an honorable if lowly instrument by jazz bands.

Toughest Wood.

The toughest American wood, according to forestry service tests, is that of the osage orange.

SENATE REJECTS PEACE TREATY; QUITS SINE DIE

Pact Is Dead Unless Resubmitted by President at Next Session.

BITTER BATTLE IS WAGED

Should It Be Sent Back to Body on December 1 There Would Be Great Delay, as Other Legislation Would Hold Precedence.

Washington, Nov. 20.—The treaty of peace with Germany was rejected by the senate. On the final vote taken on the Lodge resolution ratification was refused by the vote of 43 to 51.

The senate then adjourned sine die and, the house having taken similar action earlier in the day, the extra session called by President Wilson to consider the treaty came to an end.

Under the parliamentary maneuvering of the Republican majority the treaty was forced into such a situation that it cannot be again considered unless the president should choose to re-submit it to the senate at the session which opens December 1.

If re-submitted, it will again go to the foreign relations committee, where in all probability it will be held for a long time while railroad legislation and other matters are being considered.

Peace Resolution Introduced.

In the meantime, to meet the situation brought about by rejection of the treaty, Senator Lodge introduced just before adjournment a concurrent resolution declaring the war with Germany at an end.

This resolution will be taken up at the beginning of the new session and probably passed.

The defeat of the treaty was brought about by the votes of 38 Democratic and 13 Republican senators. The Republicans who voted against ratification were senators who have been from the very outset of the treaty fight against the document. All of the Democrats except Senator Reed of Missouri were friends of the treaty, but yielded to the request of President Wilson for rejection of the Lodge resolution because of the reservations which it contained.

The Republicans who voted against ratification were:

Senators Borah, Brandegee, Fernald, France, Gronna, Johnson of California, Knox, La Follette, McCormick, Moses, Norris, Poindexter and Sherman.

Democrats who declined to obey the instructions of the president and voted for ratification were Senators Gore, Myers, Owen and Pomerene.

During the long debate that followed, Senators Hitchcock, Swanson and others in the administration following made frantic but fruitless efforts to effect a compromise on the Lodge reservations. They conferred with Senators Lodge, Watson, Lenroot and others, but made no progress, the Lodge forces standing firmly against any attempt to swerve them from the program to which they were committed.

Efforts to Place Blame.

In the speeches that were made while the final vote on the Lodge resolution was pending, senators on both sides made efforts to place the blame for failure to ratify the treaty. Some of the mild reservationists blamed the administration men for not having arrived at the conclusion earlier in the fight that ratification without reservations was impossible and asserted that if they had done so a compromise might have been affected.

In a final effort at conciliation Senator Pomerene at 9:15 p. m. moved to refer the treaty to a "committee on conciliation" consisting of six senators, including Senators Lodge and Hitchcock. This motion was defeated by means of a motion by Senator La Follette to lay it on the table.

Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia then sought to avert the impending rejection of the treaty by suggesting that the senate adjourn over night so that both sides might get together. This motion was defeated by the vote of 42 to 48.

Original Pact Defeated.

After the second vote on the Lodge resolution showed that the treaty stood no possible chance of ratification, Senator Lodge yielded to a request made by Senator Underwood for a vote on ratification without reservations. This was defeated, 38 to 53.

By making a motion to reconsider this vote and then lay that motion on the table, which was carried, Senator Lodge placed the last barrier against any attempt to bring the treaty again before the senate without action by the president.

The great feature of the day's debate was a speech by Senator Borah of Idaho, which was made at a time when it appeared as though ratification might be accomplished. In his speech the senator warned the senate of the results that would follow departure from the policies of Washington and other founders of the republic. His speech, stirring in its eloquence and forceful in its logic, made a profound impression upon the senate.

Result of First Vote.

Ratification of the peace treaty, with the reservations framed by the Republican majority and objected to by President Wilson, was voted down in the senate earlier in the evening, with the administration senators lining up solidly against it.

The ratification resolution, which would have required a two-thirds majority for adoption, mustered only 39 votes to 55 against it. Its supporters were 35 Republicans, 4 Democrats, and its opponents 13 Republicans and 42 Democrats.

A Democratic move to have the treaty referred to a conciliation committee composed of Democrats and Republicans was defeated.

Way Clear for Compromise.

The vote cleared the way for the consideration of possible compromise proposals acceptable to the majority of the Democrats and the mild reservation group of Republicans.

Republicans against adoption were: Borah, Brandegee, Fernald, France, Gronna, Johnson of California, Knox, La Follette, McCormick, Moses, Norris, Poindexter and Sherman.

In order to put the treaty into a parliamentary situation where another vote could be had after efforts at compromise the senate then voted to reconsider its action. The motion was made by Senator Reed, Democrat, Missouri, and was adopted by the vote of the Democrats and mild reservation Republicans.

The vote on the motion to reconsider was 62 to 30.

The effect of the reconsideration was merely to bring the committee resolution back to the same status it occupied before the ratification roll call.

An effort by Democratic Leader Hitchcock to have the senate adjourn at this stage failed, the mild reservationists lining up with the other Republicans against the adjournment motion, which was defeated, 51 to 42.

Lodge Blocks Hitchcock.

Senator Hitchcock sought to offer a set of compromise reservations, but a point of order by Republican Leader Lodge blocked him.

Vice President Marshall ruled that the reservations were in order and that the treaty, by the reconsideration, had been brought back into committe of the whole. Senator Lodge appealed from the ruling.

By a party vote of 51 to 42 the decision of the chair was overruled.

The vote having established that the treaty was in the senate itself and not in a committee of the whole Senator Hitchcock offered a resolution of unreserved ratification, against which Senator Poindexter (Rep.) of Washington made a point of order. The vice president overruled the objection and an appeal again was taken.

The senate again overruled the vice president.

Amendments Are Passed.

By a vote of 50 to 43 the senate a third time overruled the chair's ruling that amendments to the Lodge reservation might be presented. Senator McCumber (Rep.) North Dakota, voted with the Democrats to sustain the vice president, and Senators Gore, Reed and Shields voted with the Republicans against it.

Senator McCumber moved to strike out the requirement that the reservations must be accepted by other powers. Senator Lodge made a point of order, which Vice President Marshall overruled, and another appeal to the senate was taken.

With the same lineup as before the senate again overruled the vice president's ruling, thus cutting off the McCumber motion. The vote was 50 to 43.

Still Alive, Says Hitchcock.

Senator Hitchcock said, following the senate's adjournment, that the action of that body on the treaty has not killed it, and that he expects it will be re-submitted to congress by the president at the next session.

"The president can send it back," declared Senator Hitchcock. "I do not, however, know what course he will follow. I have not discussed that with him, and have not been in communication with the president since the action taken by the senate."

Senator Lodge considers the treaty dead, as was shown by his reply when asked his opinion of the present status of the treaty. He said:

"It is dead in this senate. They killed it, just as I told them they would if they voted against it."

Senator Lodge did not deny, however, that the president has the power to re-submit the covenant.

Knew What He Was About.

A member of a national medical association tells the following story at the expense of a physician:

"Are you sure," an anxious patient once asked, "are you sure that I shall recover? I have heard that doctors have sometimes given wrong diagnoses and treated a patient for pneumonia who afterward died of typhoid fever."

"You have been woefully misinformed," replied the physician, indignantly. "If I treat a man for pneumonia, he dies of pneumonia."—Harper's.

Russian Villages Prey of Fire.

The Russian village is built principally of wood and roofed with wood, or with straw and stones. For this reason there are so many fires that, according to statistics, one-fifth of all the peasant cottages burn down every year, or putting it in another way, every house burns down after five years. This seems improbable, but it is reliable information.

Escaped From Wyoming State Prison Nov. 15—Has Committed Many Bold Robberies.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—A lone bandit, believed to be Wm. Carlisle, notorious train robber, who escaped from the Wyoming state prison at Rawlins, where he had been sentenced for life, boarded west bound Union Pacific train No. 19, the Pacific Limited, robbed passengers of a tourist sleeper of money and valuables and escaped amid a shower of bullets from train guards as the train slowed down near Medicine Bow, Wyo.

The bandit boarded the train at Rock River. After the train had left Rock River he entered a tourist car, relieving passengers of their valuables at the point of a gun. Armed guards, placed on the train after railroad officials learned of Carlisle's escape, were attracted to the car just as the train was nearing Medicine Bow and opened fire as the bandit jumped from the platform and escaped.

The robbery occurred about 100 miles east of the place where the posse was hunting Carlisle.

Carlisle is one of the most daring bandits in the state's history. At one time he told Union Pacific officials in a letter he would rob a certain train and did so in spite of precautions. Two of his train robberies were staged within five days.

He was captured on April 22, 1916, by an armed posse twenty miles north of Walcot, Wyo., after robbery of Union Pacific train No. 21, west of Hanna, Wyo., the day before. Forty-three passengers were relieved of their valuables. He confessed and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

During the war Carlisle was considered a model prisoner, buying Liberty bonds and subscribing to the Red Cross from his savings. In September his sentence was commuted from life imprisonment to twenty-five to fifty years. He is about 30 years old.

On November 15 fellow convicts nailed Carlisle up in a box of shirts being shipped out of the prison shirt factory. Carlisle sawed his way out of the box after it had been delivered at the Union Pacific freight depot at Rawlins.

Other train robberies accredited to Carlisle were: February 5, 1916, Union Pacific train near Corlett Junction, Wyo.; February 9, 1916, Union Pacific train No. 18, near Green River and March, 1916, Oregon Short Line, near Roy, Utah.

Carlisle lived for a time in Denver, Colo., where he conducted himself as a man of means. He is said never to have used his revolver except to frighten people and to have shown unusual consideration for women and children.

SAYS GERMANY BLAMELESS.

Hindenburg Says Entire Nation and Kaiser Did Not Want War.

Berlin.—Field Marshal Von Hindenburg declared before the subcommittee of the national assembly investigating war responsibility, that he knew with certainty that neither the people, the kaiser nor the government desired war, for the government knew better than others Germany's tremendously difficult position in a war against the entente.

Germany's defensive strength, said the field marshal, was as unfavorable as possible from the start. It might be left to history to decide why Germany's peace policy had failed.

"If the military authorities prepared for the possibility of an unavoidable war," he said, "that was only its duty toward the nation. If there had been solid, united co-operation between army and homeland we could have attained victory." He asserted that both he and Ludendorff considered unrestricted submarine warfare imperative after they entered supreme command.

HOUSE PASSES R. R. BILL.

Measure Provides Return of Lines Under Federal Supervision.

Washington.—The Esch railroad bill, providing for private ownership and operation of rail carriers, under broad federal supervision, was passed by the house, 203 to 159. The measure goes to the senate, but it will not be taken up there until the regular session in December.

Bad Man of I. W. W. Captured.

Centralia, Wash.—Bert Bland, notorious I. W. W. fugitive, suspected slayer of Lieut. Warren O. Grimm, one of the four American Legion paraders killed here Armistice day, was taken without a fight by Sheriff John Berry and a company of deputies. Bland is in the county jail at Chehalis.

Moonshiners Lose Sugar.

Atlanta, Ga.—More than five thousand pounds of sugar seized from moonshiners in north Georgia was sold at public auction by the federal authorities here, bringing 22 to 31 cents a pound.

Butter Highest On Record.

Chicago, Ill.—Highest prices ever known for butter were reached here Nov. 17, 70 cents a pound for creamery extras, wholesale. This same grade never went above 67½ cents before.

PROPOSES SEDITION LAW

Congress Asked to Enact Legislation To Curb Radicalism—Newspapers Are Blamed.

Washington, D. C.—Names and histories of more than 60,000 suspected "reds" are in the hands of the department of justice, Attorney General Palmer informed the senate.

Declaring that lack of adequate legislation is hampering proceedings against radicals, Palmer proposed a sedition law to cope with the "wave of radicalism" that is sweeping the country.

Palmer's statement was made in answer to a senate resolution asking him what action he had taken against aliens and other radicals who were advocating overthrow of the government and violent destruction of property.

Palmer's answer contains evidence gathered by the radical divisions of the justice department, which was organized following bomb outrages throughout the country last June.

The statement indicates the belief that Bolshevism and kindred doctrines are spreading and declares that the negroes have been enlisted on the side of the reds. It also reviews the history of the tracing and arrests of members of the Union of Russian Workers, 250 officers and members of which were arrested in raids Nov. 7 and 8.

Red publications, Palmer says, are one of the most far-reaching influences in stirring up discontent, race prejudice and class hatred in this country.

"There are 222 radical newspapers published in foreign languages in this country at the present time and 105 radical newspapers published in the English language. In addition 144 radical newspapers published in foreign countries are received and distributed here."

RULES AGAINST WETS.

Liquor Interests at Chicago Denied Restraining Order.

Chicago.—The liquor interests were given another setback when Judge George A. Carpenter handed down a decision in the United States district court, which held that the wartime prohibition act and the Volstead enforcement act were constitutional. Judge Carpenter announced that Judge Louis Fitzhenry of Peoria, Ill., had concurred in the decision.

In making his ruling Judge Carpenter denied the suit for injunction brought by Attorney Levy Mayer, representing Hannah & Hogg, wholesale liquor dealers, to restrain United States District Attorneys Charles F. Clyne and Julius F. Smietanka, collector of internal revenue, from enforcing the dry act and the enforcement law.

RATES TO GO UPWARD.

Newspaper Men Agree Situation Must Have Attention.

Kansas City, Mo.—The necessity of increasing advertising rates and cutting down advertising space as a result of the shortage in print paper was agreed upon at the semi-annual meeting of the Midwest Newspaper Advertising Managers' association. Newspapers in Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas were represented. H. E. Dreier of Oklahoma City, president of the association, said that paper mills were refusing contracts for next year because of probable advance in prices and that many newspapers were refusing to make advertising rates for longer periods than three months.

DISASTER IN KANSAS.

Explosion Causes Death of Eight Persons at Hays City.

Hays City, Kans.—Curiosity, prompted by a desire to be near a spectacular blaze of four oil tanks, lured 8 persons to their deaths and resulted in the serious injury of 26 persons, 3 of whom may die, and the less serious injury of scores of others. A crowd of several hundred persons gathered about the fire when three of the huge tanks exploded. One tank, containing a flaming mass of oil, was hurled directly into a group of 37 persons and burning oil was scattered in all directions, inflicting severe burns on scores of spectators. The persons who lost their lives were directly in the path of the tank.

Indorse League of Nations.

St. Louis.—The National Woman's Christian Temperance union, in convention here, adopted resolutions indorsing the league of nation's covenant, and urging world prohibition and enforcement of the dry law.

Other resolutions adopted advocated a pledge signing campaign for total abstinence, a single standard of morality, and that women, now that they have partial suffrage, concern themselves with principles rather than parties, recognizing that political parties are but the mediums through which we express our convictions.

Ship Yard Workers Killed.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Six Hog Island shipyard workers were killed and nine others injured when a motor truck on which they were riding to work was struck by a train at a grade crossing.

Government Wins Suit.

Washington, D. C.—The government, by an opinion in the supreme court, won its fight to have cancelled patents for 6,000 acres of California oil land valued at $10,000,000, alleged to have been obtained through fraud by the Southern Pacific Railway company.

MOVE TO DIG COAL

RECEIVERS NAMED FOR MINES IN STATE OF KANSAS.

SIMILAR ACTION IN OHIO

I. W. W. Busy in Virginia; No General Curtailment of Train Service Is Contemplated.

Chicago, Ill.—A new phase entered the coal strike situation when proceedings were started in Ohio and Kansas in an effort to resume operation of the mines in those states.

The large mining properties in Crawford and Cherokee counties, Kansas, passed into the control of the state when the state supreme court issued orders and named receivers. The action followed the filing of quo warranto proceedings by Attorney General Richard J. Hopkins to bring about the receivership.

The court order in Kansas affects approximately 150 mines in the Pittsburg district, state officials said. Under the order the governor expects to have the mines in operation by the end of this week.

The Ohio supreme court was asked by George H. Phelps, Findlay lawyer, to direct Attorney General Price of that state to begin ouster proceedings against Ohio coal mining companies organized under the laws of the state for failure to operate and to have receivers appointed for the mines.

In North Dakota, where Governor Frazer had seized the mines, operators have started legal proceedings against the state to prevent home guards from operating the mines.

Reports reaching here are to the effect that miners in the northern counties of West Virginia are being urged to join the I. W. W. because it is the "only revolutionary organization that is hated by the capitalistic class."

On the Iowa-South Dakota division of the Milwaukee railroad two fast passenger trains were eliminated because of shortage of coal.

There will be no drastic general curtailment of train service in the United States at the present time, it was announced at the conclusion of a meeting attended by Director General Hines and seven regional directors of the railroad administration. Mr. Hines, after hearing reports from the regional directors, was of the opinion there was sufficient coal to run the railroads on a virtually normal basis for 25 or 30 days and that production of bituminous coal was being increased daily.

PLANNED FOR AMBUSH.

I. W. W. Admit Centralia Shooting Was Premeditated Affair.

Centralia, Wash.—Industrial Workers of the World planned the Centralia shooting three weeks before Armistice day, according to an alleged confession made by L. Roberts, confessed I. W. W., who surrendered himself to the police following the shooting here in which bullets from the guns of the radicals killed four former American soldiers marching in the holiday parade.

The confession said the I. W. W. expected their hall would be attacked on Armistice day and that all the radicals who took part in the shooting expected to be killed.

According to Roberts' statement E. Wesley Everetts, the lynched I. W. W., apparently directed the movements of the radicals as he sent Roberts and two others to Seminary Hill, near the scene of the shooting, with orders to "shoot when they shoot or when we heard shots."

BANDITS BEHIND BARS.

Le Mars Jail Breakers Locked in Sioux City Court House.

Sioux City, Ia.—The five desperadoes who shot themselves out of the Plymouth county jail at LeMars after seriously wounding Sheriff Maxwell and mortally wounding his son, William, are safely behind the bars of the Woodbury county jail, which is located on the fourth floor of the new $1,000,000 court house. Fear is expressed in some quarters that the prisoners may not be safe from harm even in the Woodbury county jail.

Papers Raise Rates.

New Orleans, La.—Every New Orleans newspaper has raised subscription rates and prices of copies sold on the streets. Papers which sold for two cents on the streets will cost 3 cents a copy and subscribers by the week will have to pay 20 cents instead of 15 cents per week.

Set Beet Sugar Price.

Washington, D. C.—A maximum wholesale price of 10½ cents a pound for all beet sugars at all points in the United States was established by the department of justice.

Red Legislation Put Off.

Washington, D. C.—Legislation designed to strengthen the hands of the federal government in dealing with radicalism will be left to the next regular session of congress.

Bandits Raid Savings Bank.

Randolph, Mass.—Four bandits in an automobile raided the Randolph savings bank, escaping with approximately $40,000. They tied bank officials together in the directors' room and then cleaned out the safe.

Honored His Great Foe.

The Crystal palace, home of the British Imperi.l War museum, was the scene in its earliest infancy of a touching incident apparently unrecorded by any of Wellington's biographers. According to "Le Palais de Cristal," a French weekly published in London at the time of the great exhibition, "one day in April, when our workmen were busily engaged unpacking exhibits in the French section, the duke of Wellington appeared, in company with his daughter, the marchioness of Douro. He was expressing his interest in several products of French industry, when the workmen happened to open a case containing a statue of Napoleon. The duke stopped his conversation, removed his hat, and bowed his head. It was easy to see, both by the attitude of his body and the expression of his face, that the old soldier was deeply moved. There fell upon all present one of those deep spells of silence which imply more than an ocean of words."

CONTRACT LET FOR SEWER

Kanawha is to have a sewage system. It's another step forward in the progress of our growing little city. The bids on the work of constructing the sewer and also the disposal plant were opened at the meeting of the town board Tuesday evening, November 11th. The Hammond & Kruse Construction Co. of Spencer was awarded the contract for the sewer work and L. J. Kalvig of Kanawha receives the contract for the disposal plant. Twelve bids were received on this job and several of the contractors were here personally to meet with the board. We understand that the work of digging the sewer ditches will be started in the near future.—Kanawha Reporter.

Will You Let Entertain You

Thomas A. Edison -In Your Home?

That is what happens when an Amberola comes into your home. The wizardry of Edison—the Master Product of his Master Mind—furnishes you with years and years of entertainment—all the best music of all the world—reproduced in a superior way that none but Edison could accomplish.

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND

AMBEROLA

Among the large number of phonographs and "talking machines" on the market, the genius of Edison makes the Amberola stand out as the one perfect instrument for your home.

Thousands of families in the U. S. A. have purchased phonographs hastily, without careful comparison—and as a result they are repenting their choice at leisure.

You can safely trust the phonograph that has been perfected by the greatest inventor of the age. Choose the Amberola, and you will never regret your selection. The longer you possess an Amberola, the more you will appreciate its marked superiority over ordinary phonographs and "talking machines."

Its marvelous, pure tone will afford perpetual delight to yourself, your family, your friends. No metallic sound or shrillness—common phonograph faults—nothing but pure melody in every note from your Amberola.

No needles to change, with constant bother and expense. The genuine Diamond Point Reproducer of the Amberola is permanent.

And the wonderful Amberol Records are practically unbreakable and everlasting. You can handle them quickly, carelessly — yes, drop them—without fear. (You know how easily other phonograph records are broken.) And on these Amberol Records you have all the world's best music—the greatest singers, the latest songs and dances—to select from.

We will gladly demonstrate the superiority of the Amberola to you at any time. Come in today, tomorrow—bring the family along.

FREE TRIAL In Your Home

We will place an Amberola in your home for a 3 Days' Trial which will not put you under the slightest obligation or expense. Come here, select an Amberola and a number of records and we'll send them to your home. At the end of 3 days, if you do not want the Amberola, we'll call and take it away. If you do want it, we'll arrange terms of payment to suit you.

KEYS—THEIR USE AND ABUSE

Concerning the Inventions of Locksmiths and the Disadvantages of Being Locked Out.

The key is an acknowledgment of man's depravity. If every man respected his neghbor's goods and privacy, we should not be burdened with carrying keys, in bags or pockets, hunting for them in a panic, and frequently losing or mislaying them. We have the care of a door key, an office key, a trunk key; a safety-box key (if we are coupon-cutters); our locker key, if we are sports, and automobile and garage keys, if we own these luxuries. Keys naturally multiply with our outward prosperity. Diogenes, living in a tub, was a happy man, as far as the responsibility of keys went, and although some people might prefer more roomy apartments for a permanency, at least Diogenes wasn't obliged to turn his toga pockets inside out in a vain attempt to locate his key—when returning to the tub after a brief sojourn at the club.

Key-rings, upon which you can concentrate your responsibilities, are sometimes desirable; on the other hand, if lost, the whole bunch must be replaced. I consider the mode of the public bath frequenter, that of wearing the bath-house key on a rubber ring around the neck, preferable to any other method. It absolutely cannot be lost, unless the bather is eaten by a shark.—Esther G. Babson, in Boston Transcript.

GOT MESSAGE FROM LIGHT

Famous Man of Letters Tells of Peculiar Effect Simple Happening Had on Schoolboy.

A friend of mine—an old painter, who went to school in the north of Scotland—described to me his experience. The dominie had one morning been particularly drastic in his methods, and this led to great concentration of thought among the pupils, while at the same time it did not in the least alter the usual current of their ideas. My friend, for instance, busied himself as usual, observing form and color, only with a keener zest and, as I have said, a more concentrated purpose. It was a spring morning, and, for the first time that year, a ray of sunshine came into the room, making a square of yellow light on the dusty floor at his feet. It was only at that particular period of the year such a thing was possible; later on there would be too many leaves on the trees, and in winter the sun was not in that quarter of the heavens. My friend was an unhappy and anxious schoolboy, but the events of that morning and the menaces of the dominie, combined with the sudden sunlight at his feet, made a new boy of him, and he looked at the square of brightness which stirred his heart. He received, as it were, his mystical message; and some time afterward, leaving school, he became a landscape painter.—John Butler Yeats.

More Than a Sign Post.

There was once a detective story written whose point lay in the manner in which a very familiar figure may escape observation. In the tale several persons swore no one had entered a certain building during a certain space of time. Afterward it was proved that the postman had visited the place at his accustomed time, but long habit had rendered him psychologically invisible to the witnesses.

So it is with the familiar figures upon our streets. How many times a day we may pass by the traffic cop, without perhaps realizing that he is something more than an animated sign post, until some act of courtesy awakens us to the fact that a "cop" is simply a man, and a gentleman at that. For, in spite of the many aggravations that must come during a day of directing traffic, most of these officers retain their good temper, and even go out of their way to assist or direct some passer-by.—Omaha World Herald.

Water for House Plants.

Water is essential to the life of plants, whether they be in the open ground or in pots, for only in the form of solutions in water can the roots suck up the juices of the earth and it is the water circulating through the channels of the trunk and branches that permits the exchanges between the leaves and the rest of the vegetable.

Plants in a house should not be watered at regular stated intervals; do the plants out-of-doors receive rain on Tuesdays and Saturdays? They should be watered whenever they need it. This is the only safe rule. And we can tell when they need it by feeling the earth in which they are growing; so long as this feels moist the plants do not need water.

"Blarney" Not Out of Place.

Life at best pays back rather limited dividends, and knowing this, we should as we journey along time's thoroughfares, try, whenever the opportunity offers, to bring a smile to tired lips. Even though we must resort to a "bit of blarney" if we would accomplish this happy result, we certainly should do so. Such a course may displease the person who prides herself on calling a spade a spade, every time, but folks who approve of toning down, as it were, the sharp edges of life, will feel no twinges of conscience for playing such a role, for there is all the difference in the world between base flattery and true and merited approval.—Exchange.

FATIGUE CAUSE OF DISEASE

That Fact Being Admitted, It Follows That the Best of All Cures Is Rest.

From time to time somebody proposes the "rest cure" for all maladies, and for a time we hear a great deal of it. Then the subject is dropped, and little appears in the public prints concerning its value. But invariably it comes up again, and the "rest cure" is advocated for all manner of ailments.

Just why we should not go ahead and accept it as a fact that the best treatment for most diseases is rest, we do not know. It is well settled in science as anything pertaining to diseases that absolute rest is of the greatest benefit; that most diseases are the actual result of fatigue of one kind or another. The human body is able to take care of itself when it is not tired; it cannot take care of itself when it is overworked, no matter how many drugs are poured into it.

There is a splendid work to be done by the physicians in the matter of teaching the people how to rest. Not one person in a hundred understands it. Unless the average person actually feels fatigued, he doesn't realize that his body is tired—or that his mind and nervous system are crying for rest. The average person doesn't know there is anything the matter with him unless he feels pain, and yet there are many maladies that are not accompanied by pain.

FAMOUS PALACE AND JAIL

Historic Tower of London Easily "Most Ancient and Most Poetic Pile in Europe."

Palace and prison, once noted also for its menagerie and its pageantry, birthplace and death house of monarchs, scene of hairbreadth escapes and reputed hidden treasures, ghostly in its memories of tortures and killing and sacred for its martyrs, the Tower of London amply warrants description as the "most ancient and most poetic pile in Europe," reads a bulletin of the National Geographic society.

William the Conqueror gave London a charter, but built the White tower to show the people how little that charter might mean. Like the English constitution the rambling London Tower of today is a product of centuries, and not one, but many towers, are now scattered over some 18 acres. The site had been a fortress since Roman times.

To the Middle Tower Elizabeth came back a queen five years after her jealous half sister, Mary, had kept her there a prisoner. The humpbacked Richard III hired three assassins to muder his nephews in Bloody tower. Not until years later were their bones found and taken to Westminster abbey.

Lady Jane Grey, she who "had the birth of a princess, the life of a saint, and the death of a malefactor," was beheaded in London tower.

Fraudulent Old Clocks.

The brass lantern clocks of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries have made a strong appeal to collectors, and this fact has led to the manufacture of replicas of the old clocks. When these are sold frankly as replicas, there is nothing to be said against such a practice; but, unfortunately, the matter does not stop here and too often the attempt is made to palm off an imitation as a genuine old clock. Famous makers' names are added and various expedients adopted to make the new clock pass muster as an old one. Such frauds are deplorable from every point of view, and the ignorance of many collectors makes success possible. Every one, it is obvious, cannot possess a genuine old clock. It would be well if this fact were faced, and the clocks bought simply as reproductions, by all those who are not in a position to make reasonably sure that they are really purchasing a genuine old English clock.—Christian Science Monitor.

Quackery Sometimes Effective.

"Faith and foolishness will cure any disease," says the cynic, and judging by some instances of miraculous wholesale cures, there seems to be some ground for the assertion.

There is the historical episode of the prince of Orange, for instance, who during one of his campaigns, cured those of his soldiers who were dying of the scurvy by a piece of quackery.

With his doctors, who were in the secret, he said he had procured a medicine—really a decoction of camomile, wormwood and camphor—of the greatest rarity and value from the East. It was so strong that two or three drops would impart a healing virtue to a gallon of water. The men took the medicine with faith and cheerful faces, and, so historians tell us, grew well rapidly.

Risky Food Combinations.

An Argentine doctor in a Spanish medical review states that there are many articles of diet in hot weather, which, although sound and nutritious in themselves, are positively dangerous when taken with other foods. Everybody today recognizes the harm of drinking tea with a meat meal, the tannin of the tea rendering the meat as indigestible as leather. Yet in these days of summer dishes, one is not aware perhaps of the fact that vinegar retards the digestion of food, and that the smallest quantity will lengthen digestion by 30 minutes at least. Milk and cherries together are held to be singularly harmful, and were said to have caused the death of Franklin Pierce, president of the United States.

Iowa News

Items of Interest Summarized for Busy Readers .:.

More purebred livestock will be sold in Atlantic between now and next spring than during any like period in the history of the city. Secretary Hoffman of the Cass County Fair association has eleven sales booked for the fair grounds before April.

Two public meetings were held in Cedar county recently by the farm bureau, one at Springdale and one at Downey, for the purpose of interesting the children of the county in pure bred calf club work. One hundred and sixty-five people were in attendance at these meetings, most of them being children.

The Baby Beef club now numbers quite a few members. Due to the fact that it was impossible to get this work started in time the time limit for enrollments has been extended to December 1st. Boys and girls are both eligible. The work in Johnson county has been greatly facilitated by the co-operation of the school teachers.

Perry can boast of having a hog house located within five miles covering 40 by 60 feet. It has sleeping apartments, dining room, rest room, sun parlor, toilet room with bath, also grounds for exercise and a sale room 22 by 30 feet, with a breeding pen attachment. It is the same building where fifty-four head of Durocs of March farrow, 1919, sold for an average of $108.70 on the entire offering.

The members of the Montgomery County Farm bureau are preparing for a big membership campaign which will be put on in Montgomery county for four days. Twelve men from outside of Montgomery county will be there to assist in the campaign. Each farm bureau director in each township will handle the campaign in his township and he will be assisted by one of the visiting workers for the four days' drive.

January 1 will take place the letting of the contract for the hard surfacing of the North Iowa Pike, from the Clay county line to the cemetery on the east edge of Sheldon. This distance is twenty-three and one-half miles. Bids will be received upon all kinds of hard surfacing, meeting the approval of the highway commission, but without doubt the surface to be used will be concrete. The road thus surfaced will be 18 feet wide.

The crop report issued by the United States government for the year 1918 shows an estimated yield for Iowa for the five grain crops of 5,286,000,000 bushels. Add to this the total worth of all the other products and the cattle raised on Iowa farms and you will have an excellent idea of the wonderful resourcefulness of this state. Naturally the land that contributes to such a tremendous harvest must necessarily be rich and productive.

In order to settle the Walsworth estate near Onslow the property was recently sold at public auction. The home farm, consisting of 256 acres, was sold to George Tabor, of Baldwin, for $281.50 an acre. Another portion of the property was sold to Jack Walsworth at $250 an acre. A 130-acre tract of timber land brought $41 an acre from Ben Johnson, and a 175-acre tract was purchased by Rogers Brown, of Baldwin, for $91 an acre. The total receipts of the sale amounted to $140,092.

Rates to renters of land show a very marked advance along with everything else. In some cases farm leases for next season have been put up at public auction, the highest bidder taking the place. In Ida county, Cy Sievert has recently rented the T. W. Webb home farm of 160 acres of very fine land in northern Silver Creek, for the ensuing year at $23.50 per acre. The farm is held at $500 an acre and is in splendid condition, much of it having been seeded to clover the past few years.

The opening of the public sale season has demonstrated that there has been no falling off in prices. L. M. Lindeman, at his farm near Anita, Cass county, held a sale recently which totaled $13,393. Forty-one head of steers averaged $80 a head. One team of horses brought $505. Another, a 12 year old team, sold for $264; a two year old team for $247.50. Milch cows brought up to $125, several commanding over $100 each. Corn in the field brought $55 per acre. The sale included 18 head of horses, 60 head of cattle, 100 spring pigs, 84 head of sheep, 37 acres of corn in field, and farm machinery.

Bond issues for paved roads recently authorized in Iowa will total $18,475,000, and those proposed amount to $4,500,000 more, says the summary of state and county bond issues. The counties listed as having voted bond issues for roads are Black Hawk, $1,500,000; Cerro Gordo, $750,000; Clay, $800,000; Clinton, $1,800,000; Floyd, $1,000,000; Greene, $1,000,000; Hancock, $1,000,000; Kossuth, $1,500,000; Lyon, $1,250,000; O'Brien, $1,500,000; Polk, $2,000,000; Scott, $2,000,000; Woodbury, $2,500,000.

THANKSGIVING

The cycle of the seasons brings us to the close of another autumn. Time and the frost have ripened the grain, kissed the foliage to a blushing brown, and made us all mindful that another cold, stern winter is upon us.

Sunshine and rain, nature's aids to a fertile soil, have augmented man's feeble effort in toil in a harvest abundant, so that we have not only shelter, food and clothing, but the luxuries for physical and mental enjoyment, and more, we have a surplus so that we can sell with profit to the outside world and fill our treasury. These bounties are vouchsafed to us by a Ruler Divine, lovingly sympathetic, yet stern in his command that the rule of law shall prevail and be obeyed .

Winter's bleakness and cold remind us that our common enemy should not be our fellow man. The world's cry today, from man to man, in palace or hovel, is for friendliness and tolerance.

W. L. Harding, Governor of the Great State of Iowa, has proclaimed and designated that Thursday, November 27, 1919, be observed as a day of Thanksgiving, and urges that all the people of Iowa, with hearts full of gratitude for a generous harvest, and humble, prayerful minds seek forgiveness for greed and avarice, assemble in the churches and their homes on this date, and offer a prayer of Thanksgiving.

A most interesting development has been aroused in a dairy test association in Van Buren county. Many farms, where dairy cows are kept, were visited by the county agent and one herd has been definitely signed up. Others are willing after a little more information has been obtained. Prof. C. L. Blackman of Iowa State college has been invited to speak on this subject.

Two of Jasper county's Shorthorn cattle breeders held very successful sales recently. George Eggert sold fifty head at his farm near Newton for a total of $16,755, or an average of $508 per head. This was Mr. Eggert's second sale, his first averaging $350. A feature of Mr. Eggert's sale was that his stock was all federal tested. W. E. Graham & Sons of near Prairie City and F. E. Brown of near Mitchellville sold forty-six head at the Graham farm for an average of $567 per head, the top being $2,000. The sale totaled $26,090. The top in the Eggert sale was $2,100 paid for a cow and bull calf. The sales attracted many breeders from all over Iowa and adjoining states.

Daily form-purebred heifer calf club in Iowa has recently been completed in Kossuth county. Twenty-five heifers have been distributed to the members of the club. The animals are all coming 2-year-olds and bred to freshen late in the fall and winter. The club work will cover a period of one year at the end of which time the heifers with their calves will be sold, the members having the privilege of buying either one or both of the animals by the payment of the note. During the year an accurate record will be kept of the amount of milk and butterfat produced by each heifer as well as the cost of the feed. This will give a definite idea of the actual profit to be made from such a form of club work.

Every indication points to a resumption of the old time methods of supplying the farm table with its own meats, especially pork. Recent lowering of pork prices means, if it means anything at all, that the average farmer will kill and cure much of his pork this fall and winter for his own consumption. The little smoke house, a crude affair, in most instances in the early days, is now giving place to the modern smoke house made of cement or hollow tile. When the real cold weather sets in there will be from two to three hogs butchered on hundreds of Iowa farms, the sides and hams smoked, the old iron kettle pressed into service for taking care of the leaf lard, and much of the fresh meat will be cooked partially and encased in its own fat for safe keeping.

The Franklin county agent, J. F. Thomas, recently published a special hog edition in order to acquaint the farmers of the county with the breeders in the county having pure bred boars for sale, on the principle that though every farmer cannot afford to own pure bred hogs, they can all afford to keep a pure strain by keeping a pure bred boar of the same breed kept on the farm. There were twenty-nine breeders on the list counting the Boys' Pig club as one in each of the four breeds represented. The sale this year includes 65 head of pigs offered by twelve pig club members, which are to be sold at public auction, after being judged by Prof. E. L. Quaife for the $250 in prizes offered by the farm bureau. A first class catalogue was printed and distributed for this sale, consisting of twenty pages and an attractive cover.

A total of $23,146.30 represents the amount of business done by the Iowa Fruit Growers' association during the past year. The association claims it has saved its members about 20 per cent the past year.

A total of 509 school children have become interested in keeping personal expense accounts through the action of Miss Vera Whitney, home demonstration agent of Dallas county. There are seventy-five in the Waukee schools, 130 in the Adel schools, and eighty-five in two other Dallas county schools.

AIR-TIGHT WALL OF IMPORTANCE

Careful Examination of Silos, Followed by Necessary Repairs, Is Big Help.

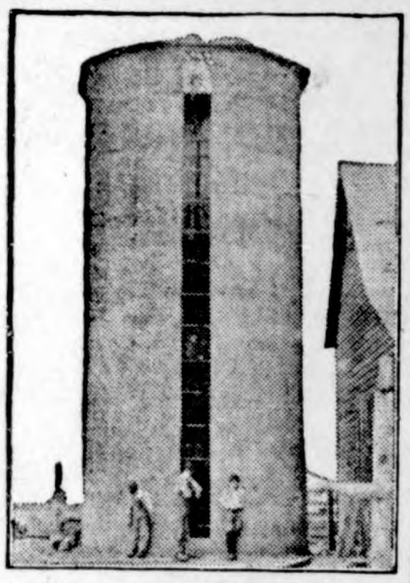
SMALL LEAK SPOILS SILAGE

Inside Coating to Seal Pores and Prevent Action of Juices on Walls Is of Much Benefit—Paraffin Is Promising.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the silo-filling season approaching, a careful examination of silos, followed by necessary repairs, will help to improve the keeping quality of the contents. According to studies of the United States department of agriculture, air-tight walls are the chief requirement; in fact, a leak no larger than a small nail hole may spoil several hundred pounds of silage. In case of wood-stave silos the hoops and braces should receive attention to insure close fitting.

Silos made of concrete, brick, or other material of porous or semiporous nature, are benefited by an inside coating of a preparation which seals the pores and also prevents the action of silage juices on the walls.



Newly Constructed Silo—Owner Is Preparing to Fortify With Silage Against Winter and High-Priced Feed.

The coating most commonly used hitherto is coal tar thinned with gasoline and applied with a paint brush. A number of materials of like nature have been considered for this work, but the one showing the most promise is paraffin.

How to Apply Paraffin.

Paraffin may be applied either cold or hot to silo walls. With the cold method, the paraffin is dissolved in a volatile carrier like naphtha until a saturated solution is obtained. Four pounds of paraffin dissolved in one-half gallon of gasoline or naphtha will make one gallon of this solution. The solution is then applied much like paint to the surface of the concrete, which it penetrates according to dryness and porosity. One gallon has a covering capacity of about 200 square feet.

The naphtha soon evaporates, leaving the paraffin in the holes. When applying the paraffin by this method, special care must be taken that there is good ventilation in the silo and that there are no lights or fires nearby. Naphtha is very inflammable, and a serious explosion or fire may result from careless use.

Walls Must Be Warm.

Paraffin may also be applied in melted form. It requires six and one-half pounds of paraffin to make one gallon of the hot paraffin solution. The work should be done on a warm day and the concrete must also be sufficiently warmed by artificial heat so that the paraffin may be thoroughly rubbed in. One gallon will cover about 250 square feet of surface. When this method is followed, a blow torch should be used to warm the walls as the paraffin is being applied, and also to thin and spread the layer of paraffin. Two buckets of paraffin should be used, one to be heating while the other is being applied. The hot paraffin treatment is one of the most successful for waterproofing surfaces exposed to weather, but it requires some experience to obtain successful results.

Use of Hot Method

Where the hot method is used, divide the number of square feet of silo wall to be coated, by 250 to find the required number of gallons. Multiply this result by six and a half to obtain the number of pounds of paraffin required. For example, to find the paraffin required to coat a silo 14 feet in diameter and 30 feet high:

Diameter (14 feet) x 3.1416 equals 43.98 feet, the circumference of the silo.

Height (30 feet) x circumference (43.98 feet) equals 1319.4 square feet, the area.

Area (1319.4 square feet) divided by 250 equals 5.27, or number of gallons required.

Gallons required (5.27) x 6½ equals 34.25, the number of pounds of paraffin required.

In both cases the cost may be estimated from the local price of paraffin and naphtha. It should be remembered however, that these figures will vary with local conditions.

WHY LAMB AND MINT SAUCE

English Writer Goes Far Back to Trace Custom So Popular in That Country.

Lamb is the only meat with which mint sauce is partaken, and England is the only country where the custom is practiced.

The latter fact seems to disprove the idea that it originated with the Jews, else it would have been adopted in other countries where the race predominates to an even greater extent than in our own. Hence, also, it could not have originated or been associated with the "bitter herbs" which were eaten with the Paschal lamb.

When one remembers what are the vegetables usually eaten with lamb, we get a clue to mint sauce. And it is one that leads us to what is probably the true reason of its combination with lamb. New potatoes and green peas are the adjuncts immemorial time has led us to associate with the flesh of the lamb. These, our forbears decided, were provocative of indigestion, and therefore an adjunct must be introduced to correct this tendency. Mint during all ages has been associated with such an office. The Latin poets have broken into song regarding its merits, and the giver of a feast never thought of laying the meat on the table until the boards had been scoured with this herb. So, in addition to being a corrective, mint had a reputation as an appetizer. Gerarde says, "The smell of mint doth stir up the mind and the taste to a greedy desire of meat."—London Tit-Bits.

FOODS NO LONGER IN USE

Vegetables and Meats, Familiar in the Middle Ages, Have Disappeared From Modern Menu.

If the art of cooking has declined, it is in part due to the changing fashions in food. For instance, in Germany in the middle ages many vegetables were eaten which have long since disappeared from the table, such as violet leaves, mixed with young nettles, and green wheat, and boiled hemp seed. Salads were made of mallow leaves, celery roots, and purslane, mixed with salt and pepper, for oil was almost unknown. Olive oil was considered to smack of effeminacy and Italian luxury. Horseradish sauce was used instead.

The origin of sauerkraut is lost in antiquity. But it was certainly made by the German hausfrau long before cauliflowers or artichokes or potatoes were known. The potato revolutionized the fare of the poor, who had formerly to rely on the roots of wild plants. The variety of meats was larger, including beavers, and in Berne bears were kept for food. Spices and aromatics were much sought after and far more used for cooking. Ginger and nutmegs were used to flavor many dishes that have now vanished from our tables.

King of Poor Penmen.

The palm for illegibility is generally awarded to the late Horace Greeley, but in our own land probably Lecky was king of impossible penmen.

There are veteran compositors alive who remember setting up his "History of Morals." Those who could decipher the manuscript were more prized than their rivals who took Arabic and Hindustani in their stride.

To master Lecky the men were allowed to take home dubious folios and ponder them in privacy. They say that the author was, in printing circles, the best cursed man of the century.—London Chronicle.

Hail the Turkey!

Here's to the Turkey, that bird of gorgeousness and pride, who strutted through the virgin wood when, for a firmer brotherhood, our forbears worked fought and died.

Here's to the Turkey, proudest, rarest of the living, and, as we bow before our Lord around the yearly festive board, the gem of our Thanksgiving.

Here's to the Turkey, glorious bird of copper hue, who gladdened well each Pilgrim heart when, guided by an ancient chart, there came that small, God-fearing crew.

Here's to the Turkey, how often, through the early snow, some sturdy pilgrim sought to slay thee for his feast Thanksgiving day, but fell before the red man's bow.

—Lewis Allen in Utica Saturday Globe.

WHERE THE BIRDS ARE BRED

Small Farms Are Large Producers of Piece de Resistance of the Thanksgiving Feast.

Although there are many great turkey ranches, and whole communities which live principally upon the raising of turkeys for market, such as Cuero, Tex., whose annual turkey parade preceding Thanksgiving includes thousands of turkeys bound for northern markets, as a rule turkeys are raised in small groups on farms which are interested in other commodities. They are often the sole dependence of the farmer's wife for pocket money throughout the year, and many a farmer's daughter also has been able to make a shining appearance in her world of fashion principally through the successful marketing of the turkey brood.

On the 5,000,000 farms of the United States there were, according to careful statistics taken some years ago, only 6,500,000 turkeys. Texas led among the states, producing 650,000. The other states which were large producers were Missouri, Illinois, Iowa, Ohio and Indiana. The state of Rhode Island, noted as it is for its turkeys, produced only 5,000. But the quality of the Rhode Island turkeys always has been excellent and they usually bring prices vastly in excess of those from other parts of the country.

And that ought to be enough about turkeys to get up a pretty good appetite for Thursday's dinner!

REALLY SURFEITED.

Weary—No, t'anks, ma'am. I've et so much turkey dis week dat I gobbles in my sleep.

Great Reason for Gladness.

The day set apart for Thanksgiving for the blessings of the year is a day when the nation is invited to inspect the tapestry of time and to see how steadfastly and how gratifying the old weaver has used the loom for the picture of American contentment and American happiness and American hope. Into the picture enters no public calamity, into it enters no widespread want. Thus the nation has great reason for gladness that it can hang upon the walls of civilization the picture that has been wrought out as the picture of American life from the busy weave of the multitude of individuals who make up that life.

Ranks With Christmas.

Thanksgiving day is an old and honored institution in this country. In 1789 the Protestant Episcopal church formally recognized the government's authority to appoint such a "feast," but it was celebrated with more zest in New England than in any other section. There it is an occasion for annual family reunions, and as a Boston writer says, "it takes the place which in England is accorded to Christmas."

Thanksgiving

By EDGAR A. GUEST

For courage that we sorely need,
For strength to do the splendid deed,
For youth, who made the sacrifice
And, smiling, paid the bitter price
That freedom asks of sturdy men,
Oh God, accept our thanks again.

To thee once more today we kneel;
Sad music of the crash of steel
Accompanies our prayers, and yet
Thy mercies everywhere are met,
And we are grateful for the youth
That boldly dared to guard the truth.

Oh God, who gave us sight to see
The way to serve, we pray to thee;
We thank thee for all mothers fair
Who gave their sons into thy care
And bravely hid their grief and pain
That liberty and truth should reign.

We thank thee for each noble heart
That scorned to play the coward part;
We thank thee for the humblest lad
That in these bitter times is glad
To toil until war's flags are furled
To make a kindlier, better world.

For yield of tree and fruit and vine
Once more our gratitude is thine;
But in these days of dangers, we
Now offer prayers of thanks to thee
For all the brave and loyal breasts
Wherein the love of honor rests.

Oh God, we thank thee for our youth
That still hold dear the ways of truth;
We thank thee for their courage, and Devotion to our native land;
We're thankful that our flag still gleams
The emblem of man's highest dreams.
—From The American Boy.

NOT COMPLETE WITHOUT PIE

Time Was When No Thanksgiving Dinner Was Worthy of the Name in Its Absence.

Thanksgiving without pumpkin pie was held to be unthinkable. Yet there could be no pumpkin pie without molasses; because Colchester, Connecticut, did not receive its supply of molasses in season, it voted, in 1705, to put off its Thanksgiving from the first to the second Thursday of November! Pumpkin pies thus featured were usually baked in square tins, having only four corner pieces to each pie.

Second only to the pumpkin pie in importance at such a Thanksgiving feast as Whittier sings was the turkey which had been fattened for the occasion and which, when slowly roasting before the open fire and painstakingly basted from the dripping pan beneath, was fit to be the lord of any feast. Chicken there was, too, though always in the form of chicken pie, and vegetables of every sort, with raisins and citron, walnuts and popcorn, apples and cider galore.

Surely few could have really wished joys such as these to be sacrificed to a second service in the meeting house!

Golden Promise of the Future.

We are thankful for the assurance that out of all the tumult and madness of the past years the world of mankind is to find a life richer, truer, grander, than any it has heretofore known, a life of truer freedom, of sweeter tolerance and of a broader goodwill and brotherhood.

And we are thankful for the thought, amounting almost to a settled conviction, that as a consequence of the great awakening which has come to it with all its blood and tears and suffering, the world will from now on have forever done with every form of organized hypocrisy and oppression, will love the truth and nothing but the truth, and will deal justly, and love mercy.

Worldly Spirit Too Much With Us.

It must be admitted that our country has been an egotistical nation, because of our great material expansion and prosperity, and that the true spirit of Thanksgiving day has not been felt by a very large proportion of the people during the past few years. The intent of the pioneers who established it has been lost sight of largely. It has been regarded too much simply as a day to be observed by the church people, while the crowd took advantage of the holiday to indulge worldly pleasures.—Houston Post.

BRAZIL NUTS for CHRISTMAS

"Those great big meats, make great big eats
No other kinds can do;
The housewife buys because she knows
That the "Tiny Little Kids" and the "Great Big Kids"
Want those great big nigger toes."

Everybody Calls Them Nigger Toes

Your own grocer will have a display of new crop washed Brazil nuts in his window or on his counter.

Ask him to show you how this new style Squirrel Nut Cracker makes those nice, plump, rich Brazil nut kernels come out whole and free from the shell.

Have him pack five pounds of these washed Brazil nuts and a Squirrel Nut Cracker for you. Such a Christmas gift will please your best friends most.

The Squirrel Nut Cracker
Cracks Brazils, Pecans, Walnuts, Filberts and Almonds. It makes the kernel come out whole.

Ask Your Grocer Today!

Put away 25 or 50 pounds of Brazil nuts. Nothing finer for the long winter evenings. They keep well in a stone crock.

NOT AT ALL BAD REASONING

Few Have Real Confidence in Advice That Is Handed Out by Acknowledged Failures.

Harold Bell Wright, the novelist, said in an after-dinner speech in San Francisco:

"After all, success—financial success—is the best proof of a book's merit. All good books, from 'Robinson Crusoe' down, have had phenomenal success—made hundreds of thousands of dollars.

"We all know this is true about financial success. We are all like the tramp who asked the old gentleman for the price of a glass of beer.

"'I have no money,' the old gentleman said, 'but I will give you a little advice, friend.'

"The tramp lit a cigarette butt and blew a contemptuous puff of smoke into the old gentleman's face.

"'Well, if ye ain't got no money,' he said, 'yer advice can't be very valuable.'"

OLD AGE STARTS WITH YOUR KIDNEYS

Science says that old age begins with weakened kidneys and digestive organs.

This being true, it is easy to believe that by keeping the kidneys and digestive organs cleansed and in proper working order old age can be deferred and life prolonged far beyond that enjoyed by the average person.

For over 200 years GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been relieving the weaknesses and disability due to advancing years. It is a standard old-time home remedy and needs no introduction. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil is inclosed in odorless, tasteless capsules containing about 5 drops each. Take them as you would a pill, with a swallow of water. The oil stimulates the kidney action and enables the organs to throw off the poisons which cause premature old age. New life and strength increase as you continue the treatment. When completely restored continue taking a capsule or two each day. GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules will keep you in health and vigor and prevent a return of the disease.

Do not wait until old age or disease have settled down for good. At the first sign that your kidneys are not working properly, go to your druggist and get a box of GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. Money refunded if they do not help you. Three sizes. But remember to ask for the original imported GOLD MEDAL brand. In sealed packages.

The past few days of cold weather made us all forget about the few days of Indian Summer which we thought we were having. Even Ye Editor forgot there was ever a summer. The result was that we are now prepared for cold weather as we have put on our storm doors and windows. How are you fixed?

Miss Emma Lauritzen, who has been working at the hotel as waitress resigned her position Monday, and left for Ringstead, Iowa, where she went back to her old job as linograph operator on the newspaper there. Her position at the hotel was taken by Miss Arvella Emerson, who began work there Monday.

"Scotty" Erwing decided his restaurant could stand a little along the line of ornamental art work and with this in view procured a brush and some paint and executed his ideas on the front of the building. We will say the result is pleasing and that he improved the looks considerably. He also told us that he was going to have the interior fixed up with a new coat of paint.

Guess the cvorn is all picked in this neighborhood. Sunday a couple of young corn pickers drove their team all day trying to locate a field where they could get a job picking. The same answer greeted them at each place, that they were all done, would finish tomorrow or a day or two left. They came home late and did not find a field where they could get a few days' work.

As this is Thanksgiving Day we hear of many family reunions. Many are having their annual dinner with "grandma and grandpa," while those of us who are not quite so fortunate in having grandparents are enjoying our big dinner "with the folks." It is the annual day of great feasting and merry making and good old "punkin pie" and a day that will long be remembered.

Let us have your dates now and make arrangements for your bills and advertising.

Leon Sherwood autoed to Mason City last Friday and while going along peacefully in his big Nash car a little flivver came along driven by a speed demon who judged the paving as being too wide with the result that Mr. Sherwood lost a couple of fenders and also got his car scratched up. The flivver man promised to be more careful in the future and also to pay the damages. Mr. Sherwood was aelb to drive his car home, minus a few of the ornaments which belong on a car.

Last week Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Jorgenson, who assists us with the paper, met with rather a severe accident when she was feeding the job press. In some manner or other the press caught her hand when it was closing with the result that three of her fingers were badly crushed and one was broken near the joint. However she is getting along well at this time and the fingers are all healed with the exception of the broken member and that is on the road to recovery.

About Cataracts

So much has been written and said about cataracts and still current general knowledge is very indefinite.

Cataracts develop INSIDE not OUTSIDE of the eyeball. The eyeball is not taken out in removing the cataract. When the cataract has developed so sight is reduced to only distinguishing light then only the REMOVAL of the CATARACT by operation will offer any cure. An average of eighty out of one hundred of all cases operated obtain vision. Unless born with cataract or it follows injury or diabetes it rarely develops before sixty years of age. I operated for cataract for a lady who was enghty-eight years old with good results.

Cataract can be arrested by MEDICAL TREATMENT if treated in the early stages. I have cured hundreds with medicines in early stage. WHEN DIMNESS FIRST APPEARS IS THE TIME. Eighty-five out of a hundred are successful, about the same percentage as operation, but when developed to practical blindness only removal by operation will cure.

GEORGE PABST SELLS DRUG STORE

Our readers will be quite surprised to hear that G. A. Pabst has sold out his drug business in Klemme and will soon leave our little city. Now we supposed that George was a permanent fixture in Klemme and he rather thought so himself and is not yet quite sure if it is all a dream. All the necessary details of the transaction have not yet been signed up, but George says the place is as good as sold. Mr. Pabst has been in Klemme several years now and has enjoyed a good business all of the time. He runs as good a drug store as can be found anywhere and he will be greatly missed from the business circle, as also will his family from the social circles of Klemme. Now that George has "gone and did it" we extend our best wishes for his future, whatever or wherever that will be. The new man we have not met as he was only here between trainsb ut George says he appears to be a fine fellow and no doubt will be well liked.

METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Morning service at 10:30 a. m. Please note the change in time. Evening service at 7:30 p. m. Sunday School at 11:30 a. m.

For the next three Sunday evenings, beginning December t7th, a series of Advent sermons is announced, preparatory to the Christmas season. The subject of the first is, "Preparing for Christmas.'

A home like church with a cordial welcome to all.

FREE SHOW

Many thrilling adventures were encountered by Elmo Lincoln and his fellow players in filming "Elmo the Mighty," which introduces the famed "Tarzan" as a serial star. It was "shot" in a wild and wooly mountain district of California. The first episode will be shown at the Idle Hour Theatre, Tuesday, December 9. Free!

BAND MEETING HELD

The band boys again met Monday evening. Roll call ws taken and there were several more members added to the band. The band now numbers some over thirty pieces and is well on the road to forty members. A number of instruments were ordered and at the next meeting practice will begin. All those who have not yet made arrangements for the purchase of instruments should do so at once, for practice will begin as soon as there are enough to begin. We are also pleased to say that some of the grown ups are getting interested in the band and we now have some on our list. As we have said before, all who are between 10 years old and 60 years old can join. You're next! Get in the big band, all beginners, so this is your chance.

COURT WILL CONVENE DEC. 8

Judge Clark Has Set December 8th As Opening Day Instead of December 1st.

The Clerk's office has been informed that the December session of the Hancock County Court will convene on the 8th instead of the 1st, the day previously set, and all grand and petit jurors will report on the 8th instead of the 1st. However, the Judge will be here naturalization day—December 6th. Do not confuse the dates Naturalization day December 6th. Court convenes December 8th.

GERMANIA NOW LAKOTA

Germania has at last become Lakota; at least, so far as the postoffice is concerned. The name was changed as a result of a war-time election held October 1st, 1918. However the old name continued in use till early last week, when Postmaster Mussman received notice that the change had been made on the recorsd of the postoffice department. The last number of the North Kossuth Record was dated at Lakota (formerly Germania) It remains to be seen whether or not the new name will come into popular use. There has been considerable opposition to the change.—Algona Advance.

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

We are not going to "beat around the bush" any but will come right out and say that the price of the Klemme Times beginning January 1st 1920, will be $2 per year in advance. To those who reside outside of Hancock County the price will be $2.50. We will not blame the raise in the price "on account fo the war," but will lay it unto the high price we are now paying for peace. A great many papers raised their subscription during the war period and we will say they were entitled to it. Some have raised again since peace was declared, and we will say they are again entitled to it. To keep pace with the cost of producing a newspaper forces us to also fall in line with the other papers. Print paper has tripled in cost, yes even more, almost five times what it used to be. Type is higher, as is also ink, composition, machinery, repairs, rollers and the thousand other things used in a print shop. That sums up our reason for the advance in price.

However, we are willing to save our subscribers some money. All those who pay up their subscription now will be allowed to pay in advance for as many years as they wish at the old rate of $1.50. Or those of our subscribers who reside outside of this ocunty may renew for $2 per year.

Remember that this offer is not good any longer than to the 1st of January.

IDLE HOUR CAUGHT ON FIRE

Last Saturday evening about supper time the Idle Hour Theatre nearly caught fire. The furnace became over heated during the absence of the janitor and when Mr. Pavey came down after supper he could smell smoke. Upon investigating he found that the wood frame around the top of the furnace had caught fire. The use of a fire extinguisher put a quick end to the flames and no dmage was done.

Dr Shultz will be at the Klemme hotel from 11:30 to 2:00 on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

"Give me Something to wear for Christmas"

Here's what a famous man say: "When I was a poor lad I always wanted a Christmas present I could wear, a stocking cap, a good suit, a nice warm overcoat---I've never gotten over it; if no one gives me something of the kind at Christmas time, I buy it myself."

HE had the right idea; he still has it. Most every man and every boy wants something he can wear; something useful. We have the things men and boys buy for themselves; and our mark in the merchandise tells them of your good judgement; they know our standard.

Here are some suggestions for gifts to the men in your family.

Handkerchiefs; a man can't have too many.
Gloves
Hosiery
Underwear

Neckwear; silk knittee ties are the smartest thing.
Muffleas
Shirts
Belts

A Hart Schaffner & Marx suit or overcoat; the best gift of all.

News of Our Neighbors

On account of the coal shortage the jitney which runs between Albert Lea and Fort Dodge, has been taken off until further notice. This will be a hardship on the children of Stilson who attend school here. There are nine of these students who come down on the morning train and return in the evening. The "hook" between Algona and Hampton will run as long as it can stay on the track.—Corwith Hustler.

The Bowles-Billings elevator plant at this place was put up at public auction Friday afternoon and was bid in by E. H. Francis for $13,000. We understand that a farmers co-operative company is to be formed to operate it. This plant has two automatic dumps, two motors, and everything is in first-class condition. The bins have a capacity of 35,000 bushels —Corwith Hustler.

Henry Lemon's sale was one of the best demonstrations of what printers' ink will do to bring a long list of buyers into the fold, that we have known for some time. Auctioneer Kester tells us that Henry had estimated his sale at about $3,000.00, but that when it came to checking up with the clerk it developed that the aggregate of the sale was $4,600. Henry used space in both the local papers and the Klemme Times attracted buyers from all sections. It will be well for those contemplating having sales to copy Henry's system of publicity.—Garner Democrat.

Episode 1

Elmo Lincoln, who gained fame in screen annals as the star of the wonderful "Tarzan," and who added to his fame in such pictures as "Intolerance" and "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," makes his bow as a serial star at the Idle Hour Theatre, Tuesday, December 9th.

"Elmo the Mighty" is the name of his first serial, which is released by Universal. The first episode is called "The Mystery of Mad Mountain."

The story deals with Capt. Elmo Armstrong, a forest ranger, who meets Lucille Gray, whom he knew as a Red Cross nurse when overseas.

Lucille is the daughter of Richard Gray, Western manager of a timber syndicate, who has been "framed-up" by a gang of swindlers until it appears that he defrauded the government out of half a million dollars on a tie contract.

In endeavoring to clear Gray's name, Elmo and Lucille, (Grace Cunard) fall afoul of the swindlers, led by Granville Sear, (Rex de Roselli) and Rawden (Ivor McFayden). The serial starts out at a lively pace with some thrilling action in "the Mad Mountains," a wild and inaccessible district.

Ast he episode ends, Luicile, returning home with Armstrong after besting the villians, is lassoed from her saddle, and Armstrong starts in pursuit of the men who have abducted her.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

—12—

The hilt of the knife in my belt attracted my attention, and I drew it forth, curious to learn if it bore any mark of ownership. My eyes were instantly attracted to a dark stain on both hilt and blade. I held it to the light—it was the stain of blood, and my hands were also reddened by it. In that first instant of horror I hurled the weapon out through the open port into the sea. Blood! There had been murder committed on board, and the fellow I had struck down was seeking refuge, endeavoring to find concealment following his crime. Ay, but what about the light in the cabin? It had been extinguished after the fleeing fugitive had entered Dorothy's stateroom. Did this mean that the slayer had an accomplice? If so, then the killing was not the result of a mere personal quarrel amidships, or in the forecastle, but the result of some conspiracy. I thought of Sanchez, and of Estada's plan to obtain control of the ship. Could this be its culmination? And was the Spaniard already lying dead in his cabin?

Nothing came of my thought—only confusion; nor did I dare investigate for fear of becoming more deeply involved in the tragedy. No, there was nothing to be done; my safety, and the safety of the girl depended on our apparent ignorance of what had occurred. Convincing myself of this, I washed the blood stains from my hands and lay down in the bunk fully dressed to await my call.

When called I exchanged but few words with LeVere. He went quickly to his room. Nothing of importance occurred during my watch.

The dawn came cold and gray but with clearing skies. I climbed into the main crosstrees and swept the horizon with a glass. Not so much as a speck rewarded my efforts, and I descended the ratlines, shouting to the boatswain to call the port watch. Watkins came aft to the wheel and I sent the fellow thus relieved down into the cabin to rout out LeVere. The two returned to deck together, the negro glancing about curiously without mounting the ladder.

"You call Senor Estada yet?" he questioned.

"No; I had no orders to do so."

"He tol' me call him at daylight. Here you, Amada; go wake up the senor."

The seaman disappeared, while LeVere crossed the poop deck and stood beside me looking out across the expanse of sea.

Amada emerged from the companion and stared up at us, shading his mouth with one hand as he spoke.

"He answer nothing, Senor LeVere."

"Was the door locked?"

"I know not, senor; I not try to open it."

"The swine," said LeVere, "I suppose I'll have to go myself."

"We'll go down together, senor," I said quietly. "Estada must be sick; I could hear the rumpus Amada kicked up even on deck here. No man could sleep through that racket."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New Conspiracy.

The interior of the cabin appeared desolate in the gray light of dawn. I led the way directly to Estada's

It Was the Stain of Blood.

stateroom. My heart pounded like a hammer as I rapped on the wooden panels and waited some response from within. There was no answer, no sound of movement, and I rapped again more loudly, my questioning eyes seeking LeVere's face. He was listening as intently as myself.

"There is something wrong, senor," he whispered, "for he was ever a light sleeper."

The door was unlocked, the latch yielding instantly to the hand, and I stepped within. A glance told everything. Estada lay in his bunk, with one leg dangling outside, and his head crooked against the side wall. His very posture was that of sudden death, even had it not been pictured by the ghastly face, and the dark pool of blood underneath. I heard an exclamation from Le Vere and stood for an instant utterly unable to move. I knew already what I should find, yet finally forced myself forward—he was stone dead, pierced with three knife thrusts. I stood up and faced the mulatto, whose countenance was fairly green with horror.

"What do you know about this, Senor LeVere?" I asked sternly. "The man has been murdered, knifed. Who did it—and why?"

He could scarcely answer, gripping at the table for support, and never removing his gaze from the face of the dead man. Yet I believed his words; was convinced this was not the terror of guilt.

"My God! I cannot tell; I have never dreamed of this."

"Had the man enemies. Anyone you would suspect?"

"Enemies? Ay, plenty of them; we all have. We expect that in our trade. This ship is full of devils ready enough to do such a job; but I could not name the one who did do it. I know of no cause. I have heard nothing."

"I believe you, LeVere," I said.

"What can we do, senor?"

"Do! We must talk that over first. We cannot meet this thing until we are prepared. There is more danger in hasty action than anything else."

I shut the door behind us and turned the key. It was a relief to get outside, even into that dismal cabin, beyond view of Estada's dead face. LeVere, who had evidently lost his nerve, sank into a chair.

"You fear an uprising, a mutiny?" I questioned, "when this is reported?"

"What will prevent?" he asked. "The captain cannot stir; the mate is dead; the men already crazed because we take no prizes. They will murder us also and take control. Those devils amidships."

"And who leads them? Who would be captain?"

"Manuel Estevan," he whispered.

"I thought as much. Then it is Manuel Estevan we must secure first—before they know. Whatever his men may know of what has occurred they will make no move until they get his orders. We must stop the possibility of his issuing any. Without a leader the advantage is ours."

"You mean to kill him?"

"Only as a last resort. There is no good feeling between those quartered amidships and the crew?"

"No, senor; it is hate generally, although they are not all alike. The real sailors are mostly captured men; they serve to save their lives, and only for these others on board could not be held long. Your plan, senor, is to set the one against the other?"

"Yes, if possible. These sailor men are of all races. Can they be trusted?"

"Some might be, sir; it is hard to tell how many. It is not the race which counts so much, senor. There are those among them who would not care to return to honesty."

"And you, LeVere?"

He spread his hands and shrugged his shoulders. "There is no hope of me; I was born to the free life."

"What then is it with you?"

"Hate, senor—revenge," and his teeth gleamed savagely. "I would spit on this Manuel who seeks to be chief. I can never be—no; I am of black skin, with negro blood in my veins, and white men would never have it so. But I can hate, senor. That is why I am with you now, if the devil so will. Your plan might work—tell me more of it."

"What are the odds, say you—thirty to a hundred? Ay, but surprise will overcome that. My plan is this: First to secure Manuel as quietly as possible but at whatever cost. With him in our hands, or dead, the buccaneers have no leader. What then? There are men in the crew on deck and in the forecastle to be trusted—Watkins is one, and he will know others, a dozen no doubt. They will be enough. We will whisper the truth to these, and have them ready for a signal. The forward door from amidships is closed by iron bars—is it not?"

"Si, senor," his eyes again sparkling with interest. "The men quarreled, and there was fighting."

"Then there is no escape in that direction and it can be no great task to close any passage leading aft. Lower the deck hatch and we have those devils below caged like so many rats. There need be no fighting; starvation will bring them to terms."

"But, senor, your dozen men cannot guard the buccaneers below and also manage the bark. The crew are not all lambs—many will sympathize with those thus locked beneath deck. Cochose is bad, and a friend of Manuel. He will fight, and there are others to back him."

"I know that, LeVere. The whole plan is desperate, but there is no other possible. Here is my scheme. There is a gun rack in the cabin to arm the dozen men we can trust. The others have nothing but their sheath knives. The buccaneers can be secured below, before these other lads ever realize what is happening. As soon as we have control of the ship we'll round them up forward. They won't dare face the guns. I'll give them their choice."

"And what will you tell them, senor?"

I caught my breath, conscious of his meaning. My secret hope could not be revealed to this fellow. The answer came quickly to my lips.

"The whole truth, Senor LeVere—that Manuel conspired to seize the bark through a mutiny of the buccaneers; that these were to be turned loose with license to kill anyone on board who opposed them; that their real purpose was to divide among themselves all the treasure below.

"Who Did It—and Why?"

then wreck the vessel and escape with it. That to this end Estada had already been murdered. I shall explain that we discovered this conspiracy just in time to save them from butchery, and they must stand by us or else submit to those hell-hounds."

"And after that, senor?"

"Why, Porto Grande, of course," I admitted heartily. "The men will understand what that means—a handful of gold for each of them and a run ashore. Why, LeVere, they will make more apiece than by looting a half dozen ships, and with no fighting. It will be a fortune for you and me."

His somber eyes lighted up, startled by this new idea, and he sprang to his feet.

"You mean that, senor! We divide what is below and sail for Porto Grande? I hear you right? You not mean surrender? You stay pirate?"

I laughed, my nerves tingling to the success of my ruse—he had taken the tempting bait like a hungry fish.

"Why, of course. I am not such a fool as to throw away this chance. This is our chance, LeVere. If we put the Namur into Porto Grande, with Sanchez on board and alive, and those hellhounds locked below, we'll get anything we ask for. We'll be the cocks of the walk. If he shouldn't live through, why then we'll have a ship, and can run the game alone. Either way, if we win, the prize is ours—and if we stick together we win."

My apparent enthusiasm caught the fellow. I could read the working of his mind in his face. This new view of the situation promised wealth, power, the total defeat of Estevan; everything he most desired.

"You think Senor Sanchez live?"

"What difference? If he lives he owes his life to us. If he dies the bark is in our hands, and the treasure. Once we have won we care nothing if he live or die. Are we together in this?"

He thrust out a lean yellow hand, and I gripped it.

"Si, senor; I am with you."

"You pledge your word, Francois?"

"I pledge it, senor."

"Good! And you have mine. Now to work—first Manuel Estevan, and then the men on deck."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The First "White Way."

When William Niblo opened his new theater at Broadway and Prince street, back on Independence day, 1828, he celebrated the double occasion by a patriotic display of gas lights which flaunted the name of "Niblo" far and wide and immortalized it in stage as well as gas history. An admiring public gasped from a respectful distance, watching the red, white and blue shadows cast by the rows of gas jets spelling the proprietor's name.

Gas had been used for the first time in New York city five years before, but to the owner of Niblo's garden goes the credit of first using gas for illuminating a theater.—Gas Logic.

BABS.

By JACK LAWTON.

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union)

John Pendleton paused at the sight of a small figure in the nook which he had selected for his "fishing" corner. Former success in the waters beneath this tree had caused him to hasten his steps in anticipation. But here was the girl before him. John frowned, then at her startled glance he smiled. She too, was evidently aware of the lucky fishing spot, and disturbed by the appearance of an interloper.

As she sat out on a low branch of a tree, she was almost in line with his head. Silently, he regarded her puckered earnest brows, her little sunburned nose. An odd creature this, a cross, he told himself, between Mrs. Wiggs, and Sis Hopkins. The Sis Hopkins resemblance occurred to him when the girl smiled. The smile was an apology for her own intrusion, and a good-natured hint that she intended to remain there.

Surprisingly, to himself, the odd personality drew and piqued his interest. When the girl later slipped away with a shy farewell nod, he tried ineffectually to think of some ruse to detain her. But the next morning, the sun glinting down on her brown little face and faded gingham dress, he came upon her in the same spot. She was not fishing this time, but reading a book, to which she returned after a stiff bow of greeting.

An unusual desire possessed him to converse with this quaint contradiction of a girl,—Pendleton in self defense avoided the charming feminine. Surely this knobby haired young person was not a designing charmer to be fought against.

"Beautiful morning," he began.

The girl agreed with lowered eyes. It was some time before John's entertaining efforts succeeded in winning from the blue eyes another direct glance, but he felt himself rewarded. And so inscrutible are the ways of Cupid, that John Pendleton, sought after, and heretofore impregnable male, fell into the deepest depths of love in that one wistful gaze.

Every morning thereafter found him at the girl's side in the fishing nook beneath the tree.

"Babs," was her name she told him, and she was stopping at the white house down the road. She had heard of the books John wrote and the big car that he drove into town, and she was very glad to know him. More than that, he could not coax from her.

Plain and humble as her appearance, there was a dignity almost hostile about the small creature, which perplexed and discouraged her eager lover. Babs was so difficult to understand; each day her mystery grew.

"Why do you knot your hair so tightly?" he asked her. "One can scarcely find the shade of its brown."

"What difference," she retorted pointedly, "does that make to you?"

John Pendleton held his breath.

"I love you Babs," he said at last tensely.

Babs laughed, showed again her white teeth.

"Love me?" she mocked, "with my funny red nose, and my old cotton dress and my shoes,—have you noticed my shabby shoes?"

Off guard her wonder eyes searched his.

"Have you noticed all my plainness, Mr. John Pendleton, and still do you think that you love me?"

"Think!" cried John. Fiercely he caught the little figure in his arms.

"I know that I love you—forever," he said.

When she had hastily freed herself, the perplexing girl regarded him with eyes that were widely astonished.

"I don't understand it," she murmured, helplessly. "You are sure, quite sure," she insisted, "you would love me always—just like this?"

Mutely, adoringly, John nodded.

"Then I will tell you something," Babs said. She put forth a placating hand.

"I have been experimenting, John Pendleton, experimenting,—in love. At home before I came here, and everywhere that I went, men made love to me. They praised my hair which is wavy, my skin which is fair and the pretty frocks I love to wear. I despised it all. When I came here, I had to learn whether there might be any admirable quality about my real self, which would hold man's love if the superficial things failed. Beauty does not always last, you know, neither can one always be charming. So I decided to experiment upon you. Your conquest would be my assurance of lasting love. It was rather hard to sunburn my nose," Babs added, "but it helped in the general effect."

Angrily John Pendleton sprang to his feet.

"I hope," he said, "that you are satisfied with the success of your experiment. Being able to hold my love, as you supposed under difficult conditions, rest assured that you will be able also to hold this man's love that you covet. I wish you—happiness."

"What's the use of wishing for me the happiness which only you can give, John?" Babs said.

"You mean," He began unbelievingly.

"I mean," Babs replied, "that you are the man I love. The experiment was general."

It was sometime afterward that John Pendleton said: "I don't think that I want you any different Babs."

"You will," that person said serenely, "you'll be pleased to introduce the real Barbara Dean to your friends."

FORM LABOR PARTY

WORKERS OF U. S. DECIDE TO ENTER POLITICAL ARENA.

NATIONAL TICKET TO BE NAMED

Farmers' Organizations Invited to Participate—Convention to Be Held the Coming Summer.

Chicago, Ill.—Representatives of organized labor, meeting in convention here last week, laid plans for a new national political party, adopted a constitution and selected a name for the movement. The organization will be known as the labor party of the United States, and its object will be "to organize all hand and brain workers of the country to support the principles of a political, social and industrial democracy." Women are to have equal representation with men in the management of the party. Trades unions, farmers' organizations, co-operative bodies and all other associations which subscribe to the principles of the party are invited to become affiliated with the movement. The affairs of the organization will be administered by a national committee which will elect a secretary-treasurer as its executive officer.

The new party will hold a national convention next summer to nominate candidates for president and vice president,

The constitution provides for the issuance of state charters upon petition of five or more local branches. A monthly tax of 2 cents per capita will be levied on the membership to finance the party.

ORDER OF LITTLE USE.

Rescinding of Miners' Strike Increased Production But Slightly.

Washington, D. C.—Withdrawal of the coal strike order by the miners' union officials increased production of bituminous coal 12.4 per cent for the four days thereafter, as compared with the period when the strike was in full force, the United States geological survey reported. Soft coal produced during the week of November 9 to 15 totaled 3,990,000 tons, or 438,000 tons more than when the strike was officially on. Despite the increase the production for the week was only 23 per cent of normal, as compared with 29.4 per cent the previous week.

DANCERS PERISH IN FLAMES.

Disaster Befalls Merrymakers in Southern Town—Fifteen Crushed.

Ville Platt, La.—Twenty-five persons, most of them women and girls, lost their lives here in a fire which quickly destroyed a frame building in which 300 of the village folk were making merry at a dance. Fifteen others were seriously injured and search of the ruins was expected to add to the list of the dead.

Ten of the dancers were burned to death, and others were crushed in a stampede to reach the street down a narrow stairway while the flames were sweeping rapidly from the lower floor.

Glass Scores Operators.

Washington, D. C.—Bituminous coal miners east of the Mississippi river in 1917 made "what might be termed fabulous profits," said a statement issued by Secretary of the Treasury Glass.

The general 1917 average, it was stated, was from 100 to 150 per cent on invested capital, the range being from 15 to 800 per cent.

Seek to Continue Daylight Law.

New York.—Surveys by chambers of commerce and industrial organizations are in progress in sixteen eastern states to ascertain public sentiment regarding a continuation of daylight saving, and the campaign will be extended throughout the country before next April, according to Marcus M. Marks, president of the national daylight saving association.

S. D. Mine Wrecked By Fire.

Wilton, N. D.—The main workings of the Typple mine here, one of the largest in North Dakota, were destroyed by fire of a mysterious origin. The loss will run into thousands of dollars and throw 300 men out of work. The daily production of 1,500 tons of lignite coal stopped indefinitely as the result of the fire.

Prescriptions for Food.

Washington, D. C.—The food shortage in Petrograd now has become so acute that food is only distributed upon prescriptions of physicians, according to unofficial advices to the State department from Helsingfors.

Bull Worth Fortune Dies.

Middletown, N. Y.—The famous Holstein Fresian bull, King Segis Pontiac Alcartra, valued at $50,000, died here Nov. 22. It was owned by John H. Arfmann of Fairmont farm.

Pershing's Itinerary Long One.

Washington, D. C.—The itinerary of General Pershing's inspection tour of cantonments and posts, issued here, shows the trip will cover completely the manufacturing and training machinery erected during the months of war. More than 100 camps, aviation fields and ammunition plants will be visited in order that General Pershing may be able to recommend to Secretary Baker a comprehensive plan for maintaining adequate facilities to back up military establishments.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

If properly stored after harvest, vegetables can be made a source of considerable income to the farmer who is located near good sized towns or cities. In such places a constantly increasing number of people are living in apartments and flats, where they have storage facilities for only small quantities of vegetables, or in houses heated by furnaces in the basement, making that part of the house too warm for the storage of vegetables. The automobile or motor truck has made it possible for the grower to get his vegetables to the dealer or consumer even in cold weather, especially if his machine is inclosed or is fitted with a heater.

Must Be Well Stored.

Proper storage of the vegetables from harvest time until they are brought out for sale is a subject to which the grower must give particular attention, for on it the entire success of a winter-marketing program depends.

Where the grower plans to draw on his stock from time to time during the cold weather he must so store his produce that portions of it can be removed without disturbing the remainder. Instead of putting all of one kind of vegetables in one pile it is advisable to make several smaller piles or to use various containers, such as boxes, barrels or baskets, each of which is adequately protected and can be removed with its contents without disturbing other stores. Where outdoor pits are used it may be desirable to introduce intervening walls or layers of earth at more frequent intervals than would be necessary in storing supplies merely for one family.

Beets, late cabbage, carrots, celery, onions, parsnips, potatoes, sweet potatoes, salsify, and turnips may be stored in their natural condition. Beans of various kinds, including the limas, may be stored dry. Good storage facilities exist in most farm houses, it being only necessary to make use of the cellar, the attic, or other parts of the dwelling, depending upon the character and amount of produce to be stored. Barrels, crates, boxes or bins may be used as containers for various vegetables, but movable containers are preferable to built-in bins because they are more easily cleaned. Outdoor storage cellars or caves are particularly desirable, for larger quantities can be taken care of in convenient and inexpensive fashion.

Protecting by Insulation.

In sections where low temperatures prevail it is necessary to insulate the storage cellar or house so that the vegetables will not freeze. The above-ground type of house much used in many sections of the North, has thick walls filled with sawdust or shavings. It is necessary that pains be taken to provide for proper ventilation. In many northern sections large storage cellars are built partly underground. Concrete storage cellars are coming into quite general use. Outdoor banks and pits are also familiar means employed to protect vegetables in cold weather. The conical pit is used commonly for such vegetables as potatoes, carrots, beets, turnips, salsify, parsnips, and heads of cabbage. The bureau of plant industry has issued a Farmers' Bulletin, No. 879, which gives detailed instructions regarding the construction of these storage places.

All vegetables which the farmer or truck raiser may desire to keep in stock for selling through the winter months do not require the same type of storage.

GRADUALLY ACCUSTOM LAMBS TO RICH FEED

Animals for Fattening Are Put on Dry Pasture.

After Two or Three Days They Are Turned Into Cornfield—Shelter of Some Kind Is Advisable—Provide Plenty Water.

Lambs bought on the market for fattening must be accustomed gradually to rich green feed like rape, soybeans or cowpeas, says the University of Missouri College of Agriculture. The method commonly used by successful feeders is to put the lambs on a comparatively dry timothy or bluegrass pasture upon arrival at the farm. Here they are allowed to rest and fill up on grass for a couple of days. An abundance of good clean drinking water should be provided at all times. After a day or two the lambs are turned into the cornfield for about an hour, following their morning fill of grass. They are then returned to the bluegrass or timothy pasture. This operation is repeated for three or four days, and the time the lambs are allowed in the cornfield is increased about an hour each day.

It is not easy to drive a load or two of lambs out of a large cornfield, and there is always the danger of leaving behind a few which have strayed from the main flock. To avoid this trouble, fence off "sheep tight" a plot of two or three acres. In this plot grow forage to be used gradually to accustom the lambs to their regular forage in the larger field. This plan will be found very convenient.

The lambs will eat the lower blades of the corn and will learn to eat the "down" corn. However, they will not become troublesome by breaking down the stalks in order to get to the ears, if sufficient food is provided. If it is desirable to pasture off the grain instead of husking out the corn, it will be necessary for best results to break the stalks for the lambs. Just enough stalks should be broken each day to furnish grain to satisfy the lambs. If too much is broken down at one time it will be wasted.

"No one ever made sheep fat by stinting them." It should be remembered that as the fall season advances, feed becomes scarce and unpalatable. If the lambs are to be marketed as fat lambs they should not be forced to remain in the cornfield too long without some additional feed. This is particularly true where rape is not available. It is necessary about November 1 to begin feeding some grain in addition to the forage. Many feeders also feed hay at this time, giving the lambs each evening as much as they will eat before morning. A few of the larger feeders begin feeding corn silage about November 1. As much silage as the lambs will eat up clean in about an hour, is the right amount to feed both morning and evening.

Provide plenty of salt and good water. Shed or barn shelter is not absolutely necessary, but it is advisable to have shelter to protect the lambs from the cold fall rains.

POULTRY SUFFER FOR WATER

Lack Is Detrimental to Health and Has Indirect Bearing on Productivity.

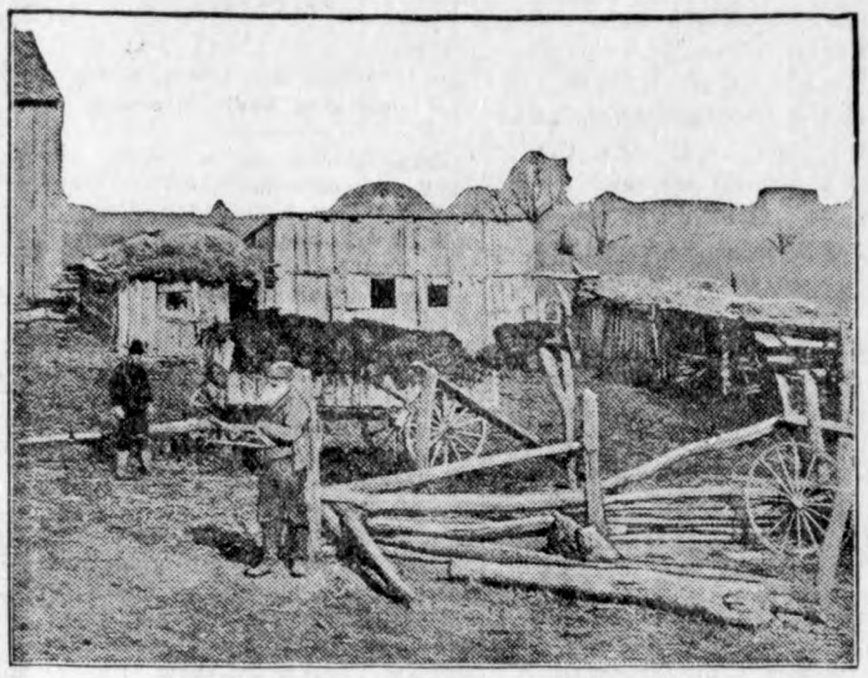
Allowing fowls to suffer, even for short periods, for the want of water is not only detrimental to robust health, but has an indirect bearing on productivity. Green food in variety is beneficial not only because it helps slake thirst, but for its mineral salts and its feeding value as roughage. For this reason it should be fed in liberal quantities, and pure water should not only be always available, but in full measure. Both stand for health and productive values.

WINTER SHELTER FOR SWINE

Farmer Cannot Expect to Realize Big Profit From Animals Exposed to Rain and Cold.

The time is past when we can expect to leave our hogs unsheltered during the late fall and early winter rains and expect to realize the best results from feeding them. The thick layers of fat may be a protection but they are no insurance against pneumonia and kindred ailments. The hog is not protected by a thick coat of hair as are the other animals and he is more in contact with the damp cold soil underfoot.

WAY TO AVOID QUARRELS OVER LEASES WORKED OUT BY GOVERNMENT OFFICIALS



Repairs Should Be Provided for in Renting Contract.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beginning about this time every year, between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000 men in the United States are thinking about leasing or renting land. All that thinking results in between 2,500,000 and 3,000,000 contracts between landlord and tenant. For a year, or two or three years, or longer, those men must live and work under those contracts. The form of the contract, says the United States department of agriculture, affects not only the prosperity of the contracting parties but the comfort and happiness of themselves and their families. A poorly considered lease is likely to result in friction and frequent removals. A well-considered lease is a sort of insurance policy against quarrels and tends to increase the length of time that the landlord and tenant operate together, a condition, according to the department, that is greatly to be desired.

There are a great many things to be considered in every lease. The economists in charge of land economics in the office of farm management, department of agriculture, have made out a list of points that every man who has ground to lease and every man who wants to lease ground may need to consider. Although this list is long, it is, nevertheless, not to be taken as being so complete as to cover every feature that may deserve consideration on any specific farm. On the other hand not all of them will need to be considered by the parties to any one lease, but they serve as reminders, and those that are not pertinent in any particular cases need not be considered.

The list follows.

General Features.

Date of agreement.

Names of the contracting parties.

Name of the farm, its boundaries, and location in state, county, township and section.

Date of beginning and ending.

Provision for renewal.

Date by which renewal is to be made or notice to quit given.

Statement field or cropping system or rotation to be followed.

Map of the farm showing rotation and field system.

Plan and purpose of farming and of leasing.

Principles underlying the rental bargain.

In whom the management of the farm is to rest.

Matter of settling differences, by arbitration or otherwise.

Enforcement of provisions.

Yielding of possession in event of default, failure to observe agreements or at termination of lease.

Witnesses.

Sealing and recording (in some states) if the contract is for longer than a certain period.

What Each Party Is to Get.

What the cash rent is to be.

What cash rent is to be paid for, and when and where it is to be paid.

Share each party is to get: of cash crops, feed crops, straw, stalk pasture, animal products, and animals raised, etc.

Where rent share is to be delivered and in what condition.

Who is to do the selling.

Decisions as to the time to sell and amount to be sold.

When settlement is to be made of moneys received and paid out.

Compensation to be paid tenant for fertility added, improvements made, hauling materials, marketing landlord's crops, etc.

Rights and Privileges.

Right of entry by landlord for purpose of viewing, of making repairs, etc.

Right of landlord to supervise or direct operation of farm.

Lien on crops and other property as security for payment of rent.

Use of improvements, dwelling, etc., by tenant.

Right of tenant to garden, fruit, firewood, pasture.

Right of tenant to use of undivided crops and of animal products for household use on share rented farms.

Right of tenant to use of work animals for private purposes.

What Each Party Is to Furnish.

Land and improvement: Labor and materials for repairs and for new structures, for fencing and ditching. Insurance and taxes on real estate.

Human labor for farm work: Personal, family, hired, general and special.

Work animals: Ownership of original number, replacement, horse hire, shoeing and veterinary for work stock.

Productive animals: Ownership of original number and replacement.

Expense on productive live stock for service, registry, veterinary, etc.

Feed purchased when used for work animals and for productive animals.

Pasture for use of work animals and productive animals.

Machinery, implements and harness: Original investment in and repair and replacement of.

Machine bills and hire: Thrashing, baling, ginning, silo filling, etc.

Fuel and oil for farm work, spray material, twine, cans, bags, barrels, boxes.

Grass, grain and other seed, purchased and use of farm-raised seed.

Purchased fertilizer, lime and manure.

Road tax, telephone cost, taxes and insurance on property other than real estate.

Procedure by which decision is reached as to what to buy, when to buy, how much to buy, and who is to do the buying.

Method of appraising property taken over for joint account.

Obligations of Tenant.

Practice of good husbandry, treatment of seed, vaccination of hogs, mowing weeds.

To spread manure (designation of land to be manured).

To spread lime and phosphate furnished by the landlord.

Fall plowing.

To keep improvements in ordinary condition and repair: Buildings, fences, windmills, pumps, drains, ditches, roads, trimming hedges, care of shrubbery and grounds, pruning and spraying of fruit trees.

To assist in construction of new improvements and repair of old.

To board at fixed rates, labor which landlord employs on improvements.

To haul materials for farm use, for improvements, and landlord's share of products.

To work out road tax.

To keep receipts for bills paid which are to be shared or later paid by landlord.

To keep a record of yields, sales, purchases, inventories, etc.

To consult landlord in respect to things of importance which concern him.

Obligations of Landlord.

To furnish materials to enable tenant to make ordinary repairs to farm improvements,

To make special repairs to buildings and to erect new improvements.

To compensate tenant for special work required of him.

To furnish tenant with loans of money or goods to carry on the farm.

To compensate tenant for unexhausted applications of fertilizers, and other improvements.

To furnish specified quantities of lime and phosphate.

Restrictions and Reservations.

Retention by landlord of certain lands and buildings.

Kind of farming to be done; rotation, acreage of each crop to be grown.

Time and manner of plowing.

Time of using pasture; prevention of overstocking.

Crops which may not be grown.

Live stock which may not be kept (breachy stock, hogs to be ringed, etc.).

Limitation on the number of different classes of live stock to be kept.

Possession of fields to revert to landlord after crops are harvested in last year of lease period.

Assignment of lease and subletting.

TORPEDOED!

Don't blast your Liver and Bowels, but take "Cascarets."

You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache, coated tongue, bad taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy, disordered stomach and colds.

Are you keeping your liver and bowels clean with Cascarets, or shocking your insides every few days with Calomel, Salts, Oil and violent pills?

Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested, fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Cascarets never gripe, sicken or cause inconvenience and Cascarets cost so little too.—Adv.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

Acid-Stomach

How can anyone with a sour, gassy stomach, who is constantly belching, has heartburn and suffers from indigestion have anything but a bad breath? All of these stomach disorders mean just one thing—Acid-Stomach.

EATONIC, the wonderful new stomach remedy in pleasant tasting tablet form that you eat like a bit of candy, brings quick relief from these stomach miseries. EATONIC sweetens the breath because it makes the stomach sweet, cool and comfortable. Try it for that nasty taste, congested throat and "heady feeling" after too much smoking.

If neglected, Acid-Stomach may cause you a lot of serious trouble. It leads to nervousness, headaches, insomnia, melancholia, rheumatism, sciatica, heart trouble, ulcer and cancer of the stomach. It makes its millions of victims weak and miserable, listless, lacking in energy, all tired out. It often brings about chronic invalidism, premature old age, a shortening of one's days.

You need the help that EATONIC can give you if you are not feeling as strong and well as you should. You will be surprised to see how much better you will feel just as soon as you begin taking this wonderful stomach remedy. Get a big 50 cent box from your druggist today. So much has been written and said about cataracts and still current general knowledge is very indefinite.

Cataracts develop INSIDE not OUTSIDE of the eyeball. The eyeball is not taken out in removing the cataract. When the cataract has developed so sight is reduced to only distinguishing light then only the REMOVAL of the CATARACT by operation will offer any cure. An average of eighty out of one hundred of all cases operated obtain vision. Unless born with cataract or it follows injury or diabetes it rarely develops before sixty years of age. I operated for cataract for a lady who was enghty-eight years old with good results.

Cataract can be arrested by MEDICAL TREATMENT if treated in the early stages. I have cured hundreds with medicines in early stage. WHEN BLINDNESS FIRST APPEARS IS THE TIME. Eighty-five out of a hundred are successful, about the same percentage as operation, but when developed to practical blindness only removal by operation will cure.

BOYS IN AUTO HAVE NARROW ESCAPE

Car Is Struck By Great Western Freight And Badly Damaged

Frank Moews, having moved his family and household goods to Sterling, Ill., started Thursday overland with his auto, and as company, he had with him Eddie Rierson and Geo. Mortimer of this city, together with a young man by the name of Thos. Manuel of Chicago. As they were going south just this side of the Great Western crossing at Solsburg, a freight train was moving east, which struck Mr. Moews' auto, turning it east, and to help it along, some other part of the locomotive hit the rear right fender, landing the auto right side up in a hole made to grade this approach, and all without injury to any of its occupants, although the repairs made necessary to make the auto good, aggregated about $150.00. —Belmond Independent.

Every week some new phonograph appears on the market

Any good workman can build a "Talking Machine"—

Only the Genius of An Edison Could Produce

THE NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

The World's Greatest Phonograph Value

You need a phonograph in your home. Every home in the U. S. A. needs the cheering, soothing, refining influence of good music. But you want the best phonograph made—no other is good enough for your home, your family, your friends.

How can you tell which is the best? Easy—if you use common sense. Difficult—if you trust to the claims of numerous manufacturers.

Look for the man behind the phonograph—the brain that evolved it and perfected it. If you cannot discover any personality behind an instrument you may well doubt its perfection.

The brain of Thomas A. Edison, the greatest inventive genius in the world, is the birthplace of the Amberola! Edison has perfected every detail of this wonder phonograph until in every way it is superior to ordinary phonographs and "talking machines!"

The tone has been pronounced superior to that of other well-known phonographs by scores of phonograph experts after striking tests. The genuine Diamond Point Reproducer is permanent—no changing of needles. The wonderful Amberol Records, in shape and composition, are practically unbreakable and last for years and years!

All the world's best music is recorded on these Amberol Records, from popular songs and dance music to grand opera sung by the world's greatest artists. Every month new Amberol Records are issued with the latest hits and new recordings of famous artists.

Go, listen to other phonographs and "talking machines" if you will—then come here and listen to the wonderful Amberola. Above all remember that the name and fame of the greatest inventor of the age guarantee its superiority.

Last but not least, Edison has succeeded in making this remarkable phonograph to sell at prices considerably lower than inferior "talking machines."

3 Days' FREE Trial

We will place an Amberola in your home for a 3 Days' Trial which will not put you under the slightest obligation or expense. Come here, select an Amberola and a number of records and we'll send them to your home. At the end of 3 days if you do not want the Amberola, we'll call and take it away. If you do want it, we'll arrange terms of payment to suit you.

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

—11—

"Yes; hold my hand while I guide you; we can sit here."

It was a couch of some kind against the outer wall. She did not release her grasp, seemingly gaining courage from this physical contact, and my fingers closed warmly over her own."

"Now, please," breathlessly, "how is it possible you are aboard this vessel—an officer?"

I told her the strange story, as swiftly and simply as possible, speaking scarcely above a whisper, feeling as I progressed that I related a dream rather than a series of facts. It seemed to me she could scarcely be expected to believe the truth of what I said, and yet she did, almost unquestioningly, the clasp of her fingers perceptibly tightening as I proceeded. She sat so close beside me that I could feel her breath upon my cheek.

"Why, if—if you had not told me this yourself I could hardly believe such a tale," she exclaimed. "Yet it must be true, miraculous as it seems. But what is to be the ending? Have you any plan of escape?"

"Hardly a plan. I have had no opportunity even to learn the true nature of the crew. Watkins is an honest sailor, and he has told me of others on whom I could rely. There are those aboard—but I do not know how many—who would mutiny if they had a leader and a reasonable chance of success. I must reach these and learn who they are. Fortunately the voyage promises to be long enough to enable me to plan carefully."

"You have discussed the voyage with this man—Estada?"

"He told me what he had decided upon; not to return to their rendezvous until after they had captured some prizes and could go with gold chinking in their pockets."

"Where is their rendezvous?"

"An island in the West Indies, probably not on the chart. They call it Porto Grande."

"And they will sweep the ocean between here and there seeking victims? Unarmed merchantment to rob and sink? And you—you will be compelled to take part in such scenes, such acts of pillage and perhaps murder?"

"I presume I must seem to be one of them to avoid suspicion. Have you any suggestions?"

"There is conspiracy on board already," she said quickly, "that you may not know about."

"You mean to depose Sanchez?"

"Yes; you had suspicioned it? They thought me unconscious in the boat, and talked among themselves—the two at the stern, Estada and that beast Manuel. I did not understand all they said, but I do not think they intend the captain shall recover."

"You think it best that he should?"

"Oh, I do not know; there is no best that I can see. Yet I would have more faith in being spared disgrace if at the mercy of Sanchez, than his lieutenant. Both may be equally guilty, equally desperate, but they are not the same men. I may be wrong, for I judge as a woman, yet I would feel safer with Sanchez. The other merely desires with the passions of a brute. No appeal would reach him; he would laugh at tears and find pleasure in suffering. And yet you would have me appear friendly with Estada?"

"We cannot permit him to feel that either of us are enemies. He is the power aboard; our lives, everything are in his hands. If he means to be rid of Sanchez the man is doomed, for he will find a way to accomplish his purpose; murder means nothing to these men."

"Of course you are right," she acknowledged. "Our case is so desperate we must resort to any weapons. You believe it will serve the possibility of escape if I permit this monster to imagine that I have some interest in him?"

"To do so might delay the explosion," I replied gravely, "and just now any delay is welcome. I doubt if even Estada will resort to force on board; indeed force will be the very last card he will care to play in your case. You are English and all the practical seamen on board are from northern Europe—English and Scandinavian. These men are not pirates from choice—they are prisoners who have taken on to save their own lives. With his bullies and cutthroats amidships he can compel them to work, but he dare not go too far. Once these fellows unite in mutiny they could take the ship. An assault on you would be dangerous."

"It is these men you count on?"

"Yes; but for me to gain their confidence and leadership will require time. The slightest slip would mean failure and merciless punishment. At best the situation is absolutely desperate—but I see no other solution."

ing of a part to blind the eyes of Estada?"

"I sincerely believe your greater chance of security lies in this course. The fellow is a supreme egotist; opposition will anger him, while flattery will make him subservient. You have the wit and discretion to hold him within certain limits. It is a dangerous game, I admit, and a disagreeable one, but the case requires desperate remedies."

She lifted her eyes, searching my face through the dim light.

"Geoffry Carlyle," she said at last, a tremor in the low voice, "there is no sacrifice I would not make to preserve my honor. I hate this man; I dread his touch; I shrink from contact with him as I would from a snake, but I am not going to refuse to do my part. If you say this is right and justified I will consent."

"I believe it is."

"And you will not lose faith in me?" she questioned earnestly. "It will not lower your belief in my womanhood?"

"Nothing could do that. Mistress Dorothy, I want you to realize the depth of my interest and respect. Your friendliness has meant much to me, and I would never urge you to lower your ideals. But we must face this situation as it is. We possess but two weapons of defense—deceit or force. A resort to the latter is at present impossible. I cannot conceive that you are lowering yourself in any way by using the power you possess to escape violence—"

"The power I possess?"

"Yes—beauty and wit. These are your weapons, and most effective ones. You can play with Estada and defeat him—temporarily, at least. I confess there is danger in such a game—he is a wild beast, and his evil nature may overcome his discretion. Take this pistol. Keep it hidden about your person, but use it only when all else fails. You retain faith in me?"

"Implicitly."

"And pledge yourself to your part, leaving me to attend to mine?"

Her two hands clasped my fingers, her eyes uplifted.

"Geoffry Carlyle, I have always believed in you, and now, after the sacrifice you have made to serve me I can refuse you nothing you ask. I will endeavor to accomplish all you require of me. God knows how I hate the task; but—but I will do my best. Only—only," her voice sank, "if—if the beast lays hands on me he—he pays the price. I could not do otherwise. Geoffry Carlyle—I am a Fairfax."

Satisfied with my mission and confident nothing more need be said, I arose to my feet.

"Then we can do nothing further until I learn the disposition of the crew," I said quietly. "Estada is not likely to resort to extreme measures at present. That is why I believe you are comparatively safe now—his own position of command is in the balance."

"I will see you again?"

"Perhaps not here; it is too dangerous; but I will find means to communicate with you. Good-by."

We stood with hands clasped in the darkness. I thought she was going to speak again, but the words failed to come. Then suddenly, silently the door opened a mere crack, letting in a gleam of yellow light from the main cabin, while the crouching figure of a man, like a gliding shadow slipped through the aperture, closing the door behind him as softly as he had opened it. I heard her catch her breath and felt her hands grasp my sleeve, but I

Who could he be? What might be the purpose of his entrance? But one answer occurred to me—Pedro Estada, driven by unbridled passions to attack the girl. I thrust her behind me, and took a step forward, with body poised for action. I was unarmed, but cared little for that in the swift desire to come to hand grips with the brute. I could hear him now, slowly and cautiously feeling his way toward us through the darkness.

CHAPTER XVII.

A Murder on Board.

To be certain of free space I extended one hand and my fingers came into unexpected contact with the back of a chair. Without moving my body I grasped this welcome weapon of defense and swung it above my head. Whoever the invader creeping upon us might prove to be, he was certainly an enemy, actuated by some foul purpose, and no doubt armed. To strike him down as quickly and silently as possible was therefore the plain duty of the moment. I had no other thought.

The slowness with which he groped his way forward indicated unfamiliarity with the apartment, although his direct advance proclaimed some special purpose. Clearly he had no fear of attack. I could determine almost his exact position as his advancing foot felt cautiously along the deck. He came forward inch by inch. I measured the distance as indicated by faint, shuffling sounds.

I could not see but I knew. With all my force I struck! Blindly as it had been delivered the blow hit fair; there was a thud, an inarticulate groan, and the fall of a body upon the floor—beyond that nothing. I waited breathlessly listening for the slightest movement. I felt Dorothy touch my shoulder and caught the sound of her voice trembling at my ear.

"What is it? What did you do?"

"I struck him with a chair; he lies there on the deck. Wait where you are."

I bent over and touched him. The fellow lay in a heap with no perceptible heart-beat, no semblance of breathing. My fingers sought his face, and I could scarcely suppress a cry of surprise—he was not Estada. Who, then, was he? What could have been his purpose in thus invading this stateroom? All I could grasp was the fact that the fellow was not the Portuguese—he possessed a smooth face, long hair, and was a much smaller man. I dragged the body where the light illumination from the after port fell directly on the upturned face. The features revealed were unfamiliar—those unquestionably of a half-breed Indian. Dorothy crossed to my side, her foot striking a knife, which came glimmering into the narrow range of light. She stared in horror at the ugly weapon, and then at the ghastly countenance.

"He came to murder! See, his knife lies there. Why should he have sought to kill me?"

"It is all mystery," I admitted. What shall be done with the body? It cannot be left lying exposed here; no one would believe you killed him, and my presence must not be suspected."

"Could it," she suggested, "be dropped through the port?"

She shrank back from touching the inanimate figure, yet it required the combined efforts of both to force the stiffening body through the porthole. We could distinguish footsteps on the deck above, but these were regular and undisturbed—the slow promenade from rail to rail of the officer on watch. Clearly nothing had been heard or seen to awaken suspicion.

"If you should be questioned tomorrow you had best know nothing," I said gravely. "I do not think you will be, for surely an attack can be no plan of Estada's. It could gain no advantage. The fellow was pillaging on his own account; if he is missed it will be supposed he fell overboard, and no one will care. You are not afraid to remain here alone?"

"No; I am not greatly frightened, but shall try and bar the door with a chair. I have no key."

"Then I'll leave you; half of my watch below must be gone by now. I'll take the fellow's knife along, as it must not be found here."

We parted with a clasp of hands, as I opened the stateroom door and slipped out into the cabin. To my surprise the light over the table had been extinguished, rendering the cabin so black I had to actually feel my way forward. The lantern must have been put out since then by some confederate. After a moment of hesitation I found my way across to my own stateroom and pressed open the door.

The Polka Dot.

Because in 1835 a Bohemian peasant girl danced a new step in a little village near the Polish border a Hungarian dancing master introduced it in Europe under the name of Polka, which is the feminine of Polak or Pole. By 1844, at the time James K. Polk was running for the presidency, the dance had spread to America and the name "Polk" and the word "Polka" formed a coincidence at once appealing to everyone. The manufacturers, merchants and designers immediately presented Polka hats, Polka shoes, Polka gauze and the "newest design in fabrics for gentlewomen."

An Indianapolis matron was giving a birthday party for her little daughter and had among the guests the two sons of the family minister. They enjoyed the party and made many quaint remarks.

The Cri de Paris, the weekly gossip magazine, says that Maj. William Orpen, the painter, who is working on pictures of the peace conference, was haunted by the idea that he was young, that the was very old. He used to turn his face away from the street to avoid being seen.

Working as an art student, he noticed that his fellow-pupils, by dint of mental concentration upon the beautiful models of antiquity, gradually came somewhat to resemble them, losing their own features. Orpen, ever awaited promotion to the same class and determined to spend all his time copying the Venus de Milo. "I will thus acquire her admirable expression of haughty serenity," he said. "Unfortunately," he continues, "when I was promoted to copying antique the master made me spend the whole time drawing nothing but 'The Dying Faun,' so that I never realized my ambition."

FERTILIZER APPLIED CHEAPEST IN WINTER

Most Farmers Are Not Busy During Cold Weather.

Spring Rains Given Chance to Soak Decomposed Manure Into Soil Instead of Washing It Away—Plowing Is Easier.

(By G. A. FORMOSA.)

I think manures can be applied cheaper in the winter, as most farmers are not very busy at this time of the year, consequently they should not be so much occupied as in the spring when they should be rushing in their crops.

I think when the manure is applied in the winter it gives the spring rains a chance to soak the decomposed manure into the soil, instead of washing it away, as some writers think, and also helps rot the coarse manure that is left, so by the time the land is ready to work, it does not gather under the plough-beam or clog the cultivator teeth, as it does when applied in the spring.

A Waste of Good Material—Before the Ground Freezes Apply a Light Coat of Manure to Winter Wheat.

I think, and a large part of the best farmers think, that the fresher manure is applied the more valuable it is, for when it is placed in a large heap to rot, part of it will be almost useless by the time all of the heap is rotted.

The reason why some of it is spoiled is this: The large heap generates so much heat that the bottom and middle of the heap is burned until there is very little fertilizing matter left in it.

Manure, properly applied, we all know, is very beneficial to the soil, inasmuch as it supplies much of the lost fertility, but manure can be so applied, as to be an injury instead of a benefit.

Always try to apply your coarse manure to clay soils, as they need something to keep them porous, as well as to fertilize them.

Do not apply coarse manure to loamy soil, as it keeps it too open and it will consequently dry out.

For two years we have applied, as soon as the ground froze, a light coat of manure to our winter wheat.

It keeps the snow from being all blown off, leaving it all exposed, and also protects it in the early spring, as well as fertilizing it.

BIG VARIANCE IN SOY BEANS

Some Varieties Mature Early, Giving Small Yield, While Others Grow Rank and Mature Late.

The results of this year's seeding of soy beans on the experiment fields at Iowa state college show that there are very marked differences among the varieties. When grown under similar conditions, side by side some varieties were short and early maturing giving yield of only about five bushels of beans per acre. Others grew rank and matured too late to produce much of a bean crop before frost. Some varieties yield from 18 to 20 bushels of beans per acre.

For planting with corn for silage, H. D. Hughes, in charge of farm crops experiments, says that the variety known as Medium Green is very good. It produces a rank growth and yields a larger tonnage of good silage per acre than any other variety. This variety may under some circumstances be good for hogging down, but Mr. Hughes prefers varieties that mature earlier, such as the Manchu, Ito San and Black Eyebrow. The latter did especially well.

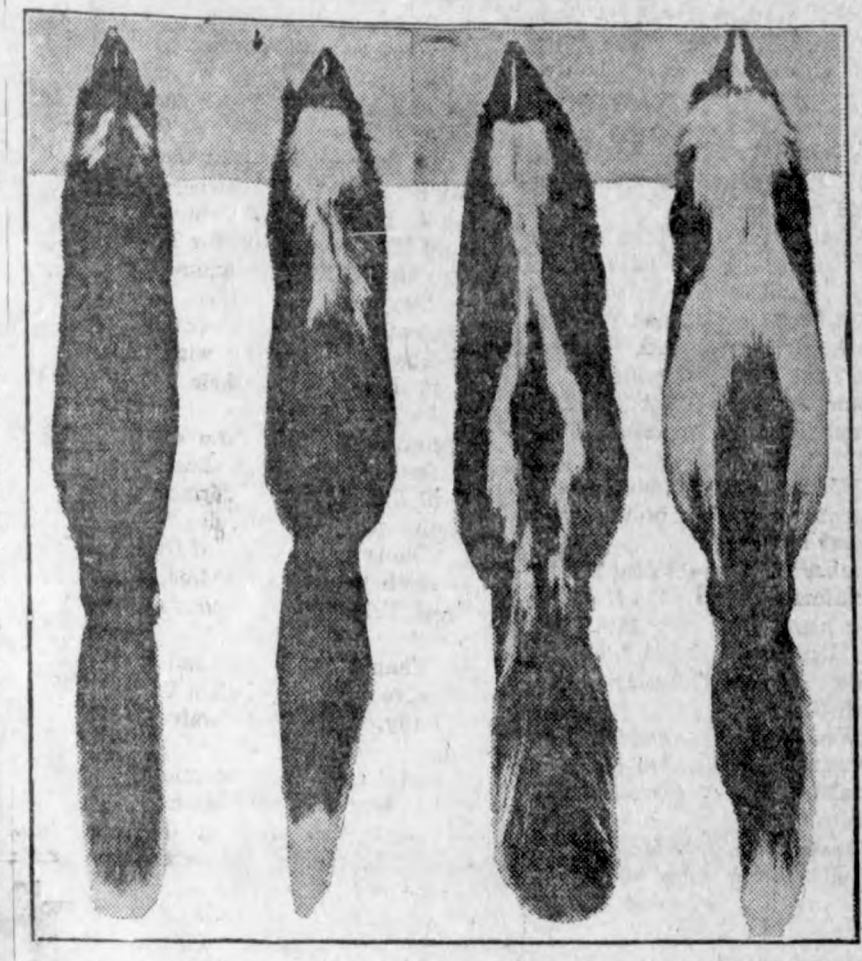
TRAPPING AND SELLING FURS CAN BE MADE PROFITABLE FARMING SIDE-LINE



Four Grades of Skunk Fur—Other Things Being Equal the Pelt With the Least White in the Fur Is the Most Valuable and That With the Most White Is the Least Valuable.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

With the approach of cold weather the thrifty farmer in almost any section of the country soon can undertake some form of fur trapping with profit. A knowledge of the fur-bearing animals found in his vicinity and how to treat their pelts reveals a source of income often overlooked. For the boy in the country nothing offers a more delightful diversion than a trapping expedition, particularly if it entails a money reward. Where the farm itself affords little opportunity for trapping, an accessible stream or wooded tract is generally to be found near-by where fur-bearing animals can be caught. While the fur resources of the country have been diminishing steadily, prices have been rising. The war also has been an important factor in this upward trend.

Wait Until Fur Is Right.

The person about to engage in pelt gathering must understand at the outset the necessity of postponing trapping until the animals' fur is at its best. The pelt of a mink, for example, killed in September might not be worth more than 50 cents, whereas if the same animal were killed in November or December, its pelt might bring $10. Speaking generally, trapping should not begin until cold weather has set in, that is, until late November or December, for most sections of the country. Two principal exceptions to the rule are the muskrat and beaver, whose fur is not at its best until February or March.

In addition to the widely distributed fur-bearing animals mentioned below each region has many others to lure the pelt collector. The prices given here are necessarily only approximations. Each trapper must bear in mind that the size and condition of the individual pelt, as well as other factors, will have much to do with the sum it will bring.

Skunk Pelts Valuable.

The skunk, one of the most common fur bearers, is found in every state of the Union. Large skunk skins probably will bring the trapper from $1 to $5 this season, while the pelts of the little spotted skunk will bring from 10 to 80 cents. The weasel, of one variety or another, is to be found in practically all sections of the country. Formerly the brown pelts were considered worthless, but with the rise in fur prices brown pelts should net the trapper from 10 to 25 cents each, while the white pelts will bring from 50 cents to $1.50.

An animal not to be found in large numbers, but native to regions north, south, east and west, is the mink. When in prime condition its skin, if secured in the north, should bring from $4 to $8, while a skin secured in the south should command $2 to $3. Likewise, the raccoon living in the north produces a better pelt than the one living in the south. Good raccoon skins are worth from $1.05 to $3.75 each to the trapper.

Many persons, particularly city dwellers, may be surprised to learn that many foxes still are trapped in this country. Red fox pelts, obtainable in widely distributed areas in the Northern states, should bring from $10 to $30 each this season, while the gray fox found in the Southern states will bring from $1.50 to $3 a pelt.

An example of returns that can be secured from fur resources long overlooked is found in the fact that the people of Oregon netted approximately $50,000 from mole skins last year, following trapping demonstrations by representatives of the biological survey of the United States department of agriculture. The demonstrators showed that while millions of European mole skins were used by fur manufacturers in America before the war, the skins of some American moles, especially the large, common variety of western Washington and Oregon, are larger and have better texture than those from Europe. Farmers' Bulletin 832, published by the United States department of agriculture, describes the best kinds of mole traps, how to set them, and gives other information. The methods discussed are especially adapted to the Pacific coast states, but with modifications will apply to all localities where moles are found.

Muskrats Still Numerous.

While minks, raccoons, and skunks have become somewhat scarce in certain localities, muskrats have not diminished in numbers except in places where the marshes have been drained. These animals multiply much more rapidly than many other fur bearers, and because of their aquatic retreats and their habits are better fitted to maintain their numbers under reasonable protection. Muskrat pelts this season should bring from 75 cents to $2 each. Though the price of cottontail rabbit skins is low—15 cents to 35 cents a pound for dry cased skins—this source of income should not be overlooked by the trapper-farmer, as frequently a large number of these animals can be caught in the course of the winter. There is frequently a good market for the rabbit meat also. Among other fur-bearing animals more or less widely distributed throughout the country are opossums, badgers, and, for western regions, coyotes and wolves.

Handling the Fur.

If the farmer who temporarily turns trapper is to realize the best prices for pelts, he must learn the proper methods of handling them. Most skins should be "cased" for the market. A cased skin is one removed from the carcass after slitting the hind legs but not the belly of the animal, thereby leaving a tubular shaped pelt. The skin is left with the fur turned in, and dried on a stretcher made of thin board sharpened to a point, or of heavy galvanized wire.

The biological survey of the United States department of agriculture furnishes on application information regarding the trapping of fur-bearing animals, laws relating to the subject, and the preparation of pelts. It also supplies inquirers with lists of buyers for various kinds of pelts.

HONEY IS PROFITABLE CROP

Product Is Always in Good Demand and Some Home Club Members Have Made Good Profits.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

There is always a ready sale for good honey, the members of home clubs organized by the department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges have discovered. Some members have made a remarkable success of the work. One in Morgan county, Kentucky, is known as the "Bee Woman," not only because of the size of her enterprise but because of her ability in handling the swarms. She had 150 hives of bees last summer. From 75 of them she has harvested 500 pounds of honey in six months. The home-demonstration agents teach up-to-date beekeeping to any women in their counties who are interested in bees. Often the difference between a money-making swarm and a hive which barely supplies its own needs is lack of knowledge.

DAIRY

OUSTING HIS BOARDER COWS

Iowa Dairyman Cuts Down on Feed Cost by Eliminating Unprofitable Animals in Herd.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A good example of what cow-testing associations are doing to help dairymen cull unprofitable milk producers is shown in the experience of an Iowa dairyman who reports that through the cow-testing association he learned that one cow was paying him $2.40 for each dollar's worth of feed, while another returned only 58 cents. This dairyman lost no time in selling the poor cow and five others which showed by test that they were not paying for the feed they consumed. This year he will be able to produce milk at less cost, thus increasing his profits. He writes, "I have cut down on the feed cost by eliminating the boarders, and can still further reduce it by using more clover and alfalfa than was available last year."

High-Producing Cows Pay for Their Keep.

TESTS SHOW GERMS IN MILK

Multiplication of Bacteria Causes Rapid Deterioration—Value for Food Lessened.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Extensive experiments conducted at the government farm, Beltsville, Md., show that milk drawn into a sterile pail from dirty cows contained an average of 32,677 bacteria per cubic centimeter, while milk drawn from clean cows whose udders and teats were washed immediately previous to milking had a content of only 4,947 germs per cubic centimeter. These tests were made immediately after milking. Naturally on standing the milk with the greatest number of bacteria would deteriorate most rapidly, due to the multiplication of the germs. Accordingly its value as a human food product would be greatly reduced, while its introduction on the city market would be carefully scrutinized, and in some cases punished by the health authorities.

Pride should cause every dairyman to maintain his cows in an attractive, cleanly and sanitary condition every day in the year. In a way the appearance of the cow is an accurate measure of the owner. In the same degree that neglected fences, overrun fence rows, tumbledown buildings and unhoused machinery typify the shiftless, ne'er-do-well farmer, dairy cows which are dirty indicate the milk farmer who does not safeguard consumers against contaminated milk.

PROTECTION FOR DAIRY COW

Exposure to Cold Rains Is Often More Injurious Than Colder Weather of Winter.

The dairy cow often suffers the most from exposure to the weather before real winter has begun. After steady cold comes the cow is generally stabled. Exposure to cold rains in November is often more injurious to the animal than the colder but dry weather later in the winter.

The dairy cow is not like the fat steer, protected from cold by a layer of fat. As a result bad weather causes a big drop in milk production. So long as the weather is dry it is just as well to leave the cow outside nights, but every cold rain should find her protected.

The main thing is to have tight walls so there is no draft or wind and a good roof. Care should be taken in arranging the stalls in the form of a platform of the right length and a gutter of sufficient depth to hold the manure. The cleanliness of the milk depends to a considerable extent upon having the barn built so the cow will keep herself clean.—Clemson College Bulletin.

FOUNDATION FOR DAIRY HERD

Young Calves From Good Cows Are Satisfactory for Start, Say Government Specialists.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is not always necessary to purchase all mature animals in establishing a herd. Young calves from good dairy cows are a satisfactory foundation for starting a dairy herd, in the opinion of specialists. Ordinarily the method advocated is to grade up common cows with a purebred bull, requiring a number of years of patient selection and breeding—a period sometimes discouraging to an energetic dairyman. Frequently this causes farmers who want results too quickly to change breeds.

Neglected Kidneys Kill Thousands Yearly.

Get Quick Relief Before It's Too Late—Dodd's Kidney Pills—Favorite For Two Generations.

Few people are awake to the dangers of diseased Kidneys. Statistics show that deaths from Bright's Disease and other kidney troubles have increased over 50% in last few years. Most of us delay treatment—we get a pain in the back, loins and let it go. Meanwhile, the malady tightens its grip until finally Bright's Disease, then hospital and doctor bills.

For two generations Dodd's Kidney Pills have been saving thousands upon thousands from the ravages of kidney disorders but they must be taken in time—and be sure you get Dodd's.

"Here's a charge for a call lasting half an hour on our telephone," said the lawyer to his wife.

"Yes, dear. That was my call. I was asking a friend of mine a question," replied the wife.

"And did it take half an hour to ask a question?"

"Yes, dear. You see, it was one of those hypothetical questions."

BOSCHEE'S SYRUP.

A cold is probably the most common of all disorders and when neglected is apt to be most dangerous. Statistics show that more than three times as many people died from influenza last year, as were killed in the greatest war the world has ever known. For the last fifty-three years Boschee's Syrup has been used for coughs, bronchitis, colds, throat irritation and especially lung troubles. It gives the patient a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning. Made in America and used in the homes of thousands of families all over the civilized world. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

Boon for Skaters.

To enable ice skaters to follow this popular winter pastime without fatigue, an Australian inventor has perfected a simple propeller arrangement which straps to the skater's back and is operated by several dry cells carried on his shoulder.

Cabled reports do not give further details of the invention, nor do they say if the inventor expects to apply the novel propulsion to roller skating.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces.

By running over the cases we find nothing that promises any great amount of public interest.—Garner Democrat.

Many persons feel offended because their comings and goings are not mentioned while those of others are and wonder what the matter can be. The explanation of the matter is that the editor means to be impartial but some escape mention. The likes and dislikes of an editor have nothing to do with it, and while it is not pretended that the editor is more human he knows that the success of his journal depends on his fairness and impartiality to all. It is the best way always when a notice is desired to mention it to the editor, or communicate through the postoffice. No one feels any worse about any seeming neglect or partial performance of duty than the editor himself.

COAL SITUATION IS NOW VERY SERIOUS

Shortage Causes Railroads To Cut Down Train Service

Klemme Is Among List Affected

Up to the present time Klemme has not seriously felt the present coal shortage. The real seriousness of the situation was felt Monday when two trains were taken off the Rock Island railroad here, the mornnig passenger going north and the evening passenger going south, which two trains carried the greater part of the mail reaching Klemme. There was no mail brought into Klemme until Monday afternoon when a mail clerk was put onto the combination train from Algona. The entire mail service from Klemme is now carried on the two trains; the one going south at 11:25 a. m. and returning at 3:10 p. m. Those who intend to do any traveling during the Holidays will do well to thoroughly look up train connections as many trains have been taken off on all the railroad lines, making traveling a distance quite inconvenient.

A few homes in Klemme have but two weeks' supply of coal on hand at this time, with no relief in sight for some time. Those who are now running short should get in touch with the local fuel administrator and find out where wood can be procured. There are several farmers near Klemme who are cutting wood every day with gasoline buzz saws to relieve the coal famine, now being felt here. If you are nearly out of coal, get some wood to use in the day time and save your coal for the night.

The business men of Klemme and other citizens met with Mayor Gruetzmacher Monday evening to discuss the fuel situation. Nothing very much can be done here and it was advised that everyone take the matter into their own hands and if they are running short to procure wood until coal can be had.

Monday the report came over the wire that the coal miners had gone back to work. Monday was the day set by the operators to give the miners the privilege of going back to work or be laid off for all time. In case that the latter should happen the operators would hire other common help and reopen the mines. If the above report is true and miners are actually back at work then the present crisis looks much brighter and coal will be distributed again in about two weeks. But this does not relieve the present situation, now it is every-man for themselves; if you are short of coal, get wood.

BIG FIRE AT GOODELL TUESDAY NIGHT

Several business houses were wiped out by fire Tuesday night, the fire starting about 7:30 or 8:00 in Goldberg's general store on the corner. The extreme cold made it hard for the men to fight the flames and a call was sent out to Klemme to bring help and several bob sleds of men responded to the call. Nothing much could be done to check the fire, but a fight was put up to save as much as possible. The fire started at the corner in the Goldberg store and cleaned out the Post Office, Furniture Store, Harness Shop, Printing Office, Feed Store and Telephone Office. The fire was checked when it reached a vacant lot next to the Drug Store. The loss no doubt is very great even if all the places carried a lot of insurance for at this time of the year the stores are all heavily stocked with holiday goods

BAND BOYS ANXIOUS TO BEGIN

The band boys are getting anxious to begin their musical career in the big Klemme Band. No rehearsals or instructions will be given however, until a sufficient number of instruments are at hand to begin practice. As soon as about fifteen or more have instruments then rehearsals can begin the others will come in as fast as they get their instruments. Some have not ordered their instruments yet, and those should do so at once.

CROCKODILE TEARS

Swea City Herald: Editor Bob Sherwood was disgusted about the amount of publicity "Great Wonder I Am," the famous Duroc Jersey boar received when he, the hog died. Editor Bob has the following to say about it—

To read the farm columns of the country papers would make a Turk smile. These writers of farm news will give whole columns of space each week telling of the meits of some old sow or boar that is worth anywhere from five hundred to one thousand dollars and tell all about the man who raised them, yet those same papers have never been known to make a favorable mention of some good father and mother who have raised a family of good boys and girls. No, boys and girls, get out of the road. The old sow and boar columns are worth more to the nation than a good clean boy or girl. One poor, old illiterate boar died at Algona last week and a paper had a scare head about a foot thick right on its front page and we presume that the farm editor and every one of the force are still shedding tears over the death of Great Wonder I Am. Tis great to be a boar.

KLEMME CREAMERY PAYS 76

During the period of the first half of November the Klemme Creamery Company paid the farmers 76 cents a pound for butter fat. That is a price very few creameries can beat. The Klemme Creamery is always at the top of the list for paying big prices for butterfat and the farmers in this neck of the woods are receiving some cream checks that are sure whoppers.

NUMBER THIRTEEN OUR HOODOO

Last week the number of the Klemme Times was 13; that number always gets the Editor's goat for some reason or other. We had all kinds of grief getting out "old number thirteen." Well after we had the paper all printed and mailed out, glad too, that the job was done, when a man walked into the office and says: "Where do you get December 27 on that paper? This is only the 4th." We showed him the number thirteen at the top and he was wise. However that is the ony mistake we have ever made in our life, editors never make mistakes.

Marven Weigmann is back at work in the First National Bank this week. Marven went to Drake College at Des Moines this year to take a law course but that study was interrupted when the school ran out of coal and sent Marven back home. He worked at the bank during last summer's vacation. We have not learned whether Marven has been admitted to the bar yet or whether he will have to take a few more months of training at the school to become a perfect—(we were about to say liar, but we mean lawyer, it's all the same in the end.) Anyway we are glad to see you back here again Marven.

Hang up your socks, maybe Santa will leave a hunk o' coal in 'em.

Fred Ridder, John Terhufen and Henry Barz all left for Kansas City last Saturday evening. We presume they are taking a trip thru the south for a week or so.

Bob Maitland and Harm Christians left Saturday evening for Sycamore, Ill., to work in a threshing machine factory this winter.

Fred Shipley was a caller in Klemme Monday. It is some time since we have seen Fred as he has not been in these parts for a couple of years or more. He has been located at Whittemore for the past year or so where he and Mrs. Shipley are engaged in the hotel and restaurant business and are prospering. While in town Fred managed to make the Times office a call and also to whiff the good old smell of type and ink. You will remember that Fred was the publisher of the Times for a few years and whenever he comes to town he makes it a point to visit his old haunts.

Miss Bernice Gimer returned last week Saturday evening from several days' visit with her friends the Misses Pearl and Dorothy Luchsinger, at Renwick, Iowa.

Don't forget the Musical Entertainment at the Idle Hour next Monday evening.

Everybody is making a grand rush to get free calendars from the merchants these days which is another sure sign of Christmas. The business houses of Klemme have some dandy calendars this year but we will not tell who has the best, run them down like we did.

HERE'S WHY!

The coal strike has caught us and that is why we are so delayed this week. Our electric motor service is so uncertain we had to install a gas engine to print with. Our type from Belmond also failed to reach us as the Belmond type setting machine is also run by electricity. But watch our smoke here is what we printed. We'll get out on time when the miners can furnish us coal.

P. S. If tough luck was worth a nickel we would be millonaires.—Jergie.

The Misses Bryson and Warnock took their usual jount to Iowa Falls last Friday evening, expecting to return to Klemme Monday morning in time for school. They did not take into consideration that the usual morning train from the south would be taken off and therefore they could not return until Monday afternoon.

Klemme no longer gets electric light and power "juice" from Iowa Falls. That city ran out of coal last week and the "high line" was hooked up with the plant at Cedar Rapids. Many are cussing the Iowa Falls people for the bum service we have been receiving for the past month or so. They are not to be entirely blamed for the service as they are running short of help and this burning short of the coal shortage we are lucky to have any electricity at all. The lights are not as bright as they should be but this is perhaps because of the long distance the electricity is now carried.

The Polk county boys' stock-judging team captured the national championship at the International Live Stock Show at Chicago. In competition with teams from 11 other states, the Polk county aggregation, which represented Iowa, took first place, nosing out the Texas team by a single point with a score of 1090.

Are the people of Iowa interested in a proposition that will bring an additional $200,000,000 into the state every year? That amount would increase our capita wealth $80 annually. Our wealth can be increased $200,000,000 if organized business insist that Iowa receive adequate prices for its two chief staples—corn and hogs.

Thus far at Winterset, 2400 bushels of potatoes have been distributed to those who have placed their order with the county agent. Enough cars have been ordered and are on the way to fill the orders listed with the county agent. In addition to the potatoes at Winterset, one car for Barney, a car for Peru and a car for Penn township has been ordered. Thus far the Early Ohios have been $1.75 and the white potatoes $1.60.

Nine counties have finished their membership drives. Here is how they increased their membership in one week. Nearly every farmer joined the farm bureau. Benton county—2000 members; Hardin county—1,300 members; Butler county—1300 members; Floyd county—1200 members; Fayette county—1600 members; Buchanan county—1200 members; Story county—1400 members; Jones county—1300 members.

According to Peter M. Peterson, a well known farmer of near Grey, lamb feeding is no longer an experiment with Iowa farmers and making mutton on high priced corn belt land has fewer drawbacks than making beef on the same kind of land. A bunch of lambs turned into a pasture or cornfield require but little attention and will put on good gains without too great an expenditure for grain, and they are fertilizing the land at the same time.

The farm bureau membership drive in Clayton county, just closed, added 1,415 farmers to the county organization. The county was canvassed by township. In some of the townships practically every farmer was enrolled. Iowa has 10,000,000 hogs—two-thirteenths of all in this country—twice as many as any other state—more than the number of hogs in Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan combined. Their value this year at a reasonable price is $400,000,000.

The first annual Farm, Home and School Exhibit was held in the high school building at Missouri Valley Dec. 5. The meeting was an effort to bring the school and community into closer relationship by giving each an opportunity of seeing the other's work. This exhibit included corn from the farms of the county food products from the home and various displays from the rural and city schools. A feature of the exhibition was the boys corn judging contest.

According to George W. Godfrey, of Iowa State College, silage has largely solved the problem of starting steers on feed. "It is bulky enough to eliminate danger from overeating and unless cattle are accustomed to it they rarely eat greedily of it at the start. Western range cattle that never saw corn, take to silage as quickly as those of our native cattle that are not accustomed to it. When fed fodder these western cattle at first pick off the leaves and husks, leaving the stalks and ears. With silage they get acquainted with the corn taste at the start.

Mr. Theodore Oirkx, of Breda, sold a carload of popcorn to a dealer at Arthur. The car contained 13,690 pounds of corn for which he received $8.70 per hundred pounds, netting him a total of $9,891.03 for the load. This is the highest priced car of grain ever shipped from Breda and it is doubtful if it will be duplicated for some time to come. Taking into consideration that this corn was raised on 75 acres it can easily be figured out that land in this locality which has been selling for $500 per acre and better will produce enough to pay for itself providing the right kind of crop is raised upon it. Besides this shipment, Mr. Dirkx also sold $3,850 worth of popcorn to the same firm which he raised on his farm near Odebolt.

Owing to great loss in hogs in Jasper county, Dr. Stouder of Iowa State College was called to Newton recently to look over conditions. He found many of the hogs suffering with mixed infection and hog cholera. The animals had been vaccinated for "flu" and "hemorrahgic septicemia." A number of the herds examined were found to be sick with mixed infection. There will be a decided inclination on the part of farmers to steer clear of any of the so-called cures for "flu" and "hog cholera" in the future.

Reports gathered from the threshermen over Henry-co show that the total yield of oats in the county was 388,288 bushels grown on 11,616 acres, or an average yield of 3.5 bushels; winter wheat, 44,395 bushels grown on 2231 acres, or an average of 19.9 yield; spring wheat, 1972 bushels from 226 acres, or an average of 8.9 yield; rye, 2189 yield from 185 acres, or an average of 11.8 yield.

Mason City has been making some interesting comparisons on the upkeep of gravel and cement roads. A stretch of five and one-half miles of gravel on the Jefferson highway cost $1,282.60 per mile per year, and then the gravel was disappearing rapidly. A similar stretch of cement road on the Mason City and Clear Lake road cost an average of $31.50 per mile per year. This pavement was laid in 1913, and is almost as good as when it was put down.

The farm bureau of O'Brien county has organized a "blue sky" committee and this committe will pass on all stock selling schemes which are brought to O'Brien county. Thorough investigation of all companies who try to sell stock to O'Brien county farmers will be made. The farm bureau membership in the county has increased more than 70 per cent this year and this is one of many services being accorded the members.

A Farmers Shipping association has been organized in Emmetsburg for the purpose of carrying the farmers' live stock to market without the aid of a local cattle buyer. The following officers were elected: President Thos. Burns; vice president, John F Bough; secretary, Jas. C. Brennan and the board of directors have engaged Joe Martini as manager. The membership fee is $1.00 and a deduction of seven and one-half mills for hogs and five mills for cattle is made to pay the manager, and seven mills is retained as a sinking fund to pay for the loss of animals in transit. The association expects to make their first shipment of hogs soon.

The first copy of the Iowa Farm Bureau Messenger, published by the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, was recently published at Ames, and with its great, far-reaching scope will keep the farmers of Iowa informed of the activities and plans of their organization. The growth of the federation is limited in this state only by the number of farmers, and from the success of recent campaigns it looks as though this will be the membership. The Messenger is newsy live and a booster; the tie that binds a little more closely the organization which is destined, and worthily so, to be the most powerful influence for progress that Iowa has ever known.

Fred Clapsaddle, well known over Ida county as a stockman and farmer, has six car loads of feeders on his big farm, two of which he purchased recently. Four cars of cattle bought some time ago, have been feeding on a big 20 acre field of corn and have recently been turned into the dry lot. The two cars recently purchased will be turned into a corn field. It has been a common practice among Ida county farmers to turn the hogs and catle into the corn, and a great many more cattle have been bought by the farmers than usual, but heavy shipping of last year left them short on stockers so that the present supply is about normal in the county.

Of the hundreds of thousands of feeder sheep shipped into Iowa during the past several months a casual survey of the state fails to show any great amount of loss in the feedlots. Such loss is estimated at not more than 5 per cent, if that much. Causes of loss common among the sheep have been diarrhoea, scab, and hemorrhogic septicemia, the latter being the most common. A few feeders near Ogden, Iowa, who recently shipped 700 fat lambs from that section to the Omaha market, lost a little over fifty head in the 70 or 80 days they were on feed and these few sheep were lost with the scours, caused by turning the western lambs into the corn fields where they had acess to green corn.

A real co-operative movement to cut the high cost of farm machinery has been started near Havelock by four Pocahontas county farmers. A few years ago the matter of economy in farm operations, and especially in farm machinery, faced E. K. Young and son, M. K. Young. Charles Hall and son, Elmer Hall, all residing on adjoining farms, but within a distance of two miles of each other. These men needed an ensilage cutter. They were using about 120 tons of the product each year and so decided to buy a machine together and thus save time, money and effort. The machine was accordingly purchased. It was of the 18-inch variety, one of the largest manufactured. The man whose corn matures first has first chance at the cutter. Each man furnishes two men to help during the period of work. Five racks are used to haul the corn from the field to the barn, two men to each rack.

Another farm in Franklin county is to be devoted to the breeding and raising of fine stock, especially Poland China swine. E. T. Clark, late of Lebanon, Ill., has recently moved to Hampton, and will be associated with Sherwood A. Clock, of that city, in the operation of the Clock stock farm, west of Geneva. Mr. Clark is an expert in this line and his products are sure to bring added credit to this county in the way of fine stock. The farm has been named the Rainbow Stock Farm.

SOIL EROSION ON SLOPING TRACTS

No Slope Steeper Than 15 Degrees Should Be Cleared for Best Cultivation.

TO PREVENT SERIOUS HARM

One of the Most Effective Methods of Thwarting Soil Washing Is by Terracing—Stops Washing Away of Land on Hillsides.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The farmer who contemplates clearing a wooded tract which is more or less uneven in character should make sure that, if cleared, it will not suffer from erosion. How steep a slope of wooded land can safely be cleared for farming depends largely on the character of the soil. It has often been said that no slope steeper than 15 degrees should be cleared and, as a general rule, this probably holds good. However, not infrequently slopes of less than 15 degrees show serious erosion under cultivation, while occasionally others of 20 degrees and more show no serious results. The question, therefore, is one that must be settled for each locality, or even for each tract.

In Case of Doubt.

Usually the farmer who is in doubt can find in the vicinity a piece of cleared land similar in character to his own, and can judge his problem by the condition of the cleared area. In case of doubt, the safest course is to leave the land uncleared, according to the forest service.

Some erosion must be expected on all sloping land cleared for cultivation, but where the tract is really suitable for farming, however, the erosion can be reduced sufficiently to prevent serious harm. The general principle to be kept in mind is to prevent surface run-off, as far as possible. Water that is absorbed by the soil not only causes no erosion but increases the supply of ground water, diminishes drought, feeds the streams and maintains a steady flow in adjoining streams.

Terracing Is Effective.

One of the most effective methods of preventing erosion on sloping cultivated land is terracing, a subject well worth special investigation by the farmer who wishes to till sloping tracts and at the same time keep the good soil on the upper areas from being washed down the hillsides.

VALUE OF WOOD-LOT TIMBER

Farmer Should Familiarize Himself With Products—Big Losses Can Be Prevented.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Lack of familiarity with the business of timber selling usually puts the owner of a small woodland at a disadvantage, and in many regions material from the wood lot is sold considerably less than its real value. The loss to the farmers is, in the aggregate, very large. In order to stop this loss, it is necessary that the farmer informs himself about the different kinds of grades of wood-lot products, the methods of estimating and measuring them and ascertaining their value, the methods of selling, the markets, and the current market prices. Especially does he need reliable information about the amount and real value of his standing timber and the location of good markets. Farmers' Bulletin 715, which may be had free, contains detailed information on these points.

GRAIN DESTROYED BY FIRES

Considerable Amount Lost Each Year —Avoid Placing Number of Stacks in Small Space.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A considerable amount of grain in the field is lost each year by fires which reach the stacks through dry stubble or through lightning. Fire protection demands that a large number of stacks should not be placed in a small space and that each group of stacks be safeguarded by means of a firebreak. Special precautions should be given as to preventing thrashing engines setting fire to grain.

BEST TIME TO PRUNE TRANSPLANTED TREES

Early Spring Has Been Most Generally Recommended.

Fear Has Been Expressed That Branches Cut Back in Fall Will Not Dry Out Sufficiently—Results of Missouri Station.

The time to prune transplanted trees, and young trees not to be transplanted, has been much discussed. Early spring has been most generally recommended. It is the usual custom to prune back the branches of young trees when they are transplanted. Some writers have recommended delaying pruning back fall transplanted trees until spring. The precaution often urged against cutting back the branches in the fall is that the tree loses too much moisture through the cut surfaces of the twigs. Fear has been expressed that the cut-back branches will dry out sufficiently to kill back badly during winter. The question naturally arises as to whether more water will be lost through the wounds of the cut twigs than would be transpired from the branches were they left intact.

In order to answer this question for Missouri conditions, which are more or less typical of the central states, general observations have been made on young trees pruned at different seasons at the University of Missouri College of Agriculture in the last twenty years. The results uniformly indicate that better growth results if the branches are cut back in the fall. This holds true for young trees generally, whether they are transplanted in the fall or spring or are not transplanted.

The same observations are true of grapes. A skillful grape propagator and grower at Hermann, Mo., has found that grapes make better growth if pruned back in the fall. This grower sets his cuttings in autumn as soon as the vines shed their leaves and thereby successfully roots Norton, Cynthiana and other varieties found to root with difficulty if the cuttings are made and set in early spring. He further says that one-year-old grapes, designed to stand a second year in the nursery, make much better growth if pruned back in the fall; also that bearing grape vines make stronger growth if pruned in autumn as soon as their leaves are shed. This is particularly true of varieties that tend to make poor renewal growth from the lower spurs.

That the water content of young apple trees is not greatly affected by fall pruning was established by experiments in 1900 and 1901 at the University of Missouri. Little difference in water content was found between apple trees transplanted in late fall and those which were not transplanted. Also, the trees whose branches were pruned back in late autumn contained, on the average, slightly more water than those which retained their branches. While this difference is not great it at least indicates that the pruned branches did not suffer from drying out through the wounds, but that on the contrary the pruned trees dried out slightly less than those which were not pruned.

QUITE SIMPLE POST PULLER

Effective Device Made of Ordinary Pieces of Timber With Chain Attached to Singletree.

This is a very simple post puller. It consists of a 2 by 6-inch timber about 3 feet long, placed in a slanting position against the post which you desire to pull out of the ground. Fasten the chain around the post just above the ground and run it over the plank. The next step is to hitch a singletree to the end of the chain and one horse easily pulls out any ordinary fence post. This device will be found very handy by farmers repairing their fences or tearing out old ones to replace them by the modern steel or concrete fence posts which have won such great favor among farmers generally. The chain may be quickly attached to any post and the prop put in place. The parts are easily carried to the next post to be drawn.—Popular Science Monthly.

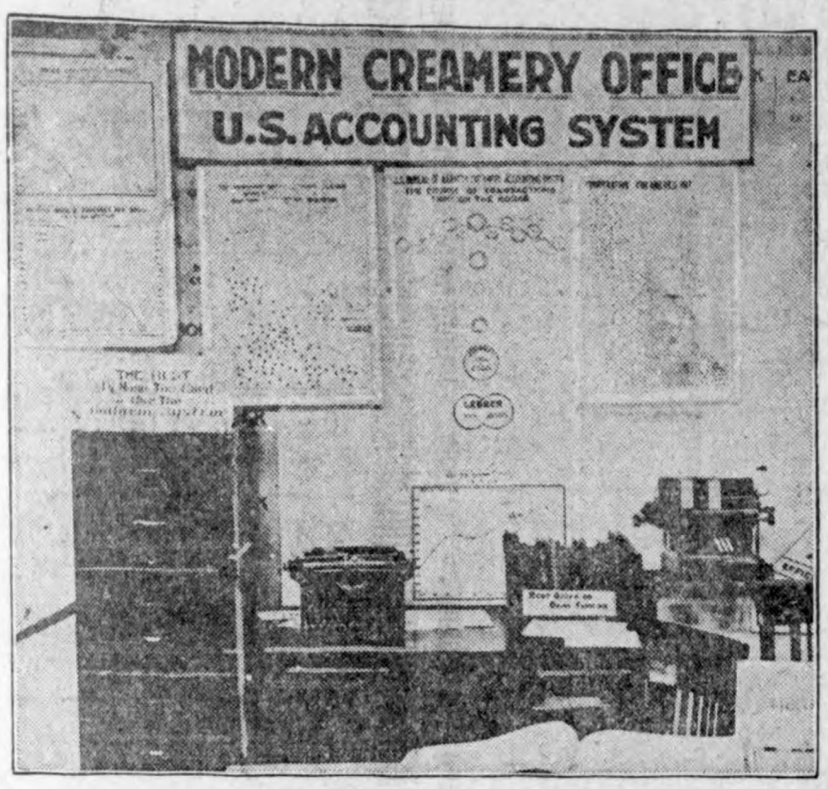
TUBERCULOSIS IN HOG HERD

All Affected Animals Should Be Sent to Market for Slaughter Under Federal Inspection.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

When tuberculosis already exists in a drove of hogs all the affected animals, whether hogs or cattle, should be removed from the premises. The hogs should be sent to market for slaughter at an abattoir under federal inspection. The tuberculin test should be applied to all cattle on the place, and those reacting should be properly disposed of. The pens and stables should be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected before restocking.

MARKET ORGANIZATIONS OFTEN FAIL FOR LACK OF UP-TO-DATE BUSINESS METHODS



Modern Accounting Methods for Co-operative Organizations.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

One of the outstanding weaknesses of marketing organizations is the almost entire lack of up-to-date business methods. According to the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, which has made an extensive study of the subject, a large number of failures in the co-operative field have been traced directly or indirectly to lack of proper accounting systems. Other investigations indicate that this difficulty exists to no less an extent in nonco-operative enterprises.

It is the desire of the bureau to make the results of these investigations available to nonco-operative enterprises and not confine its activities solely to assisting co-operative concerns. However, due to the insistent demand for assistance and advice from co-operative organizations, and the lack of such demand from the nonco-operative field, a large portion of the work has of necessity been confined to the former class of organization.

An essential of co-operative business effort is that every participant obtain an equitable share of profits. Without proper accounting there is no guaranty that this object is attained. With up-to-date bookkeeping none can point the finger of suspicion or doubt. Good accounting promotes economy and breeds confidence.

Double-Entry Bookkeeping.

The double-entry system of bookkeeping is the only one suitable for use, as without it there is no adequate check on the accounts. It shows the effects of business transactions on the assets, liabilities, capital, surplus, and revenue, and also the expenses of the business.

When the term "up-to-date methods" is used it does not imply complicated methods. Only two books are absolutely necessary for a complete systematic record of the financial transactions—the journal and the ledger—though, of course, with the growth of a concern, convenience may dictate that the material recorded in these two volumes be subdivided and entered in other volumes. The journal shows the business transactions in the order that they occur, while the ledger shows them classified according to the respective accounts.

The records of a co-operative concern must record a history of each member's property from the time of delivery until payment is made. All this material should be so arranged that the maximum volume of business can be cared for without confusion, and at the same time the various details should be easily accessible.

Many co-operative organizations have adopted the system of pooling, which necessitates prorating returns on like grades of fruit and other produce. Such records should be clear as to the time of shipments, average prices received, and awarded items.

The form of business organization should be as simple as possible, but the duties of each officer should be clearly defined, board meetings should be held regularly after due notice has been given, and the laws require that complete records of the meetings must be kept. In a wide margin on the left-hand side of each page of the minute book notations can be made which in the future will greatly aid in locating desired information. All persons handling organization funds should be bonded. If this is an invariable practice, insistence on a bond will not be considered as being prompted by any personal consideration.

False Economy Costly.

Many organizations are tempted to practice false economy in regard to expenditures for an up-to-date accounting system, competent help, and labor-saving devices. The cost of an adding machine or a calculating machine may seem large, but it may save its original cost in the course of a year, providing the volume of business is sufficient to make its use economical. Columnar development, loose-leaf systems, card systems, and the use of carbon copies have all lessened the routine of the bookkeeper and made modern bookkeeping possible and economical.

The office, whether large or small, should be provided with filing cabinets, equipped with guides for indexing purposes and folders to hold the correspondence. The alphabetical filing system is the simplest, and perhaps is the best suited for the organization of average size. In numerical filing, an alternative system which some prefer, a number is assigned to each person with whom considerable correspondence is carried on. To locate any particular number in the file an alphabetical cross index is kept.

Safeguarding the Cash.

A regular system of safeguarding the cash should be adopted and adhered to strictly. All cash entries should be explicit and items supporting such entries should be filed so as to be easily accessible. No entries should be recorded in the cash book which do not relate to cash. If possible, the full receipts of each day should be deposited in the bank. All canceled checks should be filed in numerical order, and duplicate checks should be covered by indemnity bonds. The cash or check register and the bank pass book balance should be reconciled each month, and a permanent record kept of this agreement. Checks, sales slips, receipts and the like should be numbered with a numbering machine, and any which are spoiled in use should be marked void or left in the book. A regular system should be used for acknowledging all cash sales or miscellaneous cash items received. A systematic record should be kept of all petty cash payments.

An important item often neglected in the accounting of marketing organizations is depreciation. The extent of depreciation should be estimated as closely as possible and credited to the time "Reserve for Depreciation" account as the books are closed for the year. This will decrease the net profit by the amount of depreciation, and set aside amounts to replace the assets out of the earnings. One other essential in the proper accounting of any marketing organization, as well as in other business efforts, is the auditing of the accounts. Both external and internal audits should be made at regular intervals. The latter may be conducted by a committee of members, while the former should be made by an expert accountant and should be complete, all original documents being available for his investigation.

CO-OPERATIVE BUYING SAVES

Instance Cited in Action of Florida Farmers Clubbing Together to Buy Poison.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An instance of the value of co-operative buying is found in the recent action of a group of farmers in Orange county, Florida, who combined their orders for carbon bisulphid and placed them through their county agent. The purchase totaled 1,000 pounds and the material was secured at a saving of 38 cents a pound under the price that would have been charged for individual purchases in small quantities, so that the deal represented a saving of $380 to these farmers. This carbon bisulphid will be used in fumigating the corn to kill corn weevils. Losses from this source sometimes are as much as 20 per cent. The farmers who are planning to fumigate their corn either have remodeled their old cribs to make them airtight or have built new ones.

DAIRY

WORKING FOR BETTER BULLS

Missouri Community Disposes of Eighteen Nondescripts, Using Six Purebreds Instead.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How a bull association transformed a community with 18 nondescript bulls into a community with one-third that number of good purebred sires from high producing ancestors is explained by an extension worker of the dairy division.

When a bull association was started in a community in Webster county, Missouri, the best bull in the community became a standard for the bulls selected by the bull association.

The Type of Animal That Is Gaining Popularity Because of the "Better Sire, Better Stock" Campaign.

All of the new bulls, then, are as good or better than the best bull that was in the community before.

Before the bull association was organized the 18 bulls in the community were valued at $1,355, an average of $75.28. One or two of these bulls were purebreds and the rest were largely grades and scrubs of mixed dairy and beef breeding. After the association was formed these nondescripts were disposed of and six purebred dairy bulls were purchased at a total cost of $1,657, an average of $276 an animal.

The more efficient utilization of the association bulls resulting from organization of the association made it possible for the six purebred bulls to take the place of the 18 bulls formerly maintained. The reduction in the number of bulls also resulted in a corresponding reduction in the cost of maintenance to be charged to each cow.

The improvement in the quality of the bulls seemed to have a marked effect on the class of cows kept in the herds, and in less than one year after the association was formed the number of purebred females in the community increased from two in July, 1918, to 42 the following June. The large amount of good which resulted from the transformation of a scrub-bull community into a community of good purebred sires is an agricultural improvement hard to parallel, especially when it is considered that this change was made with an expenditure of only $10 more per farmer, and that the use of good sires will result in a lasting improvement to dairy cattle of the community.

FAVOR RAISING FALL CALVES

Expert of South Dakota College Gives Reasons Why Farmers Will Find It Profitable.

Several reasons why farmers find it more profitable to raise fall calves are given as follows by Prof. C. Larson of South Dakota State college:

A cow that freshens in the fall will produce about 20 per cent more milk during the year than one that calves in the spring.

Dairy products bring the farmer about a third more money in winter than in spring.

Winter dairying allows of more and cheaper labor after the field work is done.

Winter dairying avoids flies that cut down the milk flow and bother the milk-fed calves.

Calves dropped in the fall will do well under good winter care and when spring arrives they are ready for pasture with the other young cattle.

Avoid mating too early in the fall. Wait until December and January.

DAIRY NOTES

Nail up that loose board on the cow stable.

* * *

Pumpkins make a good feed for dairy cows.

* * *

Before milking wash the cow's udders and flanks and wipe with a damp cloth.

* * *

Keep the milk tightly covered at all times, and protect utensils from flies and dust.

* * *

It is equally important that the cow barn be kept clean and an abundance of good bedding thrown around at all times.

* * *

In dairying labor may be utilized at a more uniform rate throughout the year than in nearly any other farm business.

* * *

For the complete development of a calf it is necessary that its mother be properly fed and cared for before the calf is born.

DOUBLE BEAUTY OF YOUR HAIR

"Danderine" creates mass of thick, gleamy waves

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the "Danderine" and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor, and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.—Adv.

Second Notice!

TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

We are not going to "beat around the bush" any but will come right out and say that the price of the Klemme Times beginning January 1st 1920, will be $2 per year in advance. To those who reside outside of Hancock County the price will be $2.50. We will not blame the raise in the price "on account fo the war," but will lay it unto the high price we are now paying for peace. A great many papers raised their subscription during the war period and we will say they were entitled to it. Some have raised again since peace was declared, and we will say they are again entitled to it. To keep pace with the cost of producing a newspaper forces us to also fall in line with the other papers. Print paper has tripled in cost, yes even more, almost five times what it used to be. Type is higher, as is also ink, composition, machinery, repairs, rollers and the thousand other things used in a print shop. That sums up our reason for the advance in price.

However, we are willing to save our subscribers some money. All those who pay up their subscription now will be allowed to pay in advance for as many years as they wish at the old rate of $1.50. Or those of our subscribers who reside outside of this ocunty may renew for $2 per year.

Remember that this offer is not good any longer than to the 1st of January.

John Guth had quite a mixup with the motor yesterday morning at the town crossing. He was driving Ed. Willer's team hitched to a wagon and failed to hear the motor approach and the horses were well on the track when struck. One horse was quite badly hurt and the harness was completely torn to pieces from off the horses. The driver was not very much injured outside of getting a bad scare. The damage to the wagon was slight, but it could have been a whole lot worse all around. This is a bad crossing, especially when a train comes from the west, and drivers can not be too careful in going over it.—Meservey Register.

Treasurer Thompson has the southwest corner of his office piled full of auto license plates. There are 2300 pairs of them and Mr. Thompson tells us that he has 900 more coming. A new feature is added to the car registration system. When you secure your numbers, you get a small metalic case in which is contained a certificate of registration, giving owner's name, description, engine number, etc. This must be displayed on the dashboard or some conspicuous place about your car. It is intended to make identification more simple, and make it more difficult for car thieves to get away with their game. The numbers are black figures on a green background. The background suggests to us that the designer was an Irishman. Hancock county numbers begin 140401. Banker Isaac Sweigard was issued the first license in the county, and consequently the foregoing number is his.—Garner Democrat.

Perpetual Motion.

One of the examples of perpetual motion machines given by Mr. Benham is the electric dry pile, of which a celebrated specimen made by Singer 75 years ago "has been continuously tinkling its little chime bell at Oxford for the whole of that long period of time and shows no sign at present of any actual diminution of energy." Of course, no one knows what the life of the electric dry pile may be.

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

Come to our store today, tomorrow—the sooner the better—pick out the Amberola model you like best (prices, $41.00 up) together with a generous selection of records, and

Name Your Own Terms

Tell us how much or how little you can afford to pay every week or month. We will meet you more than half way in coming to a satisfactory arrangement because we are eager to carry out the spirit of Mr. Edison's wish—which is in effect that money must not stand in the way of any family possessing a phonograph this Christmas. Then, upon a small payment down, we will immediately deliver your Amberola and records to your home, where this wonderful phonograph will fill your Christmas with music and your family with delight.

The Amberola is Supreme

Back of the Amberola is all the wizardry of Thomas A. Edison, the world's greatest inventor. No wonder the Amberola tone is pure melody—free from the metallic sound and shrillness of ordinary phonographs and "talking machines". No wonder the genuine Diamond Point Reproducer has solved another phonograph nuisance—the bother and expense of changing needles. No wonder the Amberol Records are almost unbreakable, and last for years after ordinary phonograph records have broken or worn out.

All the world's best music is yours on Amberol Records—the greatest opera singers, the latest popular dance and song hits, ballads, hymns, military bands—in endless variety. New records issued every month.

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

CHAPTER XIX.
—13—
Laying the Trap.

Our first job was executed much more easily than I had anticipated. We caught Manuel sound asleep, and LeVere had sinewy hands at his throat before the fellow could grasp a weapon. The narrowness of the stateroom prevented my taking much part in the affair, but the mulatto needed no help, as he dragged the cursing Spaniard from his bunk to the deck and throttled him savagely. Indeed he would have killed the fellow had I not interfered and twisted his hands loose, leaving Estevan barely conscious. A blanket ripped into strips served to bind him securely enough for the present, but I thought it best to lock the door, and keep the key in my own pocket. LeVere would have knifed him even as he lay there helpless, but for my threat and insistence. Once back in the cabin my eyes distinguished the frightened face of the steward peering forth at us from out the dark of the passage leading forward.

"Come here, Gunsaules," I said sternly. "Step lively, lad; there's nothing for you to fear. Senor Estada has been killed during the night, and we have just captured his murderer," I explained. "There is reason to believe this act was part of a conspiracy to seize the ship in connection with those fellows amidships. Does that passage lead to their quarters?"

"It did once, senor, but now there is a closed door of oak, studded with iron, not only locked, but barred on this side. There are but two keys—one for the captain and the other for him who commands the buccaneers."

I stood there a moment, considering this information. The only way the mutineers could reach the cabin then would be from the deck, descending through the companion. So long as they remained unaware of the capture of Manuel there was little danger of their taking such action.

"Very well, steward," I said. "You go on about your work as though nothing had happened. If any word of this affair gets to the crew, or to those fellows forward, I'll hold you responsible. You are not to leave this cabin without my permission, nor speak to anyone. LeVere."

The mulatto faced me respectfully enough, and I had a feeling he would obey orders, largely because he dare not rebel.

"They will be wondering why you are not on deck. It will be better for you to take charge of the watch at once, and keep the men busy. Relieve Watkins at the wheel and send the man down to me. He can choose the fellows who will stick better than you could, and then can circulate among them without arousing suspicion."

Watkins soon shuffled down the steps. He whipped off his cap and stood waiting.

I put my hand on his shoulder. "Tom," I said soberly, "we are in the same boat, and understand each other. The chance has come for both of us, if we play the cards right. Listen while I tell you the situation, and what I plan doing."

I told it briefly, wasting no words, yet relating every fact. He listened eagerly, but without interruption until the end.

"What do you make of it?" I asked.

"About what you do, sir. I knew there was something of the kind going on—some of the men forward are in on it. You've got the ring-leader."

"Manuel, you mean. Who did he count on for help in the forecastle?"

"Cochose, and a handful of others, niggers and Spaniards, mostly. They meant to pull the affair off either today or tonight. Your plan gives us a fair chance, sir. A dozen good men on deck might do the business."

"But are there a dozen aboard to be trusted?"

"Well, yes sir. I rather think there are. I'd say that in both watches there's maybe fourteen to be relied on."

"In my watch there's Jones, Harwood and Simms, either English or Welsh. They're all right. Then there's a nigger named Sam; Schmitt, a Dutchman, with his partner, whose name I don't know, and two Frenchies, Ravel and Pierre. That makes eight, nine counting myself. Then in the starboard watch I'd pick out Jim Carter and Joe Cole, two Swedes, Carlson and Ole Hallin, and another nigger. Then there are a couple of Finns who ought to be with us, but I can't talk their lingo. That would give us sixteen out of thirty, and it's quite likely some of the others would take a hand with us, if they thought it was safe. I haven't any use though, sir, for Francois LeVere. There ain't a worse scamp aboard."

"I know that," I admitted, "but he had to be used."

"And what is my part now?"

"This is my watch below, and it will be best for me to keep off the deck until all is prepared. You sound these men and get them together; wake up the ones in the starboard watch you feel sure are all right, and have them slip quietly on deck. Then we'll get these arms in the rack here, and be ready for business—the rest will be done in a hurry. I'll wait here for your report."

At the very best Watkins could scarcely perform the task assigned him in less than an hour. The success or failure of our effort depended entirely upon taking these fellows by complete surprise. If it came to an open fight our cause was hopeless, for that would mean fourteen or fifteen men unarmed, pitted against over a hundred thoroughly equipped and trained fighters. Only by confining them below, with hatches battened down, and a carronade trained upon them, would we be safe.

I sat where I could watch the stairs, and the entire forward part of the cabin. Gunsaules lowered the table, and began preparing the morning meal. Finally he announced breakfast.

"Suppose you rap on the lady's door yonder, and ask if she will join me. Say your message is from Senor Gates."

She came at once and seated herself opposite me, and we spoke of the weather while Gunsaules served. He was still hovering about, but my anxiety to have a word with her alone caused me to send him to attend Captain Sanchez. We waited until he disappeared within the after stateroom, bearing a tray; then her eyes suddenly lifted to mine, filled with questioning.

"Tell me what has happened?" She breathed eagerly. "I heard the noise of a struggle out here, and voices conversing. Why are you alone?"

I leaned over to speak in as low a tone as possible. And I told her the situation in detail and my plans.

She sat silently gazing at me across the table, her parted lips trembling to an unasked question. Before she could frame this in words, the door to the companion opened, and Watkins descended the stairs. At sight of her he whipped off his cap.

"Tell Me What Has Happened."

"You may speak freely," I said. "This is the young lady I told you about, and of course she is with us. Only talk low."

"Yes, sir," using a hoarse whisper, and fastening his gaze on me. "It's all right, sir."

CHAPTER XX.

The Deck is Ours.

I had the next step carefully outlined in my own mind, and yet I hesitated a moment, glancing into the two faces before me, with a sudden realization of what the contemplated action would mean to all of us, if by any chance it should fail of success. I managed to speak cheerfully, putting a ring of confidence into my voice.

"Then the sooner we act the better. Watkins, have LeVere order these men aft. Let him say that Senor Estada wishes them to break out some stores in the lazaret. They need be here only long enough for us to distribute these arms among them, and for me to speak a word of instruction to them."

"But have I no part? Is there no way in which I can help?" asked the girl.

"You have your pistol? Then remain here. I shall have to go on deck with the men, and will not dare leave them a moment until the ship is absolutely secure. Manuel is locked in that stateroom, but must not be communicated with by anyone. It will be your part to see that Gunsaules neither enters that passage leading amidships, nor approaches this door. Keep him in sight. You will save us a man. Wait here now until I see how securely this passage forward is closed."

It was as described to me—a heavy oaken door, nail studded, not only locked, but held firmly in place by a stout iron bar. There was not the faintest possibility of any entrance aft, except through assistance from this side. As I returned to the cabin, Gunsaules came out of the captain's room and crossed the deck. At sight of me he stopped instantly.

"Gunsaules," I said, "you are to remain in this cabin until I give the word. The lady here has a pistol, and orders to shoot if you attempt to either enter this passage, or approach the door of Manuel's stateroom. How did you find Sanchez?"

"Sitting up in his bunk, senor, and able to eat."

"Does he know what is occurring on board?"

"No, senor. He questioned me, but I only told him everything was all right, so far."

In my heart I believed the fellow deliberately lied, but there was no opportunity to question him further, for at that moment the door of the companion opened and a miscellaneous group of men thronged down the stairs. They were a rough hairy lot, here and there a sturdy English countenance meeting my gaze, but the faces were largely foreign, with those of two negroes conspicuous.

"Twelve here, sir; I couldn't get Harwood down from the foretop," said Watkins.

"And there are others below who will join us?"

"Yes, sir; six more I count on."

"Which means lads, that with Harwood, Senor LeVere, and myself, we'll total twenty-one in this shindy. Now I'll tell you what is up. Watkins gave you some of it no doubt, but a word from me will make it clearer. I'm no pirate; I'm an English sailor, shanghied. Estada named me first officer because I understand navigation."

I stopped speaking, staring at one of the faces before me; all at once it appeared familiar. "What is your name, my man?"

"Jim Carter, sir."

"You were on the Sinbad, three years ago?"

"I was that, Mister Carlyle," he answered grinning. "I know'd you the minute I cum down yere."

"Then that is all I need say on that line. Here's one of your mates, lads, who will vouch for me. Now, as I've been told, you are all of you in the same boat—you are prisoners on board. Luck has given us a chance to make a break, and get away. Captain Sanchez is wounded and helpless, Pedro Estada is dead, and I've got Manuel locked in that stateroom. His cut-throats are all below, and now all we've got to do is clap on the hatch and keep them there. Now, what I want to know is are you fellows with me?"

Watkins answered up promptly; then Carter; the others joining in with less heartiness, the different accents revealing their nationalities. I knew sailors well enough to feel assured they would follow their leaders once the game started.

"That's good enough; now we've got to hit hard and quick, lads. There are six men on deck who are not with us. Watkins will take care of them with those fellows I don't assign to other work. Jones, you and Carter make straight for the forecastle and don't let anyone come up the scuttle. One of you had better drop down below, and prevent any of those lads from unbarring the door leading amidships. Who is the best for that job?"

"Let Carlson do it."

"All right—Carlson it is then. You Frenchmen, and the two negroes, your part will be to ship the main hatch. Do a quick job, and clamp it down tight."

"I'll come down to you Carlson, as soon as we have the deck. It ought not to take more than five minutes to handle those lads, and slew around a carronade. Watkins, you and Carter hand out the cutlasses from the rack; you boys will handle those better than firearms. Good; now are you all ready?"

There was a low murmur of voices, the faces watching me showing their increasing excitement and eagerness. Our little talk had served to arouse their confidence in my leadership, and with gleaming weapons in their hands they became self-reliant volunteers. Once turned loose my greatest difficulty might be to restrain them, rather than urge them on. Revenge for past wrongs was in each heart, and they welcomed a chance to strike.

I whispered a parting word of admonition into the ear of Dorothy, receiving in return a glance from her eyes, which gave a new throb to my heart; then straightened up, and pistol in hand, pushed my way through the throng of sailors to the foot of the stairs.

"Follow me, lads," I said quietly.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

It is a physician's prescription.

Swamp-Root is a strengthening medicine. It helps the kidneys, liver and bladder do the work nature intended they should do.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has so many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

VASSAR GIRLS DRESS DOLLS

Students at Famous College Revive Old Custom for the Benefit of Neighborhood Children.

People who have been brought up to believe that college girls are inevitably of masculine type might be interested to know that the students at Vassar college are at present in the midst of a doll-dressing contest. Nor is this contest a new event at Vassar. Every year shortly before Thanksgiving 600 dolls are bought by the Christian association and distributed among the students to be dressed in time for Christmas for the children of the surrounding neighborhood. At an appointed time the dolls are assembled by their respective owners and placed row on row for inspection. The best-dressed doll is selected and her owner rewarded with a prize.

This custom has been observed at Vassar for many years. For the last two years, however, it has been omitted, owing to the exigencies of war work. But now that those services are not needed the work has been taken up again with an added interest and enthusiasm.

New Terms.

The toast at the breakfast table was rather dry, especially the piece little Joseph got. He surveyed it in concern for a minute and turned to the maid who was fixing his oatmeal. "Milk it, Mary, milk it," he commanded.

Santa's Christmas Day

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

SANTA CLAUS was back in his workshop. It looked very empty. And no wonder. If you could have taken the trip which Santa Claus took you would have seen the reason why, though it would not be hard for any of us to guess the reason why.

Santa Claus on the night before Christmas had stopped at the toy stores and had taken the toys which he had left there so that the children could see them and write letters telling what they wanted.

By that time he had packs and packs of toys, as many as his sleigh could hold, and while his workshop was empty there was a nice, cheerful appearance about it.

There were lots of tools around, however, and there were bits of cloth left from making dresses and hats for dollies, and there were little ends of ribbons which had tied packages. There were pieces of wood, too, which had been sawed off when boats were made.

There were many other things which showed it had been a toy shop. It looked as if it had been full of toys only a little while before—and not only toys but of every sort of a Christmas present for every sort of a child.

A fire was burning cheerfully in the big stove and was making the workshop nice and warm. But there was an open fire, too, at the end of the shop with a big chair in front of it.

On a rug beside the chair sat Boy of the North, his head against the knee of Santa Claus.

He was wagging his tail from time to time and looking into his master's eyes.

"Good old Boy of the North, never forgets his master!" said Santa Claus. And Boy of the North was happy that Santa Claus was so pleased by the warm wrapper and slippers which he had got for his master.

"Good old Boy of the North," said Santa Claus again, patting him, and Boy of the North sniffed the air, and looked at Santa Claus as though to say:

"Who wouldn't be good if he belonged to you? You're always cheerful and happy and always thinking of others. You like children and you like to hear them laugh and you work for them all the year. You're their King, King Santa Claus, and you're my master."

So Boy of the North tried to talk to Santa Claus and Santa Claus understood. He stroked the dog's head, and as he smiled, looking into the fireplace, he said:

"It was a wonderful trip, Boy of the North. I love to sit down here in my easy chair on Christmas day and think about it. Oh, I saw so many lovely children. They were asleep and such nice smiles were playing around their mouths. I hoped, Boy of the North, I hoped they were thinking about me, because I like to have them fond of me."

And Boy of the North pressed nearer as though to say:

"They're fond of you just as I am fond of you—just as fond as can be!"

"My reindeer had such a good time, too. You'll have to go out and see them in their stalls soon, and hear how they had to slow up whenever they made lots of noise, for I was so afraid they would awaken the children.

"And now, Boy of the North, you know what I must do!"

Boy of the North stretched himself and got up. He followed Santa Claus to a corner of the workshop and then back to a window while Santa Claus carried a long, long telescope.

"This is my magic telescope which you see me use each year, Boy of the North," said Santa Claus. "I look at children all over the world, and when they smile and I can see how happy they are then I am being thanked for my work.

"It was very hard this year to get all that the children wanted. Some years are harder than others, but the children understood and I haven't seen a single scowl. No, Boy of the North, not a single scowl.

"Oh, what thanks! Every child everywhere is smiling, Boy of the North, and every child is happy!"

And there were tears in those merry twinkling eyes of Santa Claus—yes, tears—but tears of joy at the smiles of children whom he had been able to see through his magic telescope.

All Speech Consisted Of.

"Give me Something to wear for Christmas"

Here's what a famous man says: "When I was a poor lad I always wanted a Christmas present I could wear a stocking cap, a good suit, a nice warm overcoat ---I've never gotton over it: if no one gives me something of the kind at Christmas time, I buy it myself.

HE had the right idea; he still has it. Most every man man and every boy wants something he can wear; something useful. We have the things men and boys buy for themselves; and our mark in the merchandise tells them of good judgement; they know our standard.

Here are some suggestions for gifts to the men in your family.

At Council Bluffs a band of gypsies was intecepted carrying with them two kidnapped girls, Rosie Mitchell, 14 years of age and Sonia Evans, age 12. The girls were stolen in the suburbs of Philadelphia last March and a nation wide hunt for them has been going on ever since. The girls were taught the art of fortune telling in the meantime and it is stated were quite proficient in separating "easy marks" from the coin of the realm. Melia Mitchell, an elder sister of Rosie, had been on the trail of the gypsy band for months, and upon finding her sister she telegraphed for her father who was accompanied by a brother of the Evans girl. Melia notified the police at Council Bluffs when she had located the gypsy camp and the leader, Marks, and three others, were placed under arrest. Marks has admitted to the police that he was a member of the gang of child stealers but denies personal part in it.

A campaign for the sale of Red Cross Christmas Seals is to be began December first and continue until the tenth. The proceeds of the drive are to be used for the benefit of tubercular patients. It is expected that Hancock county will reach its quota during the first days of the campaign. When we consider that the active work of stamping out the white plague is carried on solely through the sale of these seals, at one cent each and consider also the increase of this disease the last year, not only among the boys who were active in the war, but among the people at home who suffered diseased lungs as a result of the flu epidemic, then how much more effort we should put forth to do all we can to further the sale of these seals as a means of relief and cae. Every letter mailed during the month of December should wear its badge of usefulness and every Christmas package should be sealed with the Red Cross stamp as an emblem of the true Christmas spirit.

About twenty-five young men, who were nearly all discharged soldiers, received their citizen papers at the court house last Saturday. The young men are from all over the county and are all fine fellows. When the United States went to war with Germany these young foreigners nearly all enlisted at once. They will make excellent citizens of the United States and we are glad to have such loyal fellows in the county. It is said that some of the number could scarcely speak American, but having fought for the United States they are entitled to citizenship.

CHICAGO GETS REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION

Washington, D. C.—Chicago was selected today as the place for the republican national convention next year. June 8 was selected as the date for the convention.

The selections were made by the republican national committee. The contest for the convention city was narrowed to Chicago and St. Louis and the vote was 44 for Chicago and 9 for St. Louis.

The doctors, lawyers and farmers have all tried their hand at representing Hancock county in the state legislature and the Garner Signal thinks it's about time the editors had a look in. The Signal suggests Ray Roberts of the Britt News-Tribune, as a prospective candidate for that position. Ray has a great following and would be able to make all legislative aspirants go some should he decide to enter the race—Corwith.

CHRISTMAS EDITION

As has been the cnstom of The Herald-Press and also of its predecessor, the Belmond Herald, next week's edition of this paper will be the Christmas number with colored illustrated cover and Christmas illustrations. On account of shortage of print paper and the need for fuel conservation, the edition will not be permitted to take as many pages as customary.—Belmond Herald-Press.

COLDEST IN 36 YEARS

Tuesday night's registration shattered all records for December in the past 36 years, according to the records kept in the office of Ralph B. Slippy, voluntary observer. On only three other occasions was the registration lower in that period—32 below Jan. 12, 1912 and 32 below Jan 7, 1887. On Jan. 15, 1888, it was 30 below.

The winter of 1886-7 old timers say was unusally cold. The record shows that the mercury dropped to 27 below De.c 27, 1886.

On Feb. 9 last year it was 27 below At 8 a. m., Wednesday the mercury stood at 25. Yesterday's highest registration was below zero. —Ackley Journal.

Eagle Grove Eagle: At the meeting of the city council Monday vening the ordinane placing the ban on Sunday shows was passed by a vote of four to two, and on Sunday base ball, five to one.

The situation as to print paper that ist he paper on wh.ch newspapers are printed, has grown so serious that many papers are facing the necessity of suspension. The print paper can scarcely be secured at any price. Last week the Hampton Chronicle was out of print and only friendly assistance kept them supplied.—Belmond Herald Press.

Des Moines has reopened her churches and theatres in face of the coal shortage due to the fact that one day's experience proved to the authorities that the amount of fuel thus saved was more than offset by the adverse influence upon the public morale. They also considered that while attending church or the theatre fires in the homes are banked and thus about one third less fuel was consumed. Lights were not used either which conserved the coal at the light plants also.

Spanish for Mouse.

Raton, the county seat of Colfax county, New Mexico, is the center of the mining industry of the coal field on the south side of the Raton mountains, although no large mines are located in the immediate vicinity. The Santa Fe trail passed through Raton, then known as Willow Springs. The word Raton is Spanish for mouse.

The Apartment Dweller.

The apartment dweller is well warmed, lives near his business and his amusements, is close to humankind, and is relieved from the responsibility of a house and from the inconveniences of outdoor duties involved in a detached dwelling. To get all these benefits the apartment dweller is asked to surrender two desirable things, namely, inside room and outside air.—Minneapolis Journal.

Introduced Graham Bread.

The inventor of Graham bread and flour was Rev. Sylvester Graham, a New England clergyman, who died in Northampton, Mass., sixty-five years ago, having devoted the major part of his life to the advocacy of a vegetarian dietic theory.—New York World.

Bad Habit All Too Prevalent.

The unconscious fault of interrupting is so prevalent that Robert Louis Stevenson once paid the following tribute to his deceased friend, James Ferrier: "He was the only man I ever knew who did not habitually interrupt."

Talk to Yourself.

A lawyer has in his office a motto: "Think twice before you speak; then talk to yourself." His significant comment upon it was: "If my clients followed that motto, I would lose half my business." He also remarked that the first lawyer in whose office he served taught him the important lesson to keep his mouth sealed on all occasions when not absolutely necessary to open it.—Onward.

The Clever Woman.

When you feel genuinely ill at ease with a clever woman, it is generally because her cleverness is artificial. Some women, however, are even cleverer than this, for they can conceal their artificiality so well that you actually laugh with them over someone else who is just as artificial as they are.

College Days Not Wasted.

"Has your college education been of any practical value to you?" "You bet it has! If it wasn't for my experience in track athletics I'd have to leave my house five minutes earlier every morning in order to catch the 7:58," replied the commuter.—Michigan Awgwan.

"Tell It Not in Gath."

"Tell it not in Gath" means "Don't let your enemies hear it." Gath was famous as the birthplace of the giant Goliath. The quotation is from the Second Book of Samuel, first chapter twentieth verse: "Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Askelon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice, lest the daughters of the uncircuncised triumph."

Most Precious Thing.

Sweet is the destiny of all trades, whether of the brows or of the mind. God never allowed any man to do nothing. How miserable is the condition of those men which spend the time as if it were given them, and not lent; as if hours were waste creatures and such as should never be accounted for; as if God would take this for a good bill of reckoning.—Bishop Hall.

KLEMME TIMES

Twenty-fourth Year | Number 15 and 16 | Klemme, Iowa, Thursday, December 18 and 25, 1919 | $1.50 In Advance. $2.00 Outside of County

A MERRY XMAS TO YOU

The editor of the Times wishes you a Merry Christmas and a most Happy New Year, at the same time thanking the businessmen and citizens of Klemme for their loyal support during the past year and soliciting your further good will and patronage for the coming year.

As Christmas comes on Thursday of this year, which also is the publication date for the Times, we have decided to take a little well-earned vacation next week, during which time the doors of the Times will be locked up. This week we are getting out what we call a double edition. We have spente xtra time and money to make this Xmas paper surpass all other Christmas editions during the past. Remember that the Times will be closed for the Xmas week. If you want any printing done bring your order at once so we can get it out before we leave on our vacation.

A great many editors in the state are taking advantage of a vacation thru the Holidays and we feel that we have the same privilege.

Again wishing you a Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year.

R. A. Jorgenson, Editor

ELECTRIC SERVICE POOR

The electric service from Iowa Falls was very poor last week. Not enough "juice" went over the line to pulle lectric motors, of which there are several in Klemme, and one of which is located in the Times Office. We depend, or did, on electricity for power with which to run our presses. The service was so poor that we were delayed considerably last week with the paper. It was necessary for us to install a gas engine with which to complete the job. Other firms in town were also laid up on account of insufficient power with which to run machinery. We hope that the service will be better now that coal can be had.

The Christmas program of the Sunday School of the First Methodist church will be given on Christmas Eve., December 24th, at 7:30 o'clock. There will be given beautiful and instructive drills, such as an "Aerial Messengers Drill," "Heralds of the Dawn Drill," "Christmas Bells Drill," "The Coming of Peace" pantomime, etc. Special music will be rendered by the church choir and male quartette. But the greatest feature of the program will be a "Bethlehem Pageant" that has in it about 50 characters between the ages of 12 and 100. In it you will see Prophets, cliques of Bethlehem boys and girls, Shepherds, Wise Men and their attendants, as well as beautiful Bethlehem itself as it is at sunrise, sunset, noon and at night. Come and see it.

COMING SHOWS AT THE IDLE HOUR THEATRE

Special—Saturday, December 20th "FIVE NIGHTS." A big 5-reel picture.

Tuesday, December 23rd, "ELMO, THE MIGHTY," 3rd Episode, "The Flames of Hate."

Thursday, December 25th, big special picture, "MOTHERS OF LIBERTY." An all star cast including Barbara Castleton, Walter Miller, Beulah Poynter, Harry Spingler and Wm. H. Tooker.

Saturday, December 27th. Regular Bluebird program. It is sure to be good.

A SLEIGH RIDE

On Thursday evening, December 4th, the seventh and eighth grades went on a sleigh ride. Harold Johnson furnished the sled and horses.

We met at Wellemeyer's store at 6:30 and drove to Garner. A toboggan was fastened onto the back end of the sled and there was much fun riding on that. At 8:30, we arrived at Owen's restaurant in Garner and there we were served a fine oyster stew. We started home at 9:00 and got to Klemme at 10:30. We yelled and sang to and from Garner. The moon was friendly and gave us much light, and as the night was warm, no one suffered from the cold. Everyone reported a fine time.

GOODELL SUFFERS ANOTHER LOSS BY FIRE

TWO MORE BUILDINGS GO UP IN SMOKE FRIDAY NIGHT

Entire North Side Now Wiped Out

Fire returned last Friday night and destroyed two more buildings on the north side of Goodell's Main Street, destroying thet wo remaining structures which escaped the fire of last week Tuesday night. This makes nine buildings destroyed by fire in Goodell in the past week. The two last buildings to go were a drug store and Mr. White's store. We understand that the telephone exchange was temporarily installed in one of these buildings and that, too, was desroyed so that telephone service at Goodell is completely tied up.

Two big blazes in one week looks rather suspicious and the theory that incendiarism is the cause for both fires is now being advanced. Looks very much like the work of some fire bug who has it in for the business welfare of Goodell and is taking this low down means for seeking revenge; if such be the case, hanging would be too good for such a person if ever caught in the act.

It is a hard blow for Goodell and one which perhaps will be a death blow to some of the bdsiness firms as we understand that little insurance was carried. The rates were high on account of the insufficient fire protection and that the buildings in that block are all frame buildings. Some of the merchandise was saved from the burning buildings but the greater part of it was lost.

LOST SOMEWHERE

We had several columns of type or news matter go astray last week. It may have gotten lost in the mails as the new train schedule was on the day we sent it to Belmond to have set on the linotype machine, anyway it has never showed up, so we will not worry The Herald-Press at Belmond, who set our type, had troubles of their own also last week as they, too, depend on electric power to run their machine, which meant that in the endt he Times was also affected. The coal shortage is hitting the newspapers as well as all the other business concerns, and none of them will be able to give 100 per cent service until coal is again plentiful.

NEW POOL PARLOR TO BE OPENED SATURDAY

Clark Bredbenner reports to the Times that he will have his Pool Hall in running order this week Saturday. Some time ago Mr. Bredbenner purchased the old opera house building east of the Klemme Auto Company and since that time has had a gang of workmen remodeling the building from the front door to the back door with the result that he will have as nice a pool and billiard parlor as any in this part of the state. Mr. Bredbenner has also gone to considerable expense in installing a number of good tables and other fixtures in the place. He says that he will keep the place in good order always and will allow no profane language or rowdyism about the place so that it will be always a good clean place of amusement for gentlemen. He cordially invites the gentlemen of Klemme and vicinity to pay him a visit in the new location.

A Christmas Morning Breakfast

The Mistletoe Kiss

By J. E. SHERWIN

(Copyright.)

THERE never was such a doll. It was the very acme of toy invention, classic of features, graceful of form, appareled in materials duplications of the latest modes of fashion. Flexible of joints, some inner mechanism moved eyes and lips, and then it talked—talked? Bless you! yes, in the clearest childish accents. No wonder it did all these things, for, when Warren Brill asked the price, the salesman replied:

"Seventy-five dollars, sir."

"Whew!" aspirated Roy Burton, who had accompanied Brill on his Christmas shopping tour.

"I'll take it," said the latter.

"Why, you've gone clear daffy," remonstrated Burton. "You've got no little ones at home."

"N-no, that's so," replied Warren in his diffident, hesitating way, "but, you see," and he grew flustered—"Miss Deere—"

"Eh! Nellie Deere? Surely you're not thinking of giving that grown up beauty a doll?"

"Oh, dear no!" answered Brill, and he fluttered like a frightened schoolboy. "I wouldn't dare to offer her a gift. I was thinking of presenting the doll to her little niece, Dorothy. I hope Miss Deere won't resent my taking such a liberty. Of course we're quite friendly—"

"Friendly!" interrupted Burton. "That's putting it mildly. Why, everybody knows you're in love with Nellie, and the way she favors your company shows how she regards you."

"Oh, do you think so, positively?" gasped Warren. His face was a vast map of longing hope. "You don't know how—how happy you make me. Just put the doll aside," to the salesman. "I shall want some special records made and I'll see you later."

"It's a bold scheme," soliloquized Warren, and proceeded straight back to the toy store. He sought out the salesman. "Now, as I understand it," he said, "a regular baby phonograph device inside the doll makes it say all those cute things, when you operate a button?"

"That's it," acceded the clerk.

"And I can have a special record made?"

"Surely. We can attend to that for you."

Warren met Nellie on the street the day before Christmas, and she mentioned the fact that she had been very much disappointed as to the Christmas tree they had received, it being straggly and undersized.

"Why," spoke Warren eagerly, "I saw the finest layout of trees down at Chester only yesterday, Miss Deere. I haven't a thing to do the rest of the day. Won't you deputize me to help give the little ones a good time?"

Warren arrived at the Deere home with the tree and various packages. He helped Nellie trim the tree. He operated the talking doll to even the wonderment of Mr. and Mrs. Deere, who at ten o'clock indulgently retired.

Warren began to act nervous. He had placed a new record specially by his side, his finger on the button. Nellie was looping a string made to order inside the doll. He set it on a chair of holly near the folding doors. She looked at him strangely as he said:

"Miss Deere—Nellie, I have something to say to you—that is—yes—something to tell you, and can't say it. Won't you please listen to what my little friend here, the doll, will say for me, and then maybe—maybe you'll say something, too."

"Dear Nellie, I love you. I know that you are a star high above me, and the best man in the world unworthy of you; but I can give you every luxury and add the greatest one of all—love. Say it's not altogether hopeless."

Nelly blushed peony red. Then she smiled slightly, almost quizzically. She moved four steps. They brought her directly under the mistletoe. Warren arose to his feet.

"Oh, Nellie!" he cried, "you—you didn't get under that mistletoe on purpose?"

She hung her head embarrassed, yet inviting. He stole to her, brave as a lion. He circled her waist with his arm. She snuggled closer; he pressed his lips to hers.

"Oh, a merry Christmas to all the world," he jubilated expansively, and in the accents there was the cheer of a happy, happy man.

Ed. Jacobs received a letter from Lyell Wellemeyer the other day in which Lyell stated that he had joined the army and was at Ft. Logan, Colorado.

GOOD FIRING W LL SAVE COAL

Careful Attention to Home Furnaces Will Make Fuel Supply Last Longer

The home coal pile will last longer if a few simple instructions tested out by the engineering experts at Iowa State College are followed in firing the furnace. One of them says that at least 25 per cent more heat may be secured from fuel by proper firing.

The Golden Rule of economical firing is to keep a steady fire—one that will maintain an unvarying temperature. To do this the furnace must be fired at regular intervals.

In firing, the bed of live coal should never be completely covered with fresh fuel. The fresh charge should be placed in front so that a small area of red coal is left at the back of the firepot. Then the fire door damper or air blast should be opened for a few minutes—but only a few. This drives the gas from the new charge of coal over the red hot coals at the back of the firepot so that it is burned.

There are two ways to check an over-heated furnace; one is to close the ash pit damper, and the other is to open the check damper in the smoke pipe. The fire door or fire door damper should not be opened for this purpose.

The fire should be checked before the house is quite warm enough to prevent over-heating.

A temperature of 68 degrees is high enough for comfort if the water pan of the furnace is kept filled.

A furnace to use fuel economically must be airtight. Loose doors and dampers let in som uch air that the fire cannot be checked.

A bulletin on house furnace firing may be secured by writing for it to the Engineering Extension department, Ames.

SAVE FIFTY CENTS

As we will be closed all next week we have decided to extend our Subscription Saving Offer an extra week, or until the 10th of January. Up to that time we will accept your subscription to the Times for as many years in advance as you wish at the old rate of $1.50 per year. After the 10th of January the subscription rate for the Klemme Times will be $2.00 per year, strictly in advance only. Outside of the county the rate will be $2.50 per year. Renew your subscription now and save fifty cents on each year's subscription.

TRAIN SERVICE TO BE CONTINUED

We understand that beginning today, Thursday, all the trains on the Rock Island will again run on their regular schedule as before they took off two trains on acount of the coal shortage. Notet his change in the schedule.

COAL STRIKE OVER

The coal strike is over, according to reports received the past week and miners are now all on the job again and most mines are running on full capacity, except those which are laid up for necessary repairs. This means that there will soon be plenty of coal again for all.

PLENTY OF COLD WEATHER

We are having a fine time of it in Iowa (this for the benefit of our readers in other states) this winter. It is a real winter from start to finish. Plenty of cold weather, no coal, and lots of snow which inspires the famous singers of Klemme to warble, "How Cold I Am" when it used to be "How Dry I Am."

CONGRESS GETS WILSON'S MESSAGE

Failure of Treaty Ratification Only Mentioned as One Cause of the Unrest That Per vades the Country.

Adoption of Budget System, Simplification of War Time Taxes, Encouragement of Increased Production and Relief for Soldiers Urged—Need of Definite Program for Improving Labor Conditions.

Washington, Dec. 2.—At noon today President Wilson's message was read in both houses of congress. It did not mention the fight over the peace treaty, but did assert that the delay in arriving at a permanent peace was one of the basic causes of the unrest that is disturbing the country. After explaining that his illness prevented his appearance before congress in person, Mr. Wilson's message continued:

I hope that congress will bring to a conclusion at this session legislation looking to the establishment of a budget system. That there should be one single authority responsible for the making of all appropriations and that appropriations should be made not independently of each other but with reference to one single comprehensive plan of expenditure properly related to the nation's income there can be no doubt. I believe the burden of preparing the budget must, in the nature of the case, if the work is to be properly done and responsibility concentrated instead of divided, rest upon the executive.

The budget so prepared should be submitted to and approved or amended by a single committee of each house of congress, and no single appropriation should be made by the congress, except such as may have been included in the budget prepared by the executive or added by the particular committee of congress charged with the budget legislation.

Another and not less important aspect of the problem is the ascertainment of the economy and efficiency with which the moneys appropriated are expended. Under existing law the only audit is for the purpose of ascertaining whether expenditures have been lawfully made within the appropriations. No one is authorized or equipped to ascertain whether the money has been spent wisely, economically and effectively.

Taxation Question Taken Up.

I trust that the congress will give its immediate consideration to the problem of future taxation. Simplification of the income and profits taxes has become an immediate necessity. These taxes performed indispensable service during the war. They must, however, be simplified, not only to save the taxpayer inconvenience and expense, but in order that his liability may be made certain and definite.

With reference to the details of the revenue law, the secretary of the treasury and the commissioner of internal revenue will lay before you for your consideration certain amendments necessary or desirable in connection with the administration of the law—recommendations which have my approval and support.

It is of the utmost importance that in dealing with this matter the present law should not be disturbed so far as regards taxes for the calendar year 1920, payable in the calendar year 1921. The congress might well consider whether the higher rates of income and profits taxes can in peace times be effectively productive of revenue and whether they may not, on the contrary, be destructive of business activity and productive of waste and inefficiency.

There is a point at which in peace times high rates of income and profits taxes discourage energy, remove the incentive to new enterprise, encourage extravagant expenditures and produce industrial stagnation with consequent unemployment and other attendant evils.

The message then discussed the favorable balance of trade and the need of adjusting our economic life to the changed conditions and of abandoning the policy of isolation. In the matter of recognition and relief for returned soldiers the president repeated the recommendations in his last message. He also urged tariff revision to protect our chemical and dyestuff industries. He continued:

Farmers Are Praised.

During the war the farmer performed a vital and willing service to the nation. By materially increasing the production of his land, he supplied America and the allies with the increased amounts of food necessary to keep their immense armies in the field. He indispensably helped to win the war. But there is now scarcely less need of increasing the production in food and the necessaries of life. I ask the congress to consider means of encouraging effort along these lines.

The importance of doing everything possible to promote production along economical lines, to improve marketing and to make rural life more attractive and healthful, is obvious. I would urge approval of the plans already proposed to the congress by the secretary of agriculture, to secure the essential facts required for the proper study of this question, through the proposed enlarged programs for farm management studies and crop estimates.

I would urge, also, the continuance of federal participation in the building of good roads, under the terms of existing law and under the direction of present agencies; the need of further action on the part of the states and the federal government to preserve and develop our forest resources, especially through the practice of better forestry methods on private holdings and the extension of the publicly owned forests; better support for country schools and the more definite direction of their courses of study along lines related to rural problems; and fuller provision for sanitation in rural districts and the building up of needed hospital and medical facilities.

Blames Government for Unrest.

I would call your attention to the widespread condition of political restlessness in our body politic. The causes of this unrest, while various and complicated, are superficial rather than deep seated. Broadly, they arise from or are connected with the failure on the part of our government to arrive speedily at a just and permanent peace permitting return to normal conditions, from the transfusion of radical theories from seething European centers pending such delay, from heartless profiteering resulting in the increase of the cost of living, and, lastly, from the machinations of passionate and malevolent agitators. With the return to normal conditions, this unrest will rapidly disappear. In the meantime it does much evil.

It seems to me that in dealing with this situation congress should not be impatient or drastic, but should seek, rather, to remove the causes. It should endeavor to bring our country back speedily to a peace basis, with ameliorated living conditions under the minimum of restrictions upon personal liberty that is consistent with our reconstruction problems. And it should arm the federal government with power to deal in its criminal courts with those persons who by violent methods would abrogate our time-tested institutions.

With the free expression of opinion and with the advocacy of orderly political change, however fundamental, there must be no interference, but toward passion and malevolence tending to incite crime and insurrection under guise of political evolution there should be no leniency.

Should Extend Food Control.

I renew and strongly urge the necessity of the extension of the present food-control act as to the period of time in which it shall remain in operation. The attorney general has submitted a bill providing for an extension of this act for a period of six months. As it now stands it is limited in operation to the period of the war and becomes inoperative upon the formal proclamation of peace. It is imperative that it should be extended at once. The department of justice has built up extensive machinery for the purpose of enforcing its provisions; all of which must be abandoned upon the conclusion of peace unless the provisions of this act are extended.

During this period the congress will have an opportunity to make similar, permanent provisions and regulations with regard to all goods destined for interstate commerce and to exclude them from interstate shipment, if the requirements of the law are not complied with. Some such regulation is imperatively necessary. The abuses that have grown up in the manipulation of prices by the withholding of foodstuffs and other necessaries of life cannot otherwise be effectively prevented. There can be no doubt of either the necessity or the legitimacy of such measures.

The president renewed his recommendations that a law be passed regulating cold storage and that all goods destined for interstate commerce should be marked with the price at which they left the hands of the producer. He also urged the federal licensing of corporations engaging in interstate commerce. Coming to the question of labor, the message said:

Labor and Capital Peace Renewed.

No one who has observed the march of events in the last year can fail to note the absolute need of definite program to bring about an improvement in the condition of labor. There can be no settled conditions leading to increased production and a reduction in the cost of living if labor and capital are to be antagonists instead of partners.

Sound thinking and an honest desire to serve the interests of the whole nation, as distinguished from the interests of a class, must be applied to the solution of this great and pressing problem. The failure of other nations to consider this matter in a vigorous way has produced bitterness and jealousies and antagonisms, the food of radicalism. The only way to keep men from agitating against grievances is to remove the grievances. An unwillingness even to discuss these matters produces only dissatisfaction and gives comfort to the extreme elements in our country, which endeavor to stir up disturbance in order to provoke governments to embark upon a course of retaliation and repression. The seed of revolution is repression.

The remedy for these things must not be negative in character. It must be constructive. It must comprehend the general interest. The real antidote for the unrest which manifests itself is not suppression but a deep consideration of the wrongs that beset our national life and the application of a remedy.

Eight-Hour Day Is Big Step.

Congress has already shown its willingness to deal with these industrial wrongs by establishing the eight-hour day as the standard in every field of labor. It has sought to find a way to prevent child labor. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding lives and health in dangerous industries. It must now help in the difficult task of finding a method that will bring about a genuine demonstration of industry, based upon the full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare.

It is with this purpose in mind that I called a conference to meet in Washington on December 1 to consider these problems in all their broad aspects, with the idea of bringing about a better understanding between these two interests.

Rights of Labor Are Cited.

The great unrest throughout the world, out of which has emerged a demand for an immediate consideration of the difficulties between capital and labor, bids us put our own house in order. Frankly, there can be no permanent and lasting settlements between capital and labor which do not recognize the fundamental concepts for which labor has been struggling through the years. The whole world gave its recognition and indorsement to these fundamental purposes in the League of Nations.

To analyze the particulars in the demands of labor is to admit the justice of their complaint in many matters that lie at their basis. The workman demands an adequate wage, sufficient to permit him to live in comfort, unhampered by the fear of poverty and want in his old age. He demands the right to live and the right to work amidst sanitary surroundings, both in home and in workshop, surroundings that develop and do not retard his own health and well-being; and the right to provide for his children's wants in the matter of health and education. In other words, it is his desire to make the conditions of his life and the lives of those dear to him tolerable and easy to bear.

Collective Bargaining Right.

Governments must recognize the right of men collectively to bargain for humane objects that have at their base the mutual protection and welfare of those engaged in all industries. Labor must not be longer treated as a commodity. It must be regarded as the activity of human beings, possessed of deep yearnings and desires. The business man gives his best thought to the repair and replenishment of his machinery, so that its usefulness will not be impaired and its power to produce may always be at its height and kept in full vigor and motion.

No less regard ought to be paid to the human machine, which, after all, propels the machinery of the world and is the great dynamic force that lies back of all industry and progress. Return to the old standards of wage and industry in employment are unthinkable. The terrible tragedy of war which has just ended and which has brought the world to the verge of chaos and disaster would be in vain if there should ensue a return to the conditions of the past.

Labor not only is entitled to an adequate wage, but capital should receive a reasonable return upon its investment and is entitled to protection at the hands of the government in every emergency. No government worthy of the name can play these elements against each other, for there is a mutuality of interest between them which the government must seek to express and to safeguard at all cost.

The right of individuals to strike is inviolate and ought not to be interfered with by any process of government, but there is a predominant right and that is the right of the government to protect all of its people and to assert its power and majesty against the challenge of any class. The government, when it asserts that right, seeks not to antagonize a class but simply to defend the right of the whole people as against the irreparable harm and injury that might be done by the attempt by any class to usurp a power that only government itself has a right to exercise as a protection to all.

Hour of Test and Trial.

This is the hour of test and trial for America. By her prowess and strength and the indomitable courage of her soldiers, she demonstrated her power to vindicate on foreign battlefields her conception of liberty and justice. Let not her influence as a mediator between capital and labor be weakened and her own failure to settle matters of purely domestic concert be proclaimed to the world.

There are those in this country who threaten direct action to force their will upon a majority. Russia today, with its blood and terror, is a painful object lesson of the power of minorities. It makes little difference what minority it is; whether capital or labor, or any other class; no sort of privilege will ever be permitted to dominate this country. We are a partnership or nothing that is worth while.

We are a democracy where the majority are the masters or all the hopes and purposes of the men who founded this government have been defeated and forgotten. In America there is but one way by which great reforms can be accomplished and the relief sought by classes obtained, and that is through the orderly processes of representative government. Those who would propose any other method of reform are enemies of this country.

America will not be daunted by threats nor lose her composure or calmness in these distressing times. We can afford, in the midst of this day of passion and unrest, to be self-contained and sure. The instrument of all reform in America is the straight road of justice to all classes and conditions of men. Men have but to follow this road to realize the full fruition of their objects and purposes. Let those beware who would take the shorter road of disorder and revolution. The right road is the road of justice and orderly process.

Low Standard.

"Germany," said Senator King of Utah, "promises to be good, but her standard of goodness seems rather low.

"Germany is like the boy whose mother said:

"'Billy, did you wash your hands?'

"'Yes'm,' said Billy, proudly displaying a pair of clean paws.

"'Did you wash your face?'

"'Yes'm.'

"'Did you wash your neck and ears?'

"'Aw, say,' snarled Billy, 'I ain't no angel, mom!'"

As It Goes.

"People are queer," said the tailor.

"What's the matter now?" asked his customer.

"I offered to sell the man who just went out a suit of clothes for $35. It was one another customer had rejected."

"Wouldn't he take it?"

"I should say not. He insisted on paying $100 for a suit, so that he could go out and kick about the price I charged him."

Difficult Pace.

"The old-fashioned political boss seems to have vanished."

"He has," replied Senator Sorghum. "In order to be a boss now a man must know how to talk about League of Nations covenants and sociological relationships and supply and demand and a whole lot of subjects to which the old-fashioned boss didn't have to pay the slightest attention."

Inspiration Generally Earned.

There seems to exist a tendency to ascribe inspiration to a process which is the result of a preliminary effort. Many have noticed that, after long and fruitless mental effort, the result for which they have been striving comes to them suddenly while they are thinking of something entirely different. The preliminary mental toil has borne its fruit subconsciously.

Cosmetics, short skirts and open-work waists have been banned by the school authorities of a Brooklyn school.

Human Life Needs Beauty.

Men cannot live by bread alone. The mind cannot develop on an exclusively scientific diet. If we sat on our spinning globe and studied only the physical laws that keep it going we should become either lunatics or machines. The lines of beauty in the form and decoration of a vase, and the studied harmony of tones and colors that stir the soul, as though they were musical sounds, are like to the inscriptions made on his dungeon walls by a life prisoner, who, with their aid, drives away madness and keeps his mind sweet."—Chicago American.

Some Fur Everywhere.

"There is hardly a farm," says one authority, "that will not produce at least fifty dollars worth of fur each season, especially at present prices. Trapping is a pleasant occupation for the farmer and his boys in the fall after the rush of work is ended and aside from the time used in setting and tending the traps the money derived from it is all clear profit!"

SUGGESTS A REMEDY

WILSON OUTLINES PLAN TO ALLEVIATE UNREST.

TELLS CONGRESS TO GET BUSY

Barely Mentions Peace Pact in Message to Lawmakers — Labor Freely Discussed.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson sent to the Sixty-sixth congress a message urging an extensive program of reconstruction legislation.

His message, a lengthy one, was devoted entirely to the great problems confronting the nation.

Legislation was recommended to curb bolshevism in America, reduce living costs, remove the grievances of labor, which are causing industrial troubles, aid farmers to produce bigger crops, simplify the system of taxation, built up during the war, control government expenditures by a budget system and care for the nation's soldiers and sailors who have left the service.

Though the president several times referred to the peace treaty and the league of nations he did not discuss the treaty stiuation. He will do so in a later message, and at the same time take up the railroad question, according to reliable information.

Much of the message was devoted to discussion of the labor problem. To solve it, the president said, congress "must now help in the difficult task of finding a method that will bring about a genuine democratization of industry based upon the full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare."

No better means of doing this can be found, the president declared, than by applying in legislation the principles set up in the labor section of the league of nations covenant. To go back to old standards of labor and wages is impossible, he said. Age-long antagonism between capital and labor must be ended, he declared, before real world stability can be accomplished. The president warned against anti-strike legislation and suggested establishment of a tribunal before which disputes by capital and labor can be taken for settlement.

Analysis of labor's complaint, the president told congress, shows it is based upon justice. Capital, too, he declared, has a right to an adequate return, and the government he warned, must never "play" capital and labor against each other.

Blame for the unrest in the country was placed partly upon the senate, for its failure to ratify the peace treaty.

He urged that the causes of unrest be sought and removed, and outlined them thus:

"The causes of this unrest, while various and complicated, are superficial, rather than deep-seated. Broadly, they arise from, or are connected with, the failure on the part of our government to arrive speedily at a just and permanent peace * * * * * from the transfusion of radical theories from seething European centers * * * from heartless profiteering * * * and lastly, from the machinations of malevolent agitators."

Stronger laws against anarchists should be enacted at once, he urged.

The president appealed again for enactment of the comprehensive program he proposed at the special session to lower living costs.

Wilson opened his recommendations with the hope that a budget system will be established, which will put the preparation of appropriation estimates under direction of the president, and provide for an audit system to determine whether the money has been economically spent.

Immediate necessity dictates simplification of the income and profits taxes, the president said. He warned that if income and profits tax rates are left too high they may prove destructive to business and not productive of revenues.

He also warned against a tariff too high for Europe's manufacturers.

Tariff legislation protecting the chemical and dye industries of this country against German efforts to regain the market is, however, necessary, the president said.

Wilson repeated his request for legislation to provide farms for soldiers. He recommended against legislation making available for them the cut over lands and unused lands in the west.

Encourage the farmers, the president urged, and make rural life more attractive as a means of stimulating food production. He included recommendations for developing the forest resources and continuation of the building of good roads.

Glass Presents Estimates.

Washington.—The record $1,000,000,000 congresses of ordinary peace times faded into the past when Secretary Glass, presenting the annual estimates, proposed appropriations of practically $5,000,000,000 for conducting the peace time activities of the government during the fiscal year 1921.

According to these figures, it will cost more than fivetimes as much to conduct the peace time affairs of government as it did in the year immediately preceding the war.

FUEL SUPPLY RESTRICTED

Government Inaugurates Drastic Regulations As Result of Coal Strike—Industrial Paralysis Threatens.

Washington, D. C.—Wartime restrictions on the nation's use of coal, more stringent even than those applied during the war, was ordered into effect to stave off a fuel famine.

Moved by reports of diminishing coal stocks and growing danger of distress in numerous sections, the government sought no compromise with striking mine workers whose walkout forced the emergency, but asked for national determination to endure privation and discomfort until coal mining was resumed on its terms.

Fuel Administrator Garfield, acting in conjunction with the railroad administration, gave notice that hereafter only the essential consumers included in the first five classes of the war priority list would be supplied with coal, and asked the help of all state and municipal authorities to make rationing effective.

The order which made national those restrictions already put into local effect by regional coal committees where the pinch of fuel shortage has been felt, cuts off supplies from all but transportation agencies, which includes inland and coastwise shipping as well as railroads, federal and local government institutions and establishments, including concerns working on government contracts; public utilities, including newspapers and retail dealers. Railroad administration officials conceded that it meant widespread cessation of industrial operations.

Industry Is Curtailed.

Chicago, Ill.—The end of the fifth week of the strike in the bituminous mines of the country saw miners' leaders haled into court on contempt charges, a grand jury called for operators and miners suspected of violating the Lever fuel control law, imposition of drastic orders curtailing passenger service on railroads, curtailment of business in hundreds of cities and the ranks of the strikers apparently unbroken.

In many states a number of state executives took action to aid in relieving the acute shortage.

Governor Gardner of Missouri announced the seizure by the state of fifteen mines in that state. Mining with volunteers under troop protection similar to the system used in Kansas will be undertaken.

Denver adopted drastic restrictions on business and industry similar to those ordered in Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, Des Moines and many other middle west cities.

While the larger mining corporations announced at Washington that they had agreed to pay the miners slightly more than the 14 per cent wage advance promulgated by Fuel Administrator Garfield, the operators were said to be awaiting the result of the government's legal action at Indianapolis.

The flow of appeals to the re-established fuel administration at Washington showed great alarm over the situation, Middle western territory, where the shortage has become acute, through representatives in congress demanded the eastern seaboard and New England be compelled to share surplus supplies and live up to restrictions on power and light consumption as drastic as those effective in the west.

GOVERNOR APPEALS.

Nebraska Executive Takes Action in Coal Strike Situation.

Lincoln, Neb. — Governor McKelvie issued a proclamation calling for volunteers to work in coal mines in states from which Nebraska gets its fuel supply.

The governor's proclamation said all volunteers should register with county clerks for duty in Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Colorado and Wyoming.

WORKERS GIVEN RAISE.

Stock Yards Employes Granted Wage Increase By Arbitrator.

Chicago, Ill.—Employes of packing house firms were granted increases in wages aggregating $12,000,000 a year, in an award made by Federal Judge Samuel Alschuler, arbitrator. One hundred and twenty-five thousand stock yards workers in Chicago, Kansas City, Omaha, Lincoln, Forth Worth, St. Paul, East St. Louis and Sioux City are affected by the award, which is retroactive from September 1, 1919.

Pershing Starts Tour.

Washington, D. C.—General Pershing left Washington last week on an inspection tour of the military resources of the country. He will inspect about 100 army camps in the country and will spend the Christmas and New Year holidays at Lincoln, Neb., with his two sisters and his son, Warren.

Old St. Louis Paper Suspends.

St. Louis, Mo.—The St. Louis Republic has been purchased by the Globe-Democrat, and the Republic has suspended publication. The Republic was one of the oldest papers in the United States and the first to be published west of the Mississippi river.

Highjackers at Sioux Falls.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—A man giving his name as Vern Marshall, and his confederates are said to have stolen $7,500 worth of liquor from Sioux Falls basements during the last few weeks.

President Improving.

Washington.—President Wilson is getting better and his progress is causing satisfaction, Rear Admiral Grayson, the president's physician, states, adding that, from his standpoint, everything was going fine with the president.

6,000 Acres in Thunder Mountain Region of Idaho Set Apart.

LONG BEEN A MENACE

ring Forest Fires Have Endangered Adjoining Portions of National Forests—Great Tract Is Difficult of Access.

ared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

shington, D. C.—In accord with unanimous sentiment in Idaho response to considerations vitalecting adjoining national forests, ess has set apart 1,116,000 acres ed in Idaho known as Thunder ain region, as national forest This great tract, difficult of acand having not over 1 per cent area suitable for agriculture, has ars been the scene of destructive and devastation due to overgrazIt is now to be added to the Paynational forest which adjoins it e south and west, and the Idaho nal forest which adjoins it on the and west. The area lies approxly 100 miles northeast of Boise. se uncontrolled, it has been a reg menace to the adjoining naforests by reason of fires that gained great headway in its vast trolled regions.

Swept by Forest Fires.

t has taken place in the Thun Mountain region, according to offiof the forest service, United es department of agriculture, is al of what would have taken place ost of the national forests had areas not been protected. Three ired thousand acres, or approxiely one-third of the area, has been by forest fires in the past twelve s, destroying approximately 700,000 feet of timber. The mining reres, after being superficially exed by miners with scant equipt, have remained practically unloped. Much of the wild life has ruthlessly exterminated, and the ing lands have been destroyed by dic herds. The number of sheep h have been grazing without reion or regulation during the past total nearly 300,000, whereas a estimate of the "carrying capaciof the entire country has been ed at 75,000 to 10,000 head of ere are no towns or villages in the e region. The log buildings of first settlement on Monumental still stand—vacant, specter-like nders of the boom days of many s ago. Hundreds of claims which were located during the rush of 1901 have been abandoned. Some high-grade ores have been found, and the general belief is that the region contains an abundance of low-grade ore, but its commercial use has not been possible because of inadequate transportation facilities. Control of the area as National Forest land, once opposed because it was feared that it might retard mine development, is now seen to be a practical step toward proper use of the mining resources; as well as conservative utilization of grazing facilities.

Travel Is Difficult.

At present the roads, trails, and bridges are in a sad state of disrepair, making travel over them on foot or by horseback impossible. One of the important undertakings of the forest service, now that the tract has been added to adjoining national forests, will be to supply the area with improved lines of travel.

A large and important watershed is included in this area, which is estimated to supply at least 1,000 second-feet of water to the Columbia river at low-water periods. It is roughly estimated that more than 100,000 horsepower could be generated from waters rising in the area. The region includes no natural wonders, large lakes or features of special scenic interest. Deer and trout are plentiful, and there are said to be a few wild sheep and goats.

It is said to be the first window in which a flying machine has been a feature of a church design.

Mishap to Auto Stirs All Slovania

So'dier Cuts Telegraph to Make Repairs and Results Are Astonishing.

HAS DIPLOMATS WORRIED

Ties Up Railroad Traffic and Results In Congestion That Takes Month to Straighten Out—Week to Restore Wires.

Szabadka, Slavonia.—When a wheezing little automobile of American make, driven by a Serbian soldier, broke down on a country road 40 miles from here, it started an international tangle which rolled up until it had the diplomats of four countries worried.

Here are some of the things that began to happen:

"Three hundred cars of French merchandise bound for Roumania piled up on the four switches of the railroad yards here and congested things until not a wheel could move.

A Red Cross supply train of 30 cars, bound for Bucharest, came up behind the French trains and completed the tieup of communications.

Ten Americans were marooned for nine days on board the Red Cross train.

Sends Train to Investigate.

Roumanian merchants who were relying on the prompt delivery of the French goods sent a special train from Bucharest to investigate the delay.

Szabadka, an important town on the frontier between Hungary and Serbia, was cut off from all communication with the outside world.

The Serbian soldier who was the innocent cause of all this trouble was driving his car merrily northward one day when the steering gear went wrong. He stopped, found the cause of the difficulty and decided that he needed a piece of stout wire to repair the damage. He reached up to the long-hanging, single-wire telegraph line and cut off a generous section. Having fixed his car, he drove blithely on. The wire gave out presently and he renewed it twice, thrice, four or five times, from the telegraph line beside the road.

Meanwhile the trains of French merchandise had begun arriving at Szabadka. Official sanction was necessary for the cars to proceed. The frontier officials framed the proper sort of telegram, and it was duly countersigned and presented to the operator.

Trains Congest Yards.

He reported that the wire was "not working." So the frontier officials decided to wait until it began to work. They waited two days, while more and more trains drew into the congested yards. Szabadka was cut off from wire communication. Mails go only once a week, and then only if trains are running.

The telegraph officials finally decided to send out a line-repairing party. The party returned after another day's delay, with the announcement that so many breaks had been found their supply of spare wire had given out.

Meanwhile, congestion in the yards increased and the appeals from the French convoyers, the American convoyers and the Roumanian merchants became more urgent. It was a full week, however, before the wires had finally been restored and the official vises obtained. By that time the blockade had become so complicated that it will probably take a month to put Szabadka back on a normal basis.

FACE MUCH RED TAPE

Americans Find Travel in Germany Is Difficult.

Absence of Official American Representation in Berlin Causes Embarrassment.

Berlin.—Lack of American official representation in Berlin is causing American travelers considerable embarrassment.

The Spanish embassy representing American interests can sometimes help the traveler, but more often not. It has too much business to handle. And red tape unwinds slowly in Germany.

As a result of this situation Americans coming here are complaining considerably of the situation.

England and France are liberally represented on missions here. America has none. And its interests have to be conserved mainly by the American legations in The Hague and Copenhagen.

Two stranded American sailors reached town recently, expecting passports here. They were penniless but expected a lift. They couldn't get a passport right away; maybe by waiting long enough they might have had one through the Spanish embassy. Probably they passed the borders somehow "on their own;" it can be done, but it's unpleasant.

And at the same time an American business man arrived with a perfectly good pass, but found he needed to travel to Czechoslovakia to complete an important deal. Could he get his pass amended here? No, he had to travel to Copenhagen and run the risk of losing his business deal through the delay.

These are only sample cases. Daily Americans with difficulties as bad as or worse than those above cited are here, and find that the U. S. A. isn't among those present.

EVERY FARMER OWES HIMSELF DUTY OF STUDYING NEW BULLETINS ON FARMING

A Typical Chimney-Corner College of Agriculture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The poets, when they got going on the calendar, usually ran to spring and summer months, ending at about "knee deep in June." Thomas Hood did succeed in getting as far as November, but it wasn't a good poem. Oh, it was a clever piece of craftsmanship, and all that, but unjust. It was all negatives—"No morn, no noon, no other time of day; no sun, no moon, no t'other side the way"—some such libelous stuff as that about a perfectly gorgeous month. But they didn't write even negative eulogies of December. Poe mentioned it, along with "dying ember," "midnight dreary," and such like gobs of gloom. Just the same, December might be made the subject of a very excellent poem. Indeed, with a verse here and a verse there, it may almost be said that the United States department of agriculture has written a great poem on it—one of the didactic kind that, in addition to adorning the tale, points a moral, entitled to be considered poetry because truth is beauty, and beauty is poetry. The theme of the thing must be said to be that December is such a tremendously important month to the farmer.

December Important Farm Month.

Now, having pulled up long enough to climb over a period and walk around the nook of a paragraph—consider. Of course, December has not been generally considered an important month in agriculture. On the contrary, it has been a very much neglected month, almost a month ignored. None the less, it does come very close to being the most important month in the year for the farmer. It is a month of such tremendous potentiality, a month whose usefulness may be so spread out over the other 11.

There is no end of things that should be done in December besides getting ready for Christmas. That, to borrow a phrase from a very old charge on duty, "is not on any account to be neglected," but it is due to be coordinated.

You have read in the old pioneer stories how the boys had to work in the clearing all summer, started to school in the winter. That ought to be true still for every farmer, no matter how old or young he is. December should mark the beginning of the session in his school. His schoolhouse may very well be in his own chimney corner. He has not much time to read all spring, summer, and fall. Now, he does begin to have a little leisure—not that he has any time to loaf, but he has his heels on the ground. During the year there have been printed a considerable number of good textbooks on farming. Specialists of the United States department of agriculture and other specialists at the state agricultural college have embodied in bulletins the result of long and patient labor on various things pertaining to farming, have put in type facts that will mean dollars to the farmer who learns them and puts them into practice.

Pupils Study What They Like.

Of course, this chimney-corner school of agriculture allows its students a lot of leeway. The curriculum is largely elective. The farmer may study this and leave the other alone, as his interests may dictate. But there will be enough bulletins that are of interest to him to make a pretty full course of study. If he has neglected his education at all and isn't "up" to his grade," there may be a great deal more than he can handle in one winter. The United States department of agriculture has been publishing bulletins for a great many years. There are more than a thousand farmers' bulletins now on the list, and every one of them discusses something that means money to a large class of farmers. Many of the subjects have been supplemented and localized by state agencies—the agricultural college or the state department of agriculture. There is absolutely no reason why any farmer may not have all the scientific information that exists on all phases of agriculture that mean anything in his particular operation. All he has to do is to go to school to himself by his own fireside. If he needs tutoring, there is the county agent whom he can consult when he goes to town on Saturday—or he might possibly have the agent out to supper and a session by the fireside some night.

The United States department of agriculture maintains printed lists of its various publications, arranged by subjects. Any farmer—or any city dweller or suburbanite who is interested in chickens or a garden or any of the things that pertain to farming—can have a copy merely by writing for it. For the average farmer it is worth spending an evening over, reading the titles and checking the ones he is interested in. Then he can mail this checked list to the department of agriculture, and the bulletins checked will be sent to him without charge. There are a few bulletins the supply of which has become depleted and copies are no longer given away, but they may be bought at a very low price from the superintendent of documents at Washington. The procedure is explained on the list that is furnished by the department of agriculture.

Chimney-Corner College Co-educational

Every farmer owes it to himself and his family to find a little time to go to school every winter—to read half a dozen, or a dozen, or 20 bulletins that will help him make better crops, to keep his live stock in better condition with less feed, to carry on his operations with less exhausting strain on himself.

It should be mentioned, too, that this chimney-corner college of agriculture is co-educational. A very large proportion of the bulletins are devoted to household subjects. They contain information that will enable the farmer's wife better to carry her half of the load—to feed the family better with less work, to realize more for the portion of the farm output that comes under her direction, to have the minimum of inconvenience in the house and to get the maximum of comfort out of it—a thousand things that will help along in making farm life pleasant and profitable.

MAKE PROPER STUDY OF RABBIT PROBLEM

Attractive Possibilities Are Quite Often Misleading.

Before Starting on Enterprise It Is Advisable to Consider How Animals Can Be Disposed of to Best Advantage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The attractive, not to say startling, mathematical calculations which are sometimes made in estimating breeding possibilities of rabbits not infrequently have led persons to engage in rabbit raising without proper study of the problem. Before starting on this enterprise, it is advisable also for one to consider well how such rabbits as can be raised may be disposed of. In the vicinity of towns where there are restaurants, hotels and boarding houses, arrangements can usually be made to furnish market men or landlords a regular number of rabbits weekly. But one should not begin raising rabbits on a large scale in a locality where people are unaccustomed to eating them. No breeder can expect to make a profit until he has developed a market. He can demonstrate the desirability of the meat of young rabbits to his neighbors and sometimes to other agencies. If a breeder is not able to carry out an educational campaign singly, he should endeavor to organize with others in such an undertaking. By combining they can save cost in advertising and stabilize their output.

Rabbits of recognized breeds conforming in size, build and color to accepted standards are always in demand for breeding stock. Those born of registered parents are preferred and are spoken of as "pedigreed." They can be registered if the owner so desires. The cost of keeping pedigreed or registered stock is no more than that of ordinary stock and the returns are considerably greater. Such stock can usually be disposed of by advertising in poultry and pet journals, if there is not sufficient home demand. Rabbits for meat are sold at greater profit when from two to four months of age. Ordinarily they are shipped to market alive in crates, like poultry.

LIVE STOCK

LESS HOG LOSS BY CHOLERA

Lowest Number of Animals Lost in History of Live Stock Industry of Country.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

According to records of the United States department of agriculture for the 13 months from April 1, 1918, to April 30, 1919, hog cholera killed 2,815,004 hogs, valued at $62,042,688.16, in the United States. This is the lowest loss by numbers for a similar period in the live stock history of the United States, but on account of the high price of hogs the monetary loss was heavy. For example, during the year ending March 31, 1913, hogs numbering 6,064,470 and worth $58,833,653 died from cholera, while the next year the disease took 6,304,320 hogs worth $67,695,461.

Department experiments show that timeliness in vaccinating hogs against cholera is all-important. When exposed hogs were vaccinated, while still apparently healthy, losses amounted to only 4 per cent, but when vaccination was deferred until the animals showed external signs of sickness losses averaged nearly 29 per cent. This shows that the man who puts off the preventive treatment until his hogs are sick with cholera stands only about one chance in seven of preventing fatal results. It is important, also, to maintain hog yards and barns in clean and sanitary condition.

Cholera Control Means an Increased Pork Production.

MEAT PRODUCTION IS BEHIND

Consumption Is Increasing, However, Points Out Animal Husbandry Head of Kansas.

Meat production has not kept pace with the growth in population in the United States, according to Dr. C. W. McCampbell, head of the animal husbandry department, Kansas State Agricultural college.

"In 1900 there were 660 head of cattle in the country for every 1,000 persons," he said. "This has now been reduced to 350 head.

"The figures for hogs and sheep show a similar reduction. In nine years hogs have dropped from 800 to 600 head for each thousand persons, and sheep from 880 to 450 head."

Doctor McCampbell said the meat consumption of the country is increasing.

"The consumer must look for high prices from now on," he said. "The capacity of the ranges is decreasing, and any increase in the supply of beef must come from the farm, where the expense of production is much greater than on the range."

MORE LIVE STOCK DEMANDED

It Means Less Marketing of Crops and Less Expense to Producer —Animals Consume Feed.

More live stock means less marketing of crops and less expense to those who produce the crops. Animals consume the feed at minimum prices and produce animal products — milk, cream, beef, pork, mutton, wool and other articles—at prevailing prices for finished products.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Keep more sheep.

* * *

Hogs and alfalfa seem to have been made for each other.

* * *

For the best bacon types of hogs, the Yorkshire and Berkshire are the most desirable.

* * *

Of all meats, it may be that of the hog will eventually prove to be the most indispensable.

* * *

Breeders of heavy horses have a great outlook, if they breed the kind the market demands.

The DAIRY

MILK AND CREAM CONTESTS

Producers and Dealers Enter Novel Contest to Improve Quality to City Consumers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Friendly rivalry among milk producers and dealers is an important feature in the improvement of the milk supplies of cities, says Department Circular 53, "Milk and Cream Contests." The two kinds of contests—the one in which the dairymen prepare their own samples of milk or cream especially for the contest and the one in which samples are collected on the street without previous notification to the producers—are discussed in detail. The discussion includes the method of preparing milk and cream for entry in contests, the method of scoring on cards prepared by the dairy division of the bureau of animal industry, shipping and handling at destination, laboratory equipment for conducting contests, methods of analyzing and testing, and publicity methods in connection with milk and cream contests.

Measuring Milk With a Glass Tube Onto a Sterile Plate, Preparatory to Making a Bacteria Examination in a Milk and Cream Contest—This Step Is Called "Plating."

Copies of the circular may be had free by interested persons on application to the division of publications, department of agriculture.

RAFFLE OF PUREBRED CALVES

Novel Idea Introduced in Wisconsin County to Promote the Cause of Better Sires.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A novel form of raffle has been employed in Lincoln county, Wisconsin, by the members of a newly organized Holstein cattle association to promote the cause of better sires. With the profit the association derived from the sale of 32 head of cattle which it brought in from the southern part of the state, and from the sale of several other animals secured locally, the association bought eight purebred bull calves. The method by which these calves were distributed resembled a raffle. However, no fee was exacted of "chance" takers, but instead all were required to join the association. In every instance the bull went to men who had not had purebred bulls previously or who had manifested little interest in the purebred stock movement.

ECONOMY IN FUEL FOR DAIRY

Specialists Advise That All Waste Steam Be Utilized During the Current Winter.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Many factory operations of the dairy industry require the use of heat, although they demand little power. As exhaust steam contains about 90 per cent of its original heat, it can be advantageously used in pasteurizing milk and cream, and in sterilizing dairy equipment in the average commercial plant, according to specialists. They advise that all dairy factory men utilize this waste steam during the current winter, when fuel may be scarce and high in price. Information on how to use steam effectively will be furnished free of charge when request is made to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

WATER FOR COWS IN WINTER

If Highest Production Is to Be Maintained Drinking Water Must Be Warmed.

Cows frequently refuse to drink the water in an icy trough. A cow must be thirsty, indeed, before she will fill herself with freezing water. It is necessary, in view of the fact that milk contains about 87 per cent water, to warm the drinking water for dairy cows if highest possible production is to be maintained. Unless the cow drinks a sufficient quantity of water her milk production will diminish, and she will not drink enough unless it is warm. Suitable shelter from cold rains and raw winds is another comfort which the cow will repay in milk.

DON'T WHIP!

Stop Lashing Your Bowels with Harsh Cathartics but take "Cascarets."

Everyone must occasionally give the bowels some regular help or else suffer from constipation, bilious attacks, stomach disorders, and sick headache. But do not whip the bowels into activity with harsh cathartics.

What the liver and bowels need is a gentle and natural tonic, one that can constantly be used without harm. The gentlest liver and bowel tonic is "Cascarets." They put the liver to work and cleanse the colon and bowels of all waste, toxins and poisons without griping—they never sicken or inconvenience you like Calomel, Salts, Oil, or Purgatives.

Twenty-five million boxes of Cascarets are sold each year. They work while you sleep. Cascarets cost so little too.—Adv.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

A Brother's Present

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"THERE was once," said Daddy, "a boy whose name was Worthington, and for short they called him Worthy.

"He had a sister whom he called Minnie, and it is a story of these two I want to tell you this evening."

Nick and Nancy looked very much pleased. They loved to hear about other children, especially of boys and girls about their own ages.

"Worthington was unlike some brothers, but he was like you in that way Nick. He liked to play with his sister. His sister liked, too, to play with him. He never frightened her, but he showed her how to do things, and she was never afraid when she was with him. In the fall he took her for rides in her express cart, and he made a high seat in the cart for her when he took her for slower and more stylish rides.

"He taught her to climb trees and to swim and to do tricks on the trapeze. And she, too, used to play in the snowball fights, back in the forts which he and the other boys would make.

"Well, it was summer, and Worthington was not going to school. He thought and he thought and he thought, and finally he said:

More Stylish Rides.

"'I wonder if it couldn't be done. I will try anyway.' He worked out the whole scheme in his head, and the next day he went to his aunt who owned a garden, and he said:

"'Auntie, I have been thinking about something.'

"'Yes,' she said, 'what have you been thinking about, Bubby?' For she had always called him that—ever since he had been a small boy and she had written a funny little poem for one of his birthdays where she wrote Bubby to make it rhyme with chubby.

"'I think Minnie is old enough to ride a bicycle now. I would like to give her one.'

"'A bicycle!' exclaimed their aunt. 'Why don't you suggest giving her an automobile or a motorboat with a sleeping cabin? How could you ever manage it, Bubby?'

"She hadn't realized that he had thought it all out, and she stopped to hear what he had to say, for he usually had extremely sensible things to say.

"'It wouldn't really be so awfully expensive, auntie, and I'd love to do it so. I would like to give it to her for Christmas. I couldn't do it before I don't believe, and besides she could look at it all winter and think of what fun it was going to be in the summer. I have a bicycle mother and daddy gave me—and I do wish Minnie could have one, too.'

"'How do you think you could buy it?' Auntie asked again. She felt pretty sure by that time that he might be able to manage it, but she wondered how.

"'Well, this summer,' said Worthy, 'I could hoe the beans in your garden, and I could weed the garden paths. I could water the flowers every night, and do all the weeding, in fact. You wouldn't need to have a man do the work, except one day a week to do the heavy things.

"I Could Work in the Garden."

"'I could work in the garden every morning and every evening just before supper. It would be fun! Then I could do all your errands and later I could rake the leaves and build the bonfires. I wouldn't tell Minnie that I was getting—well—I hoped—perhaps you'd pay me half of what you might pay a man.

"'I could carry the wood from the woodhouse into the dining room woodbox every morning, before school when the fall comes, and then with a little bit I have in the savings bank I could get Minnie, my precious little sister, a bicycle. I heard mother and daddy talking the other day about how they'd like to get one for her, but they thought maybe they'd better wait another year or two, and I know it will be a jolly surprise to both of them, as well as to sister, when they see it.'"

"'Indeed, I will help you do it,' Auntie said. 'But you will get just the same as a man would get for the work you will do. And Minnie will talk to you and sometimes help you so it won't be so hard.'

"'I don't care how hard it is,' said Worthy, 'for I would like it to be a little bit hard. Then I would know I were giving something to her.'

"And when Christmas came Worthy gave his little sister a bicycle. And this," said Daddy, "is a true story."

Christmas Morning

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"CHRISTMAS comes but once a year, Christmas comes but once a year," shouted the children as they hurried down stairs on Christmas morning. Their daddy and mother followed and they sang too,

"Christmas comes but once a year!"

From the stairs they could see the library with the fire just started. There was a big tree all trimmed! And under and around it there were just the things they all had been waiting for, and a lot of other things they had never expected.

Oh, how beautiful it was. It looked to the children as if it couldn't be real and it seemed to them as if they must be dreaming—as if all this wonderful room, filled with presents and stockings and everything else that was fine, could not be real after all.

But they had thought this way on other Christmas days and they had not been dreaming on other Christmas mornings. To be sure they dreamed of Christmas before Christmas came but they didn't dream of anything nearly so wonderful as Christmas always was.

There were four children. Lucy and Betty and Robbie and Billy. There, in the center of the library, was the big tree. It was covered with candles and though it was daylight the candles were lighted and the shades pulled down so as to make the tree look its very best. And too, it wasn't so very bright at that hour, for they were always up very, very early on Christmas morning.

They began to see the things on the tree they had asked Santa Claus for, and then they looked to see if he had taken the notes they had written for him wishing him a Merry Christmas.

Sure enough! He had taken them. They wondered if he had been pleased and they hoped very much that he had.

All these thoughts went through their minds very quickly and then they began to say, "Ah," and "Oh," and "Isn't it wonderful," and "Look!"

"Well," said their daddy, "let us sit down and look at all our presents."

They sat down on the floor. And each one took a stocking which had been hanging in front of the mantel piece. Every stocking was well filled. And each stocking stuck out queerly so that no one could guess what was in it.

What a guessing match there was before they emptied the stockings—just to keep the surprise a little longer, for they had an idea that Santa Claus wanted them to be as surprised as possible. And when they did guess what was in some of the stockings it was such fun!

After the stockings had been looked at and the oranges and apples had rolled out of the toes, the presents were taken from the tree.

The candy canes and candy animals and the decorations were kept on, for the candy would be eaten later on and the decorations would be kept through the Christmas season.

There were many presents around the foot of the tree. And now they knew that they weren't really dreaming. They were really, really alive, and this was really, really Christmas.

Everything about it was real and their presents were real and they were wide awake and beginning to feel hungry, for they hadn't waited to have breakfast first. They ate Santa's wonderful oranges and mother said to daddy:

"Dear me, I wish I could find big juicy oranges like Santa Claus does. He's a better shopper than I am!"

And their daddy laughed and said, "He's a smart old fellow. It's hard to get ahead of him. And even if we can't find such good oranges we get them every year through his goodness!"

"He's the dearest soul in all the world," said Lucy, "except the family."

"He's wonderful," said Betty, "and oh, my dollie is so adorable. He gave me just the kind I asked for."

"He's a wonder," said Robbie and Billie together, and then everyone took his or her orange and paraded into the dining-room, singing once more,

"Christmas comes but once a year!"

The Birds' Christmas

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"CHIRP," said one little bird, and another bird sang a song.

It was very, very cold, and the birds were having a hard time to keep warm. Somehow, too, they felt the cold more when they were hungry. They hadn't had such very good luck that day or the day before. It had snowed a great deal during the last few days and getting enough to eat had been no easy matter.

Near by they saw a white house. There was a garden around it; a nice big garden and just the place for birds in the summer time.

But these birds were here in the winter time, too, and they were given bread crumbs and suet all winter long. When snow covered the suet it was brushed off for them.

It was all very delightful. The last few days, however, had seemed to be very busy ones in the white house. The birds could see that greens were being hung everywhere, over the pictures, book cases and mirrors, and wreaths were put in all the windows. Preparations were evidently being made for some unusual event.

There seemed to be no end to the amount of greens. Some were wound to look like long ropes and great branches were put behind large pictures. The house was gay indeed with fires, which were burning in all the fireplaces.

Much wood was carried in, and the birds thought how warm the people inside must be, and how cold it was outside. They shivered and wished they had gone South after all.

Then a little tree was carried in, and one of the birds that was near the dining room told the others that the tree was put on the dining room table. Another medium sized tree was in the big room, where most of the excitement seemed to be going on. Then they hung pretty shiny and shimmering things on the tree and packages of all sizes and description under it.

Had their friends forgotten them? It could not be possible! And yet—yet—they hadn't had any suet in the last day or so, and they had always been supplied with it before. They had stayed North because these people loved birds so.

They knew that they loved birds because they were good to the little feathered people. But the last day or so—well, it was all very surprising.

The birds were just going to sleep, just about to tuck their heads under their wings, when they saw more people coming to the house, people with suitcases and bags. There seemed to be great excitement and everybody seemed to be smiling.

"Merry Christmas, Birdies," she said.

It was very hard to be a little bird, the birds thought, and not to feel like smiling.

But at last they went to sleep.

"I don't feel like chirping today," said one of them, early the next morning. "I don't feel very happy that my friends in the white house have forgotten about me."

"Oh, cheer up, something must have happened," said another little bird. "I still can't believe it possible that they have forgotten us. But we did have a bad day or so, it is true. So cold, and a little hungry."

"Well, I'll chirp," said the first bird. And all the birds began to chirp and Mr. Sun rose up in a bright red robe and said:

"It's Christmas morning, birdlings; how do you like my handsome robe? I'm all dressed up for the occasion."

But just then a lady came out of the big house, the lady who was the special friend of the birds.

"Merry, merry Christmas, birdies," she said. "I had almost forgotten about you. All the children are home for the Christmas holidays and there has been great excitement. We've been decorating and having everything look gay inside.

"Oh, I didn't mean to forget you, birdies. I feel so bad."

They were given fresh suet and nice bread crumbs, and some cake crumbs, too.

"Merry, merry Christmas," said the lady.

"Merry, merry Christmas," chirped the birdies, so the lady said, but they were really thanking her, and in their little hearts felt so glad that the one they had trusted and loved had not failed them!

A Christmas "Burglary"

By SAIDEE ESTELLE BALCOM

(Copyright.)

THE night-watchman at Plympton, possessed of a due sense of his importance, was called "Sergeant" Moore. He had become aware that the distinctive title was one in general vogue with metropolitan police systems and he was proud of the designation.

The day preceding Christmas was always one looked forward to by the doughty sergeant, for it was upon that occasion that his conscience allowed him to accept little marks of approbation.

"Hey, there, sergeant!" generally prefaced the bestowal of something in the shape of a gift.

"It's duty I have to attend to all night long," he told his wife. "They say there's a regular band of burglars on the move."

Now two problems of fate were to work out a strange series of circumstances, in the Christmas eve events appertaining to the redoubtable sergeant. The first was that the little town jail had burned down the week previous. The second was that a new family had moved to town early in December, comprising the Waynes—father, mother, a charming daughter of seventeen and three young children. As Moore passed their place he noted that it was all dark, the family probably absent at some local entertainment, and he caught the echo of a sound resembling the tipping over of a piece of furniture. Then from an open window a form protruded.

"Burglars!" muttered the sergeant, and made a dash for the presumable despoiler.

"Hold on!" spoke the latter excitedly. "It's all right."

"Oh, is it?" purred Moore derisively.

"What's that?" and he made a grab at the protruding pocket of the young man.

"If you'll allow me to explain," began the latter. "I know the people who live here."

"Oh, yes, very particular friends! Cordially invited you to break into the house at any hour of the night! And this—a new muffler and a pair of gloves. Say, you come with me," and the sergeant marched his captive from the spot.

"If you'll only let me explain," pleaded the young man, but Moore was deaf, blind to all but duty. Fifteen minutes later the captive found himself locked into a stone cellar, and the sergeant handed its key to his wife, saying:

"You might pass in a jug of water and a plate of bread to my catch through the window; it's got no sash to it. I'll drop around again soon."

The young man in retirement was pacing about in the dark and anathematizing his officious captor when Mrs. Moore timidly approached the window.

"Here's some water and a little food," she said, "so you won't suffer," and just as she passed the things in she uttered a shriek and crouched down trembling. Two men had suddenly appeared, real burglars this time.

"Oh, sir!" whispered the woman through the cellar window, "they may kill the children! And then there's all Tim's half yearly pay in the bureau! Please help me. Here's the key to the cellar door," and something tinkled on the floor. Something else then transpired. The released captive located and knocked down and tied hand and foot the prowler within the house. Then coming unawares upon the armed bandit outside he toppled him over, rendered him helpless, and seemed to enjoy the excitement of it all.

"I am Roscoe Walden and I am engaged to Ethel Wayne," he explained an hour later to the bewildered sergeant, after the latter had transferred the two criminals to limbo. "This is the first time I have visited their new home, and I got in surreptitiously to place a present on the Christmas tree as a surprise to my lady love. I don't want the Waynes to know I am in Plympton until after she finds it."

There was a rare spice of adventurous excitement for pretty Ethel in her devoted lover's unique experience when he recited the same the next morning. And meantime Sergeant Moore was gaining popularity and the community's good will by detailing his heroic act which had signalized Christmas eve in the apprehension of two desperate criminals who, but for him, might have had the entire town at their mercy.

ROSY-cheeked schoolboy on his new red sled sped down the long snow-clad hill. A dozen gayly chattering girls tripped towards the lightly frozen pond with their skates. A farmer came into view with a wagon load of newly cut Christmas trees. Yuletide cheer was effervescing, but there was no responsive echo of its fervor in the hearts of John Lane and Martin Freer.

"I'm in accord with you completely," the latter was saying. "My son, Sidney, has the chance of his life to enter a law career in the city. Since he fell in love with your half niece and ward, Edna, he seems to have lost all ambition of making his way outside of winning her."

"A foolish fancy," declared John Lane. "Edna is too young to think of marrying."

"We are going to send Edna away to a private boarding school after the holidays," he continued, "and that will probably end the affair."

Meantime Edna Merrill pined in her prisonlike solitude and Sidney sought to devise a way to get word to her.

At their last meeting he had said, "no matter what comes, they shall not part us."

"They are going to send both of us away, widely apart," mourned Edna. "Oh, don't let them do it!" and Sidney replied, "Have you the faith to believe in me, to act with me without question if I find a way to defeat two old men, who have forgotten what love means?"

"I have given you my heart solely and trustingly," answered Edna stanchly.

"Then you shall hear from me when I have matured all my plans," promised Sidney.

There was a certain solace for Sidney in climbing the high garden wall at the rear of the Lane grounds and gazing up at the window of the room that held his heart's treasure. He had a note written detailing his plans and hopes, and he had almost despaired of delivering it, when, the afternoon before Christmas, he observed that the window was open.

Sidney added a few lines to the note, gathered up a handful of snow, enclosed the note in the white sphere, aimed, let fly and it passed through the open window.

The note had suggested the elopment he and Edna had previously discussed. He had added a line, "I will be in the lane at eight o'clock. Don't fail me."

There was a light in that upper window, now closed, when Sidney returned, and the lamp was set in a peculiar way. Across the frosted inside of a pane two words had been scratched, reading: "At eight."

A few minutes later the light was extinguished and a speeding figure crossed the garden, unlocked a rear door in the wall and the lovers were united.

"Quick," spoke Sidney. "It is a question of getting to a friend of mine, a clergyman at Amherst."

He clasped Edna's arm and they hurried down the lane.

The lane the fugitives were now in was deep with snow. As they neared a large barn within which showed a light Sidney drew Edna through its open door.

"We must hide for a spell," he said, and, as quite breathless, they entered the great rambling structure, they stared in amazement at a scene strange and striking.

In its center was what looked like an old circus chariot. There was gilt and holly and evergreen trimming in profusion. Four horses were attached and upon a sort of throne in the center was seated a gorgeously attired Santa Claus.

"We'll better start," spoke one of the men, "if we want to get to Amherst before everybody is abed," and catching sight of a sign on the chariot Sidney was made aware of the fact that to advertise a new soap this modern publicity van was touring the district, giving away samples as holiday presents.

"Step into that low space at the back," he whispered to Edna. "We shall be safe there."

When the unique Santa Claus vehicle arrived at the edge of Amherst, the fluttering lovers left it unnoticed. There was a hurried walk to the home of a clergyman.

The same telegram was sent by the happy bride and bridegroom to John Lane and Martin Freer. It read:

"Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Freer wish their loving friends a Merry, Merry Christmas."

COAL STRIKE ENDED

STRIKERS' LEADERS ACCEPT WILSON'S 14 PER CENT INCREASE AND COMMISSION OFFER.

MEN TOLD TO OPEN MINES

Statement Issued by Acting President Lewis Declares President's Proposal Contained the Only Definite, Concrete and Practical Method of Settlement.

Indianapolis, Dec. 11.—The strike of 400,000 bituminous coal miners of the country was settled here when the general committee of the United Mine Workers of America agreed to accept the plan offered by President Wilson.

Acting President Lewis of the United Mine Workers announced that telegraphic orders would immediately be sent to the 4,000 miners' locals throughout the country, instructing the miners to return to work at once. An official order carrying the signatures of the miners' officials will follow the telegraphic instructions.

A reconvened convention of the officials of the various miners' unions throughout the country will be called in Indianapolis as soon as the work has been fully resumed in the mines, Mr. Lewis announced, during which a full and complete explanation of the action of the officials in settling the strike will be made.

Statement by Lewis.

Following is the announcement of the settlement of the coal strike made public by Mr. Lewis:

"The United Mine Workers' representatives agreed to accpet the president's proposal as a basis of settlement of the strike. They did so because it provides a definite, concrete and practical method by which adequate consideration and a proper adjustment of their claim for an increase in wages and improved conditions of employment may be brought about. The United Mine Workers have full confidence in the president of the United States and a profound regard for his will and judgment.

"The president's proposal differs from any proposal heretofore made, in that it leaves nothing in doubt, so far as a plan of adjustment and the details thereof is concerned. The scheme proposed by Doctor Garfield left no hope for the mine workers other than the acceptance of an increase in mining prices of 14 per cent. The president's proposal provides that this amount of advance is preliminary and that the tribunal which he will set up will have full authority to consider further questions of wages and working conditions as well as the profits of operators and proper prices for coal, readjusting both wages and profits if it shall so decide. It further provides that the commission will have authority to settle internal questions peculiar to each district, all of which are of very great importance to the mine workers.

"The commission will make its report within 60 days unless some unsurmountable difficulties arise which prevent it from doing it and the commission will have the authority to fix the date when any award they make will become effective.

"The president's plan further provides that upon a general resumption of operations, the status quo will be maintained, that is, all mine workers will return to work with an increase in wages amounting to 14 per cent upon the same basis which obtained on October 31, 1919. Neither operators nor miners will be allowed to change the basis and no discrimination by the coal operators will be permitted.

"It was these specific features of the president's proposition which made it acceptable to the international officers of the United Mine Workers when submitted to them through the attorney general and Secretary Tumulty in Washington on Saturday, December 6.

"We are accepting the president at his word, feeling confident that he will appoint a tribunal composed of fair minded men who will give full and complete recognition to the justice of the mine workers' claims."

Palmer Issues Statement.

The following statement was issued by Attorney General Palmer on the settlement of the coal strike:

"The coal strike is settled as the government wanted it settled. When Messrs. Lewis and Green came to see me Saturday I restated what the government's position had been from the beginning and insisted on their acquiescence.

"They finally agreed to it. They have now persuaded the officers of their organization that the situation calls for compliance with the court's orders and the government's wishes and I am certain that all the miners in the country will cheerfully acquiesce in the decision of their leaders.

"I desire to publicly commend the wise and patriotic action of Mr. Lewis, Mr. Green and their associates. I am, of course, gratified at the outcome, which is one the entire country will approve."

The President's Proposal.

President Wilson's proposal to the miners as a basis for settling the strike is as follows:

"I have watched with deep concern the developments in the bituminous coal strike and am convinced there is much confusion in the minds of the people generally and possibly of both parties to this unfortunate controversy as to the attitude and purposes of the government in its handling of the situation.

"The mine owners offered a wage increase of 20 per cent, conditioned, however, upon the price of coal being raised to an amount sufficient to cover this proposed increase of wages which would have added at least $160,000,000 to the annual coal bill of the people.

"The fuel administrator, in the light of present information, has taken the position, and I think with entire justification, that the public is now paying as high prices for coal as it ought to be required to pay and that any wage increase made at this time ought to come from the profits of the coal operators.

Would Equalize Wages.

"In reaching his conclusion, the fuel administrator expressed the personal opinion that the 14 per cent increase in all mine wages is reasonable, because it would equalize the miners' wages on the average with the cost of living, but he made it perfectly clear that the operators and miners are at liberty to agree upon a larger increase, provided the operators will pay it out of their profits so that the price of coal would remain the same.

"The secretary of labor, in an effort at conciliation between the parties, expressed his personal opinion in favor of a larger increase. His efforts at conciliation failed, however, because the coal operators were unwilling to pay the scale he proposed unless the government would advance the price of coal to the public and this the government was unwilling to do.

"The fuel administrator had also suggested that a tribunal be created in which the miners and operators would be equally represented to consider further questions of wages and working conditions, as well as profits of operators and proper prices for coal. I shall, of course, be glad to aid in the formation of such a tribunal.

"I understand the operators have generally agreed to absorb an increase of 14 per cent in wages, so that the public would not pay to exceed the present price fixed by the fuel administrator, and thus a way is opened to secure the coal of which the people stand in need, if the miners will resume work on these terms pending a thorough investigation by an impartial commission which may readjust both wages and prices.

"By the acceptance of such a plan the miners are assured immediate steady employment at a substantial increase in wages and are further assured prompt investigation and action upon questions which are not now settled to their satisfaction.

"I must believe that with a clear understanding of these points they will promptly return to work. If, nevertheless, they persist in remaining on strike, they will put themselves in an attitude of striking in order to force the government to increase the price of coal to the public, so as to give a still further increase in wages at this time rather than allow the question of a further increase in wages to be dealt with in an orderly manner by a fairly constituted tribunal representing all parties interested.

Must Resume Work.

"No group of our people can justify such a position, and the miners owe it to themselves, their families, their fellow workmen in other industries and to their country to return to work.

"Immediately upon a general resumption of mining I shall be glad to aid in the prompt formation of such a tribunal as I have indicated to make further inquiries into this whole matter and to review not only the reasonableness of the wages at which the miners start to work, but also the reasonableness of the government prices for coal.

"Such a tribunal should within sixty days make its report, which could be used as a basis for negotiation for a wage agreement. I must make it clear, however, that the government cannot give its aid to any such further investigation until there is a general resumption of work.

"I ask every individual miner to give his personal thought to what I say. I hope he understands fully that he will be hurting his own interest and the interest of his family and will be throwing countless other laboring men out of employment if he shall continue the present strike, and further, that he will create an unnecessary and unfortunate prejudice against organized labor which will be injurious to the best interests of workingmen everywhere.

"WOODROW WILSON."

FUEL HEAD RESIGNS

GARFIELD DISSATISFIED WITH STRIKE SETTLEMENT.

OPPOSES COMMISSION PLAN

Believes It Will Mean Consumers Must Pay More for Coal.—Took No Part in Agreement.

Washington, D. C.—Fuel Administrator Garfield tendered his resignation to President Wilson last Thursday, the day following the settlement which brought the nation-wide coal strike to an end. The reason for Dr. Garfield's resignation is given as being because he disagreed on principle with the settlement proposal arranged by the government and the mine workers' union.

Men close to the fuel administrator understand that he believes that the work of the commission authorized under the settlement to be made up of one coal mine operator, a coal miner and a third person named to represent the public, will result in an increase in the price of coal to the consuming public.

Against this form of settlement Dr. Garfield has been unalterably opposed. It has been learned on good authority that he took no part in the negotiations with the mine workers' union chiefs during the last week of the strike, and that, though informed and consulted after their initiation, the terms laid out as finally accepted contravene his conception of the main principles involved.

It was recalled in connection with the resignation that in suggesting a 14 per cent wage increase as fair for the miners and possible to be paid from present profits of mine owners, Dr. Garfield suggested a commission representative of the industry to review the findings, but expressed the conviction that such a body should not have power to fix prices. His belief is said to be that with this power granted, a combination of the employer and employe in the industry to mulct the public by price raises is certain to result.

GERMANY WARNED BY ALLIES.

Denunciation of Protocol Means Invasion of Country, Says Note.

Paris.—The supreme council's notes dealing with the peace treaty delivered to Baron Von Lersner, head of the German delegation, denies the German demands for modification of the treaty or the surrender of Germans charged with crimes against international warfare and the return of prisoners. It agrees to consider the economic effects of the indemnities required for the sinking of warships in the Scapa Flow on Germany in "a spirit of equity, after a hearing by the reparations commission."

The note warns Germany "for the last time" the denunciation of the armistice would give the allied armies all latitude for necessary military measures and add:

"In this spirit, we await without delay signature of the protocol and the exchange of ratifications."

WILSON OPPOSES BREAK.

Declares Passage of Fall Resolution Would Be Grave Mistake.

Washington, D. C.—President Wilson declared he would be "gravely concerned" to see any resolution like Senator Fall's providing severance of relations with Mexico, adopted by congress.

Immediately following receipt by Senator Fall of Wilson's communication Senator Lodge said that the Fall resolution was dead and that the foreign relations committee would not take it up again.

Curtailment Greatest Ever.

Washington, D. C.—Railroad travelers are face to face with the most severe curtailment in passenger service that the nation ever has known. Railroad administration officials estimate that approximately 200,000 train miles have been cut from the passenger schedules daily. The saving of fuel was placed at about 15,000 tons a day. Study is being made to ascertain whether additional curtailment can be effected without causing the public too much discomforture.

Flood Losses Enormous.

Atlanta, Ga.—High waters that have flooded low lying sections of Alabama, Georgia and Mississippi have caused a property loss of many million dollars. Loss of human life, however, has been remarkably small. Probably not more than a dozen lives have been lost. A thousand or more negroes are homeless, however, around Hattiesburg and Meridian, Miss.

Steel Orders Pile Up.

New York.—Unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation on November 30 were 7,128,330 tons. This is an increase of 645,662 tons, compared with the orders on October 31.

Eighty-one 1812 War Widows.

Washington, D. C.—Eighty-one widows of soldiers of the war of 1812 are still on the government pension rolls, according to the annual report of Secretary of the Interior Lane.

Decide On Army of 300,000.

Washington, D. C.—A peace time regular army of 300,000 men and 18,000 officers was decided on by the house military subcommittee headed by Representative Anthony, republican, Kansas, framing the army reorganization bill.

MEXICAN PLOT IS REVEALED

Senator Fall Shows Up Carranza In True Light—Planned to Seize States of South.

Washington, D. C.—Evidence that radicals in Mexico, with the knowledge and support of President Carranza, plotted to instigate a revolution in the United States and to seize the border states acquired by the American government in 1848, is contained in the memorandum presented to President Wilson by Senator Fall of New Mexico, chairman of the foreign relations subcommittee investigating the Mexican situation.

Plans for the proposed revolution were obtained by the subcommittee from the minutes of a meeting last October 15, in Mexico City, of Lodge 23, an organization of extreme agitators and members of the I. W. W. The Mexican president is linked most directly with the plot through correspondence in which he recommends three men for special consideration because of their connection with "the plan which they desire to put into practice in the state of Texas."

These men, the committee states, have been identified as active agents of lodge No. 23.

The memorandum, which contains an abstract of the evidence collected by the committee, was delivered to the president by Senator Fall and made public Dec. 8.

The notes of the October 15 meeting of the lodge declare "there appeared three delegates, two Americans and one Mexican, who had arrived from the United States and who claimed that 'the society' would be able at the beginning of next November (that is, November, 1919) to call a general strike of all miners and metal workers in the United States; that they have 3,000,000 adherents in that country; where they will be able to seize one western and two Atlantic ports; that a large number of American soldiers were preparing to take sides with them, and that they proposed to establish a capital of a reformed government of the United States in the state of Colorado; that when such a revolution was successful, the Mexicans rendering their assistance, the border states which were acquired by the United States under the treaty of 1848, would be returned to Mexico."

The three men referred to are the same, the memorandum states, as those mentioned by Carranza, in letters of which the committee has secured photostatic copies.

U. S. NEEDS BIG NAVY.

Would Be Factor in Maintaining Peace, Says Government Board.

Washington, D. C.—Recommendations of the navy general board for the building program for 1921 include two battleships, one battle cruiser, ten scout cruisers, five destroyer flotilla leaders and six submarines. The navy of the United States should ultimately be equal to the most powerful maintained by any other nation of the world, not later than 1925, the report adds.

HOME RULE FOR ERIN.

At Last Irish Question May Be Satisfactorily Settled.

London.—For the first time in history there is every prospect of the Irish question being settled satisfactorily, according to a statement made in a speech by Walter Hume Long, first lord of the admiralty.

Premier Lloyd George will soon introduce the new rish home rule bill in parliament, according to the Daily Mail. The newspaper adds that the bill provides for two legislatures with a co-ordinating senate, but that the powers to be allotted to the senate have not yet been defined. It says the fate of the bill will depend on the government's generosity in this respect.

Gray U. P. President.

New York.—Carl R. Gray was elected president of the Union Pacific system companies at a meeting of board of directors here. Mr. Gray, whose headquarters will be at Omaha, will assume office January 1. He will succeed as president, Robert S. Lovett, who will remain with the company as chairman of its executive committee. Mr. Gray began his railroad career as a telegraph operator and station agent on the Santa Fe in 1883 and seventeen years later became its general manager. During the war he was director of the division of transportation of the United States railway administration.

Ex-Kaiser Feels Safe.

London.—The former German kaiser does not believe he will be tried by the allies, according to reports received here from Berlin.

I. W. W. Enlist Negroes.

Douglas, Ariz.—Enlistment of negroes in a race war was one of the plans of the I. W. W., according to circulars seized by U. S. officials in recent raids on radical headquarters here.

Wyoming to Act On Suffrage.

Cheyenne, Wyo.—Governor Carey announced his intention to call a special session of the Wyoming legislature to ratify the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment.

Date Set for Centralia Assassins.

Centralia, Wash.—Eleven alleged I. W. W. members are to be tried at Montesano, Wash., for the murder of Lt. Warren O. Grimm, one of four former American soldiers killed during the armistice day parade here. The trial is scheduled to start January 5.

G.O.P. NAME CHICAGO

WINDY CITY CHOSEN FOR BIG NATIONAL CONVENTION.

CONCLAVE TO BE HELD JUNE 5

Campaign Contributions Limited to Thousand Dollars. Radical Changes for Coming Battle.

Washington, D. C.—The republican national committee, in session here last week, selected Chicago, and Tuesday, June 8, as the place and time for the national convention, at which the party's 1920 candidate for president will be nominated.

On the roll call Chicago mustered 44 votes to 9 for St. Louis, whose boosters had made a stubborn fight for the honor. Asbury Park, N. J., and Cheyenne, Wyo., made bids for the convention, but withdrew before the voting.

The committee also authorized the creation of two new departments of party organization to deal respectively with policies and general party welfare.

One committee composed of selected members of the committee and other men and women representing labor, capital, the farmers and others, will go to work at once sorting out subjects to be dealt with in the 1920 platform.

The second committee comprises an equal number of national committeemen and outside party leaders, and will function as an advisory council in the conduct of the campaign.

The plan of Will H. Hays, the national chairman, for limitation of individual contribution to $1,000 formally was approved, and the committee announced some changes in the apportionment of delegates to the national convention. These changes were not of a sweeping nature, however, and affected only seven states.

In the vote on the convention city, Chicago mustered a strength which apparently surprised even its backers. The only votes cast for St. Louis were contributed by Tennessee, Connecticut, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Georgia, Iowa, Texas, Missouri and Hawaii.

Newberry Mute When Arraigned.

Grand Rapids, Mich.—United States Senator Truman H. Newberry and 13 of those indicted with him on charges of violating the election laws, stood mute when arraigned by United States District Judge C. W. Sessions. When the group of fourteen appeared before the court, Attorney James O. Murfin, representing them, informed Judge Sessions that it had been the intention of the respondents to plead not guilty, but inasmuch as this precluded the possibility of raising certain legal questions, they would stand mute. January 27 next was set for the trial of the Newberry case. The bonds of Senator Newberry were set at $10,000 on the first indictment and $5,000 on the second.

OVER MILLION IDLE.

Coal Shortage Throws Thousands Out of Work.—Loss is Enormous.

Washington, D. C.—It is estimated that over 1,000,000 workers are now completely idle or employed but part time as a result of the coal shortage. The estimate was described as "extremely conservative" by J. D. A. Morrow, vice president of the National Coal association. In some sections whole communities are having enforced vacations. The wage loss is estimated at more than $2,000,000 daily. Loss to employers and business men is beyond all estimates. Thousands of those affected are women who depend for employment on mercantile establishments.

Strike Loss Immense.

Des Moines, Ia.—Iowa miners have lost $2,750,000 in wages during the six weeks strike, it was estimated by officers of the Iowa Coal Operators' association. In addition, more than $10,000,000 in wages has been lost by factories and factory employes over the state because of the plants being forced to close for lack of coal.

Britain to Stick By France.

Paris.—Great Britain will carry out the terms of the Franco-British defensive alliance, by which she agrees to come to France's aid in event of unprovoked aggression by Germany, whether the United States becomes a party to the pact or not, according to newspapers here.

Booze Mixture Fatal.

New York.—Efforts to find a substitue for whisky by mixing concoctions with wood alcohol, have caused thirty-four deaths here, according to statistics made public by the city medical examiner.

Bay State Towns Favor Saloons.

Boston, Mass.—Fourteen of fifteen cities in Massachusetts which voted on the liquor question recently favored license, according to returns.

No R. R. Legislation This Year.

Washington, D. C.—Hope of enacting railroad legislation by January 1, the date on which President Wilson has announced the roads would be turned back to private control, has been abandoned by senate leaders.

May End Steel Strike.

Youngstown, O.—A meeting of the national strike committee of the steel workers is to be held in Washington, D. C., when a vote is to be taken on a proposition to end the strike, according to information given out here.

Receding Chins.

Generally speaking, a receding, weak chin is a poor sign in man and woman. It does not denote a warm nature, shows a lack of moral and mental force, and indicates that its possessor is easily discouraged. All the same, it does not do to sum up anyone from the chin alone. There may be other characteristics which counterbalance defects.

Going Back to the Beginning.

The first hole that early man made in a piece of shell or stone was by a blow of a stone hammer, which happened to strike in such a way as to knock out a small bit of the stone or shell, says Dr. Clifton Harby Levy. When this man saw the hole and noted its convenience, he slipped the sinew of a deer into the shell or stone and hung it around his neck as an ornament. Others began to ask themselves how they could make holes in things and, taking a bit of pointed stone, they

Christmas in the Barnyard

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"CHRISTMAS is coming," crowed Mr. Rooster.

"Christmas is coming," gobbled Mr. Turkey.

"Don't be too happy about it, for you may be eaten, Mr. Turkey," said Miss Hen.

And then she clucked.

"Christmas is coming."

"Gobble, gobble, gobble," said Mr. Turkey; "you needn't be so sure that you won't be eaten yourself."

"Well, it's the best time of the year to be eaten. It's an honor."

"That's what I've always said," gobbled Mr. Turkey. "Please, Miss Hen, try to be original."

"I may try to be many things," clucked Miss Hen, "but it is impossible for me to try to be original."

"Why?" asked Mr. Turkey, who was much puzzled.

"Because I don't know what it is to be original. I don't know what the word means. How can I be something if I don't even know what that something is? I can't try to be a thing I don't know anything about."

"You could ask what it means, couldn't you?" inquired Mr. Turkey. "Are you too proud for that?"

"You May Be Eaten, Mr. Turkey."

"Not too proud," said Miss Hen, "but I don't ask favors. I like to have them handed to me without the asking. It makes me appear so superior."

"Absurd," said Mr. Turkey.

"Well, if you think so then," said Miss Hen, "I suppose I will have to swallow my pride or my superiority and be friendly at this time of the year. Yes, I will actually ask you. What does it mean to be original?"

"I will tell you," said Mr. Turkey, "but first of all let me say that you cannot swallow your pride nor your superiority. Those are not things to eat.

"You may rise above your pride, but it is impossible to swallow it."

"Now, Mr. Turkey, I may be only a poor hen, but I know a few things. It's a saying and a perfectly good saying when I speak of swallowing my pride. Everyone knows no one means to chew it and swallow it actually. Besides, as far as that is concerned, I might say to you that it was not correct to talk about rising above your pride as though pride were the ground and one took a trip in an airplane above it."

"Let us not quarrel," said Mr. Turkey, "for the joyous Christmas season is fast approaching."

"Yes," mutttered Miss Hen, "and I was fast approaching victory in that argument."

Mr. Turkey pretended he hadn't heard.

"Oh, by the way," he said, after a moment's pause, "you wanted me to tell you what it meant to be original."

"Yes," clucked Miss Hen, while a smile passed over her hen face.

"Well," continued Mr. Turkey, "when a creature is original and says original things it means he is saying things he has thought up himself and hasn't copied from someone else. A person who has original ideas all his own. A creature who says original things, says things no other creature says."

"Everyone Should Give Me Presents."

"You copied me when you said it was an honor to be eaten at Christmas. That was what I have always said."

"Don't be so fussy, Mr. Gobbler," said Miss Hen; "we can't all be original, as you call it. Besides words are words and we all have to use the same ones to be understood, so what difference does it make how we put them together?"

Mr. Turkey walked proudly about, as though some creatures really hadn't enough brains to bother talking to, but soon a great noise was heard.

The pigs were all squealing and grunting.

"It is the time of the year when everyone should give me presents," squealed Pinky Pig.

"Everyone should give me presents. That is what Christmas means," said Porky Pig.

"They should all give them to me," said Brother Bacon, "or you pigs don't know the spirit of Christmas giving."

"You don't know it yourself," said Miss Ham. "Christmas is coming. I'm all ready for presents."

But the other animals sighed and shook their heads.

"Pigs don't even forget they are pigs during the Christmas season!"

Santa Starts Off

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union)

"SANTA CLAUS' dog, Boy of the North, was barking," said Daddy, "for there was great excitement up North.

"The excitement was, as perhaps you may be able to guess, that Santa Claus was about to start his trip.

"'I have more things to do this year than ever before, it seems to me," said Santa Claus.

"Boy of the North wagged his tail and gave funny little short barks which was his way of laughing. 'You say that every year,' he was trying to tell Santa Claus, as he put his cold nose in Santa's hand and rubbed up beside him.

"The reindeer were waiting. The bells on their reins were jingling and the sleigh was filled with packs and packs of toys.

"'Now, let me see,' said Santa Claus. 'There are many shops were packs await me. The children have written to me about the things they have seen and of what they want.

"Good-Bye," Shouted Santa.

That is why I like the stores to have so many of my toys. The children get a good idea of what they want.

"'Then they write me letters, the precious dears! They write of what they want and how much they care for me and how much they love their sisters and brothers and mothers and daddies and playmates and dogs and other pets.

"'But I musn't stop to think of all these letters for I must get started, for I've a long way to go."

"He knew he had to start soon for the reindeer could hardly wait any longer, and were trying to hurry him.

"'I won't be late,' said Santa Claus. 'I have never been late yet—and I've been doing this trip—this trip to the lands where there are children—for a good many years.'

"And the reindeer made queer sounds and jingled their bells again for they knew Santa Claus was right, but still they were in a great, great hurry!

"They were thinking of the roofs they would dash across. Oh, how anxious they were to start!

"And Boy of the North was anxious too for them to start, for although he didn't go with them, he longed to see them come back and hear about the trip.

"'Yes,' continued Santa Claus, 'I must get the packs from the different shops. I know just what all the children want.

"'Then I must keep a good many engagements I've made—promises to appear at some big Christmas trees, although I never let the children see me when I'm arriving with my pack. Oh no, that's my fun—to keep all that a great, great secret.

"'And they love secrets, the little dears! Now let me see—have I the nuts and raisins, the bright new pennies for some of the stockings and the big oranges, too! Yes, we're really and truly ready at last.'

"When Santa Claus said 'We're ready,' the reindeer pranced, Boy of North barked and Santa Claus sprang into the sleigh.

"Off went the reindeer with Santa Claus and the toys, games and countless other things for Christmas morning.

"'Good-bye, Boy of the North,' shouted Santa Claus. 'Good-bye, dear old North home, good-bye everyone and everything.

"'I'm off on my big trip of the year.'

"And as he shouted this the reindeer were almost out of sight and the last that could be seen of Santa Claus was as he waved his red cap with the red tassel.

"'Now,' said Boy of the North, 'I will have everything ready for him when he gets back.'

"So the dog got Santa Claus' slippers and his heavy, warm winter wrapper which his master wore when he wasn't working. He put them near the fire, but not too near. For he knew Santa Claus would be gone quite a long time and when night had passed and the next day had come, even though it was not bright, he would then move them very near the fire and have them ready.

"And Boy of the North fell asleep and dreamed and his dreams were happy as his life always was, for you can imagine how happy the dog of Santa Claus must be."

We emerged through the companion, and I stepped aside as the others rushed by. There was no shout, no cheer, the fellows seeming to realize the desperate nature of their work, and the importance of surprise. They were outnumbered five to one, and their only hope of success lay in rendering their opponents helpless before they could rally to a defense. All the pent-up hate of years was in their hearts, blazed madly in their eyes; they were tigers leaping at the throat of their prey, yet sane enough to comprehend even in their blood-rage that they must act together. It was over so quickly I scarcely saw it all. My eyes swept from group to group—the four toiling at the cover of the main hatch; the fellows racing toward the forecastle; and Watkins' squad driving straight into the grouped watch beyond the foremast. It was smartly done; Watkins had taken no cutlass, but went in with both fists, asking no questions, but battering right and left, his men surging after, with steel blades flaming in the sunlight. The astounded watch, cursing and fighting grimly, held for a moment, and then went staggering back against the port rail, unable to stem the rush, and roaring for mercy. I had view of Carlson dropping recklessly down the forecastle scuttle, and then sprang forward myself to give a hand to the four wrestling with the main hatch. Together we dragged it into position, forcing relentlessly back as we did so, a dozen struggling figures frantically endeavoring to reach the deck. Shots were fired, the bullets whistling through the opening, the flare lighting up the black depths below, revealing vaguely a mass of frantic men staring up, and cursing us fiercely in a dozen languages; but, in spite of them, we clamped the hatch down tight, and locked it securely into place with an iron bar.

Watkins needed no help; he had his party rounded up. To my orders they were driven into the cook's galley and a guard stationed at the door. Then I turned to the more serious work confronting me in the forecastle. We must have men enough to sail the bark, and if I was to command them, I must first of all prove my courage and enforce authority. The whole success of our effort depended on this.

"What's going on below?" I asked.

"Cursin' mostly," answered Carter, peering down through a slight uptilting of the scuttle. "They don't just know what's happening yet, but the big nigger seems ter be raisin' hell. Carlson is a holdin' him back with his cutlass."

"Open up and let me down."

I fell, rather than clambered along the rungs of the ladder, coming to my feet on deck in the midst of a group of angry men. The light was so poor I could scarcely see their faces; a babel of voices greeted me, and more than one hand gripped me fiercely as the excited owner yelped a demand to know what in hell we were up to. I roughly cleared a space, aided by Carlson's cutlass, and fronted them. Towering above them all, his black apelike face, distorted with rage, I distinguished the giant Cochose, his immense hands grasping a wooden bar ripped from a bunk. Plainly enough he was the leader. If I was to rule, this black brute must be conquered at the very start, conquered by my own hands, and in the presence of his mates.

"Stand back there lads," I said sternly. "I'll explain all that has happened presently, but first I am going to lick that black within an inch of his life. Step out of there, Cochose."

He came grinning widely, balancing the heavy club.

"You mean me, sah? You all think yer kin lick me?"

"Yes, I think so; I'll try it anyway. Here Carlson, take this pistol and sheath knife. If anyone interferes shoot him. All I ask is fair play. Drop that club, Cochose, and throw away your knife. You and I will fight this out with bare hands."

His dull brain worked slowly, and he stared at me, his eyes ugly. His silence and lack of response, awoke a growl from the impatient circle of men behind. One fellow kicked the club out of his hand contemptuously, and another plucked the knife from his belt.

"You big skulker," the latter said, with an oath of derision, "go on, and fight!"

"What for Ah fight this white man? Ah don't even know who he is."

"Then I'll tell you. Estada is dead; Manuel is a prisoner. I'm in command of this bark. You are a big, boasting cur! I heard what you said when I came down, and now I'll make you prove it."

I took two steps forward, my advance so swift and unexpected the big negro had not even time to throw up an arm in defense. With open hand I struck him squarely across the face.

CHAPTER XXI.

In Full Possession.

A roar of delight went up. I knew sailors and felt they would welcome a fight like this and their immediate sympathy would be with me for starting it. More than that, this black bully, ruling over them by brute force, could be no favorite. They might fear him, but with that fear would be mingled hate, and a delight in his downfall.

In that instant, although I cannot recall removing watchful eyes from the negro's face, I received an impression of my surroundings never to be erased from memory—the gloomy interior, the deck, foul, littered with sea boots, and discarded clothing, and the great beams overhead blackened by smoke. The rays of the swinging slush lantern barely illuminated the central space, the rows of bunks beyond remaining mere shadows, yet this dim, yellowish light, fell full upon the excited half circle of men who were roaring about the negro. They were a rough, wild lot, ranging in color from the intense black of Central Africa to the blond of Scandinavia, half naked some, their voices mingling in a dozen tongues, their eyes gleaming with savagery.

I know not whether Cochose lunged forward of his own volition, or was pressed on from behind, yet suddenly he was within reach of me, and the battle was on, his object evidently being to crush me in his giant grip, mine to oppose science to strength, and avoid his bear-hug. We swayed back and forth to the sharp pitching of the ship. Then he sprang straight at me determined to smash me to the deck by the very power of his onslaught. But I side-stepped him, getting in two swift blows, which rocked his head, and tore open one cheek, from which blood trickled. Yet he kept his feet, blindly gripping for me.

I evaded his clutch by leaping aside, but the space was far too small to permit these tactics to carry long, and finally he had me. Yet, even as he seemingly crushed the very breath out of me, his giant strength met with a resistance which increased his fury. Already the fellow had lost his head, but I fought coolly, putting my skill against brute force, every wrestler's trick I knew flashing into my brain. Breathlessly, my flesh scraped and bruised, I wriggled partly free, and tripped him, his great body striking the deck with a thud. I fell with him, dragged down by his desperate grip, but was first upon my feet, saluted by a roar of delight from the lips of those crowding about us. As he staggered up also, I struck him again, a blow which would have ended the game, had not my foot slipped on the reeling deck. As it was it drove him to his knees, groggy, and with one eye half closed, yet with strength enough left to regain his feet as soon as I. This time he charged me like a wild bull, froth whitening his lips, scarcely appearing human in the yellow light. In mad rage he forgot all caution, his one thought to reach me with his hands, and throttle me into lifeless pulp. I fought him back, driving blow on blow through his guard, side-stepping his mad rushes, landing again and again on his body. Twice I got in over his heart, and at last, found the chance I sought, and sent a right jab straight to the chin. All the force of one hundred and eighty pounds was behind the clenched fist, and the negro went down as though floored by a poleax. Once weakly he endeavored to rise, but this time I used my left, and he never stirred again, lying there with no sign of life except the quivering of the huge body. Assured that he was down and out, I stood above him, gazing into the ring of excited faces.

"That's one attended to," I said shortly. "Now is there any more of you who would like to fight this out?"

There was no answer although the ring widened under the threat of my eyes, and I met sullen faces here and there. I was in no mood to take chances.

"Carlson," I said, "you know all these men. Pick out those you can trust, and have them stand over there to the right. Call them out by name; be lively now."

They stepped forth eagerly enough, and ranged themselves before the bunks, the faces mostly those of northern Europe, although a negro or two was among them. As the Swede ceased calling, six or seven yet remained clustered in front of me, a motley lot, one of them an Indian, the others mostly half-breeds. I glanced from face to face inquiringly.

"How about it, you?" I asked. "Are there any more of you fellows who take a chance with us? This is my last offer."

"What's the game?" asked a sullen voice in English, and a bearded fellow, burned black, pushed his way to the front. "I used ter be Scotch; now I don't know what I am. One flag is as good as another ter me—only I want to know what sorter game I'm playin' in. Who are yer? An' whar'd yer cum frum?"

"I am an English seaman," I answered shortly, "and how I came aboard makes no difference. Right now I am the only navigator on the Namur. Estada is dead—knifed last night by one of the buccaneers. Manuel Estevan had a hand in the business, and he's safely locked in a stateroom aft. Captain Sanchez is wounded and helpless, and those cut-throats amidships are battened down below hatches. LeVere and I are the officers left, and we control the deck."

"Yer mean those fellers were aimin' ter take the ship?"

"Exactly that; now where are you lads? With Manuel and his bunch of pirates? Or with us?"

"What er yer going ter do with us, an' this ship? That's the fu'st question."

I had not decided that even in my own mind, but the answer came promptly enough.

"I am going to leave that to the crew. As soon as we have all secure, I'll have every man on deck, and then we'll talk it over. That's fair enough isn't it?"

"It looks fair. Come on, mates; I'm fer the Englishman."

Only one followed him, however, a sheep-faced boy; the others remained sullen and defiant. I had no further time to waste in explanations. I glanced up at Carter's face framed in the scuttle hole.

"Carter, pass these men up and take them forward with the others. Turn them over to Watkins. Then come back here, and report to me."

They went up the ladder one by one, and disappeared onto the deck above. Carlson and I watched the others until Carter stuck his head once again through the opening.

"All safe, sir—they was like lambs."

"Very well; stand by to help. Now you lads, lift this black and shove him up to where they can get hold above."

They hoisted the unconscious form up the ladder and forced it through the hole onto the deck. At my stern command they crawled forth into the sunlight. There they picked up Cochose and carried him aft.

I went to the main hatch, and had the cover slipped to one side, the armed sailors gathering close about the edge, as I peered down. It was a scene of pandemonium, revealed in the yellow flame of slush lanterns, a group of white faces showing clearly, as the prisoners below struggled forward, gesticulating and shouting. Ignoring their mad roaring, and the threat of leveled guns, I stared down at the infuriated faces, until the clamor ceased sufficiently to let my voice be heard.

"What are you men trying to do, frighten me? You might as well stop that. This opening is lined with guns, and if one of you fire a shot we'll pour lead into you. More than that; if you attempt to climb out there is a brass carronade trained on the hatch. So listen! We are in control of the ship and mean to keep it. The old officers are either dead or prisoners. What we do with you will depend on your actions, but we're ready to kill if necessary. If you keep quiet down there, and obey orders, you'll be fed, and treated decently enough. Pass up your arms."

There was no movement, only a glare of hostile eyes, an indistinguishable growl of voices.

"Kneel down, lads and cover those fellows," I ordered sternly drawing my own pistol. "Now you below there, this is my last word. I'll count ten, and you'll either pass up those weapons or we'll pour our fire into you. Take aim, boys."

There was a moment of deathly silence, except for my counting. One man uttered a curse, and the jam of figures at the foot of the ladder endeavored to work back out of range, yet, before I had spoken the word eight, guns were held aloft, and poked up within reach, and at this sign of surrender even the most desperate lost heart and joined the more cowardly. It was a strange collection of weapons stacked on the deck—guns, cutlasses, knives and pistols of every description. Probably all had not been delivered, yet I felt no further fear of the few pieces remaining hidden.

"That's all, is it? Very well—now take care of this big nigger we're sending down; no, he is not dead, only stunned. Now stand aside while a few of your friends join you; they'll tell you what's up. Make room there."

We passed the forecastle scum down one by one. Ignoring the indignant roar of voices which greeted my order, I watched the men shift the heavy hatch cover into place, and then permitted my eyes to survey the deck, as I hastily considered our next action.

Rich Rhine Country.

Strange to say, the fine grapes are grown on the eastern slopes of the Rhine and the choicest varieties, as Johannisburger and Steinberger, are produced higher up the river, south of the Rhine province. It is, nevertheless, the land of the vine, especially the Moselle valley. The substantial claim of the province is its mineral wealth.

POULTRY FACTS

BEST FOOD TO FATTEN FOWL

Whether Young or Old Mixed Grains Are Better Than Any One Variety —Milk Is Relished.

Mixed grains are better for fattening fowl, whether old or young than any one variety alone. Oats and corn, ground, are perhaps the most fattening. Buckwheat and ordinary wheat are good food and add variety to the rations but they are not so fattening. Chickens get tired of one kind of feed, the same as people do, but they thrive on mixed feed. Skim milk is one of the best articles of diet that can be put on the fowl's bill of fare. It is relished, it is healthful, it is nourishing and it greatly improves the color, flavor and texture of the dressed meat. Among the most rapid gainers for killing purposes are the barred Plymouth Rocks, the Rhode Island Reds and the Wyandottes. Fed on the above rations any of them can be made to gain from a pound to a pound and a half in three weeks, possibly less. This is profitable feeding.

FEED FOWLS DAMAGED GRAIN

It Is Essential to Exercise Particular Care That Birds Are Not Injured by Material.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although it is good management to allow poultry to rustle about in grain fields and stock yards after the grain crop has been stacked or thrashed, it is essential to exercise particular care that the fowl are not injured by feeding on damaged grain. Specialists of the United States department of agriculture assert that where damaged grain is fed in limited amounts to the flock which is on free range, the possibility of serious injury is reduced to a minimum. On the other hand, they state that it is advisable not to feed the damaged grain—and never to use this material if it is moldy or musty—in anything but very small amounts where the fowl are closely confined all the time. There is an inexplainable something about the range which the birds have as well as the waste products which they utilize that apparently keeps them healthy, so that they are able to handle small amounts of grain which are not too seriously damaged. It is especially necessary to watch corn and cornmeal, as these feeds are inclined to spoil rather easily.

GREEN BONE GOOD FOR HENS

Material Can Often Be Purchased From Local Butcher—Is Substitute for Meat Scrap.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Green cut bone can often be purchased from the butcher. This material when procured fresh makes an excellent substitute for beef scrap. It should be purchased in small quantities, as it cannot be kept fresh for any length of time and when spoiled may cause severe bowel trouble. It is best fed in a trough not oftener than every other day, allowing about one-half ounce per bird. Should severe or continued looseness of the bowels follow the feeding of green cut bone it should be discontinued or the quantity reduced.

TRAP-NEST ALL LAYING HENS

Tends to Tame Birds, Thereby Increasing Egg Production and Permits Clear Record.

When possible it is advisable to trap-nest the layers for the following reasons: (1) To tame the birds, thereby tending toward increased egg production. (2) To furnish definite knowledge concerning traits and habits of individuals. (3) To furnish the only satisfactory basis for utility or other breeding. (4) To eliminate the nonproductive hen. (5) To add mechanical precision to judgment and experience in developing and maintaining the utility of a flock.

WHITE BIRDS GAINING FAVOR

Rocks, Orpingtons and Rhode Islands Coming to Front Fast as Egg Producers.

The White Rocks, White Wyandottes, White "Reds" or Rhode Island Whites—are fast coming to the front as high egg producers. The achievements of the White Legnorns seem to overshadow all other white birds.

The EMPTY STOCKING

There's an empty stocking hanging from many a little bed,
Where a God-blown dream hangs over each sleeping curly head;
And the vision gathers nightly of a day that's soon to come,
Where little feet should patter to the music of the drum.

There's an empty stocking hanging by many a wind-blown door,
That must wait in vain for Christmas, in the gray haunts of the poor;
And eyes that now shine brightly shall, through a rain of tears,
See nothing there on Christmas but the sorrow of the years.

But out where splendor centers the mansions of the great,
No call will go unanswered, tot will vainly wait;
The Christmas horn will summ —the Christmas drum will r
The tide of joy in magic throu the gateway of each soul.

But where one gift would brigh the dark of weary days,
No reindeer's hoof will thun o'er Poverty's drear ways;
And so, for God's white seaso for some wee dreamer's caus
Don't you think that you m whisper just a word to Sa Claus?

A Christmas Carol

"What means this glory round our feet,"
The Magi mused, "more bright than morn?"
And voices chanted clear and sweet,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born!"
"What means that star," the Shepherds said,
"That brightens through the rocky glen?"
And angels answering overhead,
Sang, "Peace on earth, good-will to men!"
'Tis eighteen hundred years and more
Since those sweet oracles were dumb;
We wait for Him, like them of yore;
Alas, He seems so slow to come!
But it was said, in words of gold,
No time or sorrow e'er shall dim,
That little children might be bold
In perfect trust to come to Him.
All round about our feet shall shine
A light like that the wise men saw,
If we our loving wills incline
To that sweet Life which is the Law.
So shall we learn to understand
The simple faith of shepherds then,
And, clasping kindly hand in hand,
Sing, "Peace on earth, good-will to men!"
But they who do their souls no wrong,
But keep at eve the faith of morn,
Shall daily hear the angel-song,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born!"

Only Way City of St. Louis Can Get Rid of Bell Which Renders Structure Unsafe.

The two-ton bell which hangs in the tower of the city hall has made the tower unsafe, but the bell is so large it would be dangerous to try to take it down, so it is to be melted right where it is with acetylene blow torches, such as are commonly seen in use by workmen repairing car tracks, says the St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Building Commissioner McKelvey pronounced the tower unsafe as long as the bell remains, because the steel supports have been corroded. Moreover, he said, an attempt to lower the bell would be very dangerous, therefore the decision to take it down a bucketful at a time.

The only time in recent years that the bell has been rung was the day of the armistice celebration. It was rung when the building was constructed in 1904. The bell cost about $2,000. The expense of removing it will be about $1,500. It is six feet high and four feet in diameter at the base.

Home Town Helps

HELP BUSINESS TO PROSPER

Matter of Vital Interest to Whole Community That Its Industries Shall Flourish and Grow.

There is an old saying among merchants that there are just two ways to increase their volume of business, remarks Carl Hunt in The Nation's Business. One is through the sale of merchandise to more people; the other, through the sale of more merchandise to present customers.

What is the community doing to help present industries? Is some manufacturer handicapped through the lack of street car transportation for his men, or through the need of a railroad switch that a stubborn city council has declined to authorize, or through some restriction which might easily and properly be removed?

Or could additional capital be invested in the present enterprises of the city, to the benefit of the community, and the profit of local investors?

I am well acquainted with a small Indiana city which in time past has undertaken to be the home of a rolling mill and a large tin-plate mill, though there was no apparent reason why either should have been situated there. Both of them failed.

In the meantime, the whole community stood upon a foundation of stone which was of excellent quality for paving purposes, and from which lime could be, and later was, produced. The one man who entered the stone business there eventually had a thriving trade which later, passing into the hands of outside people, grew still larger. With fuel—a good grade of coal—but a few miles away, and with such stone deposits, this community might have developed along this line had local capital become interested, or had the community made a serious and well-directed effort to interest stone men from other places, for the city has excellent railroad service—three main lines—and is within easy shipping distance of several important cities which afford a large market for crushed stone.

CATERING TO TOURISTS

These concrete tables and benches have been built in a picturesque canon by the people of San Bernardino, Cal., as a convenience to picnickers and motor tourists.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Interlocking Brick.

Burned walls falling all around him during the great fire in San Francisco gave an Arizona man the idea of self-binding and interlocking brick, a type of building material which promises to revolutionize brick construction work the world over. The principle of the brick is decidedly simple. On one side of the brick are two annular bosses which are concentrically located opposite two annular depressions on the other side of the brick, so that when the bricks are laid the bosses register with the depressions. In that way the bricks are locked into the wall and none can be removed unless all the bricks above it are first taken away. In sections of the country where hollow-wall construction has come into popularity the interlocking brick seems likely to prove the most popular, because it can be used in tying the two walls together. The bricks can be extended across the open space and made to lock together and act as a binder. Hollow-walls are desirable because of their coolness in sections where humidity prevails.

Use Care in Selecting Plants

In selecting plants one is governed largely by the soil and climatic conditions, position of buildings, walks, drives, fountains, bodies of water, and the surrounding area. Soil conditions may be changed by the addition of manure or commercial fertilizers. Often the amateur is not familiar with the various kinds of plants, and is unable to make the proper selections. For such individuals it is advisable for them to visit the parks and other well planted landscapes. This will enable one to become familiar with the plants and their names, and will aid greatly in the selections of shrubbery to suit his particular needs. Metal tags giving the technical and common names are attached to many of the plants in the parks which will be found helpful to the amateur.

LOVE VS. BUSINESS

By HELEN IVERS.

(Copyright, 1919, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Joan felt strangely insignificant as she entered the office of Weston & Sons on her first day of work. She timidly glanced around and saw at the desk, which seemed, by the way, to be miles away, a middle-aged man writing diligently. She coughed discreetly. The man kept on writing, however, paying no attention to the newcomer.

Joan remembered one of the rules of her business course. It seemed to stand before her now in blazing letters, "Be respectfully self-possessed." Oh, the futility of all those years of learning! How often had she practiced that dignified but demure walk to her employer's desk to be afraid now, at the crucial moment.

But afraid she was, and without a backward glance she rushed out of the office directly into a human figure, just who or what she could not discern, and only heard faintly some apparent apologies.

A few seconds later Walter Curtis entered his uncle's presence.

"Well, uncle," he greeted him with a questioning look; "rather unusual, isn't it, for you to so frighten your secretary that she rushes blindly from you? I don't think it is funny," he added, as he saw his uncle's eyes twinkle.

Mr. Weston, however, now broke into a hearty laugh.

"I didn't say a word to her," he explained between times. "Oh, Walter, am I as ferocious as that?" And he forthwith told his nephew of Joan's entrance.

Curtis had to laugh, though unwillingly. "Go on with your work, uncle," he said.

Mr. Weston again pressed the button for his new secretary and she entered in a few moments, looking at him doubtfully. Mr. Weston, however, made no sign that he knew this was not her first entrance, and after a few directions started his dictation. Joan was the makings of a good stenographer and Mr. Weston did not fail to note this. As he watched her neat, well-kept hands fly over the paper, he inwardly congratulated himself that at last his regime of untidy secretaries was over.

Such things as were going through his mind, however, were far distant from his nephew's. Curtis, too, noticed her hands, but took no note of their secretarial capabilities. He also noticed the poise of her chestnut crowned head and the wonderful eyelashes that fringed her cheek.

At last Mr. Weston was through. "You may go to dinner at 11:45," he said.

He looked up suddenly as his nephew coughed rather feebly.

"You want to take care of that cough, Walter," he said, his eyes twinkling again.

Joan looked, too. "I know of a perfectly wonderful cough medicine," she advanced shyly. "Mother always bought it for us."

"Go outside with Miss Lake," Mr. Weston said. "I am really worried about you, Walter. This is my nephew, Walter Curtis, Miss Lake."

Outside they went, leaving Mr. Weston to his own devices.

As the days went by Joan proved her mettle, and Mr. Weston declared continually that he could never get along without her. A stenographer who could spell without the delaying aid of the dictionary, and whose presence was an encouragement instead of a drawback, was something new to him, and he wondered how he ever managed before.

His only cloud was his nephew, which latter developed a strong and sudden attachment for his hitherto rather neglected uncle, and it was no unusual thing to have that now detested one be present at his morning dictation and to stay around for some time after. He greatly feared that his days of peace were few and snubbed his nephew unmercifully.

One day on his arrival Curtis realized his uncle's worst fears, and told that long-suffering man that Joan had promised to marry him.

Mr. Weston rang his secretary's bell and jumped up when that young lady entered.

"Miss Lake," he fairly roared, "my nephew has just told me of your promise to marry him. Have I no rights whatever? Am I to be left in the lurch?"

Joan was surprised. "Why, surely, there are plenty of other girls to take my place. I did—didn't suppose you would mind, Mr. Weston."

"Mind! Am I to lose the best secretary I have had for years just for the sake of that young man?" Mr. Weston cast a look at his nephew.

Joan looked somewhat relieved. "Oh, if that's all, Mr. Weston," she smiled. "I have a sister—she is much better than I am as a secretary, for she is more experienced by quite a few years. Besides," her eyes twinkled mischievously, "she is just now out of work."

He grunted. "Well, bring her along, young woman," he said.

Joan giggled as she turned to Curtis. "Would another of my sisters do you for a wife, Walter?"

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces

Acid-Stomach

Makes 9 Out of 10

People Suffer

Doctors declare that more than 70 non-organic diseases can be traced to Acid-Stomach. Starting with indigestion, heartburn, belching, food-repeating, bloat, sour, gassy stomach, the entire system eventually becomes affected, every vital organ suffering in some degree or other. You see these victims of Acid-Stomach everywhere—people who are subject to nervousness, headache, insomnia, billousness—people who suffer from rheumatism, lumbago, sciatica and aches and pains all over the body. It is safe to say that about 9 people out of 10 suffer to some extent from Acid-Stomach.

If you suffer from stomach trouble or, even if you do not feel any stomach distress, yet are weak and ailing, feel tired and dragged out, lack "pep" and enthusiasm and know that something is wrong although you cannot locate the exact cause of your trouble—you naturally want to get back your grip on health as quickly as possible. Then take EATONIC, the wonderful modern remedy that brings quick relief from pains of indigestion, belching, gassy bloat, etc. Keep your stomach strong, clean and sweet. See how your general health improves—how quickly the old-time vim, vigor and vitality comes back!

Get a big 50c box of EATONIC from your druggist today. It is guaranteed to please you. If you are not satisfied your druggist will refund your money.

A. W. McElmurray, of Webster City, was a Klemme caller last Wednesday between trains. He was accompanied by Oscar Larsen, of Garner. "Mack" has been away from Klemme for a couple of years and his many friends were glad to see him again.

The Town Council met last evening for final hearing on the proposed paving program. A goodly number were present and we were surprised to find that there were none who opposed paving. There were some present who asked that certain parts of the proposed district be cut out, but it only meant a few blocks and Garner will next year see nearly 100 blocks paved. The time for letting contract was set for January 8. It is expected that the size of this contract will attract many of the big bidders, and a very good price should be secured for the job on account of the size.

Garner has had the name of being backward in city improvements, but when they start anything, the result is something worth while. Our Mayor and Council are to be congratulated on the progressive spirit they have shown since they have been in office. It is a Mayor and Council like ours that makes a town amount to something.—Garner Signal.

FINIS SHOWS BACKBONE

Finis Letch, the editor of the Goodell Globe, is a gritty young man; just such a young man whom you can't keep down. Last week Finis' establishment was completely destroyed by fire, and not a thing was saved, except, as he puts it, "the old Webster's Dictionary."

Without a pieceo f type, or a stick in which to set it, failed to keep the Goodell Globe from a publication. Finis is now using The Herald-Press equipment at Belmond to get out his paper, a copy of which reached our desk the fore part of the week. Mr. Letch intends to start up another shop again at Goodell, if the businessmen and people will stay by him, which we sincerely hope they will. It costs a lot of money now-a-days to equip a printing shop, but Finis has the courage to face the music and start all over again. Here's wishing him good luck and that his new plant will be a wonderful success.

Mrs. Raymond White and baby left Tuesday for Forest City for a few days' visit with her folks.

Court has been in session this week as well as part of last. Saturday was the day set for the hearing on naturalization petitions. There were 12 asked for papers and 11 were granted. The grand jury returned one indictment, and that was against John Oeschelberger for tampering with mail that did not belong to him. He was arrested and W. H. Ramsay was appointed to defend him. The case of State vs. E. Willoughby was dismissed, Mr. Willoughby agreeing to pay the cost of extradition which amounted to $1320.70. One fourth of this is to be paid every three months until the entire amount is paid. There are several cases to be tried by jury, and some of these will begin today.—Garner Signal.

Santa Claus on Wings

By E. S. HENDERSON

(Copyright.)

CHRISTMAS cheer was in the air, but the fact did not particularly appeal to Boyd Wisner, for he was consumed with ennui and suspense. It was typical old-fashioned yuletide season. A great snowstorm had blotted out every country turnpike and the railroad connecting his town with Mayville.

"Boyd mopes around like a lost soul," commented his sister Nettie to her mother. "If his fellow ace of airship fame in France, Willis Thorne, cannot get here in time for the holiday festivities we shall have a dull season of it."

"It's Muriel Lane," asserted Mrs. Wisner. "A year ago this time both you and Boyd had the time of your lives at Lane farm and the contrast is irksome to the poor boy."

"And 'the poor boy,'" mimicked Nettie, "is on pins and needles of suspense. Of course you know that he proposed to Muriel a week ago?"

"I didn't know it, but I suspected it would come to that."

"Muriel asked him to give her a few days to think it over, so she would be sure she knew her own mind. Then this storm came along and the telephone wires have been down until this morning."

But that very day Boyd Wisner heard from the prudent maiden who sought to make no mistake in solving life's greatest problem—marriage. His quickened heart throbs were a series of thrills as he was called to the phone at his office, and more alluring than the soft cooing of a dove were the fluttering words, "Is that you, Boyd?"

"Yes, dari— I mean Miss Lane."

"Don't be silly, Boyd. We are snowbound, but I wanted to tell you that I am sure of my mind now. The children are crying for last year's Santa Claus, and I—oh, I wish it would rain hot scalding water and clear the roads! Merry Christmas! Come soon!"

And then the provoking damsel dropped the phone. Muriel had made up her mind! Boyd was inspired with the most radiant soul of hope. He reached the street to find it crowded with people looking skyward. "Double luck!" he jubilated. "It's Thorne," and he decided that the airship aloft, gracefully circling to land, must be the one which his fellow ace of France had purchased after returning home.

Twenty miles distant, lovable and loving Muriel Lane looked out upon a bleak, white expanse, surrounding the old farm home. Her six little brothers and sisters nestled about her.

"We can trim up the Christmas tree with last year's spangles, children," she said.

"I want to see Santa Claus!" whimpered little Tim. "If he can land on a roof and come down the chimney he can ride on the air. Oh, sister, there's the telephone."

It was the first time it had rung for a week. Muriel ran to it, and her cheeks grew to wild rose beauty and her eyes sparkled as the words came: "Look to the northeast for a new star at nine o'clock tonight."

"Boyd—" began Muriel, flutteringly.

"No, Santa Claus, by air. Have the tree ready and keep the children up."

That wise little head of Muriel comprehended. She was as unsettled and expectant as the children. The tree was trimmed, the candles all ready for lighting. She took a chair at the window and began telling them stories. Finally she leaned closer to the pane and strained her glance. A speck of luster held her vision until it had resolved itself into mingled colors of red, white and blue.

"Wrap yourselves up warmly," she ordered. "We will all go out and look for Santy," and a great hush came down as the group discovered "the new star," and the outlines of B-32 became clearly distinct in the crystalline air and there settled to earth—Willis Thorne's airship driven by Boyd Wisner.

Forth from the amazing air vehicle stepped a form familiar to the wonder-eyed children—the Santa Claus of last year with frosted beard and a bulging bag of gifts on his back.

And only the two older children ever guessed the identity of this grand Kriss Kringle on wings. And, oh! the marvelous gifts he had for them all! And Boyd drew Muriel behind a door and kissed her, and only old Grandfather Lane, going up the stairs to his bed, witnessed the event, and chuckled serenely.

A Yuletide Romance

By T. B. ALDERSON

(Copyright.)

POVERTY and pathos, gentility and blighted hopes, aspirations and hidden emotions — all these played a part in the dull experience of the odd ten people who had lived year in and year out at Mrs. Rhoda Markham's city boarding house.

Its proprietress was a good-hearted woman, but the constant grind had worn her out. As Christmas approached, however, the faded, but faithful old eyes brightened, for, though poor and humble, her little coterie were generous souls and a special purse was her reward when the Christmas tree gave up its treasure.

Miss Myrtle Deane had occupied the best room in the house for over three years. She lived on an annuity of limited volume, and although twenty-eight, retained much of the freshness and charm of girlhood.

Reuben Willis, thirty, and a bachelor, a silent, retiring man, filled a subordinate position in a bank, and, it was said, came of a once wealthy family and his actions showed his good breeding.

"It's bound to be a match," prophesied Mrs. Mayhew, a widow boarder.

"If they only weren't too poor to think of it," suggested Mr. Bascom, who was coarse and practical.

Everybody in the boarding house took part in the preparations for and the celebration of Christmas. The tree was trimmed and the packages of mutual presents piled about its base. Then Bascom started a vigorous propaganda in favor of each person hanging their stocking in front of the fireplace. Miss Deane grew rosy at the suggestion and Willis tried to escape to his room, but it was of no avail.

There was vast chattering and jollity as after breakfast next morning there was an adjournment to the sitting room. The master of ceremonies, Bascom's eyes twinkled as one after another the stockings were apportioned, for he was a practical joker. Willis noted that his stocking was bulging and heavy. He peered within it, then showed a lump of coal and a raw potato.

Somehow his heart was chilled. Trivial as was the incident, it came like a direct blow in the face. Was the erratic donation a stirring reminder of his poverty? All at once the barrenness of his lonely life overcame him in full force. He went up to his room gloomily.

A servant knocked at the door and handed him a letter. Mechanically he opened it and then sprang to his feet, white to the lips and quivering all over. He stood like one in a maze. There was a second timid summons at the door. Willis opened it to face Miss Deane, a parcel in her hand.

"Will you please step into the hall," she fluttered, and he thought how lovely she looked in her fresh, dainty morning dress.

"Mr. Willis, I hope the practical jokes of Mr. Bascom have not been taken by you as an affront. He did the same thoughtless thing with all of us. And you ran away before we could give out the presents. Here is yours, a trifling gift, but I hope it will please you, because I made it myself."

Willis parted the tissue paper to disclose a pair of knit house slippers. His heart warmed toward this modest, lonely gentlewoman, who had devoted so many hours to show her friendly esteem.

"I cannot express how I appreciate them," he said, and then a quick impulse swayed him. The letter in his pocket reminded him of a vast change in circumstances and fortune. "They make me think of home," he added in a tone of pathetic reminiscence. "Miss Deane, we would know how to appreciate a home, you and I, wouldn't we now?"

The fair lady sighed. A dim blur of tears crossed her eyes.

"If I had one," continued Willis, coming closer to her, "would you share it with me?"

There was a sob and Miss Deane wavered. Willis tenderly clasped her waist. He knew she had given assent in her shrinking way.

"I have just received a letter from the lawyer of a dear relative apprising me of the fact that I have been made his legatee," announced Willis. "It is a fine present, isn't it? But the best gift Christmas can give me is your own dear self!"

Christmas Chimes

By O. F. PFEIFFER

(Copyright.)

THE village chimes rang out a mellow strain clear and vibrant as golden beads dropped into a crystal dish, but Adam Marsh drew his worn fur cap down closer about his ears and scowlingly took a shortcut towards his desolate home.

He had neither chick nor child, only money. He hardened his soul against yuletide suggestions and tried to glory in scouting the humanizing influence of home, social friendship and "the folly called love!" Then he came to a sudden halt and sprang behind a tree. There was a light in the room where he slept. Against the lamp light there was outlined the figure of a roughly dressed man standing at an open bureau. Marsh stole to the kitchen, took down an ancient horse pistol, and, gliding to the door of the lighted room, burst it in.

"What are you doing here?" he shouted out. "Hands up!"

It was rather a weak than an evil face that confronted him. Its owner looked crestfallen, rather than sullen.

"I—I was looking for something to eat," he stammered out.

"That's likely outside of the kitchen, isn't it, now!" snarled Marsh derisively.

"Well then, finding nothing in the kitchen I hoped I could pick up some little trifle that would bring me a meal. Say, I'm not a genuine bad one. I never touched a cent that was not my own until this very day. And this has so shamed me, that all I ask is strength to carry back what I took."

"Yah!" jeered Marsh. "Sort of robbing Peter to pay Paul, hey? Now then, I'll run no risks of your turning on me. Empty your pockets," and the man disgorged a rusted jackknife and something that glowed with the glint of gold.

"Back to yonder corner," ordered Marsh raspingly. "What's this?" and his nimble fingers clutched a locket and chain the other had placed on the table.

"It isn't yours, nor mine!" burst out the intruder. "Say, I must take that back where it belongs. Listen to me. It was ten miles down the road, in a wretched little hovel. In the front room was a pale, wearied woman attending to her sick husband. In a back room was a little angel of a girl child, asleep on a torn thin blanket. I noticed the chain and locket around the child's throat. I sneaked up and took it. I've a wife and two little tots in the city; lost my job and was tramping, looking for work. I was frantic as I thought of their wretched Christmas and I hurried away to sell the trinket and steal a ride home on the bumpers. Don't shoot!" for Marsh, opening the locket and scanning the portrait within shook from head to foot, and with glaring eyes viewed the locket as though it were some boding wraith.

Ah! how it recalled to him the bright, sunny-faced daughter he had shut out from heart and home the day she eloped with Rodney Blair. He had never sought to learn of her fate. And now the locket she had worn he had strangely found, cherished and protected by her little child with his picture still in it.

"My man," he said, "if you will take me to where you found the people you tell of, your dear ones shall have a Christmas, indeed."

"I'll do that for nothing," half sobbed the penitent fellow.

Little Cora Blair was sobbing in her mother's arms as Adam Marsh reached the doorstep of the home of the unfortunates. He heard her say: "Oh, mamma, can't we search for my pretty locket? Every night when I say my prayers and ask a blessing for the dear grandfather I have never seen, I shall miss seeing his picture."

"Merry Christmas and—forgiveness!" spoke Adam Marsh, pushing the door open. "Alice, I've come to make up for my cruelty and neglect."

And when the penitent had faithfully returned from the village stores with a heaping basket full of Christmas cheer and gifts for the little one Marsh had ordered, he started for the city with a warm, snug roll of bank notes in his hand.

"Now for my own home and the Merry Christmas of my dear ones!" he jubilated. "Oh, I'll never stray away from the straight path and them again," and in a wild ecstasy he sang in accord with the chiming bells: "Peace on earth and good will towards all men!"
